Revivals of Old Films Meet Cool Reception by Londoners

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 18 —(CP)—Londoners have always been enthusiastic movie-goers, but the last few weeks have proved that their enthusiasm cools rapidly when the entertainment provided consists of revivals of old films.

The chill reception accorded to showings of old-timers has cast a shadow along Wardour Street, narrow west end thoroughfare lined by the offices of most of those connected with the film industry in this country.

They've had a problem thrown squarely at them: how to keep movie-houses filled when Hollywood refused to ship new productions on which it has to pay a 75 per cent tax? Public apathy to yesterday's pictures indicates they'll have to think up something new.

Small U. S. Supply

Distributors have a meagre store of American movies that entered Britain before the tax was imposed last fall. They're releasing them grudgingly — one a week, and sometimes not even that, instead of the old rate of three or four. Unofficial estimates are that the stock will be exhausted by March.

The revivals have been put on with fanfares of publicity but people have stayed away just the same. "Great Expectations," one of Britain's best post-war movies, played to almost empty houses in the West End and suburbs on its second run, and a revival of the popular "Mrs. Miniver" lasted only a few days.

British movie-makers are doing their best to step up production but they still fall short of the number of pictures needed.

The harassed business men of Wardour Street gloomily predict that large numbers of Britain's 4,700 movie-houses will be closing down by midsummer unless Hollywood finds some way of circumventing the heavy tax.

Their gloom is understandable, for up to now the business has been worth £100,000,000 ($400,000,000) a year. Before the tax, Hollywood took £17,000,000 of that in precious dollars.

Certain Theatres Hard Hit

London's big West End theatres are the first to fell the pinch. Their prices are higher than in the suburbs and provincial towns, and people apparently won't buy expensive seats for revivals.

"By the end of this month it will be necessary for the number of film re-issues to be doubled, if all the cinemas are to remain open," said the Evening Standard of London in an editorial.

"Experience so far has shown that, with one or two exceptions, no revival can remain in the West End for longer than two weeks, and even then at receipts below average . . .

"All indications are that by March, should the embargo from Hollywood still operate, the principal London cinemas will be keeping open with British films—and revivals."

The Standard predicted; however, the public would not lament the missing movies.

"The quality of the vast majority of Hollywood productions was so low, the stories so banal, and their treatment so stereotyped that the disappearance of these over-publicized epics-for-a-day causes the British public more relief than sorrow."

Authorize Bill To be Paid

Port Arthur, Feb. 18 (CP)—City Council Finance Committee has authorized payment of a press shop bill for $20.50 submitted by a woman who fell and damaged her dress and stockings. Mayor C. W. Cox previously had approved the bill despite council's rejection.

The matter had precipitated a struggle between the mayor and council. Last week council had decided to dock the mayor's pay the amount of the bill. The mayor had countered by submitting a bill for $21,000 on expenses incurred in travelling in the last three years but for which he had not billed the city.

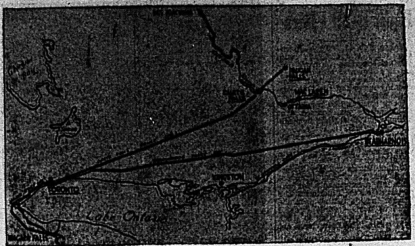
COMPULSORY RATIONING OF HYD RO-ELECTRIC POWER INSTITUTED



Toronto, Ont., experienced its first compulsory rationing of hydro-electric power on Monday when the power was cut off for half an hour without warning. Further half-hour cuts may be expected, but consumers can't hope to find out in advance in what areas of the city the cuts will be made and at what time. Main power lines from Chats Falls and Beauharnois are shown on the map which, together with the MacLaren power site, supply the Toronto area. Niagara lines also are shown. The Quebec sources all are hampered by low water which cuts their output.

Political Graves Well Occupied

The political corpses of hand-picked leaders are strewn along the rocky trail of Canadian politics. The people have had a way of dealing with leaders who were not chosen at popular conventions, says a writer in the Windsor Star.

The people like to believe that they are choosing their own leaders. While it may be true that often the leader so chosen was manipulated into position by the boys in the smoke-filled hotel rooms, at the same time if the people ballot on him, they feel they could have rejected him, if the urge had been strong enough.

Ontario Story

It is not necessary to go beyond recent events in Ontario politics to realize how the people resent having their leaders handpicked for them.

The Liberals had been a dead issue in Ontario from 1905 until 1934. It was then that Hon. M. F. Hepburn led the Liberals in the general election and won easily. Mr. Hepburn had been chosen leader at a stirring convention. There was plenty of action in lining up the votes, and when the delegates were finished, they had chosen Mr. Hepburn and were satisfied with him.

But, when Mr. Hepburn decided to call it a day in 1942, there was no convention of the Ontario Liberals. Instead, Mr. Hepburn simply handed the Premiership of Ontario to Hon. Gordon D. Conant. The people had no say in that transaction. Mr. Hepburn going right ahead and surprising most of the voters by his choice.

Six Months

Mr. Conant lasted just over six months, when he resigned to take a Crown position and Hon. Harry C. Nixon was catapulted into the Premiership. The people had no say at all in that shift.

But, the people did have a say in the general election in Ontario in 1943. They voted against Mr. Nixon and elected Hon. George A. Drew and the Conservatives.

Mr. Drew, himself, could point to the advantage of being chosen leader at a proper convention.

One Selected

When Hon. G. H. Ferguson resigned as Conservative Premier of Ontario in 1930 to become the Canadian High Commissioner in London, England, he selected Hon. George S. Henry to succeed him as Premier.

The people did not have any say in the choice of Mr. Henry. Mr. Ferguson simply declared that Mr. Henry would become the Premier and that was all there was to it. At least, that was all there was to it on the surface. Many did not agree with the choice. Some would have preferred Hon. William H. Price, while some thought favorably of others.

When the people had a chance to record their vote in the 1934 general election, they voted out Mr. Henry and voted in Mr. Hepburn.

Mr. Drew was chosen leader of the Ontario Conservatives just before Christmas in 1936. That was a brisk convention and the people had the privilege of calling on Mr. Drew to lead their party.

By 1938 the Conservatives of Ontario were on the rocks. The party had been split and divided over the leadership. It took Mr. Drew five years to remedy the defects and heal the wounds. Then, in 1943, he trounced the Liberals and became Premier.

In Saskatchewan

Saskatchewan has also had its troubles over leadership pains.

The Liberal machine in Saskatchewan had been built into one of the most efficient vote-getting organizations ever fashioned by Premiers Walter Scott, W. M. Martin and Charles A. Dunning. When Mr. Dunning resigned as Premier of Saskatchewan in 1926 to join the Dominion Government led by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, the question of the leadership was intense.

Mr. Dunning had favored the appointment of Hon. C. M. Hamilton. But, Hon. J. G. Gardiner had his eye on the Premiership and when the smoke cleared away Mr. Gardiner was Premier. Saskatchewan was divided in its loyalties and when Mr. Gardiner went to the polls in the 1929 general election, the Liberals were defeated and the Anderson Coalition Government took over.

Makes Comeback

In 1934 Mr. Gardiner came back strong and regained the Premiership. Then, when he resigned in 1935 to go to Ottawa as Dominion Minister of Agriculture, he named Hon. W. J. Patterson to succeed him as Premier of Saskatchewan.

The people had not had any chance to choose these leaders at conventions. The upshot was that when the 1944 general election was called in Saskatchewan, the people went out and recorded their protest. That vote against the Liberals brought Hon. T. C. Douglas and the C.C.F. Government to power in Saskatchewan. Mr. Douglas was in the fortunate position of being the man for whom the people had to vote, when they wanted to record a protest vote.

In Dominion

The Dominion Conservatives have had their troubles with appointed leaders.

The Dominion Liberals know their political history. If they want to keep in the clear with the people they will make sure that any successor to Mr. King will be someone chosen at a properly called and properly conducted convention at which will be delegates from every constituency in Canada.

Discovery of Three Bodies May Clear Up 10-Year Mystery

Melvindale, Mich., Feb. 18 — (CP)— The long dormant mystery of the disappearance of three people who apparently vanished into thin air 10 years ago was revived by Coroner Albert L. French after he examined three human bodies discovered in a Dearborn excavation.

Dr. French said that anatomical similarities led him to believe the bones might be part of the body of Mrs. Margaret Reddon, 35, who disappeared after a drinking party in a Melvindale cafe. The others were Miss Artie Mabie, 42, and Thomas Lorkmergn, both of Melvindale.

The bones were unearthed last Friday by a power shovel operator working in Dearborn, a suburb of Detroit.

Cities Factors Affecting Attitude Toward Marriage

Toronto, Feb. 18—(CP)—Post-war stresses, the uncertainty of the times and a shortage of proper housing were listed by Archbishop G. F. Kingston, Primate of All Canada of the Church of England, as factors contributing to a growing laxity in the attitude of Canadians toward marriage. A tendency to regard marriage vows with increasing unconcern was becoming a major social problem, he said.

"A vast number of the clergy," the Archbishop said, "instruct betrothed couples now on the nature and sacredness of marriage. And that, I think, is the most satisfactory method, for marriage is entered into by individuals who will have their individual problems."

A more practical approach by the church to social and economic problems should be one of the principles of the modern church, he said.

Uranium Deposits May be Answer To Falkland Dispute

London, Feb. 17 (AP)— There were reports in London today that uranium deposits might be the prize sparking the current dispute over possession of the bleak Falkland Islands, far down in the South Atlantic.

The News Chronicle, without disclosing its sources of information, said in a front-page story: "Uranium in the Falkland Islands is believed to be one of the reasons for Argentine and Chilean challenges to British sovereignty."

Britain announced yesterday that her South Atlantic flagship, the cruiser Nigeria, is steaming toward the Falklands to "show the flag" in what the government considers British territory.

Britain has promised full support to Governor Miles Clifford against Chilean and Argentine claims to the strategic islands, which lie northeast of Cape Horn, about 300 miles east of Argentina.

Chile and Argentina dispute Britain's claims to Deception and Greenwich islands in the Shetland group, which lies farther south, just north of Antarctica.

Accused of Killing Eight B-29 Fliers

Tokyo, Feb. 17 (AP) — A woman today was charged with serving American airmen's livers at a Japanese officers' mess.

She is Shigako Tsutsui, former army nurse and the first Japanese woman to face trial on war atrocity charges. She and 27 men co-defendants are accused of killing eight B-29 fliers in medical experiments.

Five of the men, who were alledged to have eaten the livers with liquor, are charged with cannibalism.

United States military prosecutors said the woman defendant made all arrangements for experiments on the Americans. The charges include cutting open the heart of one — while he still lived — and attempting to stitch it up again. The fliers have not been named.

Allied headquarters said the experiments occurred in Kyushu Imperial University's medical school at Fukouka. The prosecution charged that livers of the fliers were served at a special lunch for army officers and hospital surgeons — and that the diners were fully aware of what they were eating.

The hospital's chief surgeon, Dr. Fukujiro Ishiyama, hanged himself shortly after he was arrested.

Following the opening hymn the program was divided into sections, each dealing with a different phrase of the prayer, Mrs. Chas. Jeffrey, representing the Anglican congregation, Mrs. Roy Hall, the Presbyterian and Mrs. Capt. Morrison of the Salvation Army. Intercessory prayers were made led by representative ladies, and Mrs. C. Sharp contributed "The Lord's Prayer" as the solo.

Mrs. Morrison, wife of Captain Morrison of the Army, was the speaker for the afternoon using "Prayer" as the theme of her address. A free will offering was accepted and will be used for the extension of religious education in many lands, through the women's Inter Church Council of Canada.

Kiele was jailed on charges of suspicion of attack with a deadly weapon and the dancers went on dancing.

"The answer was that there was no alternative, and the switches were pulled in rotation throughout the city during the day, apparently without any attempt to notify consumers in advance."

In Hamilton, where initial cutoffs yesterday caused an estimated $250,000 damage, hydro officials said sections of the city would be blacked out for a half - hour period today.

A textile plant lost $25,000 in materials when a dye vat stopped agitating. A Steel Company of Canada official said that at the firm's Canada works loss in ruined material would run into thousands of dollars — "and if this keeps up we'll have to shut down the plant as the risk of operation to too great." All lamps in production yesterday at Caadian Westinghouse Company were lost. Bakeries and canning plants reported food destroyed.

Toronto hydro officials announced cutoffs would continue at the times various sections of the city were affected Monday. Duration of the interruptions will vary according to the amount of reduction in power consumption required. Some suburbs are due to have their first power blackouts today.

Rotating Cutoffs

Windsor planned rotating half-hour cutoffs. London worked out a series of 15-minute power blackouts and officials talked of ordering switches pulled after dark "if consumers do not co-operate." A Windsor theatre operator said a power failure yesterday was responsible for damage to parts of irreplaceable film reels and that he would claim damages.

A Toronto cutoff stopped an iron lung in an isolation hospital and ward workers had to pump the machine by hand to enable an Orangeville, Ont., girl to continue breathing. Doctors in Hamilton finished a delicate operation in the gleam of flashlights after switches were pulled unexpectedly. The hospital's auxiliary power unit could light only one operating room.

Sarnia residents were warned that cutoffs, which so far have affected only homes and business establishments, might be extended to industries. The Aylmer public utilities commission threatened to pull switches intermittently unless power consumption there is reduced 10 per cent. Two hour-long cutoffs were scheduled today for Belleville. Brantford expected periodic 20-minute cutoffs. Kitchener and Waterloo citizens were warned power would be cut off from 4 to 5 p.m. and in their three rubber plants from 7 to 8 p.m.

South was declarer in spades, stretched to seven by his partner. Unable to stand the strain, west doubled the grand slam. This was a mistake. It tipped off where the dangerous cards may be.

Opening lead from west was heart queen. A look at dummy shows a loser in hearts and a possible loser in clubs. These are besides any worries there may be in the trump suit.

Trick one went to heart king. Mindful that west may be stacked with the unseen trumps, south led spade king. When east showed out, declarer was glad he took this precaution.

A small spade lead was covered by west ten and captured by dummy queen. South got in again with a diomand to the king. Another spade through west gave dummy two more trump rounds.

A heart to the ace entered south again. The idea was to finesse a club through west whose double spotted the queen there. But with the ten of clubs also at large, the situation was delicate.

Club jack was led, West covered with the queen. Dummy king won. Now a small club was led through east for a backward finesse. When east refused to play the ten, south eightspot took the trick.

Ace of clubs was led and opponent clubs dropped. Dummy ace of diamonds took a trick and the last club was led from there. On this south sluffed a heart and the 13th trick was a trump.

Back in the 18th century there was a noted British statesman named Pitt. He was also a famous whist player. Once he successfully played a backward finesse. It became known as the Pitt coup.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 18. (AP)—Marlene Dietrich comes up with a list of the ten most fascinating men she knows.

This was no small chore for Marlene, who has known a lot of fascinating men. I mentioned the list to her on the "A Foreign Affair" set. She pondered long and hard.

"How about some of the noted generals?" I suggested.

Marlene took the matter under advisement and five days later submitted a list, broadened to include men of other nationalities. Two factors might be pointed out: 1. Only three are native Americans; 2. Only one is an actor. Here's her list, in order of fascination:

Eric Maria Remarque, novelist.

Alexander Kirk, former United States Ambassador to Italy, now a Colorado rancher.

Igor Stravinsky, composer.

Ernest Hemingway, author.

Pablo Picasso, artist.

Erle Stanley Gardner, mystery writer.

Salvadore Dali, artist.

Noel Coward, theatrical jack-of-all-trades.

Arturo Toscanini, conductor.

Comments on Academy Examinations

Surprises: The John Garfield and Susan Hayward nominations. 20th-Fox sank $5,000,000 apiece in "Forever Amber" and "Captain From Castile" ,which got no mentions except in musical scoring; its "Miracle on 34th St.," costing around $1,000,000 was named one of the five best pictures.

One of the best picture directors is currently unemployed—Edward, Dmytryk, a native of Grand Forks, B.C., ("Crossfire") . . . Paramount is out of the running after three years of top winners ("Going My Way", "The Lost Weekend", Olivia Dehavilland in "To Each His Own"). The studio is too busy making money. Hollywood Sights and Sounds...

Most of the "Three Musketeers" cast complaining about their roles. . . . William Powell lugging a mermaid (a dummy, not Ann Blyth) around the "Peabody" set. . . Keenan Wynn pushing a stranger's stalled automobile outside a Hollywood theatre. . . . Joan Bennett, one of the few stars who applies her own make-up, daubing on greasepaint on the "Hollow Triumph" set.

Pert Dancer Trains McGill Chorus Line

Montreal, (CP)—Busiest co-ed at McGill University these days is 24-year-old Moira Wedderspoon, dance director of the college's annual show, the Red and White Review.

In addition to part-time work to supplement her savings, and her studies as a fourth-year arts student, Miss Wedderspoon spends her free time training a chorus line of 16 attractive young ladies to rhumba, samba, and tap dance—a job for which she's well qualified.

Born in Yorkton, Sask., the death of her father sent her at the age of eight to live with relatives in Scotland where she studies all forms of dancing.

Back in Canada in 1940 she finished collegiate in Ottawa and went into government work as a secretary. Her work took her from the National Film Board there to the Canadian Wartime Information Board in New York and back to the Department of External Affairs in Ottawa. Her evenings were devoted to dancing in troupe shows her earnings she saved for college.

Pert, petite and cute enough to be in the chorus line herself, Miss Wedderspoon is a veteran of the last two college revues in which she did solo work. But despite her love for dancing, after graduation she wants to do newspaper or advertising work. She will continue dancing just as a hobby.

First Psychiatric Ward in Canadian Prison Completed

Ottawa, Feb. 18. (CP)— The first psychiatric ward in a Canadian prison is almost ready for occupancy at Kingston Penitentiary, Maj.-Gen. R. B. Gibson, commissioner of Penitentiaries, said today.

The commissioner said the ward, part of a plan to extend psychiatric treatment throughout Canadian penitentiaries generally, will have a capacity of about twelve patients and will be in charge of a psychiatric specialist.

The new ward, which is being installed in a building apart from the prison hospital, will have facilities for electro-therapy, physiotherapy and other treatments.

Aim of the Penitentiaries branch, Gen. Gibson said, is to have its own facilities all along the line for the handling of borderline and mental cases. Prisoners actually insane will continue to be dealt with in provincial mental institutions as at present, under arrangement between the federal and provincial governments.

Gen. Gibson declared it was hoped eventually to have a psychiatrist in each penitentiary, but this would depend on government authorization to set up the various positions.

Also, the spread of the program would be based on the extent of its success at Kingston. At the moment, it was not planned to set up special wards in the other penitentiaries.

FINED FOR CARRYING OLD PISTOL

London, Feb. 18 — (CP)—It's dangerous to walk downtown here with an 80-year-old pistol stuck in your belt. Thomas Westman was fined $25 for carrying an unregistered wespon — a ball and cap pistol — that he said he was taking to a friend interested in antique guns.

Coinage of Words Continues

In these days of currency-blocks and monetary difficulties it is pleasant to note one kind of coinage that passes to and fro across frontiers and oceans without let or hindrance. That is word-coinage. And it is pleasant to record further that Canadian writers are beginning to take their share in this fruitful traffic, Geoffrey Vivien writes in The Ottawa Citizen.

There are two ways in which writers enrich the language: either by their own new mintings, or by reissue of useful old words that have gone out of currency. In Canada, where our poets are mostly academicians the latter practice is not unexpectedly the most in evidence. Thus E. J. Pratt looking for an expressive word for the rasping, grinding sound of a tractor uses "gride" — "Under the gride of his traction tread," in the poem "Come Away Death."

Spencerian Origin

This looks like an excellent invention but it is in fact a word common in Spenser's day. One hopes it may come back into use, since linguistic inventiveness, which always lags a little behind technical invention, has not been active enough in covering the innumerable scraping, clanking, screeching noises of which our modern mechanical civilization is made up. There is not even a word for the most Canadian of all sounds, the wail of the locomotive.

Another useful word comes from Ralph Gustafson's poem "Thaw," where he writes: "The tooth of April chumbles in the mud." This too is a revival of an old word, and means to gnaw; it would make an expressive term for the way some people eat. Mr. Gustafson, who won the Quebec Government Literary Award in 1935, has now unfortunately left us for the United States. But before going he bequeathed Canadian writers another useful word, noting how: the plane of sunlight cuts away each ravelin on a northbank of snow. Even if "ravelin" fails to get into general speech (it denotes originally part of the defences of a castle) it should prove a handy addition to the vocabulary of winter.

Words for Snow

Considering how large a part snow plays in our lives, it is certainly high time that our writers gave us words for its various manifestations. There should be a word, for example, for the crumbly, brown-sugary stuff that is everywhere just now. How about "sludder," which sounds like a mixture of slush and powder and is in fact a variation of the word used in the Low Countries for the same thing. And has anyone a word for the pavement-block kind of snow that lies about our streets after the shovelmen have passed, looking like great slabs of candy?

Ice also could do with a richer vocabulary. Robert Finch has given it at least one addition, observing in his poem "Train Window" a truck full of ice-block and describing how they lean, a transitory Icehenge in a moor of imitation snow.

Those who have seen the great blocks of Stonehenge on Salisbury Plain will recognize the aptness of the simile.

Joyce Best Coiner

Of course, the master word-coiner in modern English is James Joyce. He invented hundreds of words as anyone can find out from perusing his "Ulysses" or "Finnegan's Wake." Joyce's procedure was often the simple one of running two existing words together as others have done with "dumfound" from "dumb" and "confound," "squawk," from "speak" and "squall." This is the origin of another Canadian coinage, "whortles," which Margaret Avison uses in her poem "Neverness." "And if that be the dream that whortles out into unending night." This would appear to be made up of "whirls," "whorls," and "hurtles." Whether it will attain the popularity of Lewis Carrol's similar-sounding "chortle" made from "chuckle" and "snort," is doubtful.

There are of course many other ways of making new words and a recent volume of verse ("Rooms in a House," by Nathaniel Burt) shows two: sun-kempt and roundaboutly. The latter would seem to have a future for describing the way civil service departments sometimes operate. And a coinage of an English amateur of words, Ivor Brown, might come into favor in Ottawa to describe the jargon of bureaucracy; for this he offers barnacular, which he derives from the clan of the Tite Barnacles, satirized by Dickens in "Little Dorritt." This clan of bureaucrats had as one of its strongholds the "Office of Circumlocution." How much, I wonder, of all that is written round about Parliament Hill today was "in the barnacular."?

AT THE McCARTHY

"LURED"

Gripping mystery and high suspense are linked together so adroitly in Hunt Stromberg's brilliant psychological thriller, "Lured," that this is bound to take its place right alongside some of Alfred Hitchcock's memorable whodunits like "The Lady Vanishes" and "Shadow of a Doubt."

Co-starring in "Lured," which had its premiere yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre, are such gifted players as George Sanders, Lucille Ball, Charles Coburn and Boris Karloff, while the supporting cast includes names of such stellar-quality as Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Alan Mowbray, Joseph Calleia and George Zucco.

Although Douglas Sirk directed this United Artists release, and James Nasser served as producer, this sensational picture is a tribute to the genius of its executive producer, Hunt Stromberg, who personally supervised each scene.

The dynamic plot gets under way when Lucille Ball, a stranded American show girl earning a temporary living in a London dance hall, finds that her chum, a very beautiful girl, has foolishly answered an advertisement in the personal column of a London daily. When the girl disappears, Lucille goes to Scotland Yard where she finds Inspector Temple (Charles Coburn) very much concerned over a series of murders all involving beautiful young girls, and all indirectly leading to ads in the personal columns.

The inspector engages Lucille to serve as "bait" for all future ads. In rapid succession this beautiful new Scotland Yard recruit experiences a series of dangerous adventures, some of them spine-chilling, others vastly amusing in a macabre sort of way, during the course of which she meets George Sanders, a suave, likeable night club owner, and his sophisticated partner, Cedric Hardwicke, as well as such suspicious-looking characters as Boris Karloff, Alan Mowbray, Joseph Calleia and George Zucco.

Lucille and George fall madly in love, but their romance culminates abruptly when, on the eve of their wedding, evidence suddenly points him up as the killer. Whether or not handsome Mr. Sanders is guilty, this reviewer refuses to tell. However, from this point on the suspense, which has been steadily rising, reaches its pinnacle, leaving the audience so breathless you could hear a pin drop in the theatre.

If you have a yen for stirring mystery chillers, this fine Stromberg production definitely should be on your movie list.

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP) — The United States Commerce Department last night halted the issuance of all export licences for gasoline and fuel oil for 48 hours.

Before Friday a new cut in export quotas probably will be announced, a department spokesman said, to save fuel oil for chilly United States homes. Canada's oil supplies are covered by a special agreement and it is not affected by yesterday's move.

The suspension of export licences was announced after two false starts. Shortly after 5 p.m. EST, the department told reporters of the temporary licence suspension.

Within half an hour an information official notified reporters that the suspension "has been called off." Instead an announcement of a cut in quotas was being prepared. Then — in another half hour— the department officially announced that the suspension was in force.

The cut-off of licencing will permit officials to scan foreign oil needs.

They indicate, a spokesman said that foreign governments can stand another cut in oil deliveries. Shipments to 30 or more countries were slashed by 3,700,000 barrels Jan. 30.

The crowning of Miss Parr was the climax of the ice extravaganza that forms the high point of the carnival.

Marlboros Swamp Mercurys 12 to 1 In Senior Tussle

(By The Canadian Press)

It was a night of high-scoring last night as favored teams handed their oppositions drubbings in three scheduled games—two in the Senior A and one in the Junior A division of the Ontario Hockey Association.

The highest scoring tilt was the Toronto Marlboros-Owen Sound Senior A fixture with the Marlies handing the Mercurys a 12-1 trouncing. The other Senior game between Hamilton Pats and Kitchener - Waterloo Flying Dutchmen finished at 9-4, with the Dutchmen on the big end or the score.

At Toronto, the Senior tilt was a scoring spree for the Marlies as Johnny McCormack rang up a goal and two assists for three points to win the league's individual scoring crown. McCormack is the first Toronto player to win the award—the Robert (Moose) Ecclestone trophy. Unofficial figures give McCormack a total of 75 points in league play, one more than Clare Shillington of Hamilton Tigers.

Howie Harvey in the Duke nets earned a tie with Art Childs of the Tigers for the best goals-against average in the league when he allowed just one goal during the game. Both goalies ended the season with 86 goals let by.

Little Ike Hildebrand also was flying for the Marlies as he earned a hat-trick performance, all his goals coming in the second frame. Leo Curik was next best with two goals while Tommy Burlington managed the lone Mercury tally.

Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen moved into fourth place by virtue of their victory over Hamilton Pats and the Owen Sound loss. The Dutchmen had 37 points before the game, just one point behind Owen Sound in fourth place. With their win, they moved one point ahead of the Mercurys and two points behind third-place Stratford Indians who have 41 points. The Kitchener crew can tie Stratford for that third rung spot by winning their final scheduled game against Hamilton Pats at Hamilton tonight, providing that Stratford loses to Brantford.

The Bauer boys were top men for the Dutchmen in their 9-4 win with Bobby receiving two goals and an assist and Don bagging one goal and two assists. Murray Phillips paced the Hamilton team with two goals.

Kitchener sprang a surprise when they started Roy Musselman in the nets for his first appearance of the season.

Galt Rockets had an easy time taking a 10-4 decision from Toronto Marlboros in the only Junior game scheduled. Marlies were without Ray Timgren and Bobby Hassard who moved up into Senior company. Goalie Walt Harvey also was missing and was replaced by Joe Higgins in the nets.

The final four games of the season are on tap tonight with two in the Junior and two in the Senior divisions.

In the Junior section, Young Rangers move into St. Catharines and Oshawa goes to Windsor, with the Generals seeking a win to tie for final first-place standing.

Sports Shorts from Britain

London, Feb. 18 (CP)—One of the gamest soccer teams ever to fight for the English Cup was defeated in the fifth round of the knock-out competition recently.

Colchester United, a team of giant-killers if ever there was one, was blanked 5-0 by Blackpool on the Seasider's ground after providing the biggest sensation of the current season by getting farther in the competition than any other non-League team had done in 37 years.

Even non-fans got excited about the semi-pro squad which trains on oysters, issues mysterious pre-game statements about "secret plans" and marched past four League sides including top-notch Huddersfield Town and dour, cup-fighting Bradford.

Player-manager Ted Fenton is the master mind who figures out the "secret plans" and he thought he had one up his sleeve that would even stop Blackpool's Stan Matthews, greatest winger in the game today. Ted also had a lucky champagne cork he always carries in the pocket of his football shorts which he and his teammates devoutly believe puts the hex on all opponents.

Colchester's progress in Cup contests had more than one bookie sitting up nights worrying. The books quoted the United at 5,000-1 when the tournament opened. Before they met Blackpool the odds were 200-1.

Last of Britain's famed pre-war racing yachts, the 164-ton cutter Astra, has been saved from the wrecker's yard by sailing enthusiast Percy Boyden who purchased her for £4,675 ($8,700) at auction.

Boyden is wealthy enough to maintain seven yachts—but there are few sailors in post-war Britain as well off, and the sleek beauties that used to cross the Atlantic to race for the America's Cup are no longer being built in this country.

The Astra's contemporaries — Britannia, Westward, Endeavor, Endeavor II and Shamrock V — have either been sunk during the war, broken up, or converted to commercial purposes.

A British bowling team will tour Canada this summer if the Treasury permits the allocation of dollars for its expenses, the International Bowling Board decided at a recent meeting here.

It is planned the team, to be selected in April, will sail June 23 and stay in Canada about nine weeks.

Baseball Men Deny Move To Bar Negroes

New York, Feb. 18 — (AP) — Baseball's newest controversy — touched off by Brooklyn Branch Rickey's charges that the other 15 big league clubs voted to bar Negroes from the majors — took on the complexion of the old button game today. Everybody was asking:

Documents, documents, who's got the documents?

The Dodger president arrived here from Chicago last night and refused to retreat in the face of a round of denials from top baseball men.

"The best evidence is the documents themselves," Rickey said. "Everybody knows about the documents and what were in them."

The Brooklyn boss said copies of a resolution to bar Negro players — adopted unanimously, he declared, by a joint major league meeting — Brooklyn excepted—were taken back after the vote.

"You can't find a copy of that report anywhere" he said earlier.

Several major league club executives insisted no such papers ever existed.

"As a matter of fact, I was the chairman of that meeting and we never discussed the subject."

Rickey made his charges in a speech, Monday night, at the annual football dinner of Wilberforce (Ohio) State University, a Negro college.

He related that the meeting in question took place shortly after he signed Jackie Robinson, the Brooklyn Negro rookie star of 1947, but before Robinson had played a game.

Denials of any such action were voiced by Roy Mack, vice-president of Philadelphia Athletics; John Quinn, general manager of Boston Braves, Joe Cronin, general manager of Boston Red Sox; P. K. Wrigley, owner of Chicago Cubs; and Warren Giles, president of Cincinnati Reds.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York Feb. 18 —(AP) — When Humberto Sierra fights Willie Pep for the featherweight championship at Miami next week, it will be (as far as the records show clearly) the first time a Cuban boxer has had a title shot since the days of Kid Chocolate and Black Bill ... those are a couple of pretty good names to start on, though there's nothing in the records to show that Sierra belongs in the same class. His best win is a somewhat uncertain triumph over Sandy Saddler last summer ... Kid Chocolate, you remember, earned New York recognition as featherweight champion back in 1933, when dual championships were common. But he couldn't stand prosperity and faded out while Freddie Miller went on to clear up the situation. Black Bill, another great little fellow, progressed as far as the final of a New York tourney to settle the flyweight championship, losing to Midget Wolgast in 1930 ... if Sierra, known as a defensive fighter, fails to make the grade, Cuba still stands another chance. Kid Gavilan, hailed as the best fighter to emerge from Cuba since Chocolate, has a non-title date with lightweight champ Ike Williams. If he makes a good showing, Gavilan likely will earn a title match.

Nice Chap, Man

Boisterous Ben Chapman, the Phillies manager who has something of a reputation as being a tough guy, spends some of his spare time in the off season officiating basketball games ... this week's sporting news relays the story of Ben's working a somewhat rugged game between Alabama and Louisiana State ... after some strenuous action under the basket, a couple of players started to rough it up a bit.. Ben stepped between them, grabbed the ball and said: "I'll hold the ball if you fellows want to step down to the foul line and fight it out." ... The Collegians sheepishly admitted they'd rather play basketball and Chapman had no further trouble.

Shorts and Shells

Penn State's Gerry Karver, who looks like the best of the milers since Gil Dodds is out of action, won't compete for the National A.A.U. championship Saturday. Notre Dame officials refused to release him from an earlier entry in a dual meet here ... Ben White, the only man to drive four Hambeltonian winners marked his 75th birthday recently at Orlando, Fla., with another day's work — driving his harness horses in the morning and licking the gin rummy experts at night ... Nat Fleischer's 1948 ring record book, bigger and better than ever will be off the press in a week or so...

Leafs Have Game in Hand Over Detroit as Deadlocked Contenders Start Last Stretch

With the Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings deadlocked for the National Hockey League lead, today was a good time to start figuring on the league's championship.

The Leafs have a game in hand, with 14 to play compared to Detroit's 13 remaining games. The Leafs still have seven road games seven at home. Wings have seven away games, six at home.

It's likely that the championship will be settled by the final weekend, when the Wings play at Toronto March 21.

Before the wind-up, the two contenders meet once at Toronto next Saturday night. Each has a mid-week game, with Detroit at New York and Boston at Chicago tonight, while Leafs are at Montreal Thursday night.

In Good Shape

Both top teams are in good shape. It turned out yesterday that left-winger Vic Lynn wasn't so badly hurt as was first feared when he slammed into a goalpost at New York Sunday night. Instead of a torn cartilege, the injury was diagnosed as nothing worse than a bad bruise, and Lynn was on skates at the Leaf practice in Toronto Tuesday.

Lynn admitted after the practice however that his knee hurt when he attempted sharp turns. Further heat treatments were ordered with the expectation he would be in the Toronto line-up at Montreal Thursday.

And while the Detroit-Toronto leadership tussle continues, practically anything could happen to the rest of the standings. The bottom two teams of course won't get into the Stanley Cup playoffs, but it's a brash prophet who'll name the two discards right now. Because the tail-end Chicago Hawks are only one game back of Montreal Canadiens and the Canadiens are only five points back of the Boston Bruins who presently hold the fourth and last playoff spot.

Omaha Knights In Third Place

(By The Associated Press)

Omaha Knights are in third place in the Northern Division of the United States Hockey League today, convinced that seven is their lucky number.

Their 7-2 victory last night at Tulsa was their seventh victory without a loss.

The victory advanced them from the cellar and marked the fifth time in their last seven games that their winning goals totalled seven.

Tulsa Coach Clint Smith scored both oiler goals and Ed Reigle was high man for Omaha with two counters.

Toronto, Feb. 18 (CP)—Possibility of an even greater Ontario Bonspiel in future years was suggested as curlers called for more ice sheets at the banquet last night climaxing the second day of the 21st annual Ontario Bonspiel.

Sixteen rinks of the 128 are left in the race for top honours. They are: R. E. Wilson, London; K. A. Miles, Toronto High Park; W. A. Kennedy, Hamilton Thistles; J. Johnson, Kenora; B. C. Hall, Kitchener; L. G. Doner, Toronto Granites; Dr. A. E. Walkey, Hamilton Vics; C. R. Madill, Oshawa; C. Asmussen, Kitchener; B. C. Phippen, Sarnia; Andy Grant, Toronto Royal Canadians; J. H. Bolton, Toronto Granites; C. H. Johnston, Toronto Curling Club, G. R. Meech, Toronto High Park; T. C. Hawkins, Toronto Royal Canadians; and W. B. White, Oshawa.

Outstanding features of the day was the game which ended third-round play in the premier Royal York trophy when G. R. Meech drew his shot and skipped his Toronto High Park rink—1947's second award winners—to a 7-6 victory over W. J. Fulton's Civil Service foursome.

Last year's third cup holders, K. A. Miles' Toronto High Para rink won a 9-7 decision over the Agincourt foursome skipped by L. E. Ross and 1947's sixth award winners, R. E. Wilson's London group, defeated J. P. Walsh's Kingston outfit 8-7.

EMPIRE CITIZENSHIP

London, Feb. 18 — (Reuters)—A British nationality bill to be published today will, it is understood, deal with important questions relating to citizenship of the British Commonwealth and Empire.

It will also regulate various anomalies in connection with the status of British women who have married foreigners and wish to retain British nationality.

Phil Marchildon Visits Midland

Midland, Ont., Feb. 18. (CP)—Before packing his bags and heading south to the Philadelphia Athletics Training Camp last night, ace-hurler Phil Marchildon of Penetanguishene visited Midland Y.M.C.A. where he gave pitching, batting and fielding pointers to a group of young baseball enthusiasts.

Besides handing out advice to the young hopefuls, Marchildon also touched briefly on the game at Cleveland last year when he lost a perfect and no-hit game following a walk with two out in the eighth inning.

"I lost my relaxation after that decision and I didn't get it back until the 11th inning," he said ruefully.

Dempsey Bitter Against Present Setup in Boxing

Macon, Ga., Feb. 18. (AP)—Jack Dempsey says there are three things wrong with modern boxing: Mike Jacobs, Madison Square Garden and the New York Boxing Commission.

The former world heavyweight champion said here yesterday, the three "want to name their own fighters, make their own rules and make their own champions.

"Among the three they want to control boxing and, instead, they are slowly strangling the sport to death."

Dempsey said a National Commissioner is needed to rule the sport. "Then clean out all the old time fighters and promoters and get the youngsters back to wanting to enter the sport."

Cleveland Barons Only Six Points Away From First

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons today are only six points out of 1st place in the American Hockey League's western circuit and with 13 games left to play, Barons are given an even chance of finishing on top.

The tail - end Washington Lions last night proved no match for Cleveland, and went down to a 7-2 setback. Roy Kelly and Johnny Holota sparked the Cleveland attack with a brace of goals each while Church Russell, Bob Carse and Roger Gagne each scored once. Johnnie Carr - Harris and Laurier Archambeault counted for Lions.

Eddie Bush of Philadelphia Rockets rammed in two goals last night to tie the A. H. L. record for goals scored by a defenceman in one season. The two tallies gave Bush 22 for the year and helped Rockets edge Springfield Indians 5-4. Other Rockets' goal-getters were Phil Narduzzi, Steve Wochy and Hnatiuk. Kenny Hayden paced Indians with a pair of goals while one each went to Wimpy Jones and Paul Courteau.

In the only other game last night, St. Louis Flyers battled the faltering Hershey Bears to a 3-3 stalemate. Don Grosso, Eddie Olson and Bill McComb scored one each for Flyers while Pentti Lund Len Gransdahl and Joe Cooper hit the mark for Bears.

Fight Promoter Denied Appeal From Sentence

Benton Harbor, Mich., Feb. 18 —(CP)— Ill for almost nine months and still confined to bed, Floyd Fitzsimmons, famed fight promoter and politician, entered the last round yesterday in his fight against prison.

The Supreme Court has denied his appeal from a three-year sentence for attempting to bribe former Representative Gail Handy during the 1941 legislative session.

Because of frail health of the once wiry fight promoter who has been a close friend of Jack Dempsey since boyhood, Mrs. Fitzsimmons delayed telling him of the Supreme Court verdict for several hours. Finally she called a physician to give him the news.

Handy had testified at the trial that Fitzsimmons, although a political opponent in Berrien county, offered him a $500 bribe to change his vote on a bill which would have required a totalizer at the Detroit race track. Fitzsimmons was opposed to the measure.

Barbara Wants To Auction Skates For Charity

(By The Canadian Press)

Mindful of the fuss created last year when she accepted an automobile from the city of Ottawa, Barbara Ann Scott yesterday said she would be "glad" to auction off a pair of skates in Canada for charity if it did not interfere with her amateur status and providing she received permission from all the figure skating associations and the International Skating Union.

Miss Scott gave up the automobile after Avery Brundage, chairman of the United States Olympic Committee, had suggested that its acceptance might raise doubts as to her amateur status.

R.C.A.F. Flyers, world champion Canadian hockey team, last night defeated the Czechoslovak Olympic team 5-2 in Prague's winter stadium here. The Canadians led 3-0 at the end of the first period, both squads failed to score in the second frame and each scored twice in the finale. It was the first of six games scheduled for the Flyers in Czechoslovakia. They play the same team here Thursday and then will tour the country.

A stout 225-pound Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champion, sails for London, England, Thursday where he will give a 26-bout exhibition series. Accompanying him will be six other men and 350 pounds of steak.

Louis will make 78 appearances but will box only 26 times. The rest of the time he'll shadow box, jump rope and punch the bag. As soon as he returns in April, he'll start light training for his 25th title defence.

An Olympic village, estimated to cost $140,000, is being built in Richmond Park for the summer games in London, England. The cost will be borne by the British organizing committee for the games. The village will provide accommodation for 1,700 athletes.

Britain's Freddie Mills last night retained his European light heavyweight championship with a second-round knockout victory over Paco Bueno of Spain in a scheduled 15-round bout at London.

Canadian quarter-mile champ, Bob McFarlane of London, Ont., will be among 47 runners starting in the 600-yard run in the United States A.A.U. indoor track and field championships at New York Saturday.

BOY KILLER CONFESSES

After a 56-hour grilling, 15-year-old Thomas Marsh, of Los Angeles, Calif., above, broke and confessed that he had shot and killed his schoolgirl sweetheart, Dolores Conn, 15, in a fit of jealous rage. Previously the boy had insisted that the gun, fired in the girl's face, had gone off accidentally.

Enrico Bertola Needs More Polish

Chicago, Feb. 18. (AP)—Enrico Bertola, bulky Italian heavyweight champion, needs considerable experience in the North American way of the ring before he can strike fistic gold.

The 24-year-old son of a marble cutter from Carrara, Italy, made his American debut last night, with a five-round knockout victory over Jimmy Bell, Washington, D.C., negro heavyweight. The victory was impressive enough, but the 190-pound invader revealed that he lacked defensive ability, blocking and needs to shorten up his punches.

Bertola's blows to the head were wild, but he proved to be a murderous body puncher, always wading into close range.

He dropped Bell for a nine-count in the second round with a right hand blast to the chin and floored him with another right behind the ear in the fourth. The bell sounded at the count of six enabling the Washington fighter who weighed 189 1-2, to return to his corner to recuperate. Forty-three seconds after the start of the fifth round Bell fell victim to a heavy right to the head.

Johnny Longden Wants to Ride 3,000 Winners

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 18 (AP)— Johnny (Moneybags) Longden, who has ridden more winners than any other jockey in North America, is out to boost his total to 3,000 by this summer.

The 38-year-old veteran, who began his jockey career on western Canada tracks, has 40 to go, and at the rate he's clicking now at Santa Anita he'll make it. He was the United States champion last year he set the modern American record of 316 winners. He was national champion in 1938, also.

Longden is reparded as the wealthiest jockey in the business. He maintains a huge stock farm in Nevada, flies his own plane, and manages to keep busy, otherwise investing his money under the counsel and guidance of financial leaders whose friendship he holds. He doesn't bet horses.

Johnny will be aboard William G. Hells' Salmagundi Saturday in Santa Anita's $50,000 San Vicente Handicap at 1 1-16 miles for three-year-olds.

Sylvio Albert Must Pay Penalty, To Hang May 21

Montreal, Feb. 18 —(CP)— Sylvio Albert, 32-year-old taxi driver, was sentenced yesterday to be hanged May 21 for the handkerchief murder of his one-time pen pal, Mrs. Tilly Deprato, last November.

Sentence was pronounced by Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure after a 35-minute deliberation by a Court of King's Bench Jury and followed testimony by Albert in which he related in detail how he had met the divorcee, "the only woman I ever loved."

Showing signs of fear and speaking in low tones, Albert told how he corresponded with Mrs. Deprato before they met. She went to Ottawa in July, 1947, and they lived together there until September when he returned to Montreal. He followed her, on her invitation, in October.

They met daily, he said, and when he lost his job on Nov. 24 he went to meet her at her place of work. He saw her enter a gray car and followed her for a while in a taxi, then went to his room in a Chambord Street rooming house.

She arrived soon afterwards and tried to talk him out of his jealousy. He began drinking whiskey and several times told her to leave, but she refused to go, he told the court.

When he woke next morning he noticed that her face was discolored. He had some drinks at a nearby tavern, and returned to the room where he remembered waking up on the floor.

Later he took another room but could not remember all that happened there, except that he woke up with slashed wrists and that he summonsed his landlady, who in turn called police for help.

Earlier during yesterday's hearing, Dr. Rosario Fontaine, medico legal expert, said that the woman died from suffocation. A man's handkerchief, blood-stained and smeared with lipstick, was produced by the Crown as evidence.

DON'T WAIT FOR SPRING FLOODS

Install an Automatic

ELECTRIC SUMP PUMP

Keep Your Basement Dry!

A SUMP PUMP is widely used to remove seepage and waste water from basements, elevator and furnace pits, which are too low for natural drainage or sewer connections.

It is usually installed in a pit to which the cellar is under-drained. It may be piped outside if there are no sewers.

It will keep cellars bone dry which would otherwise be damp and musty, and prevent excessive rusting of furnace pipes, etc. Thus it enables basements to be used for work rooms, play rooms, laundries, and even for living rooms, which previously were not habitable. It is ideal for stock rooms, storage rooms and work rooms under retail stores.

It will remove flood water from a basement ten times as fast as a man can bail. It is the best insurance against cellars flooding in the spring of the year or in heavy rains.

Cost of operation is very low. Under average conditions it will remove 1,000 gallons of water for a CENT. Under the usual conditions of intermittent operation, upkeep cost is practically nil. It is lubricated for a lifetime of ordinary use.

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 17.

As he pressed the starter, she was impelled to lay a soft hand over his. "Tom," she implored him tearfully, "if you'd only say you—you didn't do it!"

"Do—it?"

"Yes—John Scollar was—was killed."

Her implications was clear enough. He flung her a look of sheer bafflement.

"Yes, I know," he said acridly. "I read the papers. Jewelry salesman murdered in an alley. And—you think I did it!"

He sat as if he were stunned. He said, rather to himself than to her, "It's no use. I'll have to go away for awhile In the meantime, Velma—try to have a little faith in me."

"But can't you say—say you didn't—"

"You'd like to hear me say I wasn't in that alley, wouldn't you?" he rasped out, like a man waging a terrific battle with himself.

"Oh, how could I believe you weren't there, Tom? Oh, I wish I couldn't I wish I hadn't seen you that night, I wish—"

"Better discover the worst about a man before marrying him—that's your motto, isn't it? If I—if I met you that night, Velma, nobody regrets it more than I."

"Why are you planning to run away from it all? Wouldn't it be better to give yourself up, Tom—stay and face it—let the law take its course? Surely, you had a good reason for being in the alley—and if you didn't do it—Oh, Tom, I can't think you did it!"

He turned to her soberly. "Thank you for that. If I can think you still trust me, perhaps I'll pull out of this jam."

He sighed as though the weight of some overpowering load hung on his broad back.

The car crept slowly out to the main highway. He took a brief backward glance at the table where they had sat on the lawn under a gay umbrella canopy as though to fix it permanently in his memory.

"Anyway," his voice sounded choked, "we had a few brief minutes of happiness— when we knew we still loved each other. I thought that nothing could come between us then—but now—I'm not so sure."

She gave him one brief glance, and her solemn resolution never to see him again was shattered. She flung both arms around his neck, crying, "No, no Tom! Nothing shall ever separate us again—again—nothing, nothing!"

He stopped the car on the road's shoulder. He took her in his arms. He kissed her heart-shaped lips under her drunkenly twisted blue felt hat. He held her to him as if he never could let her go.

A passing motorist yelled out gleefully, "Lovely clinch, brother! reminding them both that it was broad daylight on a road between towns, and they were making a spectacle of themselves.

They drove on with Tom saying, "I'm begging you again, dear, to have faith in me. If I have that assurance, it will give me courage."

His tone was weary, rasped with pain. He had abruptly become a changed man, a haunted-looking man. She was afraid for him, for herself, for their love which hung in the balance.

She said earnestly, "I must—I will—have faith, dear."

She was to remember that promise for many wretched, lonely days to come. She was to remember and unsuccessfully try to bury the cry of that murdered man that rang insistently in her ears.

The following morning, Velma received a phone call from Miss Forland asking her a special favor to come to the shop that afternoon. Velma assured her that she would be glad to accommodate her, while thinking it rather inconsiderate of Miss Forland to take her time from job-hunting. It was imperative that she find something to do, and she must find it soon. She had not been re-week long enough to feel financially independent. Room, board and carfare, to say nothing of hose, beauty accessories, and other necessary expenditures, took a surprising amount of her weekly salary. When you watched yourself spend it, money left the purse on wings.

What a mere bagatelle had been a few hundred dollars to the Miss Wilkins! How long ago that seemed! She now looked back on that extravagant first edition of herself with a wholly unrelated air; she had become a surprisingly different person so far as perplexities were concerned. The problems of the Miss Wilkins were entirely foreign to the problems confronting her now. No longer was she a pampered beauty, her every act avidly noted by society reporters. She had even reached a place midway in the social scale where her good looks were, more or less, taken for granted. She had discovered that she was only one of hundreds of pretty girls who earned their own living. She no longer held herself superior to the common rabble. She was well aware that she was no better, socially or mentally, than many of them. As a matter of fact, she now realized that she never had been. She had been hoping since awaking that morning that Tom would call her. She didn't leave her room until it was time to go to the Forland shop. But no word came from him until he had surmounted whatever obstacle confronted him. She had a lacerating feeling that it might be some time before this would happen. It filled her with horrid surmises.

If Tom were innocent, why had he left town so hurriedly?—she supposed he had gone. And where was his destination? Why hadn't he explained in detail what the mystery was about? He knew that she loved him, that he could trust her. Then why had he not confided in her?

She buttoned her short suede jacket over her blue sheer frock as she came into the coolness of the street. Her blue pumps slashed briskly through the lazy autumn sunshine painting the sidewalks. She squared her shoulders, breathed deeply of the vinous air, exhilorating after the long dry summer. The pertquill on her blue hat was held high as she wove in and out of the afternoon downtown crowds. Any one would have labeled her "a pretty blonde girl with the most eagerly sparkling brown eyes in the world."

By the time she reached the shop, a distance of two miles or more, the exercise had fanned her sluggish spirits to the verge of optimism. She had already convinced herself that all would work out right for Tom and herself. She wouldn't worry any more.

"Ah,' he offered good-natured—ly, "here she is! We were just speaking of you, Velma."

He seated her in a deep wicker chair, sat down again.

Velma's cheeks colored, then paled. She said unevenly, "I trust it was fairly good—your opinion of me."

He chuckled. "I think you made a mistake when you left Mae—she needs you," he said, avoiding her glance.

"That's right, Velma, I do need you. You were my very best, my choicest model—and now I'm at my wit's end, trying to think of some one to take your place."

"I'm sorry if I inconvenienced you, Miss Forland," said Velma, in some embarrassment.

Work on Laying New Watermain Across River

Operations of the Toronto Dredge and Dock Company preparatory to installation of a new 18-inch watermain across the Moira River are pictured above.

The larger picture shows the mechanical shovel in operation scooping materials from the trench and dumping it to the side while underneath the crane are jack hammer operators drilling holes in the river bed rock in preparation for further blasting. To the right are the log cribwork sections which were sunk into the river to provide a platform on which the shovel is to operate.

Field Marshal List Given Life Term as War Criminal

Nuernberg, Germany, Feb. 19—(AP) — Field Marshal Wilhelm List was sentenced today to serve life imprisonment as a war criminal. He was convicted with seven other generals charged with atrocities in the Balkans. Two generals were acquitted.

The seven generals tried with List, whose German armies killed hostages by the hundreds, drew sentences ranging from seven years to life.

Plain Murder

The United States war crimes court ruled that some of the 63,000 killings for which the group was held responsible were plain murder.

It added that hostages may be slain by an occupation force to maintain order under international law. This may be done, however, only if the individuals selected for death bear some relation to the crime committed against the occupation forces. In most cases there was no such relation.

The court held that the right to execute hostages has been recognized by many states as the only way an occupying army can protect itself against partisan attacks.

The defendants were charged with responsibility for killing hostages in Greece, Yugoslavia and Albania. The court lashed Gen. Helmuth Felmy — who received a 15-year sentence —as being responsible for calculated, cold-blooded murder of infants and aged.

Partisans Ignored War Rules

But the court ruled that most of the partisans who harried Germans in the Balkans "failed to comply with the rules of war," and thus were not entitled to be treated as prisoners of war with the protection of international law.

The court deplored the "complete failure on the part of the nations of the world" to outlaw the killing of members of a conquered population.

Labor Retains Seat in Paisley

Glasgow, Feb. 19 (Reuters) — The Labor Government Party today retained the House of Commons seat of Paisley, near Glasgow. The Labor candidate, Douglas H. Johnston, Scotland's solicitor-general, was elected by a majority of 6,545 votes over the National Candidate J. John MacCormick, vice-chairman of the Scottish Liberal party.

In the general election of 1945 Viscount Corvedale polled 25,156 votes for Labor. Lieut. T. G. Galbraith, Conservative, obtained 14,826. Lady Glen-Coats, Liberal, received 4,352 and Capt. A. R. Eagles, Independent, 765.

The by-election was the first of the 37 since the general election in which the government was opposed by a joint Liberal-Conservative candidate.

The decision to support a joint candidate followed the recent Conservative by-election victory in the Glasgow constituency of Camlachie where for the first time in the lifetime of the Attlee government the opposition captured a seat from Labor.

16 Airmen Killed As Plane Crashes Near Brisbane

Brisbane, Australia, Feb. 19 — (CP) — The bodies of 16 airmen were recovered from the charred wreckage of a Royal Australian Air Force bomber which crashed at Amberly airport in Queensland, about 30 miles from Brisbane.

The plane, a Lincoln bomber, exploded during a landing attempt when a wing touched a runway. The plane, during its first attempted landing had overshot the runway and the pilot was trying to gain altitude for another try when the accident occurred.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 19 — (CP) — Judgment was reserved yesterday on application of Arthur F. Mitchell, Desert Lake tourist resort operator, under the foreign exchange regulations. He sought return of $80 in United States currency taken from him at the Thousand Islands bridge last July 23. Mr. Mitchell contends that as a tourist resort owner he had the right to have $500 in U.S. money and the currency was to be used to make change for American visitors to his camp.

Sailors Punch Each Other After Vessel Docks Following 5½-Months Cruise

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 19—(AP) —Even such landlubbers as the police knew all was not well aboard the freighter Thomas E. Mitchell.

Her bottom was rusty as a bucket. Her insides were dirty. Her sailors peeked through blackened eyes. Some had knots on their heads. They bawled loudly for edible food and their pay.

The 10,000-ton Mitchell (operated by the Prudential Steamship Co. of New York) made this port 5½ months after leaving New York. Docksiders said the sailors were punching each other on deck. The coast guard visited the ship. It said all was quiet.

But trouble flared again and one man went to a hospital with a knife wound. Another went to jail. Others told police that narcotics were hidden on the ship. That brought federal agents. They found a small amount of marijuana and a lot of filth.

And they heard this story from crew members:

"The Mitchell laid over in Venice and ran out of fresh food. She picked up a light cargo of fatty untanned hides.

In Sardinia she loaded salt for Japan. She arrived in Japan with no food and only two days water supply. The untanned hides went into the galley.

Police found in her storerooms half a sack of flour, some rotten Italian potatoes, molded beets, pancake mix and remains of the rancid hides.

Capt. James F. Church of Boston went ashore in Oakland. He had not returned last night. The coast guard, crew and delegates of the National Maritime Union looked for him. He was needed to straighten out the payroll.

The second mate, Peter Keenan, said he had never seen anything like the Mitchell in 21 years at sea.

The federal agents went on looking for narcotics.

POWER SHORTAGE WILL BE HELPED BY MORE CUTOFFS

Commission to Speed Up Construction Work

Toronto, Feb. 19 — (CP) — By cutoffs and by voluntary conservation, Southern Ontario communities sought today to conserve electricity while their citizens waited for the spring break - up to bring some relief from the power shortage.

In Toronto, acting Mayor H. E. McCallum of Toronto said the power shortage is "getting worse and worse" and that greater demands may be made today for conservation of the city's power. The peak load worry has now been extended from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m., and it looks as if the city is in for bigger and better blackouts." He feared today's cutoffs would have to be of longer duration. Previous blackouts were for 30-minute and 45-minute periods.

The power shortage, which led to the start Monday of the electricity cutoffs, has been blamed on the shortage of water in streams supplying generating plants and on the expansion of industry which is said to have outstripped generating capacity.

George Challies, Ontario minister without portfolio, said yesterday in Ottawa that the shortage is forcing the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission to speed up its development schedule. Tenders will be called within the next two weeks for construction work at the Chenauk project, 40 miles above Ottawa on the Ottawa River, and top priority is being given the Des Joachims project on the Ottawa River about 160 miles northwest of the capital.

Immediate institution of daylight time, scheduled to start in most cities the last weekend in April, was suggested as a power-saving means. Earl R. Nichols of London, Ont., president of the Canadian Restaurant Association, offered the suggestion on behalf of the Association's 800 Ontario members and said he had found non-member supporters for the idea. Daylight time was used during the war to conserve power.

Detroit Doctor Guilty of Rape

Detroit, Feb. 20. (CP)—Dr. Henslee E. Tann, 41, twice acquitted on abortion charges, was found guilty yesterday of raping a 25-year-old Sarnia, Ont., woman. A jury of eight women and four men brought in their verdict after deliberating 50 minutes.

Tann will be sentenced March 3, by Recorder's Judge Paul E. Krause. The offence carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Tann was charged with criminal attack on the unmarried Sarnia woman, who told the court he raped her when she appeared Jan. 21 at his office to discuss an abortion.

While the jury returned its verdict, Dr. Tann, apparently unmoved, was reading a pocket edition mystery novel in the prisoner's box. Later he told reporters: "Sure we're going to appeal."

Two warrants are still pending against him. He was remanded to county jail on $55,000 bail. Tann is charged with performing an illegal operation on a 15-year-old girl and with obstructing justice by inducing a police witness to leave the state during a previous abortion trial.

He was acquitted last August by a recorders court jury of manslaughter charges in connection with the death from peritonitis of Miss Helen Matta, of Leamington, Ont.

Tann also is under one-year sentence in the Detroit House of Correction for non-payment of alimony. His estranged wife, Frances, charged that he owed $400 back alimony. They have a 5-year-old daughter.

"Ball of Fire" Seen In Several States

Kansas City, Feb. 19 (AP) — Observers today sought an explanation of a strange "ball of fire," possibly a disintegrating meteor, seen in six states.

The brilliant explosion, thousands of feet in the air, was observed in Kansas, Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Colorado yesterday.

Oscar Monnig, secretary of the National Meteorological Society, said at Fort Worth, Tex., that he felt sure the fire ball was a meteor disintegrating.

Officials of the Chamberlain observatory at the University of Denver, however, could offer no explanation.

Justice Middleton Dies in Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 19 (CP) — A brilliant career at the bench and bar ended yesterday with the death at his home here of Mr. Justice William E. Middleton, 87, after a short illness. Retired Justice of the Supreme Court of the province, Judge Middleton summarized his philosophy of the law on his retirement Jan. 6, 1933, when he said: "I have always found people respect fairness."

One of the more colorful of his cases was that of the Millar will "stork derby." His decision was that the will was legal although it set aside $500,000 to be given to women in the city having the most children in the 10 years after Charles Vance Millar's death.

The career of the Supreme Court Justice included assignments such as that of 1913 when he was appointed sole commissioner to revise the rules of practice in supreme and county courts. In 1927, he was chairman of a Board of Commissioners that revised and consolidated the Ontario statutes.

WHOLESALERS WILL ANSWER CHARGES OF PROFITEERING

Committee to Launch Into Full-Scale Probe in Bread Prices

Ottawa, Feb. 19 —(CP)— Representatives of Toronto fruit and vegetable wholesalers likely will take the stand before the Commons Price Committee to reply to testimony given by retail officials that the wholesalers have profiteered in recent months.

Wholesale officials have been attending the committee sessions for the last two days while George Christensen and W. S. Jamieson of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada criticized them for allegedly jacking up prices.

Health Minister Martin, committee chairman, said that wholesalers will be given an adequate opportunity to make their rebuttal, which will close this preliminary inquiry into prices of fruits and vegetables.

If the wholesalers finish their evidence in time, the committee then will launch tomorrow into a full-scale investigation into the rise in bread prices.

Representatives of Loblaws Groceterias, General Bakers and Dominion Stores have been asked to be ready to appear before the committee.

The session of the committee yesterday was the most unruly since it began 11 days ago There was a series of snarled-up exchanges between Mr. Christensen and some of the lawyer-members of the committee.

Mr. Christensen and Mr. Jamieson placed figures before the committee which purported to show that there have been exorbitant wholesale price increases in fruits and vegetables, particularly since the Nov. 17 import embargo.

Shortly before his statement was made, the Prices Board reimposed margin-of-profit controls on citrus fruits limiting profit to 17 per cent for importing wholesalers.

The two witnesses presented the committee with a chart of 21 wholesale-retail transactions in citrus fruits which indicated that wholesalers profits ranged from as high as 49.3 per cent with an average around 30 per cent in late January and February.

Wanted for Desertion, Found at Naval Base

San Francisco, Feb. 10 (AP) — The United States Navy yesterday charged James Leroy Telfer, 23, with desertion from Treasury Island naval base, but he was right there all the time — for two years.

The navy said that Telfer, a watertender, went A.W.L. in February, 1946, while at Treasure Island, in San Francisco Bay, awaiting orders to go overseas.

Last week he was picked up at the base, under the name of James Leroy Johnson. He was manager of the base softball team and a member of the baseball and bowling teams.

He had been living in empty barracks. Telfer got a job as a pin setter in the island bowling alley and worked as a referee at baseball games to get money enough to pay for his meals in the base canteen.

The only time he left Treasure Island in the two years was when his softball, baseball or bowling teams went on trips.

J.M. MACDONALD CONCERNED OVER INFLATION TREND

Demands Govt. Take Corrective Steps

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (CP)—Concern over the dangers of inflation meant there was "too much money chasing around after too few goods," was expressed in the Commons yesterday by J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Muskoka-Ontario), financial critic for the Progressive Conservative opposition.

Stepping into the lengthening Throne Speech debate, Mr. Macdonnell accused the government of "ignoring" the inflationary threat in Canada and warned that the situation would worsen if the administration did not soon take corrective steps.

He said the Commons committee on prices, since it was dealing with profits, hoarding and matters of a similar nature, could have only a "microscopic" effect upon the inflationary tendencies.

Resources Minister Glen entered the debate briefly to deny that there had been political interference in the proposed appointment of W. J. F. Pratt, his private secretary, as general executive assistant in the Indian Affairs branch.

No Ultimatum Given

At the House opening, Trade Minister Howe told the Chamber no eviction "ultimatum" has been given war veterans occupying a housing development in the Montreal suburb —of Ville St. Laurent. If the veterans did not want to buy, they could stay until the homes were sold.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the government has not yet decided whether to submit legislation increasing war veterans' allowances to the Commons Veterans Affairs Committee. The increases have been announced but the legislation has not yet been introduced.

In the Senate, Senator W. D. Euler (L-Ontario) moved second reading of his bill to legalize the importation, manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in Canada and said he was convinced Canadians were "overwhelmingly" in favor of repeal of the margarine ban.

Orange, Grapefruit Prices Reduced

Toronto, Feb. 19 (CP)—California oranges dropped between 60 cents and $1.20 a crate wholesale today following the Prices Board announcement of a profit ceiling in imported citrus fruits, while grapefruit sold more than 50 cents a crate lower and lemons 20-70 cents.

With the 17-per-cent markup control effective today, wholesale markets quoted California navel oranges at $4.30 to $7 a crate, compared with $5.50 to $7.60 yesterday; grapefruit at $3 compared with $3.50-$4.50 and messina lemons at $5.30 compared with $5.50-$6.

There were no quotes on limes and tangerines, the other fruits affected by the order.

KNEW WHO DID IT

Jasper, Ga., Feb. 19 (AP) —A 70-year-old farmer found with his throat cut, told hospital attendants here, "I know who did it, but I will die before I tell." Shortly after midnight Tuesday, the farmer, E.L. Patterson, died. Those were his last words.

Chile Establishes Second Military Base In Antarctic

Placed in Defiance Of Long-Time British Claims

Santiago, Feb. 19 (AP) —Chilean President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla headed home today after formally setting up two military bases in disputed Antarctic territory — which he called a "land of tomorrow."

The bases were established at Chilean weather station in defiance of long-time British claims, recently reiterated.

Gonzalez inaugurated the first base Tuesday — a weather station at Port Sovereignty Island in the South Shetlands, some 500 miles south of the southern tip of South America.

He dedicated the second yesterday at another weather station, 60 miles to the south, on a peninsula known to Chile as O'Higgins Land and to Britain as Graham Land. Bernardo O'Higgins, a Chilean patriot of Irish extraction, "was the first chief of state of independent Chile.

Dispatches to this Chilean capital told of the ceremony. The corvette Covadonga anchored among icebergs. The president went ashore with other officials.

Then, standing amid snow and ice, he said his presence was one more confirmation of Chile's sovereignty over the extreme south of its national soil."

"I am sure its people will be able to maintain the virility, sovereignty and unity of our territory from Africa to the South Pole. Arica is in northernmost Chile.

Overlapping Claims

Chile, Argentina and Great Britain hold overlapping claims to pie shaped section of Antarctica and to south Atlantic islands to the north. Argentina and Britain both claim the British -administered Falkland Islands and their dependencies. Britain has sent the cruiser Nigeria from South Africa to the Falkland Islands to show the flag." Argentine naval vessels are en route to manoeuvres in the same area.

In Buenos Aires, Louis Irigoyen, Argentine under-secretary of foreign affairs, said in a statement that "by virtue of the Rio Accord," his country does not recognize the existence of European colonies in the area.

He was referring to the inter-American defence treaty signed last year. This puts the Falklands in the Western Hemisphere defence area.

The Argentine statement was called a reply to Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, who told the Commons Monday his government would stand by her claims.

SPEED UP APPLICATIONS

Toronto, Feb. 19—(CP)—Old-age pensioners' applications for the Ontario $10 cost of living bonus will be speeded up under a change in regulations, it was learned at Queen's Park yesterday. It will enable the old age pension commission to make decisions on the basis of information supplied by welfare department's records, rather than waiting until investigators reported on the need of applicants.

Says No Monopoly or Combine Exists In Toronto Wholesale Fruit Trade

Ottawa, Feb. 19 — (CP) — A spokesman for the Toronto fruit and produce wholesalers told the Commons Price Committee today that "there is no effort made to fix prices or to control supplies."

Taking the stand in rebuttal of charges levelled by the retailers that the wholesalers were profiteering, George Reynolds, secretary of the Toronto Wholesale Fruit and Produce Merchants Association, added thet "prices are established by the free play of supply and demand."

"There is no monopoly or combine in the Toronto wholesale fruit trade."

The wholesalers were called to testify after retail representatives completed their evidence and two uproars rocked the committee.

George Christensen, national director of the foods division of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, charged that he had been "abused and slandered" and "made a fool of" by the committee yesterday.

Ralph Maybank (L-Winnipeg South Centre), acting committee chairman, assured the witness that this was not the case and sharply brought the meeting to order.

Earlier, another row broke out when Hughes Cleaver (L-Halton) tried to commend the Prices Board for re-imposing margin-of-profit controls on citrus fruits.

Progressive-Conservative members maintained such a statement was out of order and that at any rate the Prices Board action was several months too late.

In his testimony for the wholesalers, Mr. Reynolds said: "From the perishable nature of the merchandise handled and the vagaries of the weather, prices are continually fluctuating. Wholesalers sell at the market as established by buyers' demand whether such sales are at a profit or loss . . ."

MILK PRODUCERS LEAGUE TO HANDLE ALL OWN PRODUCE

Under New Act Farmer Bases Price on Cost 'Plus Reasonable Profit'

Toronto, Feb. 19 — (CP) — In a 499-1 vote, the Ontario Milk Producers League yesterday decided to market all their own produce through the Association. The League will ask the Ontario government for enabling legislation and will "insist on government controls." Under the plan, it was stated, all unfair dumping of milk into distributing plants now overtaxed will be eliminated.

Further the League will direct milk into various channels and will direct payments to farmers either from a dairy or the Association.

Ontario Agriculture Minister Kennedy told the afternoon session the basis of a new Ontario Milk Act, due soon, would be that "the farmer bases the price on cost of production plus a reasonable profit."

He praised the league's action in trying to assume additional control of the industry. League members must keep abreast of the times, he added.

"I don't like governments going into business. I like to see you meeting your processors or distributors and setting the price—handling your own business."

Plans were under way to send dairy cattle to Northern Ontario areas where milk was scarce. Farmers would be given 10 months to pay for the animals.

Another resolution favored reintroduction of a sliding scale for the differential for fluid milk. It was suggested the scale should start at three cents with butterfat prices of less than 25 cents a pound. Butterfat prices of 40 cents or more a pound would bring a differential of five cents a hundredweight, as compared with the present 3½ cents.

Pope Administers Final Absolution

The Prince of the Roman Catholic Church died Monday, aged 96.

The body lay in state in St. Peter's Basilica.

Oscar Campbell Will be Deported

Toronto, Feb. 19 — (CP)—Oscar Campbell, known in the 30s as Canada's public enemy No. 1, will be extradited to Buffalo, N. Y., today to stand trial on charges of breaking into a tea company office.

The 50-year-old Campbell was released from penitentiary at Kingston, last November after serving nine years and three months for armed robbery of a branch of the Bank of Navo Scotia at Richmond, Ont., near Ottawa.

He was re-arrested at the penitentiary gates following his release. Last month Judge J.C. Reynolds of Kingston recommended his extradiction.

RARITY IN SQUIRREL CIRCLES MIGHTY PROUD OF ATTIRE

It's a far cry from a squirrel to a wolf, but there's a dun-colored little long-tailed Lothario of the squirrel family who is raising hob with the black gals of the same tribe on Church Street.

The dun-colored lad, said to be a rarity in squirrel circles, is mighty proud of his Spring attire, and daily he may be seen preening himself, while an admiring "black" squeaks approval from a nearby tree.

Just where the little fellow got his color is hard to conceive. His mother might have been a red, while his pappy may have come from the ebony clan. In any event he is quite a gay blade, and if he doesn't meet with sudden misfortune should cut quite a swath when Spring finally arrives.

OLD ENGLISH PENNY FOUND IN RIVER

The find is not likely to start a rush at digging for buried bullion but this week the bed of the Moira River yielded an English half penny token dated 1812.

The half penny token was found by a workman of the Toronto Dredge and Dock Company after it was brought from the river bed by the mechanical shovel being used to excavate a trench for the 18-inch watermain which is to be laid across the river.

Quinte Skating Club to Present Fine Entertainment

Trained to a near peak of entertainment perfection, the cast of the Quinte Skating Club's Eighth Annual Winter Show is ready to make its 1948 debut at Memorial Arena here tomorrow night.

Climaxing weeks and months of arduous rehearsal, the cast which numbers over 150 and includes members from the club's tiniest skating tots to the veterans of many years standing is justifiably proud of the colorful extravaganza which it will present to the public on Friday evening. The show starts at 8.15.

Behind this glittering ice panorama of ice perfection, color and pageantry, is eight years of experience. This has been brought into full play in this year's presentation, and this with new ideas, welds the 1947-48 edition of the Winter Show into a highly-entertaining whole.

Garnishing the artistry of such well-known Quinte stars as Gord. Davies, Olivia Weese, Clare Ridley, Marilyn and Doris Kerr, Jack Dickens, Betty McNally, Wilma Graham, with special comedy effects by Stan Keay, Rae Lancaster, Jim Calnan, Everett Close and Ruben Kline, will be the ice wizardry of a galaxy of ice luminaries from the Toronto Skating Club.

Toronto Artists Coming

These include the Misses Sally Blogg, Frances Dafoe, an old favorite with Belleville audiences, Bessie Henry and Bette Wrinch and Messrs. W. W. de Nance and M. Thornton Opie. These artists are regarded as top-flight up around Toronto way and their performance alone should be well worth the price of admission.

The Quinte Club has arranged a delightful uantomimic sequence of ice pageantries. The color effects are extremely beautiful and the settings under the brilliant lights of the arena and the blue-white background of the ice surface form a perfect back-drop to the multi-color of the various costumes.

The younger members of the cast are seen at their best in the colorful presentation of the famous fairy story "Hansel and Gretel". It is prettily staged and to give any details would spoil the number for the audience.

The mystery and fascinating atmosphere of the Orient is injected into the show in the pageant "In a Chinese Garden." The exotic melodies, color and pageantry of gay Latin America is seen in "The South American Sway" with its colorful caballeros and senoritas.

There'll be a wee bit 'o the flarin' 'o the kilt when the number "Scotch on Ice" flashes in review while Ould Ireland is well represented in the club's St. Patrick's presentation of "A Bit of Ireland." Exotic India, dark, mysterious, with her colorful maidens, intrigue, color and dancers rounds out a highly entertaining sequence of pageantry on parade.

Months of Labor

Interspersing these attractions are the artistic numbers staged by other members of the cast. The graceful singles, duos, and collective presentations are within themselves spectacles of the highest entertainment.

The Eighth Annual Winter Show is a fine tribute to the collective co-operation of the club as a whole. It climaxes as was said before months of arduous labor and the colorful presentation that is the result of strenuous rehearsal, preparation, planning, etc., should be rewarded by the entertainment-loving public by packed houses at all three shows.

Much Preliminary Work Required Before Watermain Can be Placed in Position

Operations of the Toronto Dredge and Dock Company engaged in the installation of a new watermain across the Moira River just below the lower bridge have resulted in a substantial gallery of interested on-lookers during the past few weeks.

The company is trenching four feet below the bed of the river and will lay an 18-inch watermain for the Belleville Public Utilities Commission.

Ice, Rock Scooped Out

Focal point of the onlookers' interest is the operation of the mechanical grab shovel which scoops up huge quantities of slush, ice and rock material and swings it out of the water for dumping on a pile at the side or into the dump box of waiting truck. After several weeks of operation the trench in which the main will be laid is now virtually completed across the river and operations of laying the watermain will shortly commence.

Building of the cribwork bridge and causeway on which the mechanical shovel has worked its way across the river has also been a point of interest from onlookers. First a ramp of rock and earth was built leading down onto the river from the park on the west side of the river. Then the causeway of rock and earth was continued until deeper water was encountered when special cribwork constructed of logs was sunk into the current to support the floor from which the shovel operated.

Water Flow Unimpeded

The log cribwork permits the water to pass through unimpeded and prevents river current from being dammed up behind. Jack-hammer operators drilled the holes necessary for the blasting operations which loosened material where the trench was to be excavated.

Intentions of the contracting firm are to have the watermain installation across the river completed before the spring break-up and the mild weather of the past few days has resulted in a speeding up of operations. With the completion of the trench sections of the water main will be placed and coupled together by a diver. Mr. Jack Sullivan is superintendent in charge of the work.

Little Evidence Spring Break-Up In Moira River

Despite the recent mild weather and the increased volume of water as result of last Friday's rain, there is still little evidence of an impending breakup of the ice in the Moira River north of the city.

The river ice north from the Upper Bridge is still solid until a point near the railroad bridge is reached where a few small open places in the rapids section of the river can be noticed. The same is true further north, the only large open stretch of water being in the rapids section of the river below the Cannifton dam. North of the dam the ice is solid with no water showing.

Frazil ice conditions which may be partially blocking the path of the water south of the Lower Bridge has caused the water to surge above the ice at a point where the Toronto Dredge and Dock Company is presently engaged in installing a new water main across the river. From this point to the railroad bridge the water is running to a depth of several inches above the ice.

Girl Student Receives Burns at Demonstration

Result of an accident which occurred while students were demonstrating in the chemistry room, Miss Mary Ann Emery, daughter of Mrs. Edna Emery, 191 1-2 Ann Street, received minor sodium burns during the "Open House" program at the Belleville Collegiate last evening. Fortunately the young girl was not seriously injured and is back at her classes today.

The accident occurred as students were demonstrating experimental work as part of the evening's program. The girl standing next to Miss Emery was doing a sodium on water experiment and apparently misjudged the amount of sodium used and an explosion resulted. Miss Emery's clothing was slightly burned but the blaze was quickly smothered by bystanders, and the girl received medical attention by Dr. R. Bird.

"Students had been warned not to attempt anything of a dangerous nature," Principal G. E. Currie stated today, "but directions were not followed completely and it was just unfortunate the accident occurred."

CALLED AMBULANCE IN ACCIDENT IN WHICH HOGS FIGURED

Decatur, Ga., Feb. 19 (AP) — Several hogs were injured severely when the truck in which they were riding overturned near here yesterday.

The price of pork being what it is, somebody called an ambulance. In fact two ambulances.

Neither of the ambulance drivers was perturbed on arrival. They said they understood the situation but still were confined to carrying just people.

O.P.P. Prosecute Owners Driving Defective Cars

Lights and other equipment on motor vehicles being used on the highways are being checked by officers of the Ontario Provincial Police these days with offenders driving cars not properly equipped being brought into court to answer charges.

Today in police court a number of motorists appeared on charges of operating cars without the necessary number of lights in proper working order and for driving with brakes and other equipment not in good condition.

District Inspector W. A. Page today stated that bringing offenders into court was the only way to make motorists realize that equipment on autos must be kept in good condition in order to maintain a degree of safety on the highways.

"Officers can remind motorists time and again to correct bad lights and bad brakes but invariably nothing is done about it until the offenders are brought into court," he said.

FIELD MARSHAL

Some lawyers felt the decision might have bearing in the future on the guerrilla fighting in Greece.

With the hostage ruling as a preamble, the court meted out these sentences:

List, a grim-lipped Prussian of the old German officers' school, life imprisonment.

Gen. Walter Kuntze, a List army group commander, life.

Gen. Lothar Rendulic, chief of the second Panzer army, 20 years.

Gen. Wilhelm Speidel, 20 years.

Gen. Hubert Lanz, 12 years.

Gen. Felmy, 15 years.

Gen. Ernst Von Leyser, 10 years.

Gen. Ernst Dehner, seven years.

Acquitted were:

Gen. Hermann Foertsch, chief of the 12th army staff.

Field Marshal Maximilian Von Weichs, also indicted in this case, was removed from the trial recently because of a heart ailment. Another defendant, Maj.-Gen. Franz Boehme, killed himself last July.

GRANDFATHER DOING WELL

Spruce Pine, N.C., Feb. 19 — (AP)—Ed Chowder became a grandfather in a big-way — four times in five days. On Feb. 7, a son and daughter-in-law became the parents of twins, a boy and a girl. On Feb. 9, a son was born to a daughter and son-in-law and on Feb. 12, another daughter and son-in-law became parents of a girl. Crowder is doing well.

Stunt Driver Acquitted On Murder Charge

Quebec, Feb. 19 — (CP)—Trial of James Hazlitt, automobile stunt driver of Oklahoma City for the carnival murder of a man who had annoyed his wife ended in an unprecedented burst of applause in a Quebec criminal court yesterday when an English-speaking jury acquitted him after deliberating only 25 minutes.

Hazlitt, who had admitted striking 26-year-old Edouard Doiron at Causapscal village in Matapedia county last August, when Mrs. Hazlitt complained of being insulted by Doiron, said last night he and his 20-year-old wife planned to leave today for Oklahoma.

Scene of the trial was shifted to Quebec from the county criminal court after Antoine Rivard of Quebec, Hazlitt's counsel, had won a change of venue motion on the grounds possible animosity of people in the district where Doiron had been fatally injured would prejudice his case.

Hazlitt said the favorable reaction given the verdict so overwhelmed him he could not express his pleasure.

Of British justice he said: —"That was really true justice. It was as much justice as I could expect anywhere."

The trial moved quickly to a climax after Crown counsel Paul Miquelon, in his address to the jury, said he did not ask for a conviction of murder because "I don't believe it was murder." However, he held the jury should convict and reduce the charge to manslaughter.

WAITED FOR AMBULANCE

London, Feb. 19—(CP)—Lloyd Pickering, local bus driver, is a modern Sir Walter Raleigh. When Margaret Sherry slipped on the ice and broke her ankle while trying to catch his bus, he covered her with his coat and asked his passengers to board another bus while he waited for an ambulance.

LARGE INFANT DELIVERED

Brooklyn, Feb. 19 (AP)—A 13-pound, 11-ounce baby girl was born here yesterday to 37-year-old Mrs. Jacob Epstein. Obstetricians said they believed the infant to be the largest ever delivered in the Metropolitan area. It was Mrs. Epstein's fourth child.

De Valera Remains Political Power Although Defeated

Dublin, Feb. 19 —(AP)— Eire today began its first experiment in coalition government and, to most Irishmen, that simply meant: "'Dev' is out."

But while Eamon de Valera, prime minister since 1932, has been turned out by the dail, he remains a political power in Eire. His Fianna Fail (Soldiers of Destiny) party holds 68 parliament seats, only six short of a majority.

A five-party coalition, apparently resentful at De Valera's 16 years in office, joined forces yesterday and elected John A. Costello, 56, a Dublin lawyer.

Most politicians agree there will be little immediate change in Irish life under Costello's coalition. The quiet, cautious new prime minister is leader of the Conservative Fine Gael (United Irish) party.

Ever since Eire broke away from Britain in 1921 it has been ruled by a single party government. For the first 11 years William Cosgrave's United Irish party governed. In 1932, De Valera, a rifle-carrying rebel in the early Irish "troubles" with Britain, took over. Some have criticized what they termed a "one-man government" under De Valera.

"It's time for a change!" was the rallying cry of anti-De Valera groups. The change has come—it surprised even the victors — and now the question is whether the five different parties can carry out a common program. In the five are the Conservative Fine Gael and the lusty, Liberal Clann Na Poblachta (Republicans) under fiery Sean MacBride.

Any break in the coalition's ranks will force new elections and such a break is not beyond possibility. A half dozen switched votes on any major issue will give his Fianna Fail party the whip hand and overthrow the coalition government.

The new prime minister and his cabinet visited their offices today for the first time as the dail recessed for a week. The recess was called to permit Costello to draft a program whose main feature, it said, would be to boost farm production.

J.M. MACDONALD

In the Commons, Mr. Macdonnell charged that the government, in appointing a committee to investigate prices, was "turning away from the causes of inflation and looking for effects." The resolution setting up the committee had not mentioned the word "inflation."

Criticizing the government's handling of finance since the end of the war, he said that in 1939 the Canadian people possessed some $2,100,000,000 in their pockets or in savings or demand deposits. Today they had, $7,100,000,000 which every serious student of economics would agree had a profound effect upon the country's price structure.

With the amount of money now available, there was a practically unlimited demand for a limited supply of goods.

Mr. Glen, dealing with the Pratt appointment, charged that Douglas Harkness (PC-Calgary East) who said last Friday that there was "political interference and finagling" in Indian affairs appointments, had made "whole incorrect" statements.

Protests Attack

Mr. Harkness, speaking on a question of privilege, protested that the minister was attacking his "fairness" and had "totally misrepresented and misinterpreted" his statements.

Mr. Wright called for the passage of legislation to establish a board of livestock commissioners and a Dominion agricultural products marketing board and said a formula should be worked out which would provide floor prices for farm products under the Agricultural Prices Support Act of 1944.

Mr. Manross urged the government to take steps to increase the pension now paid to needy blind persons of 21 and over from the present $30 a month at least $40 to help meet increased living costs.

Mr. Warren restricted his remarks to developments within his eastern Ontario constituency and reported that the production of farm products, especially beef, pork, butter and eggs, increased substantially in 1947.

Winning Through

British miners have set up records never reached before in the history of the coal industry. Distribution stocks are now 6,000,000 tons higher than a year ago and exports have begun. Many Canadians recall the days before the recent war when Scotch and Welsh coal were brought in and so have a kindly interest in the achievements of the miners of the Old Land.

Coal, says The British Weekly, is the cornerstone of national prosperity and has reached the target set [illegible] by the government. Week after week the miners working overtime have passed the four-million-ton mark and individual miners have set up records never before reached in the industry. Distribution stocks are six million tons higher than a year ago.

The battle of the wagons has already been won and a mixed bag of nationalities and trades has formed a powerful voluntary combination at the weekends to keep the wagons rolling and turning.

Production of yarn is at its highest level since 1941. Several months ago Sir Stafford Cripps set a weekly production target of sixteen and a half million pounds and that target was smashed inside of eight weeks. Steel output runs now at the annual rate of fourteen million tons and the 1948 target has already been passed. In agriculture, in shipbuilding, in the potteries, it is the same story.

Britain and her people are the admiration of the people of the world for what they accomplish. They have borne more than their share of tasks and burdens for the safety of mankind.

About a year ago Britain was passing through an unusual winter which caused great losses to livestock and destruction of property. Her heroic determination to bear these additional burdens was manifest and her courage in the face of these handicaps provides the certainty of her emergence from the economic stringency with which she has been faced.

Interesting Facts

There were 25 fatalities in which the car driver was not at fault, it is stated in a news story of the traffic accident report of the city of Toronto for the year 1947. This is of interest to every one as it is a proof that the very great majority of automobile drivers take their job seriously and with a profound sense of their responsibility in respect to the safety of others.

Other interesting facts in the report include these:

There were more cars on the streets and traffic accidents totalled 5,500, an increase of 7.5 for the year, but fatalities from all persons injured fell 15 per cent from 3,033 in 1946 to 2,559 in 1947.

Toronto police annual report of accidents showed 51 pedestrians killed, 35 by autos, 14 by street cars and two by horse and wagon.

Generally, the accidents involving injury were below average severity.

Sunday, when many cars are out, was the only day in the week in which there was not a traffic fatality, while Saturday was the worst with 17 deaths from all causes and Tuesday next worse with 12.

Five of the thirteen drivers and passengers killed lost their lives in crashes with street cars.

Three bicycle riders were killed in the path of autos.

It is a fact of note that twenty-four of the pedestrians who were fatally injured in all accidents were 65 years and over. The fact of the danger to pedestrians who are in the older categories has been noted in provincial reports of the highway toll in other years.

Bicyclists injured totalled 168 of whom 155 were hurt by cars and eight by street cars. Seventy-three of these injured were from 10 to 14 years of age and 54 from 15 to 24.

Nobody was killed while standing on a safety zone but one was hurt as were 14 others hurt in going to or from zones.

Cars involved in 50 of the deaths and in 2,475 non-fatal accidents had no mechanical defects. It is reported that in the case of four deaths there were defective brakes, in two improper lights and in one a dirty windshield.

From 5 to 6 p.m. proved to be the most dangerous hour for accidents, with six fatalities.

Automobiles were involved in 29 deaths, trucks in 20, taxis in four, busses in three and motorcycles in one but there were 133 other motorcycle accidents or eight more than the taxis had.

Drivers going straight ahead were involved in 44 fatalities.

In pedestrian deaths one was under the influence of liquor and four had been drinking, while in 40 fatalities and in 1,139 injuries the pedestrian had been suffering no defects.

In the death of two drivers of cars liquor was involved, as was the case in 189 non-fatal accidents.

In Edinburgh Castle

Distinguished guests of the Secretary of State for Scotland will in future be entertained within the walls of Edinburgh's historic Castle in a setting worthy of the Scottish capital, remarks the Edinburgh Scotsman.

The apartment assigned for the purpose is the lower banqueting hall, which lies on the east side of Crown Square beside the Scottish National War Memorial.

The Palace Block, in which the banqueting hall is situated, dates from the 15th century, but has been considerably added to and altered.

The higher part was formerly called the King's Lodging. A turnpike stair gives access to the Crown Chamber, a stone-vaulted strongroom where the regalia of Scotland and other Royal jewels are kept.

The room now designated as the lower banqueting hall, it is thought, may have been a servants' dining hall in the days when the Palace Block was a Royal residence.

Einstein and One World

Physics moves in a world of mathematical abstractions. Politics moves in a world of concrete experience. When these two worlds collide disastrously, as at Hiroshima, it is time for physicist and politician alike to wake up to the fact that they are going to have to live in one world together.

The 1948 One World Award has been given to Albert Einstein. Here is a man who, long before the Nazis came to power, had proved himself a citizen of the world as well as a master of the cosmos. In recent years he has worked eloquently at educating an apathetic public toward the concept of world government for an atomic age. Always he has challenged the reign of brute force in the world, even while plumbing the brute force of the physical universe, remarks Christian Science Monitor.

The Church

The church is human! Yes, but the very men who disclaim most loudly against her defects take greatest care to plant their homes beneath her shadow.

The church is the greatest protector of human life and liberty that the world ever knew. The church is the greatest friend of humanity that exists in the world today; and even her bitterest enemies would probably not remain long in a community in which the church has been banished.

Yet men will today find great enjoyment in telling of the church's faults; and tomorrow in selling their property they will take pains to say that it is near a church. Strange, isn't it strange?—Chatham News.

WEATHER MAN

Anybody who will take the trouble to look at a technical treatise on forecasting will realize that a weather man doesn't merely sit around in a high room with a good view of the city, keeping his eye on an array of shining instruments. He has to deal with pressure systems, fronts, displacements, air mass properties, modifications caused by local geography and resulting computations and equations that even Professor Einstein would have to respect. Then, as likely as not, some weather will slip through a gap in his information and he will be blamed for it. What the Weather Bureau needs is more information, which means more money, says New York Times.

HELP WANTED

Help wanted! When those ads I read,
I wonder what it is they need,
And just what sort of man or boy
The firm is seeking to employ?

Of anyone he thought to hire
I've never heard a man inquire
The lowest score at golf he'd made,
Or if the game of bridge he played.

I'm sure he doesn't care a fig
How well the boy can dance a jig.
This seems to be his chief concern:
How eager is the boy to learn?

Has someone led him to believe
Success is easy to achieve?
Or, will he once a task's begun
Stay with it till he gets it done?

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

When was the Era of Good Feeling?

The two terms of President James Monroe (1817-1825) are known as "The Era of Good Feeling."

From Washington's to Madison's administrations there had been two major parties — Federalists and Republicans. The Federalists, after being defeated twice by Jefferson and twice by Madison, began to lose ground rapidly by 1815 because they had opposed the War of 1812 and because Madison had adopted many of their domestic policies. Rufus King, the Federalist candidate for President in 1816, received only 34 electoral votes, while Monroe, the Republican candidate, received 183.

Shortly after his inauguration in 1817 President Munroe, dressed in a uniform such as he wore as a Revolutionary soldier, toured New England, the last stronghold of the Federalists. One of those who took a leading part in honoring the President when he visited Boston was Benjamin Russell (176--1845), editor of a semi-weekly newspaper called the Columbian Centinel. Russell had served in the Continental army and was a member of the military guard at the execution of Major John Andrew.

Although an ardent Federalist, he wrote an editorial favorable to the Republican President and printed it in his paper dated July 12, 1817, under the title "The Era of Good Feelings." The President liked the phrase coined by Russell. With the final "s" dropped it was picked up and used as a sort of slogan for the Monroe administration.

The fusion of the two parties continued and in 1820 the Federalists did not nominate a candidate for President, with the result that Monroe received all the electoral votes but one. Monroe himself took the "Era of Good Feeling" seriously and thought that political parties in the United States were dead and of no further use. But Thomas Jefferson did not agree. "You are told," wrote the Sage of Monticello to Albert Gallatin, "that there are no longer parties among us; that they are all now amalgamated; the lion and the lamb to lie down together in peace. Do not believe a word of it."

The harmony was more apparent than real. Party spirit was merely in abeyance and it was really a period of suppressed bad feeling. The panic of 1819 and the controversy over the Missouri question in 1820 were idications that the Era of Good Feeling was only a calm before a storm.

A political party cannot live without opposition, and the disappearance of the Federalists caused the Republican party to split into factions. Five strong men — Andrew Jackson, John Quincy Adams, Wm. H. Crawford, Henry Clay and John C. Calhoun, began to build up personal parties with a view of being chosen President in 1824. All these men called themselves Republicans, although Adams was suspected of being a Federalist in sheep's-clothing. The campaign was one of the bitterest up to that time and out of it developed a new two-party system.

SO YOU THINK YOU HAVE COLITIS?

Please give this your close attention, Yankee Wiseacres. Yankee in my lexicon means any one living anywhere in North America and Wiseacre means any one who thinks he or she knows as much as, or maybe more than an "ordinary" doctor does about certain ailments, diets etc. I estimate there are more than forty million Yankee Wiseacres, and most of them resent everything I say about health and hygiene—moreover they get some assurance from the brass specialists, the near doctors and the queer doctors they employ.

In his classical Studies in Deficiency Disease Robert McCarrison, M.D., D.Sc., LL. D (Belf.) said:

"One of the earliest pathological evidences of deficient and ill-balanced foods, as observed in animals, is congestion of the gastro-intestinal mucosa" (mucous membrane lining stomach and intestine.) Such a state of congestion may well give rise in children to the gastro-intestinal catarrh which characerizes 'mucous disease.' This disorder is very common among children who are fed largely on sterilized milk, artificial foods, white bread, polished rice, poor butter, overcooked vegetables and excessive quantities of sugar."

McCarrison's studies were made in northernmost India and he was familiar with the food habits in England too. He had little first hand knowledge of food habits in America. The main fault of the diet of children in America is the excessive proportion of refined carbohydrate, high calory items, easy to eat even when one is not hungry, easy as any other food to digest, source of immediate energy, cheap, always available, easy to keep; but cheat food nevertheless, because it satisfies the child's immediate appetite or hunger without in the least satisfying the child's need for the vitamins and minerals real food would provide. White flour and breads, cakes, puddings and pastries made of it; white sugar and refined syrup and corn sugar (glucose, dextrose etc.) and the sweets made from sugar. American children, as well as adults, get most of their daily calories from cheat foods and even if they include some natural foods in the diet they cannot take enough natural foods to supply the daily requirement of vitamins and minerals when they are surfeited with white flour and white sugar.

One of the most constant results of food deficient in vitamins is colitis, said McCarrison. It is so frequent, this famous nutrition authority observed, that it may rank as a cardinal sign of vitaminic deficiency. Sir Robert further stated: "Unfortunately most cases of this character in the human subject are of very long standing. I myself have no doubt that a portion of them have resulted from the long-continued use of deficient foods from childhood onwards."

Wiseacre or not, the reader should not infer from this that I have a diet, a remedy or a cure for whatever the reader may call colitis. I haven't.

I do urge all such sufferers to lay in a bushel, more or less, of plain wheat— buy it from the farmer who grows it, on the farmers' market, at feed store, seed store, mill, or wherever you can find it, and use it in place of white flour in various ways in the everyday family dietary. I have a pamphlet Wheat to Eat which tells why you should make plain wheat a staple of the family dietary and gives recipes other readers have found satisfactory. Ask for the pamphlet in writing (do not send me a clipping and expect an answer) and inclose stamped envelope bearing your address.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Like Red Suspenders

Here's a new note on catching cold. (Mrs. F.P.E.)

Answer — Says the newspaper cartoon: Butchers wear straw hats to prevent catching colds in the chilled rooms of the refrigerator. And others wear 'em in the summer because the hat merchants tell 'em they must. Now if we can clear up another mystery—why do firemen wear red suspenders?

Soft Spot

My baby books all say the baby's soft spot should be closed by the age of 18 months, but my baby is 18 months and the soft spot is not yet closed. (G.O.)

Answer — The new Brady Baby Book for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope) says: The soft spot on top of the head does not harden to bone until the eighteenth month. Sometimes a perfectly normal baby will vary widely from this average — just for the fun of it.

Arrested for Deportation

Washington, Feb. 19 — (AP) — The United States Justice Department today announced the arrest for deportation of Beatrice Johnson, described as promotion manager for the New Masses, New York weekly publication.

The department said that Mrs. Johnson had long been active in the Communist party in the United States, and that she lacked citizenship.

She was taken into custody in New York under the immigration laws providing for the exclusion of aliens who belong to groups advocating the violent overthrow of the United States government.

FLOODS IN TURKEY

Istanbul, Feb. 19 — (AP) — More than 100 villages were reported still buried today beneath waters of the Seyhan and Ceyhan rivers.

The newspaper Ulus said flood conditions are approaching the "aspect of disaster." Communications with the rich South Central Turkish flood area remained out. About 750,000 persons live in the region. Both rivers broke dykes.

WEDDINGS

MOYES—WINTERS

A mid-Winter marriage of considerable local interest was solemnized Saturday, Feb. 14, in Tabernacle United Church, where daffodils and potted ferns were arranged for an attractive setting, when Margaret Elizabeth Winters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Winters, of Belleville, exchanged vows with Ronald Trevor Moyes, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Moyes, of New Westminster, B.C. Rev. F. R. Harback, was the officiating clergyman and wedding music was provided by Mrs. M. P. Duff, who also accompanied the soloist, Miss Joan Wynne.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charmingly gowned in white slipper satin, with Old English lace inserts, a floor length veil falling gracefully from a coronet of lilies of the valley. She carried an arm bouquet of Calla lilies and red roses.

The maid-of-honor was Miss Lois Batchelor, wearing a floor length gown of blue satin, with matching headdress, while Miss Verna Embury, of Peterborough, a cousin of the bride, was the bridesmaid, wearing a gown of pink sheer and matching headdress. Both attendants carried fans of white and pink carnations.

Mr. J. Cowell, of R.C.A.F., Trenton, ably performed the duties of groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. J. Anning and Mr. Robert Fleming, both of Belleville.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mrs. Winters received the guests in a gown of grey crepe, with a corsage of red roses.

For travelling to Toronto, the bride chose a dress of lime green wool jersey, with a muskrat fur coat, brown hat and accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Moyes will reside in Belleville.

LYNCH-SEXSMITH

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized Feb. 7, at nine-thirty a.m., when Nina Verene Sexsmith, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Sexsmith, of Bancroft, was united in marriage with William Harold Lynch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lynch, of Belleville. Rev. Father J. A. Carley officiated.

The bride was attractive in a street length frock of grey crepe with black accessories, and wore a corsage of pink roses and baby breath.

Miss June Lynch, sister of the groom, was the bride's only attendant, wearing a turquoise blue crepe frock, with black accessories, and a corsage of red roses and baby breath.

Mr. T. J. Lynch, of Kingston, was the groomsman.

After their return they will reside in Belleville.

DOYLE—PELLERIN

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the setting at nine o'clock on the morning of Feb. 7th, for the marriage of Bertha Loretta Pellerin, daughter of Mrs. A. Pellerin, of Moncton, N.B., and the late Mr. J. Pellerin, to Charles E. Doyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Doyle of Belleville, with Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson officiating.

Music was provided by Miss Geneva Tracey and Miss Joan Doyle, a cousin of the groom. Miss Tracey rendered "Ave Marie" very pleasingly.

The bride was charming in a suit of bfown gabardine, with matching accessories and a corsage of baby breath and roses. Her only attendant was Miss Thelma O'Brien, wearing a suit of grey wool, with a corsage of pink carnations.

Mr. Donald Lee, of Belleville, supported the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast was held at "Chez Henri" restaurant, where the bride's mother was gowned in black crepe, with a corsage of yellow roses, and the groom's mother wore green crepe with a corsage of daffodils.

For a wedding journey to Toronto, the bride chose a rose colored wool dress, with a winter white topcoat and brown accessories. Returning Mr. and Mrs. Doyle will take up residence in Belleville.

DEAR RUTH

Women and Law Theme of Talk At Soroptimist

"Women and the Law" was the subject of the address given by Mr. Malcolm Robb, guest speaker at the dinner meeting of the Soroptimist Club, Wednesday evening at Chez Henri. Other guests were Miss Margaret Fairbairn, Miss Edra McCreary, Miss Harriet McGreary, Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Malcolm Robb, who were heartily welcomed by President Georgia Smith.

Mr. Robb explained, in beginning his address, that in this country Canadians enjoy the Rule of Law, whereby everyone knows their rights, and therefore enjoys them. In countries where this is not the case, the strongest man is the law. In England of the twelfth century this was so, but did not always remain so because the people demanded a Bill of Rights, one of the terms being that King John was not to be permitted to arbitrarily confiscate their property. Since that time many rules have been built up by custom limiting arbitrary power.

Common Law Strict

At times the Common Law is strict to the point of harshness. Examples were given of the unfairness of following the law to the letter, and the necessity for equity. In 1872 Law and Equity were merged to ameliorate and mitigate the harshness of the law.

The Criminal Law is a remarkable system from the standpoint of fairness. No person can be found guilty, unless the prosecution proves their guilt beyond a doubt. The onus is on the prosecution to prove guilt. This system has its disadvantages, but it is better that several guilty people go free, than that one innocent person be hanged. In France every person being tried is considered guilty until proved otherwise.

The Statutory Laws are made by the Provincial and Dominion Governments as defined in the British North American Act. If some of the laws on the Statutes are bad, it is so because the public permit them to exist through apathy. Every beneficent or good thing has come by the agitation of unselfish people, active citizens who enjoy the right to vote, should use their efforts to see that unsatisfactory laws are changed.

The figure of Human Justice is depicted as a woman completely blindfolded, with outstretched arms, in which the evidence is to be weighed. She can not be influenced by outside pressure, she can only mete out justice, by judging from what she hears, hence the testimonials and inference must be clear.

Weaknesses Pointed Out

Many of the weaknesses of the system for dealing with criminals were pointed out. People who are convicted of crime fall into two classes, reformable or irreformable. If they are reformable, it is stupid to send them to reformatories and penitentiaries, that are really training schools for future crimes. Statistics prove that 78 per cent of the people in reformatories are repeaters. This system is a mockery, it does not reform anyone, but gives them an opportunity for learning from hardened criminals better ways of committing crime. If he is irreformable he is a mental case, and should be treated sanely in an institution, rather than be allowed to become a menace to society at periodic intervals.

The present divorce law was cited as another example of one that needs changing. Under the present system, there is only one ground for divorce, that of adultery. Examples were given of the unfairness and ridiculousness of this situation. England has changed her divorce laws, and they will only be changed here by the activity of the people.

Other Inadequacies

Other examples of the inadequacy of some of the laws were mentioned. With a rising cost of living, and approximately 25 per cent of the people living below a normal level of proper food and clothing, tariffs are imposed on necessary goods, which increases the hardship rather than alleviating it. There is a movement in Parliament now to have the ban lifted on the entry of oleomargerine into the country. It does not seem right, that a product proven equally as good as butter, that sells for half the price should be banned, when a great proportion of the people are finding difficulty to provide the necessities of life. It is conditions like this that provide the grounds for communist agitators. These conditions exist because nothing is done to prevent them. "What can I do", everyone says, but the retort is "If not you, Who?"

The greatest social reform of all time was the Abolition of Slavery, for which Abraham Lincoln gets the credit. It was pointed out, that it was really because of the efforts of Harriett Beecher Stowe, the author of Uncle Tom's Cabin, that appeared first as articles in the local newspaper, stirring up public interest, that the abolition of slavery was finally brought about.

More Interest in Parliament

He urged that everyone should take an active interest in what is being done in Parliament, and suggested, no one hesitate to let the local member know what his wishes are, so that he may be governed accordingly. Many people in this district, who are proud of their United Empire Loyalists ancestors, who give up all their possessions to live in the land of their choice, would not walk one hundred yards to cast their vote. He recommended that study be made of conditions caused as a result of poor legislation, and that as citizens of a democracy, that the public should use every means in its power to have these conditions remedied.

Club appreciation was expressed to Mr. Robb by Mary Lloyd.

MISSIONS EVENING HELD

The Christian Missions group of Holloway Street Y.P.U. presented an interesting program at the regular meeting of the union.

The President, Douglas Ptolemy, welcomed four new members and conducted the business period. Norma Arkles led in the opening sing-song with Don Williams at the piano.

An invitation from the Alliance Young People to attend their meeting on Friday evening was accepted.

The Worship Service in charge of the Missions group was very effective, and had as its theme "The Lost Sheep". A painting of "The Lost Sheep", by Alfred Soord, flanked by tall white candles, formed the Worship Centre.

Mabel Chapman presided at the piano. Assisting in the service were Ruth Ireland, Mary Rutherford, Maude Baxter, Jean Campbell Ed. Panos and Jack Baxter.

A letter was read by Mary Potter from Rev. Mr. Bailey a missionary in Korea which was very interesting telling of his work of conditions in Korea and of the great need of literature and all kinds of supplies that their work may bear even greater fruit in the days ahead.

A box of clothing was packed to be shipped overseas through the Council of Churches. Norma Arkles led in recreation following which refreshments were served with Dorothy Craighead, convener.

CHATTERTON "GIRLS AT HOME" CLUB

The club girls met at the home of the leader, Mrs. E. B. Finkle on Saturday. They entertained Miss Irvine, the Home Economist and their mothers.

Misses Joyce Hannah, Joan Hannah, Winnifred Parks and Evelyn Olmstead, each giving a talk entitled "Who I Am".

Miss Irvine also addressed the class, which has been taking the "Cottons May Be Smart" project. The cotton dresses were on display and Miss Irvine gave a demonstration on overcast buttonholes.

The meeting concluded with refreshments served by the hostess.

On behalf of the class Joyce Hannah, expressed appreciation to Miss Irvine and to the hostess.

Not many people availed themselves of the opportunity for an hour of free entertainment and an interesting interview offered yesterday at the Ontario School for the Deaf, through the medium of a sound film shown in the Assembly Hall of the School.

The pictures were of scenes in Manchester, England, where Dr. and Mrs. Ewing are engaged at the university in the education of children with defective hearing. The Manchester children are housed in a beautiful large, ivy covered home, surrounded by attractive shady lawns, with flower bordered paths and the effective arrangement of shrubs.

Inside, the rooms are equally attractive and the film gave a "bird's eye" view of the Ewings, and other teachers, at work with children ranging in age groups of three-four, five-six, eight-twelve years. This teaching was by a method of "sight and say" with word formation and lip reading; similar to the methods used in the local institution.

The pictures were not posed, but were taken informally during school hours. One adult appearing in the story of English accomplishment, is Miss Molly Sifton, who, at the age of five years was wordless, but became an accomplished and self supporting young woman, able to speak plainly and to lead a normally happy life.

Tabernacle W.A. Group Sponsors Successful Social Evening

"Let's have more of these", was the comment everywhere as the large crowd of church members dispersed after an evening of good fun and fellowship, on Tuesday night, in the church school room.

The guests were welcomed at the door by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Judge, Mrs. H. Language and Mr. R. Goodfellow. Mrs. G. Brickman and Mrs. L. N. Smith acted as treasurers for the evening.

After a few introductory remarks by the Master of Ceremonies, Rev. F. R. Harback, a rousing sing-song was led by Mr. Gardiner Duff with Mr. P. Huddlestone at the piano.

Miss Thelma Schlievert and Miss Minnie Ferguson then presented a very fine program of games and contests into which everyone entered heartily.

During the evening Mr. P. Huddlestone entertained with a fine piano solo, and Mr. J. A. Buchanan sang two popular numbers, with Mrs. M. P. Duff as accompanist.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. W. H. Judge and her committee, assisted by the Senior Young People's group. Mrs. P. Kerr was in charge of the coffee, and Mrs. J. E. Jerome and her committee took care of the kitchen arrangements.

Everyone agreed that Group 4, of the Women's Association, under the able leadership of Mrs. Judge, assisted by members of the Good Companions, and the Senior Young People, had contributed a great deal to the spirit of good Christian fellowship. New members of the church were given a special welcome.

The evening came to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne as everyone joined hands in a friendship circle and Rev. F. R. Harback pronounced the benediction.

Navy dress with striped details

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THERE'S A HINT of Spring in this later Winter wardrobe pepper-upper, what with navy spiked up with striped taffeta. Navy blue wool crepe is used for this neat day-after-day dress which sports a gay navy and white striped taffeta bow and cuffs. There's a gentle roll to the turned-down collar and the bodice is fitted. The dress buttons from throat to hem and has a fitted full skirt and tailored belt.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S RUSHING THE SEASON, so far as prints are concerned, with stay-at-homes snatching pretty prints from go-Southers. Black crepe, printed with bold turquoise and pink masks, makes a handsome dress with boat neckline, side-draped skirt and a bow-tied sash.

HIGH CLOSINGS mark new coats while dress necklines go lower. Spongy navy blue woolen makes a handsome coat with close - fitting collar above the high, double - breasted closing. Big flap pockets, belted back.

A FAVORITE fabric, gabardine, does duty for many of the nicest Spring suits. A charming new suit has its jacket closing at the snug waistline above a very full, rippling peplum with tucks to simulate tiers. High-placed heart - shaped revers and high closing. Eight - gore skirt.

VERY MUCH to the fore are such shades as deep cream, coffee and mauve-pink for new hats. Mauve - Pink felt makes a draped pillbox worn to one side and trimmed at the low side with clusters of tiny pink moss roses and pine - green satin bows.

VERY RICH trimming marks some of the new clothes. Navy gabardine is used for a handsome suit, the bolero jacket outlined all the way round with heavy embroidery of soutache braid. Soutache also trims the cuffs and the high waistband of the very full skirt. With it a pink faille blouse.

LOOK OUT for caracul in the Spring "small furs" line-up. Black caracul is used for a handsome cape stole, good for day or evening. Front tabs reach to the knee and may be looped under in muff-style. Back is curved, reaching some six inches below the waist in the center. Skins are caught up below the arm slits to give the effect of balloon sleeves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He sent her back to her husband

Recently, a young man who had made a difficult choice between what he wanted to do and what he thought he ought to do, wrote to ask me if I thought he had made the right decision.

He had been going with a girl for some time before he found out that she was married, but separated from her husband, and that she had a baby girl. Although he had fallen in love with her, he told her to go back to her husband for the baby's sake. But, he said, "it broke my heart".

The girl did as he told her and he has not seen her since. But he is haunted by the thought of her and wonders if he did the wise thing.

"I can't get her out of my mind," he writes. "But what can I do? She already has a husband and a baby. I think she loved me as much as I loved her. Anyway, that's what she told me. And she said the only reason why she went back with her husband was because I told her to do it."

For a 19-year-old boy to make a decision of this kind took an unusual amount of character, and I believe he was wise in deciding as he did. Unless there was a good reason for this girl having left her husband, it is quite possible the boy might have found himsel fin serious trouble if he had become involved in her affairs.

What I would like to say to this man is this:

You are too young to take on such a responsibility as coming between a wife and her husband would be. You are, moreover young enough so that, while it seems difficult for you now to forget this girl, you definitely can get over this thing if you go about it the right way, and you will no doubt find yourself interested, in due time, in some girl who is not already entangled.

The fact that yo uhad a strong enough character to act as you did in this particular instance makes me believe that you will be courageons enough to put the whole thing in the past and concentrate on your future.

My advice is to make yourself go out with young women oi your own age, even though it may be hard to do for a while, and take part in good times with them. I know that if you will persist in this course, you will eventually find this other girl has faded out of your mind and new interests have come in.

It may be hard for you to believe this, but I can assure you it is true. It all depends on your determination to stick to a plan that you know is right.

Divorce Granted 17 Years Ago Set Aside

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 19—(CP)—A divorce granted 17 years ago to a man who now is dead has been set aside by Judge Frank L. Doty on grounds of fraud.

Thus Mrs. Ethel Fleming of Cleveland now may collect First World War pension amounting to $50 a month for the time since her husband's death.

When Floyd Fleming obtained the divorce in 1931 from Judge Doty he said he did not know where his wife was. Mrs. Fleming produced letters she said he wrote her while the case was pending. She said she did not know of the divorce until 1935 when she applied for government insurance and a widow's pension following his death.

Hamilton Man Convicted Of Reckless Driving

Hamilton, Feb. 19 — (CP) — A wild ride through the city early Wednesday morning in which a truck and a house were hit and the car almost demolished was related by witnesses in magistrate's court Wednesday during the trial of John Beaver, 24, of Hamilton. He was convicted of reckless driving and will be sentenced next Wednesday.

A passenger in the car, Violet Whatman, 19, of Peterborough, who said she met the accused Tuesday night, said the car was travelling between 45 and 50 miles an hour when it hit a truck on Main Street. Accused did not stop she said, and after going on for two miles, he got out and another of the party took the wheel. After hitting the house the driver disappeared, she said.

Det.-Sgt. Ernest Barrett testified that the car was believed to be a stolen one and that the licence on it had been issued to a Windsor man for a 1937 model.

Three passengers in the car who have been located by the local police — Violet Whatman, Helen Thompson, 18, also of Peterboro and Fred Bauzide, 18, of Windsor — are being held here for Windsor authorities.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to laugh out loud to himself while he was shaving his face this morning, and ma said, What's so funny so erly in the morning, William?

I had the darndest dreem last night, pop said. I dreemed I was called up on one of those radio quizz programs. Yee gods was I brilliant! I ran off with all the prizes, and beleeve me they were some prizes, he said, and ma said, My, I wish I'd been there.

Maybe you were, my dear, I forget, pop said, and ma said, What were some of the questions?

Well, the ferst question was, what's the shortest distance between 2 points? pop said, and ma said, I think I know that one, it's some kind of a line, isn't it.

That's what the other contestants thawt, a strate line, pop said. But when it came my tern, I said the shortest distance between 2 points was the distance between 2 pointer dogs in action, and by gollies I was right and got a prize of a plush lined refrigerater that played like a music box when you opened the door and shot a shower of nickels when you closed it. Then the chap asked another lilly of a question, pop said, and ma said, Never mind, that's enough for all practical perposes. I'm going downtown this afternoon and price those marvelliss new refrigeraters and see how mutch they'll allow me on our old one, she said.

But for Peet sake you were going to put that off till prices get better, pop said, and ma said, I know, but I'm a ferm beleever in taking a dreem by the horns, and you've convinced me that this is the golden time to act.

And you've convinced me that this is a woman's werld, pop said. You convinced me years ago, but this settles it, he said.

And he kept on shaving his face and I asked him what the rest of the dreem was and he told me to dreem one for myself.

Says Decisive Time in Future War "One Night"

New York, Feb. 19 — (AP) — Maj.-Gen. Orville A. Anderson, Commandant of the United States Air War College, said that the decisive time in a future war might be "one night."

In a speech before the United States Conference of Mayors, with mayors from eight of Canada's nine provinces in attendance, he referred to a recent statement by Gen. Eisenhower that a future war might be decided in 60 days.

Anderson said: "I don't know why he picked the 60 days. I couldn't pick it unless I could see the two forces deployed.

"The period, I think, will be one night, because that would be the proper application of material forces against a nation not prepared to counter."

Table Setting Display

A table setting was on display in model living-dining room. Also part of this department was the array of sewing, supervised by Miss MacPherson, which included pyjamas, skirts and blouses, children's apparel, and even a complete suit. This was a fine example of the practical application of learning and should be a decided asset to the future homemakers after graduation.

The Physics and Chemistry Laboratories were in action, and here a minor accident occurred when some students mixed the wrong ingredients and an explosion filled the room with malodorous gas.

Proceeding to the auditorium, the visitors were welcomed by Mr. Harold Seldon, Chairman of the Board of Education. In the course of his remarks Mr. Seldon expressed his pleasure at seeing so many people interested in the operation of the school system. He stated that from the schools of today will come the leaders of a troubled world and that everyone has a serious responsibility in giving students the proper education they will need to meet their duties. It was with the co-operation of every teacher, student and member of the Home and School Association that the splendid finale of 'Open Night' had been accomplished. Mr. Seldon urged as many as possible to join the Home and School Association as it was a valuable part of the school and worthy of support. It was a wonderful contact between parents and teachers.

Play Presented

A play "The Trysting Place" by Booth Tarkington, was staged with the cast consisting of Marcia Blatherwick, Elspeth Wishart, Marilyn Seldon, Bruce Blatherwick, Clifford Summers, Leo, Marcus, and Bruce Walmsley.

A demonstration of the new memorial organ was given by Mr. Clifford Templer, A.T.C.M., who played a numoer of familiar melodies. A musical prelude was given by the Collegiate band under the direction of Mr. Cooper.

Mrs. G. G. Wright, President of the Home and School Association, spoke on behalf of that group, and welcomed the parents as prospective members.

Two films were shown "Hungry Minds" which pictured in dramatic action the distress of the children of Europe; and "Four Seasons."

The proceeds from the evening are to be devoted to two purposes, the fund for the memorial organ, and aid to the children of Europe.

Two Persons Die, Two Badly Burned In Manitoba Fire

Lorette, Man., Feb. 19—(CP)—Two persons died and two others were badly burned in a fire which swept a two-storey farm house in this southeastern Manitoba district last night.

In serious condition in hospital are Benjamin Funk, 29, and Rita, 1½.

The fire started when an oil burner exploded while being filled with fuel by Mr. and Mrs. Funk. Their clothing drenched with oil, they rushed to a bedroom to rescue the two children, but flames swept the house before they reached safety.

Mrs. Funk died at the scene but Dorothy lived until shortly after admittance to hospital.

Printers' Strike Declared Illegal By Judge Wilson

Vancouver, Feb. 19. (CP)—The 622-day-old strike of Printers of the International Typographical Union (A.F.L.) at the Vancouver Daily Province has been declared illegal by Mr. Justice J. C. Wilson of the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

Mr. Justice Wilson, in a 22-page judgment yesterday ordered a total of $10,000 damages to be paid by six officers of the Vancouver Local of the I.T.U. Action was dismissed against three International officers, Woodruff Randolph, I.T.U. president; Harry Finch, Canadian representative and James D. Davidson, western representative.

The judgment assessed no damages against rank-and-file union members formerly employed by the Province, due His Lordship said "to the forebearance of the plaintiff" in waiving claim to compensation.

The strike began June 5, 1946, and the claim for damages was filed by the Province, one of the Southam group of newspapers, in the Fall of 1946. A 10-day hearing of the claim was held in October, 1947.

The Province action was against officers of the Local; rank-and-file members who were Province employees; and the three International officers.

Costs Against Defendants

Costs were assessed against the defendants generally and judgment "in terms of relief" also was awarded.

(The statement of claim included a request for a declaration that the strike is illegal and sought an injunction to restrain picketing.)

In dismissing the action against the three International Union officers, Mr. Justice Wilson said: "While the advice and direction of Randolph, Finch and Davidson started the strike which led to all later events, there is no evidence before me that they joined in the conspiracy to strike unlawfully or do unlawful acts."

"The plaintiff adopted every means available to avert a strike . . .the strike had nothing to do with relations between the Province and its printers."

He said the strike "came about solely as a result of the Winnipeg situation."

The strike of the printers here, Mr. Justice Wilson termed a "sympathetic action" — which "proved disastrous"—in the welfare of "brothers" negotiationg with Winnipeg newspapers.

In assessing the $10,000 damages, he said it was "purely nominal, bearing no relation to the actual loss suffered by the plaintiff. . . ."

BEHEAD SLAIN GUERRILLA

Shanghai, Feb. 19 —(AP) — Chinese troops today beheaded a daring Communist guerrila chief after he was slain with 13 of his raiders in a six-hour battle outside Shanghai.

Three Armed Men Arrested in Hull Still in Custody

Hull, Que., Feb. 19 (CP)—Three armed men arrested in a Hull hotel room last Friday in possession of arms and safe-blowing materials may be taken to Kitchener to face serious charges arising out of the wounding of a Kitchener constable last Dec. 7.

The trio werequestioned yesterday by Deputy Chief John Patrich of the Kitchener police department and Inspector George McKay of the Ontario Provincial Police, who reached Hull Tuesday.

The trio were questioned yes- Toronto, William Campbell of Hamilton and Eugene Nadon of Montreal—are, believed to be suspects in a five-and-ten cent store roberry at Kitchener.

The police gave chase to four men surprised in the act of cracking the store safe, the thugs shot it out with the police and wounded one constable in the leg.

One man, Lorne Burne, captured at that time, has since been sentenced to 20 years in penitentiary for the Kitchener robbery. The other three escaped.

The men, apprehended in Hull now are lodged in Hull jail awaiting trial on charges of illegal possession of firearms.

INDIAN RAYON?

New Delhi, India — (CP) — A panel set up by the Indian government to study possibility of establishing a rayon industry in India has reported that cellulose, basic raw material required, is available in abundance. The panel estimated that seven factories could produce 70 tons a day, India's present consumption.

Senator Euler Favors Sale Of Oleomargarine

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (CP) — Senator Euler (L—Ontario) continuing a long personal battle for removal of the ban on oleomargarine, dropped the controversial question into the Senate's lap yesterday — for the third time in three years.

After he launched the debate with a one-hour speech, three other Senators outlined their reaction. Two supported him and one was opposed.

Senator Euler said he is convinced the dairy interests alone are of "overwhelmingly in favor" of ending the ban on importation, manufacture and sale of the butter substitute.

With prices at "shocking" high levels, it was "indefensible to deprive millions of consumers of at least one method of reducing the cost of living by permitting them to have this inexpensive and excellent "food."

Debate on his motion for second reading of a private bill to end the margarine ban was adjourned by Senator Cyrille Vaillancourt (L-Quebec). The same bill was defeated in the last two sessions of parliament.

Senator Euler's support came from Senators C. C. Ballantyne (PC-Quebec) and Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario), both former farmboys. They agreed that thousands of city dwellers cannot afford butter — now under a 73-cent-a-pound ceiling.

They should not be denied a substitute they can aford.

Opposititon came from R.B. Horner (PC-Saskatchewan). To remove the margarine ban would be to strike another blow at the farmer, he said.

Three Liberal Senators criticized the government's request for a two-year extension of controls over certain exports and imports.

Senator Roebuck rapped what Senator Hayden called "the great dangers inherent" in the principle of the enabling legislation, which would extend the government controls for two years.

The bill was given second reading and sent to committee for study.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Elva Tyme is always looking for security. Even in bridge. She lives in fear of finding partner with an absolutely trickless hand. So, she will not open with a two bid unless she has 11 tricks.

Chances are partner will not have a trickless hand. If he does, chances are it will not be just when he is forced to bid.

When you open with a two bid, could be that partner has a hand without a trick. Or with not more than one trick. In any case, the chances are that your pair should try for a game anyway.

Should you wait for 11 or even 10 tricks before starting with a two bid? If you do, few chances will you get to use such a bid. By the time you use it, partner has forgotten what it means.

For all practical purposes, nine tricks are enough for any suit bid opening of two. Very seldom will such an opening result in a loss that you are not willing to take.

The opening bid is two clubs with this south hand:

♠A K
♣A K Q 8 7 6 4

Here are ten tricks. They are the, (seven high cards) four aces, two kings, a queen, a short in each suit except clubs. Even with one less trick it should open with a bid of two clubs.

Suppose partner has absolutely nothing. Opponents might get a trick in each suit except spades. This is assuming they also get a trump trick. It would defeat a game contract of five clubs.

Bridge is not based upon a partner always holding a trickless hand. The ultimate happens too seldom. If you are always fearful of the worst, you had better go back to casino.

Until partner tells you otherwise, count on him for two tricks. It he does not have them, it is just too bad. But it is not as bad as always assuming he has none.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 19 (AP)—When both Danny Kaye and Virginia Mayo left Sam Goldwyn for Warners, there was talk that they might co-star again at their new studio. Here's the view on the matter.

"Definitely not. We made five pictures together, and that is plenty. I'm sure Danny doesn't want to either. I want a chance to do some serious acting and with Danny, all the emphasis is on comedy."

Warners wasted no time in getting Virginia to work. Within a week after signing a seven-year contract, she was emoting in "Dames Don't Talk."

Around Town

Humphrey Bogart reports that a man has been found to head Mark Hellinger productions, of which Bogie is vice president. "It's too early to reveal his name," the actor said on the "Key Largo" set.

Jolson Story

There was more drama at the Photoplay dinner than in many movies. In accepting the "most popular picture" award for "The Jolson Story," Columbia headman Harry Cohn said "I take off my hat to a great performer—Larry Parks." Later, Jolson declared, "it's okay to take off your hat—why don't you go into your pocket, too?" Most amused was Larry whose suit against Columbia comes up next week. All three men sat on the dais and it was very chummy—or was it?

Jolson may not have known he was on the air during his acceptance speech. At any rate, three "hells" and two "damns" went crackling across the ABC coast-to-coast network. Al revealed his biography cost $2,500,000 and has grossed $10,000,000 so far. That may give Larry added ammunition for his suit.

Short Takes

Tyrone Power will have to postpone his Scandinavian au jaunt. He has to do two more films this year after "For Fear of Little Men." They now appear to be "Down to the Sea in Ships" and "Prince of Foxes," to be filmed in Rome. The latter deal was largely Ty's idea.

Lew Ayres off to Flagstaff, Ariz., to start plans for a 16MM film on the plight of the American Indian...Readers of "The Fountain Head" are puzzled by the casting of Gary Cooper in the lead role; doesn't it call for someone more dynamic?

HEAVY FIRE TOLL

Fire loss in the United States attributed to inflammable wooden roofs exceed $16,000,000 annually.

Kingston Saints Defeated 4-2 By Legionnaires

Lindsay, Ont., Feb. 19—(CP)—With heavy ice slowing the pace considerably, Peterborough Legion handed Kingston Saints a 4-2 setback in the first game of the Central Ontario Hockey Association's group 'B' group semi-final playoffs here last night.

Sloppy ice slowed play considerably in the first two periods, but the tempo increased in the final frame as Kingston pressed continually, trying to get back in the game. Most of the final period play was in the Peterborough zone.

Play was rough and high-sticking frequent although only six penalties were handed out.

Peterborough took a 3-1 lead at the end of the initial stanza as the Vitarelli Brothers, along with E. Nicholls, each connected for one goal. The only goal of the period for Kingston came off the stick of Jack Aitkens.

The third period was all Kingston as they continually drove in on the Peterborough nets, Catlin scored early in the period after taking a pass from Mortimer to narrow the gap. The Saints, however, could not overcome the two-goal Peterborough advantage as Legion goalie Nicholls settled back to stave off the Kingston forwards.

Udall in the Kingston nets played a good game making a number of brilliant saves in keeping the score as low as it was.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP)— A bunch of old-timers, guys with white hair and round, soft bodies, were discussing one of the toughest grinds in sports...That is six-day bicycle racing, which will return to New York Feb. 29 for the first time since the war... The talk concerned the great riders of warmer days, races in the "old" Garden, redolent of garlic and red wine and fans who went without sleep longer than the riders. And races in Paris, and Newark, and Chicago and Berlin and Montreal...The group included the promoters of the 1948 race, Felix Lafenetre and Mike Santarpia; Joe Fogler, a great rider of the 1905-15 era, Francis Albertani; the tub-thumper, and Buck O'Neill and a few other newspaper men.

Nights and Daze

Albertani started the ball rolling by recalling: "The first race I saw was in 1902 when I was a newspaper copy boy. I was passed in and grabbed a seat in the front row of the gallery. I had my lunch and a bottle of soda and I was afraid to move because somebody would grab my seat."... Someone asked a question riding during the early morning hours, after the crowd had left, and Fogler insisted, "when I rode the 'sleep shift' I always had the straps on my feet and was ready for anything...That was when one rider would get a chance to get three or four hours of solid sleep, but you never could tell when somebody might start something..."The worst races of all," Fogler went on, "were in Paris. I was riding along early one morning when the loud speaker announced a sprint for a 'preem.' I was amazed. Then there was another—all little 'preems', 10 francs, 50 francs...In Paris they started putting up prizes months ahead of time and they had so many that to get them all out they had to run sprints 24 hours a day."

Detroit Red Wings have gained undisputed possession of first place in the National Hockey League but if Toronto Maple Leafs aren't sharing the top spot again tonight, it will be one of the saddest blows that ever befell the Leafian supporters.

The Wings took a two-point edge over the Leafs when they beat the Rangers 3-1 at New York last night. The Boston Bruins beat the tail-end Chicago Black Hawks 4-2.

In tonight's only game the Leafs go against the Canadiens at Montreal, and they badly want the two points to keep even with Wings. But the Torontonians don't need the victory points half as much as do the Canadiens, who now are seven points behind Boston and the last play-off spot.

It's going to be a tough game and Leafs are taking no chances. With Vic Lynn, whose knee injury looks healed, a definite starter, the Leafs have three crack forward lines for use against the Canadiens. The three lines, Apps - Watson - Ezinicki, Kennedy - Meeker - Lynn, and Bentley - Klukay - Smith, will be bolstered by old reliable Nick Metz.

In the last clash between the teams Leafs beat Canadiens 4-2 at Toronto last Saturday, but on their own ice at the forum the Canadiens are never any pushovers for their traditional rivals.

Lumley Stars in Nets

Young Harry Lumley, the Detroit goalie, starred in the Wings victory at New York. He kicked out 29 shots from the ever-hustling Rangers while Sugar Jim Henry in the New York goal had only 14 saves.

But three Detroit goals scored, with Ted Lindsay, Gordon Howe and rookie Don Morrison beating Henry in succession in the second period before Ed Kullman spoiled a shut-out for Lumley. Besides his own goal, Howe had an assist on Lindsay's, the latter score bringing Lindsay to the top of league goal-getters with 27.

At Chicago the Hawks and Bruins were tied 2-2 in the first but Boston scored again in the second and third. Woody Dumart, with two goals, and Grant Warwick and Ed Sandford were the Bruin scorers. Gus Bodnar, developed ice warfare in the last period.

Red Hamill of Chicago skated into referee Butch Keeling and knocked him down. When Hamill was given a misconduct penalty the fans — there were 16,461 in the stadium — showered coins on the ice in protest. Among the cleaner-uppers Doug Bentley picked up nearly three dollars in change.

In the last minute of play Pat Egan of Boston broke a stick over the head of Gaye Stewart and when Stewart, former Toronto forward who has been going great guns for Chicago, retaliated, both were thumbed off with majors.

After the game, Boston's veteran defenceman Jack Crawford was informed that his four-day-old daughter Mary, had died earlier in the day.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Went down before a below-the-belt blow from Id Kid Abdominal Flue and took a three-day count. Now we know what Jersey Joe Walcott felt like in the fifteenth round with Joe Louis. Missed some of the week's sports highlights, especially that game last night when the Rockets evened the Junior "B" series with Kingston's Vics. Thanks to Jack Devine's fine airing of the game although it was abbreviated to one period we got an excellent idea of the play from the confines of the family four-poster.

However we're back at the lathe again and hope that punishing scrapper M'Sieu Flu has left us for keeps. We took enough pills to start a pharmacist graduate in business and one drug store we know boosted its pellet sale a-plenty during the past four days.

According to Jack Devine's play-by-play and the post-game summary our Rockets again got a superlative game of hockey off their youthful chests last night when they downed the Vics to even the "B" series at two games each. Don't know the locale of the fifth and final game but will likely have it before this column goes to bed.

It seems that Cook's cookies had the greater margin of the territorial play over Vics in nearly all periods and were full value for the 7-3 victory. Sparked by slim Angy Defelice whose shooting eye was right on the beam, with M'Sieu Bernard LeFort holding down his namesake at the other end, the Rocks went out to win and win they did. And they did it the right way.

In fact we gather it was one of the best collective efforts the Rocks have shown this season running a close second to that memorable district league tussle when they defeated Trenton Flyers 1-0 in a playoff tilt. Johnny Green, Don Semark flanked Defelice in great style with Tommy Schreider, Nolan and Hurst going great guns behind the blueline. Doug Bone who got a goal and an assist and Milligan played good hockey with the latter getting the same scoring points. In fact the whole team played heads - up hockey and if they adopt the same style and spirit in that all-important fifth game, anything is liable to happen.

Aikens, Joyce and Danby were the stars of the Vics with Patterson going well in a defence role. The game was clean with only seven minor penalties handed out by Referee Jack McEachern of Toronto.

Referee Speedy St. Louis, who took a rest from his arbiting labors last night selected LeFort, Delefice and Aikens as the Goodman three stars for the evening. LeFort's grand work in the nets especially in the last period; Defelice's four goals and his all-round work and the tireless efforts of Aikens of the Vics earned for them the three-star nod and the handsome ties donated by Sammy Goodman.

Tonight the Belleville Merchants Midgets should wind up their hockey argument with the Brockville kids and go on into the third round of the OMHA Midget "B" playdowns. The other night the Barriage-Strahan crew ran wild against the Brockville youngsters down in Lansdowne shellacking them to the tune of 12-3 and bringing home a nine goal lead for the rounn. On that score the Merchants should take the nod, but as we said before anything can happens and the Merchants won't go out there resting on their laurels. Game starts at 8.30.

And for fans out Stirling way there's a neat hockey tidbit on tonight for them. The Stirling Midget "C8s" as yet undefeated take on the strong Port Hope crew in the second game of their OMHA playdowns and the village kids should cop this one. They won the first game 6-4 in Port Hope and should extend their winning streak to ten games this evening. Neutral observers tell us that this Stirling puckist crew is one of the best kids team to come out of the county in some time and some say they are of championship calibre. Ross Hermiston is proud of his youngsters and rightly so. More power to 'em.

Outstanding baseball writers are pulling to have the famous Mordecai Brown, one of baseball's greatest pitchers installed in the Hall of Fame. The great Mordecai died the other day, and his death recalls some of his great diamond feats. He was one of the six major league hurlers to win 20 games or more for six successive seasons. And he was one of the few hurlers to win more games against the famous Christy Mathewson, than the great Matty did against him. The writers are starting a campaign to have Mardecai listed among baseball immortals —and rightly so.

Joe Louis with an entourage of seven managers, trainers, advisers etc., left for England today and his baggage included some of the queerest packages ever toted by a champion anywhere at any time. Joe lugged along for gastronomic reasons 300 pounds of steaks, butter, coffee, sugar, and other ingredients for some lusty meals during his stay over 'ome. He is scheduled to box two-rounds three time a day for a period of 26 days, and the dough he will get for that has the United States Treasury men drooling in anticipation.

And here's a tip to lovers of lavish ice spectacles. Don't miss the Quinte Skating Club's extravanganza at Memorial Arena tomorrow night. Of if you can't make it then there are other performances Saturday afternoon and evening. We had the pleasure of peeping at a rehearsal before the flu got us—and believe me, it will be well worth the price of admission. Its colorful, picturesque, artistic, and entertaining. There's a more detailed story elsewhere, but we're giving you a quiet reminder that this show is one of the best the popular club has iced in many a skating moon.

MORE THAN DOZEN BOMB BLASTS

Jerusalem, Feb. 19 — (AP) — More than a dozen bomb explosions were heard in the Holy Land Wednesday but the only death reported was a sniper casualty.

Jewish sources said a sniper's bullet killed a Jewish woman on the Jaff-Tel Aviv border.

Two British constables died yesterday from gunshot wounds suffered when they were attacked in Jerusalem's old city. Three Jews and two Arabs also were slain in continuing communal violence.

Windsor Spitfires Finish on Top In Junior Race

(By The Canadian Press)

That's that for another year—all the frantic racing and squabbling to get into the playoffs ended last night as the Junior and Senior loops of the Ontario Hockey Association finished out their schedules in a barrage of goals.

With all positions filled and playoff dates set, clubs in both leagues now art priming their players for a good showing in the coming playoffs which start Friday for the Senior A squads and Saturday for the Juniors.

Most attention last night was on the Windsor Spitfire-Oshawa Generals tilt where Spitfires scored all their goals in the initial frame to hand Oshawa a 3-1 defeat. Windsor finished their schedule in first place, just four points ahead of the Generals. If Oshawa had managed to salvage a win they would have tied Windsor for top spot in points. And if that had happened, goal average would have settled the issue—with Windsor definitely taking the nod.

Two final Senior tilts were played out as Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen blanked Hamilton Pats 6-0 for their second straight win over the Pats in two nights. The Dutchmen made a last minute two-game winning splurge to move into fourth place, three points ahead of Owen Sound. The other Senior game was a virtual debacle as the third place Stratford Indians waltzed to 16-0 win over the luckless Brantford Redmen.

That Windsor win last night was the first time Spitfires had whipped the Oshawa crew in two years. Jack Taylor was the local hero as he drove in for two goals and also assisted on the third which Johnny Wilson plunked into the Oshawa nets. Dick Gamble scored the only Oshawa marker on a pass-out from Frank Sullivan.

Did Not Figure

Ray Ceresino, the much-travelled and much-sought Junior, received official permission from the O.H.A. to play for the Generals but did not figure in any scoring.

Teepees had a soft time routing Young Rangers in a game that meant nothing to either team. Teepees finished in sixth position and Young Rangers lived in the league cellar all season.

Teepees led 4-2 at the end of the first period, then moved up to 6-2 in the middle frame and scored five times in the third period while Rangers managed two. Two regular St. Catharines defencemen—Tom Buck and Fiery Goegan—were rested in preparation for the playoffs with Jim Maxwell and Stan Stocker taking over their positions.

Cec Gruhl, regular Teepee netminder, was also rested at the half-way mark with Ivan McLellan taking over and allowing two of the four young Ranger goals.

Blute Main Cog

Johnny Blute, high-scorer in the Senior loop, was the main cog in the Kitchener-Waterloo victory over Hamilton Pats. Blute connected for three goals while Bobby Hurst and the Bauer boys—Dave and Bobby each sniped one.

The win, however, was not without its sour note as it was feared Lloyd Roubell of the Dutchmen had broken his right arm in the second frame.

Every player but goalie Bob Bindernagel figured in the scoring in Stratford Indians lopsided 16-0 victory over the last-place Brantford Redmen. Joe Fitzpatrick rattled the cage with four goals while George Blake, Pete Long, Billy Flick, Bill Woodward and Jimmy Eady scored two each. Wally Zuke and Mike Dziura collected one goal apiece.

No games are on top now until Friday when the top six teams in the Senior League start the playoffs.

Cleveland Barons Only Four Points Behind Leader

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons today are only four points out of first place in the American Hockey League's western circuit and at the rate they are now travelling, should vault into the top slot before the end of the month.

The red-hot Barons last night turned aside Philadelphia Rockets 5-2 to stretch their unbeaten streak to 11 games and place them in second place, one point ahead of Buffalo Bisons. Cleveland has lost only one game in its last 19 starts.

Meanwhile Buffalo Bisons were dumped by the faltering Indianapolis Caps 6-5. Pittsburgh also went down to defeat in the only other A. H. L. fixture last night, being blanked by Springfield Indians 1-0.

Enio Sclisizzi paced the Caps with a brace of goals as they stopped the charging Bisons. Gerry Couture, Barry Sullivan, Calum Mackay and Cliff Simpson also blinked the light of Indianapolis. Fred Hunt celebrated his return to the active list to lead Buffalo with a pair of goals while Jerry Brown, Joe Cooper and Doug Lewis tallied one each.

At Springfield, the Indians handed Pittsburgh its first whitewashing of the season. Only score of the contest came off the stick of Indians' Harry Frost at 17:48 of the first period.

Two games are on tap tonight with Indianapolis at New Haven and Pittsburgh at Providence.

Showing a decided edge in territorial play and exhibiting more fight than their opponents, the Belleville Rockets evened the count in games at two each in their playoff for the Junior "B" group playoff at the Memorial Arena Wednesday night by defeating the Kingston Vics 7-3. Where the fifth and deciding game will be played was not decided when this was written but efforts will be made today to fix the venue of the struggle.

The team, well-handled by their manager, Bill Cook, came onto the ice fighting and immediately hemmed their opposition into their own end and took the play away from them and although they showed a flurry here and there in the pastime, the Rockets were always in the driver's seat. The locals after ten minutes of play, pierced the armour of the Vics on a ganging play with Schrieder making the tally and from there in it was a case of how many. The Rockets were goal hungry, they had their sights sharpened and Stone in the Vics' net was a busy individual the entire evening. Belleville outscored the Vics three to one in the second and split four goals in the third.

Defelice Scores Four

Angelo Defelice came into his own and before a home crowd with a four-goal effort. He was definitely "hot" all evening and received marvellous support from his two wingmen Jack Green and Don Semark. Semark patrolled his boards like a veteran, Green set up the play and Defelice did the rest. The vaunted line of Flint, Aitken and Joyce were in subjection all evening with Aitken showing the most with a goal and assist. Patterson was the best rearguardsman that Max Jackson threw over the dasher and he helped himself to two assists with his fine setting up of plays. The star of the game from a Kingston standpoint was Stone in goal.

This boy saw a lot of rubber and he handled himself like a veteran and had it not been for his fine work his teammates would have taken a terrible shellacking. The young netman even was at the blue line batting the rubber out of the danger zone when only he was to beat by the incoming forwards. The game was exceptionally clean for a Kingston - Belleville tussle there being but six penalties handed out with each team getting three.

Better Defensively

The Rockets showed a lot more defensive ability than they have exhibited this winter with Schrieder being the spearhead in this department. Nolan played one of his better games with Hurst hard to crack behind the blueline. The second line of Jud Semark, Milligan and Bone were very effective and the two goals that Milligan and Bone split at the end of the second period were picture plays and Stone was not given a chance on either one. Green set up Schrieder with the first goal of the game and this same player passed out to Defelice for the second marker. Kingston was shorthanded twice in the period but neither penalty helped the locals. In the second frame Belleville was hemmed in early when Nolan got the gate and he no sooner returned than he went right back again. While he was away Aitken put his team in the running and the Vics were really applying the pressure.

Defelice paid off on Milligan's beautiful pass inside the defence and then Bone and Milligan put on their act to put the contest in the clear. Angelo salted the pastime away when Green handed him a pass in 40 seconds. The Vics again applied the pressure with Joyce getting a marker but Maurice Lefort certainly was holding the fort and they could not break through for counters. The pressure was eased when Graves and Patterson went away close together but Danby scored the final goal. Hurst got a tripping penalty and soon after he returned Defelice plunked his fourth marker into the twine. The visitors were outplayed, outskated and outhustled all through the piece and if the boys can come up with a repeat performance a group championship may be the outcome.

The Lineups:

Belleville — Goal, Lefort; defence, Schrieder and Hurst; centre, Defelice; wings, Don Semark and Green; subs, Milligan, J. Semark, Bone, Taylor and Nolan.

Kingston — Goal, Stone, defence, Woodman and Patterson; centre, Flint; wings, Joyce and Aitken; subs, Graves, Danby, Dugan, McKeown and Reynolds.

Western Canada In Grip Of Blinding Blizzard

Winnipeg, Feb. 19 (CP)—February was mustering its forces today to become the rowdiest month of the winter in western Canada, with storm conditions which ysterday plagued the west coast and Alberta now sweepinp Saskatchewan and stretching wind-lashed fingers into Manitoba.

The storm centre was in Saskatchewan, with children in some rural areas spending the night in their small schools rather than venturing through blinding blizzards to their farm homes.

Conditions were not as bad in Malitoba, although a 50-miles-per-hour wind whistled through Winnipeg early today, while in Alberta snow shovels and plows were working overtime to clear drifts which had clogged highways and sideroads early in the week. British Columbians were recuperating from gale conditions which Tuesday night swept the coast.

A Japanese workman, Tetsuo Otsu, was killed in inland British Columbia when caught beneath an avalanche while repairing disrupted Canadian Pacific telegraph lines at Iago.

At Estevan, winds were reported reaching a velocity 55 miles au hour last night, while nothing has been heard since early Wednesday of two rotary snow plow operators trying to clear a road south of the town.

At Shaunavon, Sask., the weather was sunny early yesterday, with the temperature 30 degrees above zero, but by nightfall the mercury had dropped 40 degrees and Neil McLean, weather observer, said storm conditions had never been so severe since 1918. All trains were running late, some by several hours.

Ray Cerisino Will Finish Year With Oshawa

President Panter of the Ontario Hockey Association last night gave Ray Cerisino permission to rejoin Oshawa Generals. Cerisino is the much-travelled and much-sought after junior player who returned to his Port Arthur home after playing in a few exhibitions with the Generals last fall.

He wanted to play for the Port Arthur Bearcats but permission was not forthcoming and the Toronto Maple Leafs—whose negotiation list he's on—asked him to report to Toronto where the Generals persuaded him to return to their team.

Bobby Gray, professional golfer, and Layton Fernandez, New Orleans amateur, yesterday took first place honors in a pro-amateur best-ball tournament at New Orleans, prelude to the $10,000 New Orleans open.

Gray and Fernandez teamed up for an 11-under-par 60.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association now is the official governing body of golf in this country, Association Assistant-Secretary E. Harold Banks, announced in Toronto last night.

Letters patent have been received from the Secretary of State incorporating the R.C.G.A. as a company. Prior to incorporation, the association had no legal standing in this country as a national authoritative body.

The English Lacrosse Union announced yesterday at London, England, that the Canadian Lacrosse Association has refused an invitation to send a team to participate in an exhibition lacrosse series in conjunction with the Olympic games.

London fight-promotor Jack Solomons yesterday proposed that Freddie Mills, European light heavyweight boxing champion, fight Tami Mauriella of New York at London's Harringway Arena, April 19.

Joe Louis Gives Walcott Only Two Weeks to Sign

New York, Feb. 19 (CP) —Joe Louis, his patience wearing thin, says he'll give Jersey Joe Walcott just two weeks to sign for a retur habot at the heavyweight boxing crown.

If the Camden N.J. veteran doesn't come to terms by then the champion adds, then he'll make his last fight against somebody else — "probably Gus Lesnevich."

"You'd think Walcott was the champion the way he wants to call the shots," the Brown Bomber said last night in the eve of his departure for a series of exhibitions in Britain.

Louis already has signed with the Twentieth Century Club for an outdoor fight in June which he insists will be the last of his career.

Walcott, who dropped a split decision to the champion in December after flooring him twice has been regarded as the logical challenger.

Until yesterday the return engagement appeared about set with the only differences revolving around distribution of movie proceeds. The Twentieth Century offered Jersey Joe a 22 1-2-per-cent cut.

But another hitch arose when Louis' manager, Marshall Miles, disclosed the fight contract must have a clause guaranteeing Louis an even 30-30 per cent split for a return bout in case he could be beaten.

Miles said this didn't mean Louis, if a loser, would go back on his announcement to retire after his June battle.

Walcott balked.

"It means I'll have to fight him three times before I get the champion's cut in a fight," he complained.

Forth Worth Rangers Beat Dallas Texans

(By The Associated Press)

Fort Worth Rangers displayed their offensive punch last night with a five-goal scoring splurge in the third period against Dallas Texans to win 5-2.

In less than five minutes Alex Ritson drove in two and Len Mutcheson, Francis Kane and Tom Fowler added single counters.

Dallas scorers were Gordie Peirie and Connie Poitras.

The Tulsa game at Houston was postponed until March 16, and in the only other contest scheduled Minneapolis slid by St. Paul 5-3.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By DOUG GREEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Feb. 19 — (CP) —A new day may be dawning for Saskatchewan play-for-money golfers.

Stan (Edmonton Journal) Moher says Pat Fletcher, professional at Saskatoon Golf and Country Club — and who visited Edmonton recently — likes his job.

"It would take an exceptional bid," says Stan, "to interest him anywhere else. On that score, then golf in Saskatchewan is strictly okay. As for the tournaments staged by the Provincial Golf Association, they're something else again."

"Fletcher dominated the Saskatchewan professional meet, for which he took down the magnificent sum of $175. Contrast this situation with Alberta's, where close to $1,800 was distributed in purse money and prizes at the Open last September."

But things should change once Fletcher "gets the right fellows around a table," for he plans, in Moher's words, "to do his darndest to sell them on the idea of a worthwhile Saskatchewan Open."

"If Saskatchewan's number one ambassador gets across with his plan, a pot of at least $1,500 will be there for prairie and West Coast wedge-artists to cut up. And that would represent real progress."

"Once a $1,500 tournament is a reality, Saskatchewan can move alongside Alberta and British Columbia in the forefront of Western provinces. The carrying out of the Fletcher scheme would also serve to hasten the formation of a Western Canada golf circuit along modest but interesting lines."

The Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Buddy O'Connor maintained his National Hockey League individual scoring lead last night as the leaders failed to nudge him in two games. Ted Lindsay was the only top marksman to pick up a goal. He boosted his collection of markers to 27 and moved into a two-way tie with Elmer Lach of Montreal for fourth place.

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 17.

"I grant you that your feelings have been hurt, Velma—and I'm sorry for my part in it, "hastily put in Clarence. "But, darn it, I knew Mae would think she didn't need another model, and unless I— I made it an object to her, you wouldn't get a look-in. Now, having made good with her, it's up to you to haggle with her over salary. I wash my hands of the whole business."

"You're really very kind, Clarence. And I——appreciate it. It was only that—that I didn't think you should—do so much for me."

"Well, thank your lucky stars, young, young lady, that he's not the kind of man to except any favors from you. But I really need you desparately, Won't you come back in the morning, my dear? I'll cut your wages to what the other models are getting."

"Think of a girl demanding cut wages!" laughed Clarence. "People are always striking for higher wages, but I'll bet your the higher wages, but I'll bet your the original low wage demander. A very remarkable—may I say extraordinary girl you are, Velma?

She tried to accept his nonsense lightly. She said, "I've been a little prig—I'm sorry. You're both so much better to me than I deserve thank you Clarence for having enough confidence in me to start me in the business world—and thank you, Miss Forland, for taking me back into the fold."

"Meaning—you will come back?" asked Miss Forland, pushing up the wave in her beautifully arranged short henna hair.

"I know of no place I'd rather be, "Velma responded brightly. "I've loved it here—the smart clothes, the excitement of parading them. The fascination of being somehow necessary in the scheme of things. Really—it's been—marvelous!"

"Splendid!" Mae Forland jumped up. "See you in the morning, then."

And her tall slim figure swung from the room, leaving Clarence to his opportunity.

"You must think me absolutely ridiculous, "Velma said to Clarence Pell when the office door closed behind Miss Forland.

"If what I think would only matter to you. "He looked at her appealingly.

"Why, of course, it matters, Clarence."

"Not enough to make me rate very high, I guess. "There was a note of futility in his tone. "I wrote you I was coming for my answer—and—well,, here I am."

Velma remembered with chagrin that she had forgotten to read Clarence's letter, and so had no idea what she was supposed to say to him now.

Unconsciously, he helped her out of this dilemma.

"Why should an offer of marriage from me make you look so bewildered, my dear?"

"Marriage?" She stood up then, and her brown eyes clouded. She hated to hurt this friend.

He got to his feet uncertainly. But you see, I—I don't love you. So—I can't marry you."

He nodded in stricken comprehension. He said unsteadily, "There is some one else."

"Yes," came from her faintly.

He put two pudgy hands on her shoulders, his rotund face twitching with emotion. "In spite of that, Velma," he said earnestly, ""you may always call me your friend. If you ever need a friend, count on me."

His hands dropped away from her, he turned about quickly and left the office.

After dining that night in a downtown cafeteria, Velma returned to her small Y.W.C.A. room to restlessly pace the floor. Her nerves were on edge again. It must be that Tom would soon phone or get in touch with her in some manner and clear up the unbearable suspense involving his guilt or innocence. She had thoroughly scanned every edition of the newspapers since she had last seen him, but interest in the Scollar murder had quieted down. Other tragedies had come on its heels to take front page space. Only now and then was there an inconspicuous paragraph saying that no clews had been found in the Scollar case in spite of diligent search by the country's most famous detectives.

"Thank heaven!" Velma said to herself, trying once more to piece together everything Tom had said to her on the lawn of th inn. "Thank heaven, the clews are missing!"

She started violently when a knock came on her door. Who could it be? Certainly, she had no friends who would come here—or even enemies.

With fumbling fingers, she unlocked the door and cautiously opened it. Louise Clark, an enemy if ever she had one, impudently confronted her.

"Oh!" exclaimed Velma, hostilely. "What do you want?"

"I'd like to come in—if you don't mind.

"But—I do mind." Velma's eyes were dark with anger and distrust. "I didn't invite you here."

Louise smiled cryptically and shoved past Velma into the room. She dropped to the dressing table stool and crossed her legs comfortably, as if she intended to spend the evening.

She drawled in that saccharine tone which Velma had come to dread, "You should thank me for coming. Oh, I know you have no affection to waste on me—Tom's probably told you a lot of rubbish to clear himself in your eyes. You think I'm pursuing him and all that sort of thing. But you'll do well to listen to me, Velma, darling."

Velma sank to the edge of the bed, fearfully expectant of unpleasant tidings about to explode in a blast about her. Louise Clark scarcely would have troubled to come here otherwise.

Velma said slowly, trying unsuccessfully to steady her voice, "Haven't you done enough to Tom and me? Why can't you let Tom alone?"

"Because I love him, that's why! I might ask why you don't leave him alone, and be told you met him first, and hands off. You really should believe me, Velma, when I say I intend to have him—and keep him!"

Rheumatic Pain, Backache Gone "Feel Years Younger"

This Sutton Resident Tells How Syntona Helped Him; Relieved Pain; Appetite Improved; Sleeps Soundly. Praises it Highly.

Many hundreds of men and women in this city and vicinity frequently tell of the remarkable results they obtained by using Syntona Herbal Compound. Former sufferers of stomach disorders, sluggish kidneys or liver, constipation, nervousness and rheumatic aches and pains say Syntona has given surprising and prompt relief from their suffering. In all instances these experiences have been made public in the hope that they will benefit others who suffer similarly.

"I suffered from rheumatic pains which kept getting worse from year to year. It had spread all through my joints and muscles which had become so stiff and sore that many days I had trouble getting around. I had a dull, aching pain across my back and if I sat still in a chair for awhile I had difficulty getting straightened up again. My appetite was poor. I was troubled with constipation, and I couldn't seem to get my proper sleep at night.

"I spent a lot of money on medicines of all kinds, but got no noticeable relief until I began taking Syntona. In a very short time this medicine has cleared up the pain and stiffness, relieved backache and constipation and I feel years younger. I have a good appetite and no trouble at all getting to sleep at night. It's a grand medicine and more people should know about it."

They're Breaking Up The Brave Battleships

(By MICHAEL CHRISTIANSEN In Overseas Mail)

Four of Britain's battleships—Queen Elizabeth, Valiant, Nelson and Rodney — and the battle-cruiser Renown are to be scrapped. They have outlived their usefulness.

They were ships of history, of famous names—and controversy.

When Rodney lay in dry dock at Rosyth, unable to float because she leaked too much, thousands of sailors would come and stare at her great rusted, bulging hull —a symbol worth £7,500,000 and weighing 35,000 tons of the end of Britain's battleship supremacy.

Rodney and Nelson were sister ships, known in the Navy as "Queen Anne's Mansion," because of their huge superstructure and chopped-off stern.

Because of the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922, they were ships condemned to criticism from the day they were laid down. The treaty limited their weight and armament, and forced the designers to build a new type of battleship.

Their guns were all forward, mounted in turrets of three. They were the first battleships to carry 16 in. guns — nine of them.

Nelson was built at Newcastle-on-Tyne and launched in 1925. For 14 years she was flagship of the Home Fleet, the great showpiece of Britain's sea-power.

At the outbreak of war she was at Scapa Flow. On one of her North Sea patrols she was damaged by a magnetic mine.

In 1941 her 16in. guns were in the Mediterranean protecting the Malta convoys. Her presence kept away the Italian Fleet, but torpedo bombers managed to hit her and put her out of action for several months.

North Africa, Sicily, Italy, Normandy, Malaya, Penang—the Nelson steamed 500,000 miles. On September 29, 1943, the armistice with Italy was signed on board her by General Eisenhower and Marshal Badoglio.

Rodney was a luckier ship, despite the fact that when she was launched it took three attempts to break the champagne bottle on her bows, which sailors say is the worst start to a ship's life.

Off Norway in 1940 she was damaged by a German bomb—the first clash of sea and air power. But though 15 men were killed when her armoured deck was pierced she was not severely damaged.

When Bismarck was rushing to France after sinking the Hood in 1941 Rodney was one of the ships which closed in on the great German battleship.

Her guns fired three salvos. The first two straddled, and the third hit Bismarck, the first blow a British warship gave the enemy.

In the last war, when she was attached to the Eastern Fleet, carrying the flag of Admiral Sir James Somerville, she was sent to escort her Cunarder namesake from Australia.

As the two great ships met the Admiral sent a one-word signal: "Snap!"

From 1916 to 1919 she was flagship of Admiral Beatty in the Grand Fleet. The German surrender of the Kaiser's fleet was signed on board. In 1937 it was decided to keep her in the Navy —and she fought until 1944, taking part in the Far Eastern struggle.

Renown was completed in 1916, and after the First World War became a floating hotel for members of the Royal Family.

In 1921 the Prince of Wales sailed on his Empire tour in her later the King and Queen, then the Duke and Duchess of York, sailed to Australia.

Her first action in the Second World War was with the German battle-cruiser Scharnhorst, which she hit several times.

She carried Mr. Churchill home from the Quebec Conference in 1943, and later took him to Alexandria.

Valiant was the first battleship to be launched in 1914, and took part in the Battle of Jutland — and she was still going strong at the famous Mediterranean Battle of Matapan in 1941.

GODMOTHER FOR FIRST TIME

For the first time Princess Margaret Rose was a godmother. She is shown with her godchild, Marilyn Emma Margaret Wills and the child's mother just before the christening ceremony at the Church of All Saints in Binfield, Eng. Mrs. Wills was the former Hon. Jean Constance Elphinstone, second daughter of the Queen's sister. She married Major Wills of the noted tobacco family in 1936. Her Majesty the Queen was godmother to the first child of Major and Mrs. Wills, a son, born in 1937.

Russ Lack of Co-operation "Disturbing" New Problem For U.N. States Truman

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Feb. 20 —(AP)— President Truman said today Russia's refusal to carry out United Nations decisions has raised a "disturbing" new problem.

But despite the failure of the Soviet Union and its satellites to co-operate, "the United Nations is making headway," Truman told the United States Congress. "The strengthening of the United Nations continues to be a cornerstone of the foreign policy of the United States."

Truman outlined his views in a 359-page report on the work of the world agency during 1947. The report had been given first to the President by State Secretary Marshall.

Marshall said "the record offers no basis for complacency" but also "no basis for pessimism."

Accomplishments Noted

"Some of the accomplishments noted in the report," Marshall wrote, "were made despite the intransigence of a numerically small minority, which has extended to a refusal to carry out certain major recommendations."

In their formal letters of transmittal, neither the President nor Marshall referred to the Russian bloc of states by name. However, the body of the report spells out in great detail the record of how:

1. Russia and Poland refused to take part in the U. N, "watchdog" commission in Greece .

2. The Soviet Ukraine refused to serve on the U. N. commission to unify Korea.

3. The whole Slav group rejected the majority decision of the U. N. Assembly creating a year-round "little assembly."

The document relates many other instances of the clash between east and west. These include the persistent dispute over the veto issue in the Security Council and the dispute touched off by Russia's "war-monger" attack on the United States at the assembly meeting last year.

Agreement on One Issue

The report notes that on only one major issue—the decision to partition Palestine—have the Soviet Union and the United States found it possible to agree. But even with this agreement, the document said:

"Today the Holy Land tests the ability of the world community to make a peaceful disposition of this problem, now marked by strife."

Both Truman and Marshall emphasized that the U. N. was confronted with a fateful decision in 1947: whether to avoid great world issues by concentrating on the least controversial matters or to deal boldly with the outstand-

Better Treatment of Canada's Veterans in Two Wars Proposed in House

Ottawa, Feb. 20 —CP)— Better treatment of Canada's veterans of two world wars, including higher pensions and allowances, was urged in the Commons yesterday by opposition speakers.

Two Progressive Conservative speakers — Howard Green PC-Vancouver South) and George White (PC-Hastings Peterborough) — joined in the Throne Speech debate in protesting that increases announced recently by the government in payments to veterans were inadequate.

They spoke in the resumed Throne Speech debate, which also included John Sinnott (L-Springfield), F. W. Townley-Smith (CCF-North Battleford), J. M. Macdonnell, (PC-Muskoka-Ontario), K. R. Daniel (PC-Oxford) and A. Wesley Stewart (L-Charlotte.).

The House opened with the statement by Finance Minister Abbottt that the government was looking into proposals that holders of war savings certificates be allowed to cash them at post offices. Under the present system the certificates must be turned in to the chartered banks.

Revenue Minister McCann told the chamber he would look into the question of allowing income tax deductions for expenses incurred by teachers taking summer normal school courses.

In the Senate, Senator Arthur Marcotte (PC-Manitoba) said the democracies could preserve peace if they were strong enough to awe their enemies and added that Canada should play her part with other liberty-loving nations in leading the way to peace.

NO IMMEDIATE RELIEF IN SIGHT SAY OFFICIALS

Low Water at Plants Blamed for Situation

Toronto, Feb. 20 — (CP)—With no immediate relief in sight, Southern Ontario cities today enter their fifth day of power cutoffs and voluntary saving of electric energy.

Low water at generating plants in almost all sections of Ontario and in neighboring areas of Quebec is blamed for the situation. Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission officials say that by cutting down power production, water can be stored up and reservoir levels raised. Forcing decreases in the amount of power used appears the only way this aim can be met.

Officials dismissed the idea of advancing the starting date of daylight time two months on the grounds it would not help the over - all situation. However, municipalities have authority to institute fast time if they think it desirable in carrying out their own power - saving plans.

As communities sought to adjust themselves to their local conservation arrangements and clergymen prepared to appeal from pulpits Sunday for economy in the use of power, it was announced that requests for voluntary power saving so far had fallen short of the mark.

Gained Some Ground

But they had gained some ground. In Toronto, scheduled to have two 45-minute cutoffs again today but none Saturday and Sunday, 80 east-end plants served by a single feeder line reduced their hydro consumption 10 per cent by cutting 90 minutes from their normal working day. In return, hydro assured them of power without interruption.

Such centres as Hamilton, Windsor, London, St. Thomas, Kingston, Stratford, Paris, Lindsay and Peterborough reported officials not satisfied with the public reaction to requests to save power. London planned to blink lights if the load rose unduly high, then pull switches five minutes later if a reduction were not forthcoming.

Daily hour-long shutdowns have been decreed for London and the blinking will signal extra cutoffs. Windsor has undertaken to reduce power use 12 per cent but bright sunshine coupled with voluntary conservation enabled it to go through Wednesday and Thursday without power interruptions.

Sudbury is reducing power consumption by 45,000 kilowatt hours daily through voluntary rationing and by temporarily replacing street-cars with buses on suburban runs.

Couple Remanded

Ottawa, Feb. 20. (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Leo Emery received another week's remand when they appeared in magistrate's court and pleaded innocent to abandoning and failing to provide for their four children.

The couple entered "not guilty" pleas.

The case has aroused considerable interest since provincial police reported finding the four Emery children, ranging in age from five months to five years, unattended and hungry in subzero weather in an unheated trailer at the southeast edge of the city. The four are being cared for in foster homes.

Sunday Suits, Boots Pawned Monday But Always Redeemed on Pay Day

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 20 —(CP)— A pawnbroker discussing the high quality of goods submitted for cash nowadays, said there was nothing to stop a man pawning his wife — providing the wife was willing to be pawned and a pawnbroker was willing to accept "that kind of pledge."

Thirteen years ago, he said, an Essex man pawned by agreement his best friend for £2 10s ($10) —but the pledge was redeemed first thing in the morning, the money paid over and the man released.

In accordance with the law, the pawnbroker was bound to maintain the pledge in good condition; so he had to feed the man who was pawned and provide him with a bed as well.

Nowadays, the pawnbroker continued, people are pawning binoculars, cameras, silver cigaret cases, jewelry, valuable portraits and sometimes vacuum cleaners and household utensils.

Clothing in Demand

Clothes, which used to be the chief trade of the pawnshops, are so scarce that few people have any to spare.

"I can remember the time," he said, "when there were long queues every Monday morning of people waiting to pawn Sunday suits and boots. Most of them redeemed their pledges on pay-day . . . but more often than not they were back in line the following Monday."

Keys and Private Papers of Dead Man Stolen

New York, Feb. 20 — (AP) — New mystery was injected yesterday into one of Manhattan's most puzzling unsolved police cases— the disappearance a dozen years ago of a wealthy British oil man.

Keys and private papers belonging to the estate of the man, Fred B. Lloyd, and his deceased wife were reported mysteriously stolen yesterday from a downtown office. Nothing else in the room was touched.

Lloyd, who was 63, stepped into a taxicab in Times Square one fall afternoon in 1936— and dropped out of sight. He was reported to have been working on secret synthetic oil processes. Lloyd was declared legally dead in 1944.

The stolen keys, between 40 and 50 of them, were to the oil man's estate, Waldon Oaks, in Surrey, England, and to trunks of clothing left by his wife, Genevieve. They were taken from the office of William G. Rowan, a family friend, who had been holding them while waiting for British solicitors to probate Mrs. Lloyd's estate.

Mrs. Lloyd lived in a Manhattan hotel until she died in 1945. After her death, stocks, bonds and coupons with a face value of nearly $400,000 were found in her room. Lawyers said most of the securities were worthless, but her safe deposit box yielded jewels and other property worth about $50,000.

Neither Rowan nor the temporary administrator of the estate, Attorney Earle L. Beatty, could offer any reason why the keys and papers were stolen.

Three Children Die in Fire Near Halifax

Halifax, Feb. 20—(CP)—Three children were burned to death today in a fire of undetermined origin which destroyed the wooden frame home of Alfred Wallace of suburban Fairview.

The dead:
Carol Wallace, five.
David Wallace, three.
Wayne Wallace, one.

All were children of Alfred Wallace.

Details were not immediately available as to how the children were trapped in the building and as to whether their parents were present at the time.

Pilot Sacrifices Self to Save Two Companions

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 20 —(AP)—A veteran test pilot, Latham A. (Slim) Perrett, 42, sacrificed his life yesterday to save two companions and prevent his experimental plane from crashing in a populated area.

He was test-flying a three- engined Northrop Pioneer when a structural failure developed and the ship lost most of its fin and rudder, co-pilot John Atkinson, 28, and E. P. Hetzel, 30, chief of Northrop Aircraft's test section, were with him.

"Slim Perrett ordered Atkinson and Hetzel to bail out and, in an effort to prevent the airplane from crashing in a populated area, rode the ship down to such a critically low altitude that when he was finally forced to abandon it, he was too low to save his life," a company statement said.

Atkinson, and Hetzel parachuted to safety with seconds to spare.

15 P.C. Increase Food Allowances For Relief

Toronto, Feb. 20. (CP)—Ontario Welfare Minister W. A. Goodfellow announced yesterday a 15 per cent increase in food allowances to persons on relief. The increase, he said, is made to meet increased commodity costs.

Consideration is also being given to further adjustments in Mothers' Allowances for the same reason.

"Officials of my department have watched carefully the effect of increased prices on incomes of recipients of public assistance," Mr. Goodfellow explained. "Periodic adjustments have been made in order that assistance would be kept at basic requirement level."

FIVE PERSONS DIE AS STORM SWEEPS FROM B.C. COAST

Blast Abates After Reaching N.W. Ontario

Winnipeg, Feb. 20 —(CP)—The mid-February blast which let loose winter's worst storm across Western Canada appeared abated today after a lusty sweep from British Columbia's ragged coastline to Northwestern Ontario's timberlands, but in its wake were at least 5 dead, blocked roads and general discomfort.

Four of the deaths attributed to the storm took place in British Columbia. First man killed, a Japanese lineman, Tetsuo Otsu, buried beneath tons of snow in a slide near Hope, 125 miles east of Vancouver. Then three Indians drowned when their dinghy capsized near Prince Rupert.

In the same district it was feared a halibut boat had been lost in Wright Sound.

Donald McKay of Marwayne, Alta., was the fifth known victim, dying in hospital at Kitscoty, 138 miles southeast of Edmonton, of a heart attack. The attack came a short while after he helped push a stalled automobile out of a snow drift.

In Winnipeg an engineer was taken to hospital yesterday in fair condition, suffering from shock following collision of two locomotives in the Canadian Pacific Railway yards. The accident was blamed on poor visibility caused by driving snow.

The snow was troublesome in other ways too, blocking highways and isolating many country districts temporarily. Snow plows were beginning the task of clearing roads in Manitoba today. In Saskatchewan, where clearing measures began Thursday, highways officials warned it would be several days before all roads would be open for traffic. Alberta was in the same condition.

Commoners Called To Battle Against 'Privileged Few'

Washington, Feb. 20 —(AP)— President Truman headed into the 1948 United States presidential campaign last night with a call for the common people to rally around in a battle against "the privileged few."

"This is a year of challenge," Truman told Democratic party members. "I propose that we meet that challenge head on."

In a 30-minute Jefferson-Jackson Day speech he never referred directly to the challenge he faces from angry Southerners in his own party. Nor did he mention directly the threat to Democratic presidential chances offered by Henry A. Wallace's third party.

But he spoke highly of Thomas Jefferson's attacks against "laws that restricted citizenship," and said the Democratic party still believes in protecting the rights of "all the groups and individuals in our nation."

Frigid Weather Grips S. England, Western Europe

London, Feb. 20 (AP)—Southern England, western Europe and Scandinavia experienced the coldest weather of the winter today.

Cold and snow drove marauding packs of wolves down from the Sila mountains in southern Italy. In northern Norway, wolf packs raided cattle herds, causing such losses that military planes were sent out to shoot them down.

The frigid weather will continue and still lower temperatures are in prospect, weather forecasters said.

In the big cities of Germany authorities opened warm public warming halls. These quickly filled with families from homes unheated because of the fuel shortage.

Elk, cut off from food by the snow wandered into the streets of Norwegian towns and villages.

Mild Weather in Russia

Moscow, Feb. 20 (AP)—Mild weather and ample rainfall give promise of bumper crops throughout Russia this spring, the newspaper Socialist Agriculture said today. Tests of winter grains in the Soviet Union forecast a successful harvest for 1948, it added.

The paper said the weather had been warmer this winter than in many years, and there has been substantial precipitation in the Ukraine.

Britain Accused Of Inciting Riot In Somaliland

Rome, Feb. 20 —(Reuters)— Britain today was accused by an Italian official of inciting anti-Italian riots in Mogadishu, Italian Somaliland, on Jan. 11 when 52 Italians were killed.

The official, Cesare Donati, secretary of the Italian assistance committee for Mogadishu, reached Rome by air yesterday, first member of the Mogadishu community to return to Italy since the riots.

British officials, Donati alleged in a statement, looked on impassively as Italians were murdered by natives.

"The demonstrations were prepared by agitators in the service of the British military administration to offset the effect of pro-Italian demonstrations" five days earlier, he declared.

The Italian cabinet is considering an official report from Zanotto Bianco, president of the Italian Red Cross, placed before it by the foreign minister, Count Carlo Sforza, last night. Bianco, sent by the Italian government to investigate the riots, also returned yesterday. Contents of his report have not been disclosed.

The British government officials expressed sympathy and concern in London and in Rome at the loss of Italian lives during the riots.

'Powhatan Arrow' Train Derailed, Fireman Killed

Portsmouth, O., Feb. 20. (AP) —The streamliner "Powhatan Arrow" of the Norfolk and Western Railroad jumped the track today, killing a fireman and seriously injuring the engineer.

The railroad's office here said that so far as it knew no passengers were injured.

The wreck occurred on a straight stretch of track on which the streamliner usually hits nearly 90 miles an hour.

All available ambulances were sent from Portsmouth to the scene.

The streamliner was east bound from Cincinnati to Roanoke, Va. The derailment apparently occurred at Franklin Furnace, O., on a straight away where the train generally travels at a speed up to 90 miles an hour.

Rube Goldberg Device Cuts off Lighting

Stratford, Feb. 20. (CP)— An alarm clock and a mouse trap are the essential parts of "Rube Goldberg" device used by a local store manager to conserve electric power during the present shortage. Reginald Carter wants to light his store window in the evening but he feels it would be waste of power to leave lights burning all night. That's where the clock and the mouse-catcher come in.

A fixture in the store window contains a small fluorescent light bulb run by batteries. A string runs from the light to a house trap and from there to an alarm clock.

At 10.30 p.m. the alarm rings. As the winder turns, the string trips the mouse trap, pulling the string attached to the light switch.

Seeing-Eye Dog Shot, Toronto Police Offer Reward of $500

Toronto, Feb. 20. (CP) — Laddie and Sparky continued to make history here today, the former as he lay dead in a blue casket in a garage, the latter as he was treated in veterinary hospital after brain specialists were consulted on his condition.

Meanwhile, Chief Constable John Chisholm announced the Police Commission had posted a $500 reward for the killers of the German Shepherd dog, shot as he defended the Standard Auto Body Company premises yesterday.

The owner, John Berezanski, a blind man, previously had offered $100 reward for information leading to the arrest of the persons who shot and bludgeoned his seeing-eye dog. Sparky, owned by his brother, was also in the garage at the time the wall safe was robbed of $350.

It was the first time the Police Commission had offered money in connection with a dog's death and the total of $600 was believed a record.

Mr. Berezanski already has been presented a seeing-eye German Shepherd, Yip, by a suburban Scarboro girl, one of many offers that came by telephone. Yip guided him as he left the garage today, following which Laddie's body was carried to a little hearse outside and taken to the animal cemetery.

Anti-Communists In Czechoslovakia Quit Cabinet Posts

Showdown Fight Against Red Efforts of Domination

It was the first open break in Czechoslovakia's post-war republic, formed in April, 1945.

Leaders of the National Socialist party, the Slovak Democrat party and the Catholic People's party quit the government of Communist Premier Klement Gottwald, a seven-party coalition which was governed by compromise and barter.

Earlier these leaders had refused to sit in with the Communists in a cabinet meeting called by Gottwald in an atmosphere of pre-election tension.

May Save Coalition

The parties resigned in letters to President Eduard Benes, The president immediately called the parties leaders to a meeting. There was some possibility he might save the coalition by refusing to accept the resignations.

Gottwald and his Communist ministers had met alone, it was learned, as the non-communist ministers staged a form of strike. The non-Communists had given Gottwald an ultimatum to drop his attempt to purge from the security police members who are not Communists.

With the Communists momentarily on the defensive in this borderland country between the east and the west, United States Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt told the Czechoslovak press he hopes the country still will participate in the Marshall plan.

Czechoslovakia changed her mind about participating in the original Marshall plan talks in Paris last June after her high officials were summoned to Moscow.

Stick to New Policy

The Social Democrat party appeared to be sticking to its new policy of opposing the Communists wherever one-party domination is the issue. The Social Democrats have been giving the Communists the margin they needed to carry out their long-range program, but they decided last night to support the Czechoslovak National Socialist party, the Catholic People's party and the Slovak Democrats on broad issues where Communist domination is threatened.

Looming large now in the growing, week-old crisis are a trades union congress called for next Sunday and a peasant group demonstration set for Feb. 29. Non-Communists are shunning these events, charging they are part of a Communist plot to keep the country in a pre-election turmoil.

Weather Synopsis

MINISTERS WILL MAKE TRY AT WRITING TREATY

Main Subject is What Russia Will Demand from Austria

London, Feb. 20 — (AP)—The Big Four Deputy Foreign Ministers meet again today for another try at writing a peace treaty for Austria. Their main subject is what Russia wants from the beaten country.

The Soviet Union asks Austrian oil and shipping she says used to belong to the Germans, who took over Austria in 1938. She also demands that Austria pay her for any former German assets the country is allowed to keep.

High diplomatic informants say they hope she will bargain on these demands. They say if she doesn't the conference will break up soon.

The United States and Great Britain, these sources say, have agreed not to give Russia enough to leave her in control of the Austrian economy. France has made compromise suggestions.

The informants report that United States and British delegates are ready to buck the Soviet demand that Austria pay Russia $200,000,000 in two years in partial settlement of Soviet claims on foreign German assets.

These delegates, the informants say, think the bill is too big and the time to pay it too short. They haven't made a counter-suggestion. The French have proposed a two-year delay and then payment of $100,000,000 in five years.

Will Oppose Rights

Diplomatic sources say the Americans and Britain also have decided to oppose any Soviet try to get extra - territorial rights in Austria by taking over property there and to demand that Russia withdraw her troops from Austria before any treaty is signed. The other three powers also have military personnel in Austria.

Provided Austria is rid of Russian economic control and Russian soldiers, the United States is said to be prepared to go a considerable way toward granting Russia's demand for two-thirds of Austria's current oil output and prospecting rights in two-thirds of the undeveloped oil areas.

The Soviet Union also wants former German assets in the Danube Shipping Company, including ships now in Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria, and a 25-per-cent share in the company's assets in Austria propey.

The Vienna Communist party, in a statement by its press department, charged the United States Army last night with frightening Austrian war prisoners returned from Russia in attempts to get military information out of them.

It said military police and counter - intelligence corps men "with all possible means of intimidation . . . try to obtain detailed knowledge of Russia's economic and military secrets."

A United States Army spokesman said the Army questions some prisoners as a matter of routine but denied intimidation is used and said the accusation has no foundation in fact.

Lord Baden - Powell asked that Guides not think of them on this day, but think of all sister Guides all over the world, and it is customary for Guides and Brownies everywhere to hold a Thinking Day service, thereby creating a spirit of International Friendship.

The Guides and Brownies of Belleville, as their part in this great Sisterhood, will hold their Thinking Day service in St. Thomas Parish House on Sunday, Feb. 22nd, at 4:30 p.m. The Commissioner, Mrs. J. Watson is in charge of this service and wants a full attendance from her Companies and Packs.

Need for Drafting New Plumbing, Building By-laws Stressed by Speaker

Groundwork for what is hoped to be the ultimate appointments here of city building and plumbing inspectors, was laid at the weekly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce directorate yesterday.

The directorate unanimously endorsed a motion requesting the city council to appoint a special committee to meet with the Chamber Civic Committee and discuss the matter of drafting new building and plumbing by-laws. The Civic Committee, the motion stated, would be ready to draft the proposed by-laws if the suggestion meets with the approval of city council.

The motion followed a brief address on the proposed by-laws and inspectors by Mr. Clare Hurlbut, of the St. Lawrence Construction Company here. Other guests at the luncheon included City Engineer Charles Mott and Jack Sills of the city.

Thinks Control Needed

His address, Mr. Hurlbut said, was not a form of criticism of the city, but he believed that in view of the general expansion here, some steps toward proper control of construction of houses and factories should be taken.

Present plumbing and building by-laws, he said, were very old and inadequate, and should undergo considerable revision. He urged that a committee of the council be formed, call in an architect, and have a new building by-law prepared. Coupled with this, should be a by-law calling for plumbing inspection.

Official control of building in the city, Mr. Hurlbut said, was very essential because it served to eliminate fire hazards, many of which exist in the city today.

Asserting that the foundation was a vital point in construction, Mr. Hurlbut told the directors that it had been a practice here to build basement floors to act as footing for the walls. This, he said, was poor policy, as it caused settlement of the building, and cracks in the floors. In some places, he went on, the joists were not sufficiently heavy for the carrying load. In the case the floor falls, as in stores or other buildings outside of houses, the city would be liable.

Proper Construction Essential

Proper construction of homes should be a feature of the proposed building by-law, Mr. Hurlbut said. "There are some people building who are interested only in getting the houses up; getting their money out of them and getting out. The purchasing public has no confidence in the present by-law because they think the houses are being built according to municipal regulations."

Some of these buildings, he said, were not being constructed with proper foresight as to fire prevention. If they are built of solid brick and walls with 1x2 strapping there is no fire ledge and the fire can travel straight up to the attic. In these cases it is hard to trace the origin of the fire.

He suggested, that for the time being, building and plumbing by-laws are essential, with the employment of a competent inspector, who could, temporarily, look after both jobs..

Additional cost of these services, Mr. Hurlbut said, would be offset in an increase in building permits. At the present time the fees here are very low. A ten-dollar permit in Belleville would cost $50 elsewhere. In some cities plumbing permits cost from 50 cents to $1.00 per fixture. He suggested that if a building and plumbing department was installed here, the time of its officials could be divided between issuance of permits and supervision of work.

Rigid By-law in New York

Such a department paid dividends in North York township, Mr. Hurlbut said, this township had a very rigid by-law and its building officials controlled and supervised construction of both homes and industrial buildings. He thought that now was the proper time for Belleville to incorporate both building and plumbing departments.

Stating he was very "fire-conscious", Mr. Hurlbut said he was surprised at the number of fire hazards in the city. The Fire Marshal, had suggested that it was a full-time job for a member of the Fire Department to inspect all buildings with respect to fire potentialities. Municipal buildings should be thoroughly inspected once a year, and others once a month.

During a brief discussion on the matter, it was brought out that Belleville and Guelph were the only two cities in Ontario without fire-alarm systems.

Following the motion to request the city council to appoint a committee to discuss building and plumbing inspections with the Chamber Civic Committee, it was suggested that the North York township plans, or a copy of them be secured for reference prior to the drawing-up of the proposed by-law.

President Harold Seldon was in the chair, and expressed the appreciation of the directorate to Mr. Hurlbut for his address.

Cruelest Treatment Planned by Reds For America Says Exiled Leader

Washington, Feb. 20. (AP)— George M. Dimitrov, exiled Bulgarian political leader, said here "American traitors" are being trained right now in Russia for eventual duty in the United States.

Dimitrov also told a congressional committee that:

"America is Communist target No. 1."

Under the red plan of world domination, America is supposed to suffer most and get the cruelest treatment of any state.

Bulgarian Communists have extended their activity into the United States. He said they have formed organizations and are publishing a Detroit newspaper called "Peoples Will."

Dimitrov testified to a House of Representatives Un-American Activities sub-committee. The committee is gathering information to use in drafting legislation to curb Communists in the United States.

Dimitrov said that a Russian representative in Bulgaria told him: "The end of the conflict with Germany means the beginning of another with the western plutocrats. No victory will have been won by us until the heads of the British and American Imperialism have been smashed."

Council in Committee

Three Firemen Selected to Fill Vacant Positions

Three applicants for the position of firemen with the city fire department were accepted by council in committee, Thursday evening, the applicants being accepted on condition that medical tests were passed.

The three new firemen, all veterans of the last war, are Robt. Emerson, John Browning and E. Helm. All are residents of the city, are married and have families. A waiting list of ten names was prepared from which vacancies occurring in the department will be filled.

To Close Deal

The city solicitor was authorized to close the purchase of the Docter property east of the city, the purchase price to be $400 per acre. The treasurer was authorized to give a cheque for the amount when the deed was received.

His Worship Mayor D. L. Storey was authorized to carry out talks over the local radio station every two weeks to give listeners an account of what is transpiring in city council. The Mayor will have the assistance of any alderman desired to help with the broadcast.

The firm of Gore and Storrie will be consulted regarding specifications and preparations for tenders for the construction of a trunk sewer on MacDonald Ave. The sewer area is to be annexed to the city.

To Build Warehouse

Tender will be called for the erection of a new warehouse with tenders to be asked for both frame and concrete block construction. Tenders will also be called for a new three-ton dual wheel dump truck.

The Christian Alliance Tabernacle, West Moira Street, was granted parking space along the river with authority to remove trees on the river bank at no cost to the city.

Tenders will also be called for the laying of a new sidewalk from Zeller's to the Upper Bridge with the omission of that portion in front of Canadian Department Store which built their own section last year.

Ten building lots were repossessed by the city, the lots being taken back by the city because of the owners' failure to comply with their building covenant. A number of other lots were assigned to new owners under agreement of sale following completion of the covenant.

Trees in front of 43-45 Dundas Street, East, will be removed and the existing boulevard surfaced with pre-mix asphalt. This is the locality where the Canadian Legion proposes opening a bus terminal.

A committee of Aldermen Allin, Armstrong and Lummiss was appointed to consider the request of the Shell Oil Company regarding a construction permit for an extension to their existing marine plant.

First Five-Sunday February Since 1880

Sunday next will be the fourth Sunday in the month, which is nothing unusual. The unusual fact, however, is that there is to be a fifth Sunday in February this year, the first time such a thing has happened since 1880. If 1900 had been a Leap Year, there would have been a five Sunday February then.

Save Power:

Chicken Hatcheries Face Considerable Losses Through Power Interruptions

That there are many different angles regarding the loss which can be expected when electrical power interruptions are necessary, it was revealed at this morning's meeting of the Retail Merchant's Association, the members of which met to discuss the current power shortage.

Merchants pointed out their loss of business through stores being open for shorter periods while the feeling of industrial workers who stand to lose as much as ten hours weekly was also brought out.

But the angle which possibly few at the meeting had considered was the problem of the chicken hatchery operators who claimed that power interruptions would seriously reduce the hatch to be expected from eggs now in their incubators.

Temperature changes during the last few days that the eggs are in the incubators are particularly serious, it was stated. Power interruptions of more than five or ten minutes are serious.

It was estimated that among the three hatcheries in the city there would now be approximately 125,000 eggs in incubators. If power interruptions continued losses might amount to as high as 25 per cent.

The importance of co-operation on the part of the householders in conserving electrical energy through turning off all lights possible and by not using electrical appliances, was stressed at the meeting. Several merchants suggested that only 50 per cent of store lights be used and in this way conserve power.

The meeting passed a recommendation concerning opening and closing hours which was to be forwarded to a meeting this afternoon between the merchants and industrialists.

Community Centre At Paisley Burns, Loss is $35,000

Paisley, Feb. 20 (CP)—A fire was brought under control today after destroying this Bruce county village's new $35,000 War Memorial Community Centre and gutting a nearby building. At the height of the blaze four fire brigades, from Walkerton, Chesley, Port Elgin and Paisley, fought the flames. The Walkerton and Chesley brigades returned home, leaving the other two brigades to complete the task of extinguishing the flames. Cause of the fire, which broke out in a dressing room in the Community Centre at 10.45 p.m. Thursday, is unknown.

The Community Centre had been opened only last Saturday. It was constructed from an air force hut moved from Port Albert and was to have been bricked in.

Majority Favored Decisions

"The decisions and recommendations on the large number of problems noted in this report are straight forward expressions of the judgment held by the overwhelming majority of the members of the right and effective course to follow.

"The small minority holding opposing views on certain important problems, however, have presented to the organization a new question of disturbing character through their non-participation in carrying out the recommendations with which these members have disagreed."

This was the first hint from a top American official that the United States regards the attitude of the Soviet bloc as a problem which may require decisive action by the U.N. The report provided no indication as to what form of action might be sought.

JACK KEARY —
A Lens Inspector in the AO Belleville Plant

How would you like to live in a world ruled by Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito? The answer is obviously no. For then you'd be a slave, ruled by a gun, laboring hopelessly for a cruel dictatorship. Instead, you're a free citizen of Canada .. free to work and enjoy life as you see fit.

WHY?

Simply because men like Jack Keary (above) fought and died to preserve your liberty. That's why American Optical Company Canada Limited considers it a privilege and a duty to employ war veterans .. in fact, they comprise nearly 20 per cent of our entire personnel.

Jack Keary's war record is particularly notable. As a member of the Army, he served on six fronts: Sicily, Italy, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. Now he is one of our skilled lens inspectors, the men who stand guard over the quality of AO ophthalmic lenses.

When these fine lenses are prescribed to give you eye comfort and visual efficiency, you can be sure they are free of defects. Jack's keen eyes and expert knowledge are responsible for that.

Jack Keary is a member of the AO Service and Social Club, a popular employees organization. His hobbies include fishing, swimming and drawing. As a valued employee of AO he long ago proved his worth in industry—as he did in the service of his country.

'Control' of Pest

"Because they are so many, so small, and so prolific, it has never yet seemed feasible to do away with the worst of the world's insect pests," notes Manchester Guardian Weekly. "Where war on the mosquito has been more successful, it has been fought on limited fronts and with 'control' rather than eradication as the objective."

There is the fact that "recent successes in more than one continent suggest the possibility of so successfully clearing large areas of mosquitoes that a relatively simple quarantine service can take the place of further control measures."

Pioneer work in Brazil is seen of great importance as described by Dr. J. R. Busvine in "Nature" the mosquito being attacked in the larval stage and at every likely breeding site on the ground to be covered.

Some thousands of unskilled men may have to be employed, each man responsible for a large and well-mapped area with a skilled organization behind them to look for any living evidence of any failure of the larvicide and to see that any such gaps are closed.

During the war on the Upper Nile a large area was cleared of invading mosquitoes. Some of the native breeds seem to have survived. Results in Brazil were good, one of the more dangerous species was an invader and all the insects dealt with were feeders on men and accustomed to breeding near the neighborhood of settlements.

There remains an important question to be decided whether these insects can be altogether destroyed by these means where they are native to the country and have widespread and inaccesible breeding places.

Other experiments are being carried out aiming at the clearance of the pests from Cyprus and Sardinia. "Their success would settle both these outstanding doubts," the Guardian comments.

Mosquitoes are one of the pests which have troubled man and they are known as carriers of disease. They are cosmopolitan, only a few oceanic islands, deserts and mountain tops being free from them, according to the Encyclopedia Americana. They abound in Arctic regions as Alaska and Greenland, and in the tropical swamps of Africa and South America, while at many intermediate points they are intolerable pests. There are 350 species known. They have many natural enemies, nighthawks and bats. In the aquatic stage they are preyed upon by fish, water-newts and other insects like aquatic beetles and leeches and hornets.

Foreign Words

A Russian reader of Pravda would start a war on foreign words which are being used by Russians because "lovers of things foreign" are "heartlessly polluting their native language." He levels his attack in part against literary men and says "the indiscriminate borrowing of foreign terms, especially in technical literature, has become especially intolerable . . . It is now time for us to declare war on the use of foreign words when there is no need for them."

But languages cannot keep out foreign words. This is especially true in modern days for the world is becoming more and more compact and differences of expression and of thought cause words of other tongues to be incorporated. No language has yet succeeded in keeping itself exempt from new words crossing the border.

History of other languages shows the use of tongues spoken years ago have come under influence of other languages. The English language does not hesitate to use foreign words, ultimately incorporating them if they serve a purpose. There is no doubt that modern Russian does contain words which the Pravda reader uses, which came into the Russian language generations ago from Russia's neighbors.

His efforts to keep out words will fail for this is an age when science speaks a language every nation must understand.

Growth of an Industry

"Pictures came to life at an ideal time. No other medium could have captured the shades which have flitted across the world in these highlight and shadow years. Nothing else could have so served so well for mass entertainment of civilization which was in process of doubling its population. It has turned to be the most plastic medium of conveying exact information, a powerful channel of carrying news and ideas and a useful tool in education."

So the Monthly Letter of The Royal Bank of Canada is discussing the place of the "Movies in Education and Industry."

This industry started in 1889. Edison had invented his talking machine in 1877 and ten years later he started research to provide a picture accompaniment to his phonograph. By 1888 he had a film and the next year he produced the peep-show kinetoscope. One-reel stories came in 1903. In the twenties came sound.

Today the industry, one of the major economic enterprises, whether one thinks of the bigness of production operations, costs, distribution and usefulness, or of the universality of the movies and of the insistent way they have of making themselves necessary in everyday life."

The letter points out that newsreels are records of history in the making and asks "What would we not give today for a screen glimpse of Napoleon and Wellington directing the battle of Waterloo from their hilltops? Or of the landing of Maisonneuve at Hochelaga, now Montreal, and his welcome by the Indians? Or of that first view of the Pacific by Mackenzie and his painting on the rock: 'Alexander Mackenzie from Canada by land July 22, 1793?"

Out of newsreels came informational films. Movies can be a visual textbook. It was discovered during the war that training in one particular operation or skill was speeded up on the average by 35 per cent and that retention was 53 per cent greater when movies were used, the letter states. In peacetime the movies has widened its sphere of interest.

In education movies now play no small part. Motion pictures in schools more than any other medium offer mastery of time and space and detail, it is pointed out. The movie-equipped school offers excellent opportunities for evening adult education, carrying out the lighted schoolhouse idea. From this there is but a step to community programs, service clubs, parent-teacher associations community centres are finding the movies a great help. Film libraries are increasing in number. March 1947 there were 156 libraries with an audience of 2,481,000.

Identify Foreign Animals

The mammalogists at the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology tell us they are called upon to identify animals not only native to Ontario, but from many parts of the world. One of the mose recent of these was a Guenon monkey, probably someone's pet, that had escaped and was killed by the cold weather. A native of Liberia, this monkey was found in Ontario last November. Among other exotic animals that have been brought to the Museum from time to time are a mouse opossum which likely came to Canada from South America in a banana shipment; a coypu rat—an aquatic rodent of South America — that escaped from a fur farm in Ontario (the fur of this animal is known as "nutria"; and a Jaguarundi cat, native of the tropics, that was found in North Toronto. The mammalogists at the Royal Ontario Museum must be prepared to identify, sometimes in their own backyard, mammals that do not belong to the province of Ontario or even to Canada.

Seven Russian composers have been severely censured by the central committee of the Communist Party. They are no doubt anxiously fingering what may soon be their lost chords, Hamilton Spectator remarks.

THE HUMAN RACE

We hate each other, Lord, not knowing why.
Some ancient tale has poisoned one and all.
For some wild reason millions still may die
And splendid cities into rubble fall.

We who should neighbor cannot learn the way.
We should be friends, but still we draw apart.
We quarrel over creeds and tint of clay
And never sense the spirit and the heart.

The things the Master taught us we forget.
Greed and the lust for power have made us blind.
We know that hate works havoc here, and yet
The way to peace we cannot seem to find.

Pity for selfish purpose men mistake,
On every act suspicions grievous fall.
We're even hated for the gifts we make,
And oh, the senseless folly of it all!

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why was the Constitution called Old Ironsides?

Moses Smith, a sponger on the U.S.S. Constitution at the time she defeated the Guerriere explained how the famous frigate got her nickname:

"Several shots now entered our hull. One of the largest the enemy could command struck us, but the plank was so hard it fell out and sank in the waters. This was afterwards noticed and the cry arose: 'Huzza! Her sides are made of iron! See where the shots fell out! From that circumstance, the name of the Constitution was garnished with the familiar title, Old Ironsides."

The Constitution, one of the most successful, historic and famous Navy ships ever to sail the seas, was authorized by Congress in 1794, constructed by Edmund Hart in his private shipyard at Boston, launched in 1797 and first sent to sea in 1798. Her frame was made of live oak and red cedar and her decks of pitch pine from Georgia and South Carolina. Paul Revere, the best metalsmith of his day, made the bolts, spikes, rudder-braces, blocks, dovetails, and bell, for which he received the total of $3,820.33. The anchor was cast by Jodihah Bayles at his forge in Westville, Mass., and was drawn by 10 yoke of oxen to tidewater at Dighton, whence it was taken in a sloop to Boston.

Tradition says that water instead of the customary wine was used in two vain attempts to launch the frigate. She refused to budge until Commodore James Sever baptized her with a bottle of Madeira from the cellar of a Boston merchant named Thomas Russell.

The Constitution's first active service was during the undeclared maritime war with France. Under Thomas Truxton she captured the French frigate L'Insurgente" in 1799 and defeated but failed to capture "La Vengeance" in 1800. Later the Constitution was overhauled and sheathed with copper plates to prevent her from being slowed down by barnacles and seaweed. These plates were made by Paul Revere. When "the ornament of the American navy" left Boston June 26, 1803, as the flagship of Commodore Edward Preble's squadron sailing against the Barbary pirates, her log noted: "The carpenters gave her nine cheers, which was answered by the seamen and calkers, because they had in 14 days completed coppering the ship with copper in the United States."

After the outbreak of the War of 1812 the Constitution started to sea under the command of Isaac Hull. Off the Atlantic coast she fell in with a British squadron of six ships and made her escape in one of the most dramatic and sustained chases in naval history. On August 19, 1812, the Constitution with Hull still in command, defeated the Guerriere. This was the first time a British frigate had struck to an American ship and it did much to bolster American morale. Congress voted Hull the thanks of the nation and gave the officers and crew $50,000 in prize money.

On December 12, 1812, Old Ironsides with William Bainbridge in command defeated and captured the Java off the Brazilian coast in one of the most fiercest frigate fights of the war. Bainbridge was feted at Boston and the British complimented him and his ship by issuing orders that their frigates were not to engage American 44's in single combat. In 1814 Old Ironsides with Charles Stewart in command defeated the Picton, and on Feb. 20, 1815, nearly two months after the peace treaty had been signed, she captured the Cyane and Levant, but a British squadron recaptured them later.

Although Old Ironsides remained in service in one way or another until 1897, she never did any fighting after 1815.

WHAT THE KIDS CATCH AT SCHOOL

Mother of three school children away down East asks what mothers can do (come, come, now, after all father is the one who should go to school and go a few rounds with the principal or the board of education when there is something to be done about something that shouldn't be)—what mothers can do to prevent the spread of communicable disease at school. It seems to this New England mother that mothers should be willing to go to any lengths to prevent their children from any of the disease children catch at school.

What do children catch at school? Well, occasionally they get pediculosis — infested with head lice; or perhaps scabies (pronounced sko-bi-ez) which ignorand folk call seven year itch, Danish, Spanish, Mexican, Indian Jersey, picker's or any nationality, occupation, class, color or creed other than their own; or perhaps ringworm. But these are mere annoyances and have little or nothing to do with health. Besides, these contagious (spread by actual contact) annoyances are all preventable by simple soap and water cleanliness and quickly curable by medical treatment.

The serious, sometimes maiming, sometimes fatal diseases the kids catch in school more than out of school, are the common respiratory infections — any of which may be called C-R-I in the early stage or until an exact diagnosis can be made. These letters have no other significance than Common Respiratory Infection —whatever the condition may prove to be, one calls it C-R-I by way of giving fair warning to every one who happens to approach within conversational spray range, for all of the respiratory infections, from measles to infantile paralysis, from simple coryza to cerebrospinal meningitis, are most communicable in the first hours or the first day of the illness, before the patients feels ill enough to take to bed, and before the nature of the illness becomes evident.

Remember this, stupid. Next time any blankety blanked so-and-so sneaks up on you and starts spraying you with his or her germ-laden conversational, sneeze or cough spray when he assures you it is nothing, just a little you know what the so-and-so's like to pretend their's is, three-fourths of all the illness physicians attend is directly or indirectly due to C-R-I. This is not just my idea but it is the conclusion drawn from careful surveys in various parts of the country by the United States UPublic Health Service. Of course a considerable part of the surgery done from day to day is made necessary by the complications or sequels of C-R-I—for example sinus and middle ear and mastoid operations, chest operations for empyema, pleurisy, lung abscess, tonsil operations, some appendectomies (appendicitis due to pneumococcus infection).

From a fine publication of the Los Angeles City Schools I quote some advice which parents, teachers and school board members everywhere should follow. The advice is as follows:

"Colds and infections of the nose, throat, sinuses, and bronchial tubes" — (remember, I'm just quoting this—the Superintendent of Schools does not reveal what "colds" may be if not the infections mentioned) —"cause more than fifty per cent of the absences from school. If your child has a cold, or any other contagious condition" — (well, there's a hint, at least, that a "cold" is something like scabies, acquired by personal contact) — "keep him at home and, if he has fever, call a physician. Do not send him to school to expose others and be sent back home by the nurse."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Mouth Breathing

On just one point I wish to disagree with your fine teachings about breathing. There are times when it is necessary to exhale through the nose, for instance in backward movements in water ballet figures or in a back dive. Otherwise I heartily agree that one should always breathe through the mouth when in the water.

(Coach).

Answer—I do not know why you make the exception, but there can be no question that it is a good health rule to wear a nose clip or gently plug the nostrils with lamb's wool or cotton batting (not absorbent or "medicated" cotton) before entering the water, and to breathe entirely through the mouth while in the water. One normally breathes through the mouth and nose during extraordinary physical effort, in order to get more oxygen than is normally required. During ordinary quiet breathing and during sleep one normally breathes entirely through the nose.

End of Stupidity

Thanks a lot for recommending Dr. ———. A few painless treatments and my piles, of 20 years standing, are gone. Treatments caused no discomfort and no loss of time from work. It is indeed stupid to suffer from piles—but I just didn't know there was any alternative for operation and confinement in hospital.

(N. A. E.)

Answer—On request, if you provide a stamped envelope bearing your address, I'll send the pamphlet "It is Stupid to Suffer from Piles."

Belleville Girls Correct Editor

(The Northern News Editorial)

In the midst of the noisy confusion of life in a great city, there are often moments when your mind turns with a sort of nostalgia to the peacefulness of the small town. At such moments you are apt to fall into the error, as we did in our December issue, of including in your conception of a small town any place with a population less than the one in which you live.

Our attention has been properly drawn to this error by a letter recently received by the editor. Signed by "Local Girls of the Organ Dept., Northern Electric Company, Belleville", the letter politely states that our reference to Belleville as a "small town" was just not in accordance with the facts. "Belleville", the girls point out firmly, "is not a small town but a prospering city — very much to be proud of."

Having spent the greater part of our life not many miles from the Bay of Quinte, we are able to endorse this statement one hundred per cent. Belleville is not only all that the girls say it is; it is in addition, one of Canada's most beautiful cities.

We sincerely regret having offended the girls of the organ department and, in our defence, plead that the error arose from our attempt to translate into cold print the pleasure we always feel when we visit Belleville. We also apologize for our further error in wrongly calling our photo of one of Belleville's streets "its main street".

BROTHER OF RABBI KILLED

New York, Feb. 20 — (CP) — The New York Times said today in a Jerusalem dispatch that Joshua Wohlgelertner, a brother of Chief Rabbi J. Wohlgelertner of Toronto, was killed in the Palestine fighting yesterday when a Jewish bus was fired on in Haifa.

Wohlgelertner, 42, was an American citizen. He was a former Seattle banker, the Times dispatch said, and had been educated at Yeshiva University, New York. He was the fifth United States citizen killed in the Arab-Jewish clashes since the United Nations decision Nov. 29 to partition the Holy Land.

Spanish Army Supports Franco Dictatorship

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Feb. 20 — (CP)—The army has been described as the bridge to any change of government in Spain, and so far General Francisco Franco has guarded its approaches with an iron defence.

There may be generals plotting his overthrow, ready to swing their weight behind a monarchist or right-wing regime, but if there are they wisely keep their plans to themselves. Known opponents of the regime don't last long in Spain.

The Archbishop of Toledo, Primate of the Roman Catholic Church in Spain, is a Franco appointee. During the civil war, when he was Bishop of Salamanca, his palace was used as a Franco headquarters and his statements showed where his sympathies lay. But he has been careful not to go too far.

Recently there have been a few signs of friction between church and state. Several bishops have condemned actions of the regime. Three refused to take an oath of fealty to Franco, a requirement now abolished.

Some observers say this spirit of independence may increase, now that Spanish bishops have resumed regular visits to Rome, interrupted by the war. The Vatican is not always sympathetic to Franco policies and its influence is great. Spaniards say "the Vatican is nearer to God than France"

The same observers say that France and the church missed an opportunity in not creating a parliamentary Catholic opposition party which could at least have drawn attention to excesses and mistakes of the regime, and prevented the political stagnation that now exists. The Cortes, the present parliament, is little more than a rubber stamp.

Difficult Position

But the church has to walk a difficult path. Not only does it receive the bulk of its revenue from the state, but it is continually being accused by its wealthy, right-wing lay members of being dangerously Socialist in tendency, while at the opposite extreme anti-clericals attack it for favoring the rich.

The church's lay organization, Catholic Action, was split when its leader, Martin Artajo, became Franco's foreign minister. The report is that he did it against the advice of the Primate, who objected to what amounted to a political commitment of the church's lay group.

Besides those members of Catholic Action who followed Artajo into the fold, Franco's only other political support derives from the Falange, extremist reactionary party whose roots in popular support appear to be withering rather than flourishing with the years.

But he seems secure, as long as he retains his hold on the army, a hard-hitting, well-disciplined force of 400,000, whose long, khaki great-coats can be seen flapping on almost every street-corner, along with the grey uniforms of the military-style state police.

They are the elite of Spain, draining off a large share of budgetary expenses and entitled to superior rations. However, there is some grumbling among the ranks, who accuse their N.C.O.'s and officers of selling, on the black market, food which should go to barrack tables.

Pay is poor in all ranks — only a few cents a day for the men after deductions for their food, and no allowances for dependents, since all are classed as single when called up at 20 for their two years' service.

But officers get a variety of special allowances, and cafe gossip leans to the privates' belief that the black market is a rich source of additional revenue.

At any rate, the officers have a smart, sleek look which seems to reflect the confidence of men who are in the saddle. As long as they regard Franco as the man who keeps them there, he can probably rely on their support.

MARRIAGE ENDS IN DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Feb. 19 (AP)—Martha Stephenson's marriage to film writer St. Clair McKelway has ended in divorce. Miss Stephenson, 27, former wife of actor Victor Mature and widow of bandleader Hal Kemp, obtained an interlocutory decree yesterday on grounds of cruelty. She and McKelway were married in 1946.

DANCING MASTER HELD

Toronto, Feb. 19 —(CP)— Police arrested dancing instructor Frank A. Yatta, 19, last night as he demonstrated modern dance steps to a girl student at a downtown dancing academy. He faces four charges of uttering worthless cheques and one of forgery.

Double Population In Fifteen Years Says Gardiner

Toronto, Feb. 19 — (CP) — If Canadians "all get busy and boost" the Dominion can double its present population of some 12,000,000 in 15 years, Agriculture Minister Gardiner said today.

In an address prepared for delivery to the Empire Club of Toronto, Mr. Gardiner said that natural increase would account for 4,500,000 and "the other 7,500,000 would come to us."

"Churchill said about two years ago that Britain could stand a reduction of 7,000,000 people. If we received our share of them and the others from Europe and the United States we would simply be taking our part in promoting a migration of European people and ideals which has been going on since Columbus discovered America . . ."

He urged that "we should set ourselves the task of increasing our population by at least 500,000 a year immediately with an objective of reaching 1,000,000 a year inside 10 years."

He reviewed possible development aimed at keeping Canadians from migrating to the United States. He cited development of northern mineral, timber and waterpower resources; of commercial fishing on inland lakes; of a national highways system.

Carry Dynamite Dust In Boots, Foiled in Plans

Fairburn, Ga., Feb. 19 (AP)—Nine prisoners were foiled in an attempt to blast their way out of a prison here with dynamite dust smuggled in their shoes, Warden M. F. Tyree reported last night.

One prisoner was wounded by gunfire in the escape attempt made Wednesday morning.

The explosion in a concrete barracks housing about 100 (Negro) prisoners blew out 10 windows, shook the prison courtyard and hurled fragments of the door 150 feet.

The prisoners had been working in a stone quarry, Tyree said, and he believed they had shaken the dynamite dust into their shoes. The dust passed as dirt upon inspection.

One of the men was believed to have smuggled the dynamite cap into the barracks in his mouth.

Wants Permanent Committee

In the Commons' Throne Speech debate, Mr. White expressed regret that the government had not yet established the House Veterans Committee and suggested that a permanent standing committee be set up. Proposed increases in Veterans' allowances could not go into effect until the committee studied them.

He urged that the government introduce legislation which would provide that the pensions of veterans of the First World War could not be reduced and that they should increase as the veterans grow older.

He felt the recent pension increases announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King were "totally inadequate."

Mr. White also felt that the policy now paying pension on basis of rank should be abandoned immediately.

Mr. Green, as well, protested that the proposed increases in Veterans' allowances were insufficient and said the advance extended to married veterans attending university should be given to single students.

Norman Jaques (SC-Wetaskiwin) expressed disapproval of Canadian participation in any armed force which the United Nations decides to send to Palestine. Any such force must include the "Red Army" and once such an army landed in Palestine he wondered how it could be moved out of that territory.

Urges Inflation Curbed

Mr. MacDonnell urged that "temperate, gradual steps" be taken to curb the current inflation in Canada and said that unless such measures were taken by government, the current "boom" in the country would turn into a "bust." Interest rates on money should be allowed to rise to discourage borrowing and expansion.

Mr. Stewart dealt with freight rates to Portland, Me., and said that if freight rates were lower on shipments to the United States ports, it was logical that exporters would take advantage of those tariffs. Otherwise, Canadian taxpayers would be subsidizing Canadian ports.

Mr. Townley-Smith protested against the high cost of gasoline and oil to Western farmers and said steps should be taken to boost the prices paid to farmers for their products to bring them into line with the prices they paid for the things they had to buy.

Mr. Daniel said the government should either extend further credit to the United Kingdom or cut exports to the U.K. and flood the domestic market bringing a general decline in domestic agricultural prices. Efforts should be made to sell Canadian tobacco to Britain.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma ate her breakfist with her hat on, on account of wanting to ride downtown with pop, and I started to get my cap from the hall rack to go to school, only nothing was there but ma's bag and pop's hat, and I thawt, Heck, I put it here, where did it get to?

And I started to hunt for it without finding it, thinking, Heck, I know it was on that hall rack, but nobody will beleeve me, so the more I say so, the less simpathy I'll get.

Giving me a idea, and I took pop's hat and ma's bag and put them in the living room on one end of the sofa, almost behind the cushions but not quite, just to prove I wasn't the only one that ever had to look for things, and I said, hay ma, did you see my cap?

Your cap, your cap, the same old story, ma said, and pop said, Why doesn't he tie it on his head, for Peet sake?

William, where's my bag? ma said. I put it on the hall rack next to your hat so I'd remember exactly where it was, so you wouldn't have to wait for me, she said, and pop said, That's a likely story. If that's where you put it, that's where it would be and beleeve me I'm not going to wait for you. Say, speeking of my hat, where the dooce is it? he said.

How should I know? ma said. It was on the hall rack when I came downstairs, she said, and pop said, I know it was, but you stuck it somewhere with your bag for some complicated reason, you just said so.

I said nuthing of the kind for land sakes, ma said. Oh dear, if I really did anything of the kind, I must of been off in another werld in dreamland, she said.

Which just then I stopped looking for my cap on account of remembering where I left it, being in Shorty Judge's house, and I quick told ma and pop where their bag and hat was and ran out the frunt door before they had time to wonder why.

Sunday Suits

Improved social services, he said, are responsible for a sharp decrease in the number of poor-class clients. These have been replaced largely by black-coated workers and middle-class families with fixed incomes who regularly do business with the pawnbroker.

Whereas 20 years ago, more than 2,000 "uncles" sported the sign of the three golden balls in London streets, today there are fewer than 800 pawnbrokers in London — and only 1,500 in the whole of the British Isles.

Value Higher

But while the volume of goods pawned is down, the value of goods pawned is up. Today "uncle" will lend you £1 ($4) on an article that before the war would have been worth no more than 5s ($1.25.)

The would-be pawnbroker in Britain must first find someone to testify to his good character. He must buy a licence costing £7 10s. And he is expected to have at least £5,000 behind him as a "cushion" against slack periods.

On an average eight out of every 10 pledges are redeemed. The rest are sold at special auction sales — that is if their value exceeds 10s. Under 10s they become the property of the pawnbroker.

Red Cross Sunday Set for Feb. 29th

Toronto, Feb. 20 — Arthur L. Bishop, chairman of the national executive committee, Canadian Red Cross, announced today that February 29 has been set aside as Red Cross Sunday.

Observance of this special day in churches throughout Canada precedes the Red Cross National Appeal for funds which opens Monday, March 1. Mention of the Appeal will also be made in the churches on Sundays March 7 and 14. Red Cross Branches in many communities throughout Canada are planning additional functions to give the day special significance.

"This practice," said Mr. Bishop, "is a tradition among clergymen of all faiths to give spiritual meaning to the Red Cross Appeal."

Bride Elect Honored By Pre-Nuptial Presentations

On Tuesday afternoon, Miss Ruth McNary, Trent Road, a bride-elect of this week, was the guest of honor at a pre-nuptial party in the home of her cousin, Mrs. Robert Maxwell, of Stockdale, when twenty girl cousins from the surrounding district were present for a shower of miscellaneous gifts.

Mrs. Lyle Bryant read an address, and Miss McNary was presented with beautiful and useful household articles, for which she expressed sincere gratitude. Following the "shower" entertainment was provided with readings by Mrs. Albert Caskey, and by Mrs. Arthur Walt, while Mrs. Leslie Frost contributed piano music during the afternoon, and "tea" was served by the hostess.

On Wednesday at the "Home of the Deacon Shirt" on Dundas St., girls of the "Shirt Line and Sportswear Department", with some other associates, staged a surprise for Miss McNary, when Mrs. Caton and Miss Irene Griffiths made the presentation of an electric sandwich grill, for which she thanked her co-workers. In the evening of the same day, Miss McNary entertained these friends at her home, and Mrs. McNary served delicious refreshments.

Thursday afternoon, a quartet of Avondale ladies called on Miss McNary in her home, when Mrs. Donaldson and Mrs. Robson, on behalf of the Avondale community, presented her with a walnut coffee table, to which she graciously responded.

Talks on Administration and Control Of Hospital Heard at Aux. Meeting

The February meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held in the Nurses' Residence Tuesday afternoon with an unusually large attendance including a number of new members representing various Women's organizations throughout the city.

Mrs. Arthur Simpson, convener of the Sewing group, reported that eighteen covers for icebag collars had been completed since the January meeting, five of which had been made by Mrs. Horace Wright.

Mrs. Wray, convener of the committee, gave a report of the Fashion Show to be held in March.

Miss Johnston, Director of Nursing, reported that a series of talks on Schools for Nursing would be broadcast over the local radio station for six or eight weeks commencing February 25th at 3 o'clock. The object of these talks is to interest more girls in the nursing profession.

It was also decided to invite Mr. J. C. Decker, publicity agent, for the Blue Cross, to bring his film and speak at a later date. The Blue Cross is a plan for group hospitalization insurance and is affiliated with the Ontario Hospital Association.

President of Board Speaks

Mr. J. H. Legate, Chairman of the Hospital Board of Governors, was introduced by the President, Mrs. Gilbert Scott.

Mr. Legate gave an interesting talk on the work and responsibilities of the Board of Governors, the officers of which are:

Chairman — J. H. Legate;
Vice Chairman — Dr. A. C. Locke;
Chairman Finance Committee—C. L. Jewell;
Chairman Property Committee—L. E. McLean;
Chairman Supervision Committee—B. Lattimer;
Chairman Public Relations Committee—O. Butler.

He stated that in 1947, 6,582 patients had been admitted to the Belleville Hospital, of which about 2,500 were from the city itself. In addition to this 6,582, there were 1,572 new-born infants.

He thanked the members of the Auxiliary for the many generous gifts and other assistance they had given the Hospital. He stated that the present standard figure for a Hospital bed is $10,000 and the Hospital can accommodate about 200 patients, or in other words a two-million dollar Institution, which has been privately owned and operated by the Women's Christian Association.

Mr. Legate gave the W. C. A. a great deal of credit for the wonderful work they had accomplished during the past years.

There are between 175 and 200 patients at all times and it averages at least one person per patient to properly operate the Hospital.

It is expected that before long there will be other accommodation for convalescent and chronic patients so the Hospital will have more room for the acute cases.

The Inspector of Hospitals gives the hospital an excellent report — that there is no better for its size in Ontario.

Administrator's Dept.

Mr. Englestad, the administrator was next introduced by Mrs. Scott. He had mimeographed charts of the administrative setup, which he gave to each member of the group.

Referring to this chart, he commenced with the present owners, the W.C.A., who appoint the Board of Governors. . .two each from the county, city, W.C.A., and Medical Association, the Health Officer and six representative citizens.

This Board appoints the administrator, who is directly responsible to it. He has control of the functioning of all the hospital activities.

The departments of the hospital are divided into two main groups. . .those concerned with the professional care of the patients and those concerned with the business management and maintenance.

The school for nursing is under the charge of Miss Johnstone, director of Nursing, who is director of the Nursing Department and principal of the Training School.

There is also an Advisory Committee, of which Dr. Bert Howard is chairman. This committee acts in an advisory capacity to the Board of Governors regarding the educational policy of the nursing school.

Responsible For Patients Care

The director of nursing appoints the instructors for the school and is responsible for the nursing care of the patients. She appoints the supervising nurses for each ward and they in turn are responsible for the proper management of that ward.

The other departments concerned with the professional care of the patients are the clinical laboratory, the X-ray, the pharmacy and dietetic department.

The business management is under the direction of a business manager, who is also responsible for the admitting office, telephone exchange and medical record department.

So this business of running a hospital is much more complicated than those on the outside probably realize.

Co-operation among all the departments and individuals is very necessary to have an efficient smooth running hospital.

Mrs. Geo. Stobie expressed the appreciation of all present for these very interesting and instructive address.

Canadian Women To Show Less Leg This Spring

Toronto, Feb. 20, (CP)—Line up for the Easter parade gals—it's not far off according to style setters who anxiously await the pipings of half-awakened Spring to plunge women into a world of frothy, pastel frills.

A Canadian Press survey shows women across the Dominion will show even less leg than last season, reduce their waistlines to vanishing proportions and fit their figures into one of the popular silhouettes.

Many department stores are guarding their Spring fashion secrets like invasion plans, but enough slipped out to let women know this Spring will harken back to the age when women actually were "the weaker sex".

The "new look' still is out in front in Nova Scotia where the skirts are moving closer to the pavements every minute. The shoulder bare shepherd neckline, popular last season, is expected to make a return-hit for both Spring and Summer feather and flower bedecked hats come in "ice cream" shades of pastel blue, pink and beige.

Montreal fashion experts say the "new look" is being modified to fit Canadian women's figures with midcalf skirts not as full as Winter predictions. Tall girls still are grabbing the swirl skirt while the short gal prefers straighter lines, but both approve of the wasp-waist stays. Navy blue, varied with pastels is the color story for Spring.

Gentle Shades Used

Ottawa women have shown no rush to buy out the supply of Spring styles, but from the crowds around the dress-goods and pattern counters, it would seem they are trying to save a little money by turning out their own "new look".

One Toronto department store predicts that fashion's new personality will be "sweetly nostalgic, warmly romantic and delicately ladylike". This result is to be achieved through ruffled parasols, ultra-feminine petticoats and gentle shades of pink and violet.

Three popular silhouettes are "The Ball", with rib-fitting jacket and flared skirt, 'The Column', a pencil-slim effect, and "The Triangle', with fullness concentrated in the back. Street lengths will be between 13 and 10 inches from the floor while formal attire swings around the ankle or instep. Toronto fashion experts say black is always smart but the only vivid shade which will rival pastel is dynamic red.

Enthusiasm for Spring styles on the Prairies is slightly hindered by continued cold weather, but the fashion-wise say there's no danger of the long look disappearing. Navy tops the color pageant.

Montreal and Toronto designers seem to have lured British Columbia women away from the California styles they had adopted until import restrictions were imposed. At two recent shows, Vancouver women were delighted with Eastern Canada's suggestion of padded hips, lifted busts and tightened waistlines.

Fashion Flashes

IN LINE with the successes of the fur-trimmed winter suit is a handsome collection of fur-trimmed suits for Spring. Shawl collars in fluffy fox tinted to tone in such shades as pale pink, lemon, azure, navy blue and pearl gray give a new look to the Spring suit. Jackets are molded, some with fur-edged capelet collars; skirts are softly full.

THE SWING is to the right in many of the best mid-season hats. Black taffeta, striped all over in a curve-to-the-right line in very narrow black velvet, is used for the big, dashingly curved brim of a handsome hat that comes to a low point at the right side. The crown is of plain black velvet.

NO MATTER what the fashion of the moment, the appeal of the well-handled shirtwaist frock in polka-dotted fabric is perennial. Navy blue thin silk crepe, finely dotted in white, is used for a pretty shirtwaist frock detailed with white waffle pique collar finishing in a flowing self-bow and cuffs to match. Tailored belt is of tucked red calfskin.

REFRESHING are the new prints now moving into the shops. Big white Easter lilies with green leaves, on black or gray silk crepe, makes a handsome fabric for a dress that has a deep V neckline with a semi-cowl drape, soft shoulders and long, tight sleeves. Skirt has cowl drape either side of the front.

MANIPULATION marks many of the new solid tone frocks. Navy rayon heavy sheer makes a fine frock, the fabric with pin-tucks o nthe bodice that taper to the waist and fan out over the full skirt. High, round waistline with soft shoulders and brief sleeves marked by a row of Button-like padded fabric.

AS A CHANGE from the ubiquitous fur jacket for Spring, women are ordering fur capes. Black caracul makes a handsome little cape which extends from square shoulders into a series of nine scallops around the full hem.

BRITISH EMIGRANTS FOR NEW WORLD

London, Feb. 20 — (CP) — A Board of Trade return showed that 66,000 British emigrants travelling by sea left for Canada and Newfoundland in 1946 and 14,766 in the first nine months of 1947.

The 1946 emigrants were mainly service men's dependents, the largest single group being women of more than 17 years, a total of 32,000.

New Members Added Quarter Century Club Of loro R. and S. Company

ora (Special) — Six new s were added to the mem- of the Deloro "Quarter Club" at the third annual that association held in all on Tuesday evening. Hector Boudreau, War- harles Chrysler, Thomas Cousins, Lionel Keith d, Harry Ross Haacke and James Herbert Wright.

The dinner served by Mrs. H. J. Neath and the staff of the Royal Hotel in Marmora, was attended by members and their wives, numbering fifty. J. Barry O'Brien, vice president of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited, was chairman for the occasion.

He was supported by Lt. Col. A. V. Yates general manager of the company.

Mr. O'Brien referred to the honor which he felt in being asked to preside at the gathering. By his attendance, he said, he was representing his father, John Ambrose O'Brien, and his grandfather, the late Michael John O'Brien, who were "Quarter Century Club" members. Although he had been active in the interests of the company for only about six years, he looked forward to the day when he too, might have his membership in the club. He tendered the regrets of his brother, the president, for his inability to be present; and extended the best wishes of the company for the welfare of the club. He then presented the gift of a silver membership pin, a certificate of membership and a cheque for twenty-five dollars to each new member.

Each Replied Briefly

Each recipient of the five present made appreciative speeches following the presentation and L. K. Crawford, on behalf of the 1948 graduates, presented Mrs. A. V. Yates with roses and her husband with a lighter, out of respect for their courtesy on this annual occasion. Circumstances prevented Hector Boudreau from attending. Mr. Yates took opportunity to comment upon the membership roll. He referred to changes on the active list now standing at twenty-eight members and the addition of the name of Bartholomew Gaffney to the list of deceased members in 1947, bringing that number to ten, and leaving five on the retired list.

Two other members, Charles Edmund Brown and Arthur Ernest England, are resident in England. He also observed that nine on the present active list were veterans of the First World War. George Dennis, of Campbellford, senior member of those on the retired list, who is eighty-five years of age, was asked by Mr. Yates to say a few words. Mr Dennis, in a neat speech delivered in a clear tone, spoke appreciatively of the company's treatment of himself upon his retirement and his pleasure in being a member of the club.

Splendid Entertainment

The entertainment of the evening followed; under the direction of Gus Mauro, who contributed accordian solos, the following Toronto artists contributed the program, Michael Scott, singer, impersonator and master of ceremonies; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lemen in ballroom and tap dancing; George Laidlaw, magician; and Ernie Barnes, pianist.

A film depicting the distribution of Christmas parcels at the Shirley plant in England, the gift of Deloro staff and employees proved interesting. As the gathering dispersed the ladies were each given a rose out of the number decorating the tables.

Prior to the dinner all assembled for an hour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Yates to receive of their hospitality and to fraternize with an opportunity afforded them to meet Mr. O'Brien, whom the majority were meeting for the first time. If nothing goes amiss eleven new members will be welcomed at the 1949 gathering.

BIG INDIAN INDUSTRY

Next to cotton and jute, iron ranks highest among India's industries.

Increased Bread Prices Inquiry Will be Opened

Ottawa, Feb, 20 (CP)— A full scale inquiry into increased bread prices will open today before the 16-member Commons Price Committee as it nears the end of two weeks' work.

Representatives of Loblaws Groceterias, General Bakers and Dominion Stores are ready to appear as witnesses.

The preliminary investigation into prices of fruits and vegetables was concluded yesterday with testimony from representatives of Toronto wholesalers who maintained that high wholesale profits in citrus fruits were not out of line considering losses on other produce and short supply.

But the spotlight now falls on the baking industry and the inquiry will likely continue for a week or more. At a later date, the fruit and vegetable merchants will be recalled for completion of that probe.

George Reynolds, secretary of the Toronto Wholesale Fruit and Produce Merchants Association, was the witness yesterday, following two representatives of the retailers who had charged that the wholesalers were profiteering, especially in citrus fruits.

The wholesalers' representative admitted there had been "substantial profits" in citrus fruits but said wholesalers were selling British Columbia apples, Texas cabbage and New Brunswick potatoes at a loss.

He told the committee that Ontario vegetable producers have sharply increased their prices in recent months and produced a batch of invoices of transactions to background his statement.

Mr. Reynolds hastened to emphasize, however, that he did not want the committee to think that the growers are profiteering. They are entitled to what the market affords them, he said.

H said profits on some produce might come close to compensation of those selling at a loss, but of this he was uncertain.

IF THEY ARE NOT SAVED OUR WORLD IS LOST

What hope is there for those millions of little ones in ruined lands today who are starving, ragged, ignorant — if not dying? And what hope is there for the future of our world if they are not helped? All the opportunities offered OUR children will mean nothing if those others grow up with sickly bodies and embittered minds — for the future of our children is bound up with theirs. They MUST be helped. When we help them, we help our own. The Canadian Appeal for Children offers all Canadians the opportunity to share in meeting their desperate needs.

YOUR HELP IS NEEDED — NOW. Your donation will be received at any BANK. Since you may not be canvassed, don't let failure to act be on your conscience—turn your sympathy and good wishes into a tangible contribution — go to your bank NOW and GIVE.

"NERVES" She Called It

Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves", she thought—but it was her kidneys—the filters of her blood—that needed attention. She used Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, backache, headache, lack of energy disappeared. Dodd's Kidney Pills contain essential oils and medicinal ingredients that act directly upon the kidneys—and help restore their normal action. 144

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The system to rave o'er has most in its favor. It avoids all futile gestures. It wastes no bidding words unnecessarily. The most good is had out of every word in the bidding vocabulary.

An opening of two in a suit says: "Let's not stop short of a game. So, I am not concerned about making a game. What I want to know is if we have enough for a slam. Signal me whether we have or not."

There may be a chance for slam if responder has a sure trick. With no sure, his first reply is two no-trump. Thus, any other bid in answer guarantees a sure trick of some kind.

We are talking about this pair:

SOUTH
♥A 10
♣A K Q 8 7 6 4

♠8 7 4 3 2
♥K Q
♣9 5 3 2

The bidding went like this:

South	North
2 C	3 C
5 NT	6 D
7 C	Pass

When north did not respond at once with no-trump, he said he had a sure trick of some kind. South knew it could not be an ace. So, it must be K Q in some red suit.

On them south hoped to dump his two red losers. If north has another card in the same suit as his king and queen, grand slam is a cinch. This prompted the bid of seven clubs.

Five no-trump is the convention signal for asking partner how many kings he holds. Six diamonds in reply is the conventional signal for showing only one king.

West led diamond jack and the 13 tricks were brought in. But not by sluffing both south small reds on the north king-queen suit. When dummy hand spread it revealed the duplication in hearts.

The best of your surmises are subject to surprises.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 20 —(AP)— Because he can't get back to Broadway, actor Wendell Corey is bringing the theatre to himself — and in an unusual way.

Corey plans to buy a ferry boat in San Francisco, have it towed to San Diego and convert it into a showboat. The idea sounds mildly fantastic, but he assures that his brother Milton is now in San Francisco, negotiating for the vessel. And Wendell says he has assurances that San Diego is ripe for more legitimate theatre.

Corey will have to sneak time from his screen jobs, since he is one of the brightest new star prospects.

Cheating Husbands

Maureen O'Hara intends to visit Eire this summer, whether or not "The Quiet Man" is filmed there. So far, the picture is still on. It will star Maureen, John Wayne and Victor McLaglen. John Ford's "The Family," which was to feature Maureen, Wayne and Ethel Barrymore, has been called off because it's too expensive . . .

Ticklish topics are due for more realistic treatment in future movies. "The Judge's Wife" tackles mercy killings, and "The Pitfall" deals with cheating husbands. Both had skirmishes with the Johnston office . . .

New Releases

Gloria Grahame, who ranks with Angela Lansbury as one of the youngest gals ever to get an academy nomination, sings "Paradise" in her new film, "The Long Denial." As I watched her sing the number, it made me think that she is the right actress to inherit the mantle of the person who introduced the song—Jean Harlow . . .

Paramount is planning a hurry-up release of "Hazard," with MacDonald Carey and Paulette Goddard. Reason: the studio wants more build-up for Carey, who also stars with Betty Hutton in the blue-chip production, "Dream Girl."

Odds and Ends

Claude Rains did a frenzied pulpit scene in "Abigail, Dear Heart." So convincing was his frenzy that the whole script was changed, and he winds up insane in the end of the picture . . .

Picton

Eyes Injured By Disinfectant

Picton—Rodney Vader of the village of Bloomfield, was admitted to hospital at Belleville suffering from severe burns to the eyes, resulting from a mixture of disinfectant, including lye, getting into them. Mr. Vader had been spraying a chicken brooder house and looked upward to inspect the work. As he did so, some of the disinfectant fell into his eyes. Though the results are very painful, it is not expected that the vision will be impared after recovery.

Falls From Car

Falling from the top of a railway box car, Robert Irvine was severely injured yesterday. He was admitted to Prince Edward County hospital and X-rays showed that he suffered severe injury to the spine. Mr. Irvine, employed by the C.N.R. was on top of the box car repairing brakes, when he lost his balance, and was forced to jump to the ground, a distance of at least twelve feet. He was severely shaken up as well as suffering the spinal injury. Dr. Allison rendered first aid and removed the injured man to hospital where he is resting comfortably.

Used 20 Years

An electric light bulb which has been used for the past 20 years is still being used by W. H. Tripp of Bloomfield. Mr. Tripp stated that it was in the house when he moved there. The bulb has a brownish tinge in the glass and is not round like present day bulbs, but shaped like a large-sized radio tube, with a sharp point on the end. There are just two loops of wire inside the bulb.

No Power Cut-Offs

So far, there has not been any cutoff in power in Picton. Attempts are being made to avoid this by having consumers voluntarily reduce the amount used. Members of the Public Utilities Commission canvassed merchants, seeking their co-operation and an attempt is being made to reduce consumption by fifty percent in stores. Most places have turned out half their store lights and there are no window lights at any time. While the co-operation has been very good, it still remains to be seen if the reduction is sufficient. The meter will be read tomorrow and if the reduction is not at least ten percent, the Commission has warned that there will be hour cutoffs in the mornings and afternoons.

One of the things feared if rural hydro, is cut off is the loss that will be experienced by chick hatcheries and those with incubators, as an hour's loss of power would ruin the eggs.

Arrange For Trips

At the annual meeting of Prince Edward County Holstein Breeders' Club, plans were made for a bus trip for members to the Experimental Farm at Ottawa and the Kemptville Agricultural School. This will be during June. A banquet was also planned along with a twilight barn meeting. Committees were named to arrange these events. The Club will support the Calf Club that is being sponsored in connection with Picton Fair.

Oscar Parks of Bloomfield was elected president; Donald Spencer, Ameliasburg, vice president and F. J. Webster, secretary treasurer.

Marks 70th Birthday

Chief of Police Bert Biddle on Wednesday marked his seventieth birthday. To mark the occasion, members of the police force and county officials gave a party for him at the County Building. It also marked the chief's thirtieth year in that office. As a token of good wishes, Major G. T. Walmsley, K.C., made the presentation of a barometer, and offered felicitations. Later, refreshments were served including a birthday cake with 70 candles.

Chief Biddle is still on the job, enjoying perfect health and is held in high esteem by all townspeople.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By EDGAR SIMON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 20 — (CP) —
Keep junior away from the rink
maw.
Protect him from Bourgeois strife.
The Soviet columnists think,
maw,
The puck game is not a good life.

They aren't dishing out many laughs in the Moscow papers these days, but Pravda provided a few chuckles last week when its intrepid sports columnist undertook to tell the faithful of the superiority of the local brand of ice hockey over the Canadian product, which apparently is making insidious inroads into the Russian sport picture.

The Russian game, known as hockey-bendi, is played on a larger ice surface, and resembles a type of glacial football. Canada's hockey, says Pravda, is "unusually rough, typical of the Bourgeois west," and the smaller rink "does not come from a good life."

The Moscow blast caused little excitement — far less, for example, than arose when Russian musical experts imposed match penalties on a couple of guys called Shostakovich and Prokofieff for turning out subversive symphonies and capitalistic concertos. Bill (Owen Sound Sun-Times) Dane saw the hockey yarn as an improvement in east-west relations.

Bill finds it gratifying that the Russians find so little fault with the western bloc that they have time to pick holes in Canada's national sport.

"If the Russians don't want ice hockey, Canadian style, it will be their loss and not ours," he adds, noting that there haven't been any demands for introduction of hockey-bendi over here.

Sour Note from Kingston

When Conn Smythe hailed his boy Jimmy Thomson as Toronto Maple Leafs' greatest defenceman in history, the Leaf manager drew scant enthusiasm from at least one expert.

Mike (Kingston Whig - Standard) Rodden, who has seen quite a lot of defencemen come and go, dismissed the Winnipeg youngster as just another clutch-artist.

Mike shudders to think what would have happened if James had tried his tactics on such Olympians as Sprague Cleghorn and Billy Coutu.

Mike recalls that a Toronto defenceman tried to clutch Cleghorn one night and had a stick bent over his skull. Cleghorn explained that he didn't approve of the manoeuvre and wanted to be sure it didn't happen again. As far as Mike remembers, it didn't.

Three-Man Rink Will Represent Manitoba in Spiel

(By The Canadian Press)

A three-man rink skipped by George Sangster of the Winnipeg Granite Club last night added the Manitoba curling championship to the grand aggregate title the rink won earlier at the Diamond Jubilee bonspiel. The rink's personnel included George and his brother Bill, and Bill Petrie.

The fourth member, Reg Anderson, was ineligible under Manitoba Curling Association rules to play in the provincial championship series since he is a regular member of a club other than the Granite, which the rink represents.

The association will nominate a fourth player to round out the rink for the Dominion playoffs at Calgary early in March.

Mrs. B. D. Crownishield, Palm Beach, Fla., last night was awarded th annual trophy of the Rod and Gun Editors Association of New York, presented in recognition of the year's outstanding contribution to the sport of angling.

The award was made in recognition of Mrs. Crownishield's prowess in catching an 882-pound tuna off Wedgeport, N.S., last September.

Thirty thousand spectators stormed the gates of Bislet Stadium in Oslo, Norway, yesterday to see an international ice extravaganza, including special appearances by Barbara Ann Scott of Ottawa and Eileen Seigh of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Spectators compared Barbara Ann, who recently captured the Olympic world and European figure-skating championships, to their own former champion Sonia Henie and found her impressive in technique but somewhat lacking in color.

Manager Tommy Thomas of Baltimore Orioles of the International-baseball league last night joined the cry that baseball's stars are asking too much pay. He said that most club pilots, including himself, are being asked for "fabulous" salaries that are beyond the club's means.

Canada's R. C. A. F. Flyers, Olympic hockey title holders, last night played to a 3-3 draw with Czechoslovakia, runners-up in the Olympics. The two teams also played to a deadlock in their Olympic meeting but the Flyers took the title on a better goal average.

Barbara Ann Scott's Olympic, world and European gold medals, proof of her prowess in the figure-skating world today are en route to Ottawa where they are expected during the weekend.

Gil Dodds, mile champion, whose record-smashing campaign was halted by mumps, was released from hospital yesterday after an 11-day confinement. Dodds plans an early return to his home at Wheaton, Ill., where he will rest up before resuming training for an Olympic berth.

Beau Jack Meets Terry Young In Real Tough Fight

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Beau Jack, twice holder of the lightweight boxing crown, (New York version) goes after his fourth title bout tonight in Madison Square Garden.

It's been a year, minus a day, since Jack last fought in New York. And those who saw him knocked out that night by Tony Janiro thought he would never be back.

Jack started again slowly, whipping four so-so opponents. Then he kayoed Johnny Bratton in Chicago Jan. 23 with a blow that broke Bratton's jaw, and Bratton is considered a pretty good fighter.

Now it's the Garden again. Tonight's winner has been promised a lightweight title engagement with Ike Williams come April or May.

The Beau is a 5 to 11 favorite to win his sixth straight.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

Pittsburgh: Mimmie Adragna, 127, Pittsburgh, and Lee Bohles, 126, Cleveland, drew (10).

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

The old hockey cauldron is still a-boil in these yere parts. No sooner had the bubbles subsided, or have they, after the Senior "B" soup had simmered down to ordinary stock, than up comes the peppy Juniors and they heave some paprika into the kettle.

Maitre d'Hotel Cook has his Rockets, (they're thinking of changing their names to "Jets" after the manner in which they hog-tied the Vics here Wednesday pip-emma) climbing the hockey heights. The blue-and-gold sweatered younkers who weren't given a chance against the powerful (?) Vics at the beginning of the season, have wriggled out from under and have proven themselves to be as good as the vaunted foemen from the Limestone village. "Such rosy dreams and what a climax."

And what, perchance, is worrying the Vics mentors and sundry others down that way, is that the underdog Rockets may prove themselves better in this chips-down money series, and go on into the Junior "B" playdowns. Which would be more or less disastrous for the "International Hall of Fame" hamlet. Eh, wot?

In any event, the masterminds of both teams, at the time of writing, it may be decided before the compositors get this copy, are writhing in argumentative antics over where the fifth game is to be played, and not so much when.

Kingston claims that the fifth and deciding game should be played in their balliwick because they "won the group title." The Belles say the schedule was never completed, which is right, so howinell can anybody win it? They are willing to settle for a home-and-home series with goals to count to settle the issue, but apparently the handwriting on the boards may be too plain, and Kingston screams "no soap."

Both managements appear to be adamant on the question and thus far no agreement has been reached. In any event the winners of the series will meet the winners of the Lindsay-Oshawa and Peterborough-Toronto squads which are now in play-off threes and won't be ready to declare a district winner for some time. This was mainly the reason the Belleville management suggested the home-and-home series, as it means a long lay-off for some-body.

Years ago, the village of Wellington boasted a fairly good hockey squad, one that made a name for itself in county hockey circles. Nearly always a championship bridesmaid, but never a bride in the titular series, the lakeside village lads nevertheless had a sturdy team of battlers who always gave a good account of themselves. Now they are relegated to the ranks of the has-beens, the most of them have cue-ball pates, and store teeth, children and grandchildren, and some of them the same model "T's" that snorted and backfired, but get there just the same.

Now, they tell me, the old boys are going to grease their crutches, dig out their ancient gear, (those mail-order catalogue shin-pads must be pretty yellow by now), forget their gout, take a few snorts of old cider spiked with essence of rhubarb and once more attempt to sashay up and down the ice-lanes against younger and more agile opposition. And a lot of 'em will be on the receiving end of body checks dished up by their sons' sons.

And they're going to do it for sweet charity, and a worthy cause at that. For the athletic forum over in the lakeside village is staging a hockey joust next Monday gloaming between these hockey Rip Vans of two decades ago, and the comparative jet-propelled knowledge knibblers of the local high school.

Yep, hey're doing it to help the unfortunate kiddies in Europe whose hockey rinks are rubble-piles, whose baseball bats are pieces of splintered woodwork, and whose life is one of despair, hopeless and confused.

And the majority of the old boys will turn out. There'll be "Beef" MacDonald, sparsely-thatched defence giant, whose poll must be entirely bereft of upholstery by this time; "Flat-head" Gibson, Charley (The Milestone Flash) Tice; Willie (The Evansville Fury) Noble; Frank Brimley; Tommy Steen, George Noble, Jakie (Take Mine Straight) Steen, and many others, not forgetting another Hairless Joe whose name is better left out of the scheme of things.

And mebbe they will be reinforced by members of that famous Prince Edward County hinterland squad, the "Gore Gobblers." Rubber - booted, spring - skated, armed with hickory hockey sticks of their own carving that shot pucks which were 100 - pound weights pilfered from farmers' weigh scales, these sylvan stalwarts, whose Stanley Cup each year was a "bar'l" of ancient apple juice spiked with turps, formaldehyde and chased with a snifter of chloride of lime, were the terrors of the ice-lanes of Lake Ontario.

There, clad in their Alma Mamma uniforms of red flannel underwear they practiced faithfully each year in blizzard and in sunshine. Their rink, hand-cleared, was banked with tall ice hummocks. It was 400 feet long, 200 feet wide, with ten-foot birch poles for goal-posts, and horse - blankets for nets. The nets were not only windbreaks and puck-stops, but excellent hiding places for the brown jug of apple - juice, vintage three years previous, and preserved in cleaning fluid.

They were men, were those Gobblers of old. They used only eight players, with no substitutes. Games were of 3 hours duration with thirty - minute stops for re - fueling. On one occasion after failing to reach a decision after three days of battle on the glare ice of West Lake against the Allisonville Bullcrushers, they decided to settle the argument by using the entire lake as a rink, with iceboats as methods of transportation, eight - pound sledges for hockey sticks, and a keg of nails for a puck. The game ended after losing seventeen pucks. The last one disappeared when Moose-face McSweeney of the Gobblers, heaved a mighty swipe at the puck as it whistled past him. It rose in a majestic arc, disappeared over the crest of the Sandbanks four miles away and crashed through the hull of an eastbound lake freighter making her last trip from Kingston to Toronto.

FLASH!

Secretary Dickie Beare of the Rockets just informed us that the fifth and final game of the Junior "B" series will be played in Kingston on Monday night. The home-and-home series is off, and that's that. The Rockets will operate two buses for the game. These will leave Memorial Arena at 6:30 p. m. and the fare will be two bucks per passenger. It is hoped the fans will take advantage of this accommodation and go along to root the kids to the group title. It's the most important struggle of the year for the youngsters and they can do with a bit of support especially on "foreign" ice. Bus tickets may be procured at Cook's Cigar Store on the main stem.

Goalies Poised For Stretch Run

(By The Associated Press)

Phil McAtee and Doug Jackson were poised today for a stretch race in quest of the United States Hockey League's title shut-out crown.

Each goalie has four whitewash jobs to his credit, McAtee chalking up his latest on a 4-0 game last night as his Fort Worth mates trimmed Omaha.

McAtee had an easy time last night. He had only 19 stops and the Rangers took the heat off him in the second period with three goals. Bobby Thorpe, new Fort Worth wingman with two goals was the top scorer.

The Fort Worth victory cut an Omaha victory string of seven straight and raised the Rangers to a full five point lead in the standings over the remainder of the southern division.

SILVER FOR ETHIOPIA

Stockholm — (CP) — A magnificent set of church silver, consisting of 24 chalices and as many patens, or wafer dishes, have been executed for Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia by a firm of jewelers here. The pieces, made of gold and silver brought from Ethiopia, are to be donated to various churches in that country.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, Feb. 20 —(AP) — Brooklyn Dodgers announced a "rookie hunt" the other day and immediately afterward the reporters staged a Rickey hunt ... the latter almost completely obscured the former ... but a chronic viewer-with-alarm could find good reason for looking askance at the rookie hunt and similar hookups between sports and non-sporting promotion stunts ... the "hunt" is merely a combined effort by the Dodgers and a national magazine to find some outstanding kid ball players and reward them (and the coach who "bird dogs" them) with a trip with the Dodgers and maybe a contract ... the team may get a few prospects and the magazine a lot of inexpensive advertising.

A Lot of Angles

Before this stunt, it was Bob Feller and the maker of an ice cream confection joining to award college scholarships to outstanding boys and girls ... Babe Ruth is front man of a youth program sponsored by an automobile manufacturer ... for years newspapers have used amateur boxing, football, and others sports to attract circulation and resorts have used various sports to attract patrons ... there's no question but that many of these prombtions have been good for sports and have helped to arouse interest ... but the list seems endless — and still growing — and no one knows where it will lead ... could be that some day a pitcher will have to consult his sponsor before deciding whether to throw a fast ball or a curve — or that a kid will play ball, or any other game not because he likes the sport but because he hopes to win half a department store, like the winner on an audience participation program.

Sportspourri

The Stamford (Conn.) boys club basketball team has won 17 games and lost seven this season — all by one point ... about the most readable baseball record book to reach this department is the Eastern Shore League booklet, compiled by Ed Nichols of Salisbury, Md.

Midgets Tuck Away Second Round of "B" Playdowns By Defeating Brockville 6 to 0

Belleville Merchants Midgets tucked away the second round of the OMHA Midget "B" playdowns in their hockey belts here last night when they downed the plucky Brockville team by a 6-0 score. They defeated the visitors 11-3 in Lansdowne in the first game of the series earlier in the week and last night's victory gave them the round by a 17-3 count. They meet the husky Peterboro Midget "B's" in the third round playdowns and will play the first game of the goals-to-count series in Omemee at the beginning of next week.

Although the Merchants had a large margin in territorial play last night, the game was a close hard - checking affair with the locals skating fast both ways, and always the opportunists on the offensive. Their back - checking was one of the features of their play and the fast Brockville forwards seldom got the benefit of any clean breakaways.

Visitors Check Hard

The visitors checked plenty hard too and the game was fifteen minutes old before a red light flashed. Pete Green, who was outstanding on the night's play flashed in on top of the Brockville goal, took Doran's pass and the puck dented the twine. That was the spark the local kids needed and they flashed to an attack that netted them three more markers before the whistle ended the period, a few minutes later.

Green got the second goal on a neat individual effort and tobied over the pass to Gilmour for the third counter. Milligan, another star of the piece raced down the left boards after eluding three checks, rounded the defence and fired home the pill for the fourth marker.

The game was closer in the second and third periods, although Seros in the Brockville nets kicked out plenty of rubber. Strahan, who was on the receiving end of plenty of Brockville bumps got the fifth goal in the second period from "Pee-Wee" Jones' neat pass and Barrett scored from Carey with but a minute to go in the last session.

Barclay in the Merchants nets held the fort for the first two periods for a shutout and Gary Schrieder donned the pads for the final session and hung on to the duck-egg. Both netminders made some fine saves, but neither was over-rushed with work.

Brockville made several sorties on the Merchants goal but a packed defence, even with the Merchants short two men at one time, kept them scoreless. They battled hard all the way and were fighting desperately when the game ended.

Milligan, Green, Strahan, Carey and Gilmour were outstanding for the winners with Jones playing his usual heady game. Easter, Rumsby, McComber and Leeder looked the best for Brockville.

The Vampire is to be used both by the Regular and Auxiliary Air Force, being slated for Auxiliary fighter squadrons in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and Vancouver, and to other squadrons as they are formed. Yemenite Circles Say Chief and Three Sons Dead

Cairo, Feb. 20 —(AP)—Yemenite circles here cautiously expressed belief today that Sehia Hamid el Din, 82, Imam (ruler) of Yemen, three of his sons and a chief advisor were slain during a coup d'etat.

Dispatches from the Arabian peninsula yesterday gave scant details, but said a new king and government have been proclaimed in the 75,000-square-mile state, and that the Imam and three of his 16 sons are dead.

Some Yemenites in Cairo said they believed the old ruler was killed as the outgrowth of plotting among his sons.

Dr. Muktara Abdel Latif of Cairo, who deals commercially with Yemen, received a cable saying Sayed Abdulla Bin Ahmed el Wazir has been elected the new king. It also said Emir Seif el Hak Ibrahim, one of the Imam's sons, had been named head of a "constitutional government." The son has been opposing his father's rule.

Differences were said to have arisen partly because Yemen, in 45 years of Yehia's rule has made scant social or other progress. The country has a population of 3,500,000. It was admitted to the United Nations Sept. 30, 1947.

Life in India Described By 'Y' Service Worker

A. G. Morris, formerly with the R.C.A.F. in the Belleville area, who later went to India with the International Y.M.C.A. and remained there until just recently was the guest speaker at the regular Y's Men dinner meeting at the Y.M.C.A. last night. Mr. Morris, who was introduced by Al Davis, gave very interesting address on things he had seen while in India. The speaker first dealt with the Y.M.C.A.'s of that country with the fine work that is being done, and took individual cities where he had visited and worked with "Y" secretaries. In the city of Ceylon with a population of six million the 'Y' had a membership of three thousand, but took a part in all community enterprises that was entirely out of proportion to their membership. It was in fact the strongest single group in that city. Of that membership three hundred were Christians and the others representatives of various other religions.

Strongly Recognized

The "C" in the Y.M.C.A. was strongly recognized in India, and Y secretaries were expected to be strong Christians. The speaker told of working with a group of Indian Christians in the formation of a boys' club that had been named after himself.

The speaker went on to describe the difficulties and bloodshed that followed the gaining of Independence by India. When that country was divided into Hindustan and Pakistan the speaker at the height of the bloodshed travelled on a train that went from Lahore in Pakistan through the no man's land that separated the two countries. The train was stopped at several points when members of the opposite countries boarded it, and went through the coaches killing members of the opposite religion. At one point he was the only passenger on the train besides the train crew. When the train arrived in Hindu territory, the compartment he was in, in which he travelled was built for five passengers held a total of 33. In the days that followed he divided the food he had taken along with him among his fellow passengers.

In closing the speaker described Canada as a "have" nation where the normal security and things we accepted as an everyday habit, were entirely lacking in parts of the world. Most of the people of the world would give anything they had to have the things we accept as part of our regular daily life. He appealed for a deeper understanding of the troubles of other nations and asked that the Y's men in the service work, not to forget the destitute people of Europe and Asia. The speaker was thanked by Bryon Leslie.

Mr. H. Sweatman who was in Belleville on behalf of the Canadian Appeal for Children spoke briefly on behalf of this fund.

CHAPTER 17.

"That's commendable—if you can manage it," retorted Velma sarcastically. "However, Tom knows about the notes you wrote in my name; he knows I never received his phone messages; that I wasn't even told when he phoned me. He knows you've done everything you could to separate us, that you lied and cheated your way into that cruise, and then announced a ficticious engagement to the papers. So—I'm afraid you won't get very far with Tom after this."

Velma's smile was confidently cool. Did the little goose think she could continue to blind a man whose eyes were wide open to her trickery? Anyway, at present Tom couldn't be bothered with a maneuvering woman. He had far more important things to think about.

"That's all you know!" Louise's cold grey eyes, under her bleached hair, sent a shiver of apprehension through Velma. Louise was too certain of herself easily to be defeated. She was very smartly turned out to-night in taupe wool suit and brown felt hat, brown kid pumps, brown kid gloves, the whole accented by a georgeous sable collar, which made her colorless face stand out like a clear-cut cameo.

"Yes, Louise," Velma tried to speak calmly. "Tom wouldn't trust you now. How could you expect him to trust you?"

A snear twisted Louise's thin-lipped mouth into an ugly sight. "He'd be fond of me in time—if you'd leave him alone," she snapped.

Velma was fired with righteous indignation. She clutched the edge of the bed to keep from pouncing like a mad creature upon this cocksure, insulting visitor. "Oh, but I won't leave him alone!" She ejaculated fiercely.

The nonplussed Louise opened everything is off—that you can't marry him."

"If I refuse?"

"Then the police will be notified that he was in the alley at the time of the murder."

"Louise!" came from Velma in a horrorified whisper. "You love him, how could you do that to him?"

"It would punish you both, wouldn't it— for not letting me marry the man I want."

Velma knew there was no time to lose. Louise was desparate, she would stop at nothing. Tom mustn't be accused of murder—arrested! It would ruin his whole future if that happened and he were innocent.

"All right, Louise," Velma said dully. "You—win. But Tom isn't in town— I don't know where he is."

her purse, found a cigarette and lighted it from a match folder. She inhaled deeply, squinted her eyes, and said menacingly, "I happened to be walking behind you that time Tom came running out of the alley. A man was murdered there, I believe."

Velma bounced to her feet, swaying. "Why—but—but Tom had nothing to do with it!" she gasped desparately. "If you're here to insinuate that—that Tom —"

Louise's smile was a triumphant one. Carelessly, she shrugged her narrow shoulders. "Do you think I'm likely to say anything against the man I'm going to marry—unless—I don't marry him?"

"Louise! You wouldn't! You couldn't do such a thing to him! So—that is the reason for this visit! Louise—you're a terrible person! No words could express how despicable you are! If only for the sake of your dear mother's memory, please give up this mad, wild—"

"Don't try sob stuff, Velma. You can't get away with it. I know what I'm doing. You'll

Louise pursed her lips contemplatively. "Well then, you can write him. Send it to the Carryville Flour Mill—they'll forward it or keep it until he returns. You have pen and paper on that desk."

If a pistol had been held to her head, Velma could have moved no faster. She sank into the desk chair, thoroughly beaten. She wrote at Louise's dictation:

"Dear Tom:

"This is to inform you that after thinking it over, I've decided we can no longer be friends. I don't believe in your innocence. I no longer love you. Good-bye.

Velma"

Slowly she began to fold the note.

Velma felt helpless, hopeless. She must protect Tom—she must!

Quickly she thrust the note she had written at Louise's dictation—it might have been at the point of a gun—into the envelope she had addressed to Tom in care of the mill. She sealed it with lips that were mute with despair. With this false message went her desire to go on living. She felt numb and helpless. Her mind was a heartsick void.

Louise snatched up the letter and tossed her cigarette stub into the wastebasket as she swung victoriously from the room, banging the door behind her.

Velma's blonde head sank hopelessly on the little desk. Then fumes of burning paper assailed her quivering nostrils. She lifted her head automatically, and saw a fire blazing in the waste basket.

She grabbed up a water bottle on a nearby table and dashed part of its contents on the flames. The fire immediately died into black crackling embers that were like the smoking ashes of her heart.

Tom Orville, in a Denver hotel, dropped the last shirt into his travelling bag, snapped it shut, and carried it down the hall to the elevator. His face was guant. He looked as if he had little sleep for several nights. As the elevator shot downward, he was gratefully aware that he was already on his way back to Carryville and Velma.

Even though this trip had been only partially successful, he was going back. Perhaps after seeing Velma, he would be able to brace up and go on as usual. Rawdon — The following item appeared in the "East Grinstead Observer", Sussex, England, in the issue of Jan. 23rd., which edition was received this week by Mrs. John Mulheron, of Mount Pleasant, (Rawdon), from which we quote:—"Thanks to the generosity of the people of Ontario, Canada, a large number of residents of Lingfield, Dorman's Land and Baldwin's Hill have received gifts of clothing. Three crates were opened recently in the presence of Mr. A. C. Paul, of Canada, who is visiting his brother, Mr. J. W. Paul, of Oakfield Villa in Lingfield; and who arranged for the gifts to be sent.

"At Baldwin's Hill over fifty aged people, together with mothers and children, received gifts. Among the gifts received were several with notes from the donors attached. Mr. L. H. Ward, of Lingfield Parish Council, has replied by letter, personally, to these people. Several residents over seventy years of age were among those who received Canadian presents."

Three Children Wreck Cottages At West Lake

Picton (Special) — Three boys completely wrecked the interiors of nine cottages situated on the shores of West Lake, seven miles west of Picton, police learned yesterday. The boys, age 9, 10 and 12 years, were taken into custody yesterday afternoon by Provincial Constable Harry Caldwell and County Constable James Loveless and will appear in Juvenile Court before Judge W. S. Lane.

Damage to the cottages and contents will exceed five thousand dollars, police stated, adding that the havoc wrought was almost unbelievable. Five of the cottages were owned by W. P. West of West Lake, two by Mrs. Emma Cahoon of Bloomfield, one by Harry M. Pyne of West Lake and the other by A. P. Clair of Belleville.

Using an axe and other heavy weapons, furniture had been demolished, windows and mirrors broken, dishes smashed, mattresses and pillows torn into shreds, electric lighting fixtures and wiring torn out.

According to police, the three boys had been playing truant from school and had been using one of the cottages as a hideway during school hours. A high-powered rifle, which had been taken from a slaughter house owned by F. W. Stacey, Bloomfield, was found in one of the cottages.

Discovery of the vandalism was made by Mr. Pyne when tracks in the snow near his cottage led him to investigate. He informed police and they were able to apprehend the boys in the vicinity of one of Mr. West's cottages.

Streaking through the sky at approximately 450 miles per hour is the R.C.A.F.'s latest fighter plane, the Vampire jet propelled fighter, which went through its paces at a special demonstration held recently at Rockcliffe air station, near Ottawa. Cabinet officials, members of the House of Commons and the Senate, and high ranking officers of the three Armed Forces and Government officials saw the Vampire perform, together with two other recent acquisitions by the R.C.A.F., the North Star transport and the Sikorsky S5-helicopter. Eighty-five of the Vampires are on order for the R.C.A.F., and are to be used both by the Regular Air Force and the Auxiliary. — (R.C.A.F. Photo).

Beaver May be Good Engineer But Intelligence Rating Low

Toronto — With the beaver season scheduled to open soon, game overseers of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests have already completed their preliminary surveys of beaver areas on Crown lands, computing the number of houses; average number of residents per beaver house and ensuring that trappers have the necessary licences.

Largest of all North American rodents, the beaver has had great influence on the exploration and trade of Canada. More than 200 years ago, search for fur brought explorers from overseas and some immense fortunes were founded on the beaver trade In 25 years, from 1853 to 1877, the Hudson's Bay Company alone sold three million skins in London. In recent years, prices have run as high as $70 for prime pelts.

Noted for its industry and its peculiar habit of cutting trees and building dams, the beaver has been the subject of much scientific investigation. When the animal selects a tree for cutting, it braces itself on its hind legs. The first step in droping the tree is the cutting of a notch at a convenient height, and then wood is chiselled out in chunks from about three inches below the notch. The animal has been timed cutting through a two-inch branch in fifty seconds, and it has been known to drop a 5-inch willow in three minutes.

Percy Ghent, Toronto radiologist, x-rayed a beaver skull to learn more about their teeth and found that in the upper jaw the incisor or cutting teeth are embedded in a semi-circular form in a substantial part of the jaw itself. "Even more firmly anchored are the incisors of the lower jaw. They extend almost the entire length of that lower portion or mandible, running real secret of the strength and efficiency of these teeth lies in the fact that while the outerside of the teeth is constructed of hard enamel, the inner side is constructed of softer dentine, with the result that the dentine material wears away more quickly, leaving a sharp cutting edge of enamel always. That is, they do not disappear with age or hard usuage, but keep on growing during the life of the animal, as fast as the tree-felling business wears them down at the business end of the teeth.

All rodents have this highly specialized equipment, but it is only the beaver that uses it in so spectacular a manner. Incidentally, the beaver does all its tree cutting with the lower incisors — the upper pair are used only for securing a firm grip on branch or trunk or trunk during the operation.

Mr. Ghent reports the longest beaver dam on record was on the Jefferson River in Montana, which was 2,140 feet long. "This animal was the world's first engineer. It builds canals, dams reservoirs and houses that last for years — instinct at its zenith. Yet for actual intelligence the beaver is rated at 50, compared to the 100 for horse or dog," he says.

Why Trains Are Shorter in Winter

(From Stratford Beacon-Herald)

A recent news item explained that in cold weather trains are cut in length because "heat can only be sent so many car lengths from locomotive". Officials at the C.N.R. station here raised their eyebrows when informed of this. It was, they said, the first time they had heard of it. Trains certainly are shorter in cold weather, they agreed, but the reason was that low temperatures decreased the operating efficiency of a locomotive.

Cold weather serves to stiffen lubrication. When the mixture of oil and grease in the journal becomes slightly congealed, it naturally offers more resistance to the motion of the axle, and the progress of the train is impeded.

A train of a size that could operate efficiently in warm weather would have to be shortened by ten per cent. at 15 degrees above zero in order to have the same efficiency, and by 20 per cent. at 15 below. At 40 below zero a 50 per cent. cut in the length of the train is called for. Happily, trains in this part of the country do not require too-sizable cuts.

Regarding heat sent to the coaches, a modern engine can send steam heat back at a pressure of 200 to 275 pounds per square inch if necessary. This is never necessary, since doing so would probably change the train's course from rolling along in one direction to flying about in all directions.

A maximum pressure of 130 pounds per square inch is allowed, and check valves in each coach insure against the pressure's becoming greater than this. A minimum of 20 pounds pressure is required to heat an average train. The pressure required, of course, depends upon the temperature outside, and the length of the train.

The steam heat is carried from the engine to the rest of the train by means of lines which are connected from the engine through the entire train. Each passenger train has three such lines, the other two being the brake and signalling lines, which are air tubes. Speaking of brake lines, sometimes called train lines, brings up a peculiar fact.

A train, of say, ten cars is naturally more difficult to stop than one of only two cars; yet the longer train can be brought to a stop sooner and in a shorter distance than the smaller train travelling at the same speed.

The reason for this is that an engine can by means of the brake line, apply the brakes in each individual coach. The longer the train, the more braking pressure is exerted, and since this is greater than the force of momentum, the sooner the train is brought to a halt. A comparatively short train, lacking such intense braking pressure, cannot stop as fast as its big brother.

There is a point at which the force of momentum becomes greater than that of deceleration, after which added cars merely delay the stopping time. From the information the writer was able to gather, this point was an obscure one, dependent on such things as the condition of the track, type of cars, state of repair of the braking system, and my Aunt Hattie's umbrella.

In other words, no one was able to say exactly when that point was reached. It's not important anyway.

DE VALERA'S SUCCESSOR AT CHURCH

John A. Costello (bareheaded), 56-year-old Dublin lawyer, who became Eire's third premier and head of its first coalition government, is shown leaving the Procathedral in Dublin after a votive mass for the opening of the dail (parliament). Other man is unidentified. With the ending of Eamon de Valera's strongly nationalistic rule of Eire after 16 years, Costello immediately announced the formation of an oddly assorted government of five parties and independents.

OFFICIALS GIVE BROAD OUTLINE PRICE SITUATION

Committee Has Met for Two Weeks but Results Not Successful

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (CP) — In its first two weeks, the Commons price committee has started preliminary inquiries into fruit and vegetable prices and launched a full scale probe into increased bread prices, which is certain to lead to an investigation into flour.

It also has had sketched for it by two high government officials the broad outline of the inflated price situation.

But it really has only got its foot in the door. Weeks and months of work lie ahead of the 16 member committee, sitting in the huge railway committee committee room of the parliament buildings.

Most observers feel that the inquiry so far has not been particularly successful. It ran into a lot of difficulty getting into basic issues on fruits and vegetables and while the bread inquiry was better, the pace was slow.

First witness yesterday in the bread probe was G.R. Meech, vice-president of Loblaws Groceterias of Toronto, who told the committee that 10-cent bread was an "incident of competition."

If this loaf alone was sold, the bakers would not be able to subsist and Loblaws itself could not handle bread business on that basis.

Other brands selling at 13 and 14 cents a loaf had to be retailed to make up for the narrow margin of profit from the 10-cent loaf.

Creates Price Spreads

Mr. Meech said that a number of fast selling commodities gave Loblaws a higher profit margin than bread.

His company was "unhappy" about the 10-cent bread price because it created price spreads in a staple commodity and was an unstabilizing influence.

Tho bread probe will continue Monday with representatives of Loblaws Groceterias on hand for further questioning. Following Loblaws it is likely that officials of Steinberg's Wholesale Groceterias of Montreal and the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company of Toronto will be called.

It also is proposed to hear evidence from leading baking companies, such as Canada Bread, Westons and Christies.

Of the 16 members around the committee table, Donald Fleming, youthful Toronto lawyer and Progressive Conservative member for Toronto Eglinton, probably has been the most astute questioner.

Health Minister Martin, Committee Chairman, was ill with a cold for two days and Ralph Maybank (L-Winnipeg South Centre) handled the committee as acting chairman through its stormiest sessions.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Synopsis: The weather over Ontario is generally clear and cold. Snowflurries are occurring near Lake Huron and Georgian Bay. Clear weather is expected to continue over most of the province on Sunday with slowly moderating temperatures. A disturbance of the Pacific Coast however is bringing rain to Vancouver and bears watching.

French Villagers Get New Bedsheets From Americans

Col. John Hanlon of Winchester, Mass., presented each of the 224 Hemroulle villages with a pair of crisp new bedsheets in the name of his fellow townspeople.

It was a day of joy for this tiny snow-covered hamlet three miles north of Bastogne. The church bells pealed, bugles sounded and the children waved Belgian and American flags.

They called it "Winchester Day." This is the story behind the celebration:

On Christmas Eve in 1944 Col. Hanlon, then a major commanding the 1st Battalion of the 502nd Parachute Infantry, dropped out of the skies with his men onto the snow-covered fields surrounding Hemroulle.

Hanlon went to the church and summoned the villagers by tolling the bell. He explained the Americans needed camouflage to hide them from the Germans.

The villagers went to their homes and returned with precious snow white bed sheets. Hanlon promised the sheets would be returned.

Today Hanlon fulfilled his promise. He returned to the village and again summoned the villagers to the church by tolling the same bell.

He presented each of the villagers with a pair of crisp new bedsheets — the gift of the people of Winchester in appreciation for the generosity of the villagers of Hemroulle.

ANSHAN CAPTURED

Peiping, Feb. 21 — (AP)—Chinese press dispatches indicated today the communists had captured Anshan, the government's besieged steel city in Southern Manchuria.

The press reports said the communists fought into the centre of the city Wednesday, after which radio contact with Mukden was broken.

APPEALS TO SAVE POWER WILL BE MADE AT CHURCHES

Power Shortage May Last Two Months

Toronto, Feb. 21 — (CP)—Appeals from the pulpits tomorrow will remind residents of power-shy Southern Ontario communities to cut down use of electricity.

The reminders will mark the end of the first week of cutoffs and voluntary power use reductions to meet an emergency brought on by water shortage at generating plants.

In Toronto, acting mayor H. E. McCallum said the power shortage may last two months.

"I am told that there will be no relief until the spring breakup, which will increase the water supply. That will take us into the middle of April. I am told the Ontario hydro may have to make further cuts."

It was learned in Ottawa, however, that neither the Gatineau nor the MacLaren Power Companies — two major Quebec suppliers of power to Ontario — plan further reductions of power sent to Ontario. Last Sunday night both companies reduced power shipments to Ontario by 4,000,000 kilowatt hours a week each.

The Ontario Hydro - Electric Power Commission said yesterday in its monthly summary that it made a 2.4-per-cent increase in total power generated and purchased in January, compared with the amount for the corresponding month in 1947, but the gain was more than wiped out by a 7.6-per-cent jump in the primary demands for power.

On Schedule Monday

Toronto expected to be free from power cutoffs today and Sunday but will return Monday to its daily schedule of two and possibly three 45-minute breaks. Starting today the CBC's Toronto area stations, CBL and CJBC, reduce broadcasting time and the stations' power will be maintained as low as possible without interfering with normal coverage. CBL will broadcast from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., CJBC from 7 a.m. to midnight.

Owen Sound and Wiarton planned periodic power cutoffs during the weekend. Most other municipalities decided to refrain from pulling switches during the weekend but their officials urged citizens to keep use of power to a minimum.

Midland Warned

Midland residents were warned to reduce power use 15 per cent or undergo cutoffs next week. A delegation to Toronto Monday will seek concessions for a shipyard where power curtailment has raised the threat of a layoff of 550 men.

Consumers in London were warned that householders who continue to use lights unnecessarily, as well as commercial users whose consumption is unduly high, face separate cutoffs of their circuits. Hour-long cutoffs of domestic circuits will be resumed Monday.

Sarnia, which underwent two 20-minute breaks during the day Friday, had a 20-minute blackout last night. It started shortly after 7 p.m.

Average Wages of British Workers Increase Greatly Since Before War

London, Feb. 21 (Reuters) — While the number of trade unionists in Britain has soared spectacularly during the last 10 years, they are today concentrated in fewer individual unions than ever before.

Comparative figures officially published here show an increase in the number of union members from 4,867,000 in 1935 to 8,714,000 in 1946.

The number of unions in which they are organized has fallen, however, from 1,049 in 1935 to 753 in 1946.

More than one in five of the unionists are women.

Average wages in British industry jumped from £2 13s 3d a week in 1938 to £5 1s a week in 1946.

One in 15 British workers was on export work at the time the survey was made. The total of these workers, 1,322,000, fell far short of the 2,099,000 total of public servants, a classification embracing civil servants, postoffice workers, police, school teachers and employees of local authorities.

Office workers employed in government departments last year numbered 717,000, compared with only 399,600 on the eve of the war. The state employed 398,500 industrial workers last year as against only 240,200 in 1939.

As a result of the fundamental changes in labor relations during the war, Britain has become less the proverbial "nation of shopkeepers."

The number of independent retailers of groceries, provisions and general foodstuffs fell from 166,900 to 121,500 during the war, while chain stores and co-operatives gained ground. But a test census of customers, based on registrations for the sugar ration, showed a bigger percentage of buyers from the "small man" at the end of the war than at its beginning and a corresponding falling off at the chain stores.

In spite of its production drive, Britain still has its unemployed, although not insignificant numbers. Most of them are unemployed for only short periods between changes in employment. But in 1946-47 they were costing the country nearly £28,000,000 ($112,000,000).

Change Cut-Off Hours And Hours of Business At General Meeting

A slight change in the hours for hydro interruptions will be effective starting Monday morning, it was announced yesterday following a meeting of retail merchants and industrialists.

Under the new schedule the morning interruption from seven until eight will remain while the afternoon interruption will be delayed one half hour and will be effective from five until six o'clock. There will be no interruptions Saturday or Sunday.

By mutual agreement as a further move to save electrical power, stores in the city will not open in the morning until ten o'clock. Industry will run from eight in the morning until the five o'clock cutoff. Store-proprietors will also do all they can to conserve power during the regular business hours with some merchants stating they could make a cut of from 40 to 50 per cent in their lighting and still operate.

The seriousness of the power shortage was stressed to the merchants in no uncertain terms by O.H. Scott, manager of the local public utilities who stated only 90 per cent of the power used last October was available. He said that normally the domestic load in the city accounted for 50 per cent of the power used, while industry used 25 per cent and the other 25 per cent was used commercially.

Merchants realized the loss to industrial workers who were losing up to two hours per day as result of power interruptions at their respective factories and sought to work out a schedule of voluntary saving of power.

Co-operation of the householders who use approximately 50 per cent of the power used in the city was urged by Mr. Scott. He stated the quicker householders realized the seriousness of the situation and started cutting their power consumption through turning off all unnecessary lights and electrical appliances, then the sooner power interruptions would be unnecessary and industrial workers would again be able to work full time.

Boy Scouts Cited for Awards

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (CP)—Awards to Boy Scouts for life-saving and other deeds of bravery were announced today by Viscount Alexander, the Governor-General, in his capacity of Chief Scout for Canada. He made the announcement in connection with the anniversary of the birthday Feb. 22 of Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell, who founded the Boy Scout movement.

Honors also went to several Canadians for their assistance to scouting. For services of exceptional character, Harry J. Carmichael, of St. Catharines, Ont., and W. H. Miner of Granby, Que., received the Silver Wolf award. The Silver Acorn for distinguished service was awarded to R. D. F. Bourne, Hamilton; W. T. Kergin, Vancouver, and Richard T. Stanley, Toronto.

Gilt crosses were given J. McBride, 13, Port Arthur, for rescuing a girl in danger of drowning; Austin Munroe, 16, Dartmouth, N.S., for recovering a girl's body from a submerged automobile; and Jack Palmer, 13, Toronto, who saved a girl from drowning.

A certificate of merit recognized the action of James Clayton, 13, of Winnipeg, in keeping passers-by away from a live high-tension cable.

Gordon Anderson, 16, Lyal Brown, 17, and Lyle Ford, 16, all of Brant, Alta., won letters of commendation for gallantry by going to the aid of a companion who slipped into a swiftly-flowing creek.

Other letters of commendation went to Harold Hampson, 16, of St. Laurent, Que., for helping his father corner a burglar; Robert Bradley, 10, a Vancouver Cub who assisted in finding a little girl lost in the bush; Earl Carter, 13, of Vancouver, for the manner in which he comforted and cared for four small children who were lost from their homes; and Vancouver's 14th Troop for its action in extinguishing a fire which endangered a Coquitlam, B.C., home.

In addition, 28 Scouting executives were given medals of merit for good services to Scouting and eight received bars to the Medal of Merit.

Deep Snow Covers Western Europe, Cold Continues

London, Feb. 21 (AP)— Snow fell thickly in Britain and western Europe today. Forecasters said the late winter cold wave would continue at least until the middle of next week.

Temperatures in Britain were slightly higher than yesterday's winter minimums, rising to the upper 20s. Berlin reported a minimum of six degrees fahrenheit.

Snow fell the length of the Italian Peninsula. In Venice it blinded boatmen, who rigged their gondolas with lights and foghorns.

More community warming halls were opened to shelter children and the aged in fuel-short Berlin.

The cold stopped all outdoor reconstruction work in Bizonal Germany.

In Britain, unused to heavy snow, drifts piled high and stalled traffic. However, there appeared to be no immediate danger of a general breakdown such as that resulting from last February's near-record freeze-up.

20 PERSONS EXECUTED

Athens, Feb. 21 — (AP) — Twenty persons, including a woman, were executed in Athens today.

Nine were convicted by an Athens military tribunal Feb. 17 of being involved in the killing of a policeman and plans to assassinate Greek political leaders.

The others were found guilty of having been members of a communist execution squad which killed hundreds of civilians near Athens in the 1944 Civil War.

Former Tasmania Prime Minister Acquitted

The jury acquitted Cosgrove on 14 counts alleging bribery, corruption and conspiracy after a 3 1-2-hour summing up by Chief Justice Morris.

He told the jury they might believe that James Thomas Sullivan, who said in evidence that he had paid Cosgrove £5,400 ($21,600) for Labor Party funds on behalf of transport operators to save their businesses from State interference was an accomplice whose evidence might be regarded with the greatest suspicion.

The jury must judge whether Sullivan had told the truth or whether he had concocted a story "to save his own miserable business" or because he had animosity toward the premier.

On the law of the case, it did not matter whether a member of parliament or a minister had received money for himself, for party funds or for a charitable object.

The 63-year-old Labor prime minister resigned from office in December after the indictment, believed to be the first in the history of the British Commonwealth filed against a premier still in office.

F. H. Brooker, deputy prime minister under Cosgrove succeeded him. The trial began Feb. 10.

Cosgrove told reporters after his acquittal that he intended to seek reappointment as premier within the next few days.

CZECH PRESIDENT, E. BENES, STUDIES CABINET CRISIS

Premier Gottwald Asks For New Government

Prague, Feb. 21 — (AP)—Communist Premier Klement Gottwald, speaking to thousands at a public rally, today, demanded a new government from top to bottom in this buffer state between Russia and the west.

His followers cheered and cried "We are prepared," and, "Long live the government of Premier Gottwald without the reactionaries."

Gottwald insisted last night that President Eduard Benes, an Independent, let him name a new cabinet without the ministers of three parties that turned in their resignations from the coalition government yesterday.

President Benes sat tight in the presidential palace. He had not accepted the resignations and technically his broad national front government still existed.

His office said he had seen no one this morning nor had he taken any action toward dissolving the constituent National Assembly and calling an election of a new parliament.

The cabinet holds power from a constituent National Assembly elected in May, 1946, when the Communists polled the biggest vote. The Assembly was set up to serve until a new constitution could be put into effect.

But the belief grew last night that the anti-communist withdrawals might bring an emergency election of a new assembly even before this constitution could become effective. Some predictions were that the constituent assembly would be dissolved today and an election called within six weeks.

Called on to Support

Gottwald's request upon Benes was reported last night in a broadcast of the Communist newspaper Rude Pravo here.

"We call on all true Czechs to support the new people's democratic national front of Klement Gottwald," said the broadcast.

Later the executive committee of the communist party in a statement, read over the Czech radio network, said the three parties that quit had become "the opposition which is undermining this country."

These parties were the Czech National Socialists, with two cabinet members; the Slovak Democrats, with three, and the Catholic People's Party, with three.

Their ministers and the two from the Social Democratic party walked out of a cabinet meeting yesterday when Vaclav Nosek, Communist Interior Minister, refused to back-track from a police order. Seven ministers are communists.

The order, issued Feb. 13, transferred eight non-communist police district supervisors. Anti-communists called this a move to put communists in complete control of the security police.

The executive committee of the Social Democratic party said last night it would stay in the government only if the coalition was continued.

Capital Levy on U.K. Private Fortunes Proposed by Labor Party Extremists

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 21 —(CP)— An aggressive element in the Labor party now recommends the government should dip into private fortunes and extract up to 50 per cent as a capital levy.

Cabinet ministers give no indication the proposal is acceptable but many of them must remember that it disagrees with the recommendations of a commission appointed by a Labor government in 1924.

Its conclusion was that if a capital levy were imposed "the relief from debt which it offers would be insufficient to justify an experiment so large, difficult and full of hazard." The capital levy proposal disappeared from the party platform in 1927.

New advocates say conditions have changed. They argue that 25 years ago governments feared the financial and business structure of the country would be shaken by a levy on capital. The present Labor government has brought the Bank of England under public ownership and assumed control over exchange, companies and finance generally which would help to prevent any general disorganization.

Donald Bruce, parliamentary private secretary to the Health Minister, put the plan on paper in a newspaper article suggesting the capital levy as a measure of "disinflation." It would be imposed only on those whose wealth exceeded a certain figure, perhaps £10,000 ($40,000).

The percentage levied would rise by degrees from a few hundred pounds to 50 per cent where the fortune was £1,000,000 or more.

Bruce estimated yield would be about £2,000,000,000 which could be applied to reduction of the national debt and ease interest charges born by the community as a whole.

One reason the government is not anxious to examine the question now is that it might antagonize private industrialists, whose co-operation they seek in the export drive. If industrialists felt part of their capital in danger of being seized a vital incentive would be lost.

Proposed Labor Code Would Widen Power Of Govt.

C.C.L. Code Provides For Check-Offs, Union Security

Ottawa, Feb. 21. (CP)—Jurisdiction of the federal government in labor disputes would be broadened under a proposed labor code submitted to the government by The Canadian Congress of Labor and made public today.

Proposals in the C.C.L. code are intended to supplant several provisions of the labor department's projected industrial relations measure, which Labor Minister Mitchell will introduce in the Commons shortly. The department's code is identical with that introduced, but not passed, at the 1947 session of parliament.

The C.C.L. code would give the Labor department much wider coverage than the government bill. It would apply to every industry under Dominion jurisdiction, all businesses with federal charters, all Crown companies and similar bodies and the Dominion Civil Service.

Gov't. Could Act

Further, it would provide the government could bring other industries under the code by proclamation when it thought such action necessary for the national security.

This would enable the Dominion to act in such cases as the nation-wide Packinghouse Workers' strike of last year.

The union's code also would outlaw "company unions," provide explicitly for the union dues check-off and "union security," and give a union automatic certification as bargaining agency in an industry, without a vote, when it can show a majority of employees.

Where a vote is held, the C.C.L. code would deem a majority of those voting enough for certification. The government measure will call for a majority of those eligible to vote.

The union code would protect unions against court actions of any kind, except as specifically provided in the bill. It defines nine unfair labor practices by employers, and forbids them, as against four in the government legislation.

Wide Powers for N.L.R.B.

The National Labor Relations Board would be given very wide powers in enforcing provisions of the code. It could decide where there have been violations, and turn these cases over to court for imposition of penalties.

The strikes and lockouts sections are aimed at cutting down the time involved in settling labor-management disputes. Procedure described by the union as simplified would, the C.C.L. estimated, cut by half the delay between the start of a dispute and the time at which a strike could be legally called if settlement failed.

One proposed section would prohibit strikes and lockouts while a union application for certification is pending.

TWO MISSING IN PITTSBURGH'S $600,000 FIRE

Downtown Office Building and Grocery Warehouse Lost in Blaze

Pittsburgh, Feb. 21. (AP)—Two spectacular fires destroyed a downtown office building and a large grocery warehouse today, doing damage estimated at nearly $600,000 and leaving two persons missing.

The Jackson building collapsed about four hours after the blaze broke out late last night. Two adjacent buildings were damaged as blazing debris showered over them and onto the busy intersection. Several firemen were overcome by smoke and one was struck by a brick and injured.

Police sought a missing fireman and a woman cashier of a drug company both reported to have disappeared after the start of the fire.

Mother Frees Son From Talons Of Huge Eagle

Carlsbad, N. M., Feb. 21—(AP) — A mother told today how she freed her four-year-old son from the talons of an eagle, which her husband later killed with a bed slat.

Mrs. C. J. Reinhart said the child was playing in the yard when the eagle swooped down and seized him by the head. When she reached the boy the huge bird was digging its talons into the child. She ran to the house for a pair of pliers. Returning, she yanked the talons loose and beat off the bird.

Her husband later found the eagle still in the neighborhood and killed it. Reinhart said he was told the eagle had been captured in the Gaudalupe Mountains west of here and had escaped from its captor.

Fifty Injured In Bomb Blast

Cairo, Feb. 21 (AP)—Fifty persons were reported injured, six seriously, last night when a bomb exploded at a branch of the Moslem Brotherhood Association. Police said they did not know whether the bomb had been thrown or planted.

The noise was heard for five miles. The injuries were caused by flying glass splinters from shattered windows. Some of those hurt were in a passing bus.

MAY FIND SHELTER FOR TEN NIGHTS INSTEAD OF ONE

The old parable of "Ask and Thou Shalt Receive" had plenty of truth for a transient who last evening asked for a night's shelter at the police station. When the man, giving his name as John Smith, no given address, asked at the desk it appeared to the desk sergeant that he had been imbibing too freely and he was accordingly booked on an L.C.A. charge.

The ultimate result will be if the transient is found guilty and cannot pay the usual "ten and costs" he will have free shelter for ten nights instead of the one he asked for.

TORONTO MAN HELD ON FRAUD CHARGE

Charged with obtaining money by passing worthless cheques, a Toronto man, Ross Richards, age 50, was apprehended by local police yesterday and was remanded to appear in police court. Richards is stated by police to have passed several worthless cheques in the city.

New Tractors Parade Through City Streets

A mechanized "invasion" of the city took place here yesterday afternoon, but no guns rumbled, nor machine guns poked ominous muzzles as the cavalcade paraded through city streets.

It was a demonstration of the new 1948 Cockshutt Plow Company Ltd., Model "30" tractor, the first all-Canadian made machine of its type to be produced. In jaunty colors of red and yellow, with exhausts spitting smoke, twelve of the new farm machines paraded from the sales and service headquarters here of C. N. Whiteman, 147½ Front Street, up Pinnacle Street to Station Street and down Front Street to the place of origin.

The tractors, claimed to be the last word in type construction, are said to be specially equipped with new devices such as a live-power take-off.

The models on display yesterday, company officials said, will be followed by two more types, thus giving the farmer a wide range from which to choose.

The consignment of tractors to Mr. Whiteman is the first large order to be delivered here since the war.

Will Rush Work To Complete New Watermain

Providing there are no unexpected developments, the work of installing the new 13-inch water main across the Moira River will be completed by the end of next week, it was stated today by Mr. Jack Stokes, works superintendent for Dredge and Dock Company of Toronto, who are doing the work.

Every effort will be made to complete the installation of the main across the river before the ice break-up and to accomplish this company crews will work longer hours, while permission has been granted by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan for operations to continue on Sunday.

If the river were to break up before the work was completed the project would be seriously hampered while the danger of flood would be imminent as ice and water would possibly be backed up by the causeway erected across the river.

Only in work of an emergency nature where there is possible danger to human life can permission be granted for construction work of this nature to be carried on on the Sabbath, it was stated by the Crown Attorney.

Judge Anderson Reserves Judgment on Application For Second Vote at Tweed

Judgment was reserved here yesterday by Judge J. C. Anderson on the application of Ed. J. Courneyea, Tweed hotel proprietor, for a second vote on the beverage room question which was defeated by a slim margin as result of the local option vote held in T dewe lats in Tweed last November.

Evidence in the case was completed last week with the hearing being adjourned until yesterday for argument by the two counsel. No date was set by Judge Anderson for giving judgment on the case, the court being adjourned indefinitely.

In the application for a second vote on the beverage room question irregularities in balloting procedure were charged although in argument, Malcolm Robb as counsel for the applicant stressed irregularities other than that those charged in the motion.

Mr. Robb contended that the "drys" could not pick and choose as witnesses "those persons who could do them no harm". Counterfoils had been left on the ballots at one of the polls and through this it was charged that persons voting at this poll had been deprived of a secret vote. Also 12 to 14 voters whose names were not on the voters' list had been permitted to vote without being properly vouched for.

Secrecy Not Lost is Claim

As counsel for the "drys" B. R. Collins submitted the secrecy of the vote had not been lost although counterfoils had been left on the ballots and also pointed out that under the election act T. C. Graham had a right to be in the polls during the election. Mr. Graham had acted as campaign manager for the "drys."

It was intimated by Judge Anderson that evidence heard earlier in the case to the effect that the late S. B. Rollins had promised favors in an effort to get "dry" votes, would not be considered in the case, as the statements would have to be duly proven.

Garrett Morton, returning officer, held that the secret ballot had been maintained although counterfoils had not been torn from some of the ballots. "Secrecy would have been lost only if numbers on the ballots had later been checked with the poll book," he said.

Capital Closeups:

No Reporter Allowed Entry To Senate Divorce Committee

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 21 —(CP)— In this steadfast citadel of majority rule, it paradoxically true that the man who launches more laws than probably any other 10 men in parliament is a political opponent of the government.

Furthermore he does it day after day and seldom is mentioned in the papers. He likes it that way.

He is Walter Morley Aseltine, B.A., K.C., the 61-year-old lawyer-farmer from Rosetown, Sask., who heads the divorce committee of the Senate. He was appointed to the Upper Chamber by Conservative Prime Minister Bennett in 1933 and became committee chairman in 1945.

Daily he announces decisions of vital importance to couples in Quebec for he and his 12 colleagues are, in fact, the divorce court for that province, the only one without.

The decision emerges behind closed doors and no reporter is allowed entry.

Without extra pomp or pay, they conduct what Senator Aseltine estimates to be more legal work than and judge in the land. Last year, for instance, they recommended 348 divorces, each launched in the Senate as a bill and ultimately enacted as a separate law by consent of both houses. The figure is expected to exceed the 300 mark again this year.

Senator Aseltine says that neither he nor his aides like the work they do four days a week but they consider it a public duty.

"We think the less publicity given divorce the better," he says, "because most of the members of the committee are against it on principle. But we do unravel a lot of hopeless tangles that are helping nobody."

With three a quorum, the committee usually splits into two sections with Senator Aseltine presiding over one and Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader, over the other.

In the Senate, far less partisan than the Commons, it is not too exceptional for an opposition member to head a committee in this way.

They average about 14 decisions a sitting day, unless they run into tangles on one of the five per cent of contested cases. The record for a case is seven minutes. In 1947, 2.9 per cent of the petitions were rejected.

Education Board Moves Offices To Q.A. School

After three moves within the past year, members of the local Board of Education now feel that their moving days are over insofar as administrative offices of the board are concerned.

One year ago the board administrative offices were in the Belleville Collegiate. Then when increased numbers of pupils made it necessary that the board room at the Collegiate be used as a class room, a room at King George School was fitted as administrative offices. Last week the board offices were moved again — this time to Queen Alexandra School on Ann Street.

The move from the Collegiate to King George School was only a stop-gap however as at the time the move was made plans were already in progress for fitting a portion of the basement at Queen Alexandra School as a permanent board office. The basement accommodation was recently completed and the office moved last week.

Secretary Administrator L. A. Kells and members of the Board last evening voiced approval with the new quarters. The offices are situated in the south west corner of the basement overlooking the play yard. The accommodation, providing for separate offices for the Administrator and school attendance officer, include also a commodious board room and still another room for storage of school supplies.

BODY OF MOBSTER FOUND

New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—The last of the Vincent (Mad Dog) Coll mobsters is dead—his bullet-riddled body found in a snowpile in a lonely section of the Bronx.

Coll, one of the deadliest gangsters in New York history, was machine-gunned to death in a drugstore in 1931.

Police said Mari had a long police record, including a charge of homicide for allegedly killing a rival dope peddler. The charge was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Father on the Farm

He Liked Red Paint For Any Purpose

By KENNETH C. CRAGG

Father could never bear to throw anything away.

"It might come in handy some time," he would say, and the remarkable thing was that every once in a while something did.

As a result there were pieces of broken machinery, odd lengths of wire, bits of harness leather, assorted bolts and screws, strips of strap iron and hoops from old barrels laid away in odd places all over the farm.

No matter in what field a slat broke on the hayloader, there was sure to me a piece of wire handy by, looped carefully around a fence post. If one of the reel spokes on the binder split in the back twenty, father always knew where he could lift a couple of pieces of hoop iron to sprint it.

Only He Knew Places

Mother claimed he was like a squirrel, but, like a squirrel, he was the only one who knew where most of the things were hidden. His filing system was completely in his head, and, while the rivets for repairing broken straps on the binder canvas were in the woodshed, the riveting hammer and the old axe head we used to back the rivets were in the drive shed out beyond the windmill.

New hired men were usually pretty much baffled until they got an inkling of the system through weeks of observation. But there were no flies on father so far as his tool box was concerned. It was equipped for most emergencies.

It was a rectangular affair, iron bound and reinforced at the corners and held a wider assortment than any woman's handbag. This was in addition to the toolbox on every implement which usually carried one trade monkey wrench issued by the machinery company and perhaps another wrench. But things had to be pretty complicated for a machinery company to give away two wrenches. Equally important were bits of scrap iron, old nails and bolts furnished by the farm and always a little spool of two of soft wire.

He Didn't Play Favorites

Father, no admirer of implement companies except in an abstract way, always claimed the work on the farm would falter and stop if there were no wire to hold the blamed machinery together. He didn't play favorites, either, having a fair assortment of machinery put out by the better known manufacturers. He was perfectly fair about parts breaking under rough usage. Such things couldn't be helped.

But he trembled with rage and the effort to keep acting like a pillar of the church on those times it became necessary to remove a bolt. Almost every time a wrench was put to a nut the bolt turned. Father in his mild way would curse the machinery companies and in times of great provocation would add the name of the president and his local agent.

The difficulty was simple but it caused father a peck of trouble, and often lost him valuable time in seeding or harvest, not counting the fraying of his sense of Christian conduct.

It was that the companies for the most part used round-headed bolts. True the bolts had square shanks under the round heads but the square shanks held firm only when the bolts were new and the screw thread slippery with oil.

After the nut got set or rusted, or vibration had loosened the wood or metal around the holding shank, the bolts turned as soon as a monkey wrench was put to the nuts.

"I wish the blamed awkward company (naming it) was in the bottom of the ocean and their blamed dirty binder with them," father would say after working an hour or so with a hammer, a cold chisel, an assortment of wedges, the old wood chisel always known as the "dull chisel," a pinch bar and a fence staple puller — often in broiling hot sun, trying to get a loose bolt out without breaking the machine itself.

Some Rules Were Kept

One of the finest rules he made — and it was never knowingly broken — second in importance only to not smoking in the barn, was never to put a round-headed bolt into anything without first beating two sides of the head flat so that it could be gripped by a wrench. By the time a binder or the side delivery rake was worn out and ready to be scrapped there were so many flattened bolts heads on them a couple of children, one to turn the nut and one to hold the bolt, could take them apart.

Father was queer in another way because he was always making some one paint the machinery, particularly the wooden parts of it. At least every year there was a new tongue to put on something because implement tongues were never built to hold father's horses. One year he cut as pretty a straight grained ash as one would ever see and had two whole logs rough sawn into tongues. When he got them home father led the big bay team up to the pile of tongues.

He spoke to the horses, but no one was close enough to hear what he said.

At one time not one wagon or implement had its original tongue, except the binder, which had a spring and wheel contrivance called a tongue carrier. This always carried the tongue at neckyoke level and a horse could not tramp on it unless he showed considerable determination and a certain flair for climbing. This did not deter father's horses, and all the binder teams, three to a hitch, tried it at some time and a number left shoe marks on the wood.

Maude Was Best Climber

This was considered by the horses to be good but the best rating was held by big Maude, the bay gelding, who liked to climb part way up a woven wire fence and listen to the wire as it was pulled through the staples. Through long practice she had acquired a certain skill in climbing and one day when father was hitching up she got astraddle the tongue.

It should have been simple to move her out, but Maude got the neckyoke, which was bolted to the tongue crossways in her front legs. Then in a panichy moment she started ramming and rearing The two outside horses fanned out and everything got out of control.

Father was so mad and so fearful for his one unbroken tongue that he waded right in without thought of himself, led off with a straight right to Maude's nose and booted her over the tongue. He then gathered up his slack line in one direction and laced Maude's behind with the ends of the line. Father was all in by the time he got hitched up, but that night at supper he swore it was worth it in satisfaction.

With new tongues and all there was considerable painting to do and anyway very little of the paint on father's implements seemed to stick although he was always fussy about keeping them under cover. A new drill would come onto the place all pretty and glossy as a new car and two seasons later the paint would be curled and chipped or fallen completely off.

He Preferred Red Paint

Father's taste in paint, whether for machinery, the hen pen, or the privy door, was a sort of dull red. He once tried to paint the house door red, but mother said if he did she would leave him, so he compromised and painted it brown.

He found a use for red paint almost continually except in the dead of the winter and, during the rest of the year, his hands were always touched up with a bit of red paint or oil. Father was a great one for oiling things, harness, or the moving parts of machinery, his tools or the plow mouldboards to prevent them rusting.

It's a question which annoyed mother worst, but it was probably the oil, because she had a chance to see the paint and she wasn't one to stick her finger into new paint to see if it was wet. The lines on the light harness would look safe enough until mother looked at her gloves and then she'd know father had been oiling again.

That was the trouble. No one could know where the oil would strike next. He kept a tin of oil in the curry-comb box with his knee liniment, that he bought for the horses and used mostly on himself, and the other stable medicines.

He Liked Oiling Harness

Most men put off oiling harness until a rainy day and then find another excuse. But father, given a spare minute, would get out his oil can and rag and daub here and there. His harness got oiled a couple of times a year without any great strain on his part.

He liked oiling harness even better than kiddling and as a kiddler he was far from being a slouch. He could kiddle a piece of crooked water elm into one of the best double-sided door fasteners, or an axle and handle for the grindstone. Sometimes he lost in time more than what new things would cost, but his kiddling always worked and he would have been an inspiration to a handicraft centre.

The machine oil, of which there was a liberal quantity, because, not liking to see waste he bought old crank case oil from the garage at a low figure, seemed to run all over the farm. It was like a piece of peanut butter on wallpaper—the oil spread and spread.

It spread onto the saw mother used to trim off a bone on a rump roast the same day she had cut out a new dress with what turned out to be fresh-oiled scissors. After she stated her piece she didn't speak to father until suppertime the next day.

Tells Police He Fought Off Hitch Hikers

Toronto, Feb. 20 (CP)—Thirty two year old George Lum told police today how he fought off two hitch hikers early today after he picked up the pair and a pretty companion.

Lum said one man struck him over the head and the other hit him on the jaw to open the attack on Mount Pleasant Road in North Toronto. However, he managed to get a screw driver and fought him off. He drove them from the car when he brought it to a stop. He said he cut the face of one of his assailants. The girl did not take part in the attack. Lum described her as extremely pretty and said she screamed to her companions to stop fighting.

VOTE TO STRIKE

Chicago, Feb. 20. (CP)—The C.I.O. United Packinghouse Workers of America voted a strike at the leading meat packing plants of the United States.

The Union's Strike committee authorized the walkout after a 20 to one vote by some 100,000 members in favor of a walkout.

The committee set a strike date but declined to announce it.

The Union is seeking a 29 cents an hour increase now, with additional raises in the future.

PAINS IN BACK

Here's a way to relief!

Do you know that one of the common causes of backache lies in the kidneys? When they are healthy they help to filter impurities out of the system—their natural function. When they grow sluggish, these impurities accumulate and the resulting congestion may be one of the causes of backache. De Witt's Pills are specially prepared to help wake up sluggish kidneys. They act directly on these vital organs, helping to restore them to their natural activity. Relief from backache follows as a natural consequence. It is far better to tackle the cause of backache than to go on suffering in a way which is bound to affect your work and happiness. For over half a century De Witt's Pills have been bringing relief to sufferers from backache and we have received countless letters of gratitude. Go to your drug store and obtain a supply to-day.

A-Power Plant To Produce Steam Planned for 1949

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Feb. 21 (AP) — The race for the first useful atomic power plant promises to go to the Brookhaven National Laboratory, Long Island, some time next year.

This race is between the United States, with five known entries, Canada, Britain and France, and Russia regarded as a silent starter.

It was announced today that Brookhaven will have a power plant in operation in 1949. It will pass hot air out of an atomic pile to make steam, which in turn will make electricity. The capacity is to be about 2,500 horsepower. That juice will be used to run blower and other laboratory apparatus.

The Brookhaven power plant will be, if plans go on schedule, the first atomic oven to turn out real power.

Canada's power plants are concentrated at Chalk River, Ont. where scientists are working on various kinds of atomic ovens, including heavy water. Canada has made no progress reports.

In France, Frederick Joliot-Curie, the country's foremost nuclear physicist, has been heading a power development for more than a year. Britain's power pile is at Harwell.

Allegation Called 'Completely False'

London, Feb. 21 (Reuters) — Foreign office spokesman on Friday termed "completely false" an Italian official's allegation that Britain had incited anti-Italian riots Jan. 11 in Mogadishu, in former Italian Somaliland, where 52 Italians were killed.

The foreign office was unwilling to make further comment until the findings of the British court of inquiry still sitting in Somaliland, were issued.

In Rome the Italian official, Cesare Donati, alleged that the demonstrations "were prepared by agitators in the service of the British military administration."

U.S. Tourists Good Spenders In Short Visits

Ottawa, Feb. 20 (CP) —Only 15 per cent of United States tourists stay three days or more in Canada but they spend 83 per cent of the over-all amount of tourist money, the Senate Tourist Committee was told.

Herbert Marshall, head of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics gave that estimate in reporting that 85 per cent of the Americans who cross the Canadian border stay no longer than 48 hours. He made a preliminary estimate of $230,000,000 as the value of U.S. tourist expenditures here in 1947, compared with $216,000,000 in 1946 and $163,000,000 in 1945.

In answer to questions by Senator W. Rupert Davies (L-Ontario), Mr. Marshall said that while the number of U.S. tourists in 1947 exceeded 1946, their average expenditures were lower.

GROUND SIGNS GUIDE FLIERS ON "SKYWAY"

Winnipeg (CP)—A marked "skyway" between Winnipeg and the United States-Canada border near Pembina, N.D., will be instituted shortly.

With ground signs to act as navigational aids for the private flyer, the new "skyway" will enable "non-scheduled" aircraft to travel from Winnipeg to Mexico City, the first international route of its kind.

"Skyway Eleven" will be 40 miles wide and marked with distinctive, clearly-visible signs on barns, rinks and other large buildings near towns so the pilot can take his bearings from the ground as he flies.

The signs usually designate the name of town or city, distance to next airdrome, airport facilities and skyway number insignia.

No advertisements are planned for the time being.

Bullet Ends Fight Between Dog, Wolf

Lindsay, Ont., Feb. 21 (CP)—A half-hour battle in which hound dog was mauled by a wolf was reported here by Geo. Calder and his son, both of Fenelon Falls.

The Calders were hunting when their dog spotted the wolf and took after it. For half an hour the dog worried the wolf which finally backed into a fence corner to make a "last ditch" stand, an unusual tactic in a wolf which usually takes to flight. Mr. Calder ended the bout with a timely bullet.

HIGH ILLEGITIMATE RATE

London, Feb. 21 —(AP)—Nearly one in every 10 children born in England and Wales in 1945 was illegitimate, government figures disclosed. A total of 63,420 out-of-wedlock births was recorded for the year. The figures are the highest both in number and percentage ever recorded in England and Wales.

Abandoned Wounded Dog, Fined $10

Galt, Feb. 20, (CP)—Charged with abandoning a wounded dog, Robert Oliver, a local farmer, was fined $10 and costs today. Oliver said he had shot two dogs which were roaming about his farm but had not killed them.

G. W. Morris, chief inspector for Ontario of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who laid the charge, said a farmer has the right to kill dogs on property where cattle are habitually kept but the dogs must be killed and not just wounded.

REWARD FOR CONVICTION

Hamilton, Feb. 20. (CP)—The Hamilton Automobile Club today announced a standing offer of a maximum of $300 reward for the "arrest and conviction" of any hit and run driver. In announcing the award, President A. G. Gaul said there had been numerous cases of hit and run accidents recently where the driver had never been apprehended.

The "Iron Second"

Much has been written and said about the widely divergent methods of warfare that characterized the First and Second World Wars. The stark heroism of the gallant men of the Army, Navy and Air Force in World War II served perhaps to dim somewhat the equally heroic exploits of their fathers in the first great holocaust of 25 years previous.

But beneath the battle-dress of 1939-45 and the puttees and tunics of 1914-18 flowed the same blood; the same gallant spirit that never knew defeat, shone brilliantly in victory, undulled in reverses.

The story of those gallant men of the First Canadian Division of the First World War has been set down in many brilliant literary efforts. Perhaps one of the best, dealing with an individual unit is that, just off the presses, of the famous Second Battalion (The Iron Second) of the First Canadian Infantry Brigade.

It is an intensely human document. Written by Colonel W. W. Murray, a former sergeant with the unit. it is put together in a style that does credit to all who had to do with it. A fascinating narrative whose drama is lightened here and there by flashes of bright humor, it portrays the intimate life of the battalion, with attractive thumbnail sketches of those who contributed to its magnificent record.

The actions in which the Second took part which means every battle in which the Canadians fought during their four years on the Western Front, are described with deep sincerity. Many are dramatic epics in themselves. Others bring out the intimacy, the heartbreaks, the heroism, and the sacrifice, not to mention the unquenchable humor that characterized the men of the unit.

On the whole the book is an outstanding piece of literary work. To those who were not associated with the regiment it will be a thrilling and romantic tale of the heroic deeds of the men who devoted themselves to sacrifice for God, their King, and their Country.

It is the story of the deathless march of a battalion of "Canada's Finest" from mobilization in Valcartier in 1914 to the triumphant return to Canada and demolization after the war bugles had sounded the cease fire. In that historic interim came Bustard Camp, St. Nazaire, Fleurbaix, Bois Grenier, The Second Battle of Ypres and its hellish gas, Festubert, Givenchy, Plugstreet, Messines famous ridge; The Somme, Vimy Ridge, Barlin, Passchaendale, Hill 70, Amiens, Arras, Canal du Nord, Canal de la Sensee, pursuit to Bois de Vicogne and the Armistice. Then the march into Germany, the Cologne Bridgehead, with Sir Arthur Currie leading the first Canadian soldiers to enter Germany. The return to Hannut, "Blighty" and home.

It is the story of a battalion which fought four years in 21 major engagements and suffered 75 per cent casualties. Its glorious record reveals two V.C.'s; 11 D.S.O.'s; 53 M.C.'s; 41 D.C.M.'s; and 161 M.M.'s. From mobilization at Valcartier in September, 1914, to demobilization at Kingston, April, 1919, a total of 5,326 all ranks passed through the battalion. Of these 242 were officers. Of this number 52 officers and 1,227 other ranks were killed in action, accidentally killed or died of wounds.

Embodied in the original battalion were many regiments of this district. Among these were the 14th Regt. (Prince of Wales Own); 16th Prince Edward Regiment under Lieut. K. D. Ferguson; the 40th Northumberland Regt.; 41st Brockville Rifles; 42nd Regt. Lanark and Renfrew; 43rd Regt. Duke of Cornwall's Rifles, and the 56th Grenville Regiment, besides the 15th and 49th Battalions.

The history tells in poignant detail of the many heroic actions in which the Second took part. Among these were the Hill 70 operations in which the battalion was under the temporary command of Colonel (then Major) Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., of Foxboro. The detailed story says in part, "It was Major Vanderwater's misfortune at this stage to be suffering from a severely wrenched ankle. This he valiantly strove to overcome, but undoubtedly the Battalion commander was in considerable pain. Nevertheless, he insisted on going through with everything, despite the handicap."

The book holds the breathless interest of the reader as page after page unfolds the undying story of the men of this gallant battalion. To veterans of the First World War, no matter what their unit, it will revive memories of those days when the "foot-slogger" of the infantry, and his comrades of the "ninety-mile snipers" of the artillery won foot by foot, inch by inch through the mud-drenched terrain of France, Flanders and Belgium, the victory for civilization.

It contains nominal rolls of the original battalion and of the men who "went west" for their King and Country. A great number of the "Iron Second" came from this city and district.

To those veterans of the Second World War, the "History of the Second Battalion" should prove of great value. For it points out in remarkable detail how their fathers and uncles, without benefit of air protection, fought and won a war on the ground; who lived like moles in earthy burrows for months on end, but whose spirit, never crushed by circumstance, lived on to flash anew in the Second Great War in which their descendants carried the name of Canada to equal heights of glory.

Planet Mars Again

Mars is now about 30,000,000 miles from the Earth — as close as it ever will approach. Accordingly, astronomers of the University of Chicago have spent much of February in studying the planet spectrographically in the hope of determining whether or not the polar caps are hoarfrost or snow and whether or not the arid red areas turn green in spring and summer because trees are in leaf and other vegetation is flourishing. Probably the Chicago astronomers hope that nothing like intelligent life will ever be discovered on Mars. They will certainly have nothing to do with the geniuses postulated by the late Professor Percival Lowell, who thought that on a planet which was drying up there would be a desperate concerted effort to make the most of melting snows in irrigating dry temperate and torrid zones. No astronomer objects to vegetation which comes and goes with the seasons and which is no more intellectual than a terrestrial cabbage.

This new study of Mars may settle some old doubts, but it is not likely that it will add greatly to our knowledge or give much comfort to the few who may still think that the so-called oases are the sites of great cities. — New York Times.

FACES

It is true that a mass-production age doesn't seem to produce so often the "old American" type of face — the magnificently rugged features of a Lincoln, the mixture of the hawk and the dove in the face of an Emerson. Character doesn't come cheap, though movie-stars come high-paid. Miss Paeff may be overly severe in her criticism of popular taste, but she reminds us that character is more — oh, very much more — than skin deep, remarks Christian Science Monitor.

"UNEXPLAINED MYSTERY"

There was no serious epidemic among the many persons who lived for months in Britain's air raid shelters during the Second World War. This is "an unexplained mystery," says the Victoria Times, asking "what would have happened if influenza had broken out among the ranks of the sleeping people underground. No one knows why. And even colds and other infectious diseases recorded what medical authorities term a "remarkable absence when they did appear they had a lower virulence than usual."

SYNTHETIC FUEL

Canada has the raw materials for synthetic gasoline in great quantities. Alberta, particularly, abounds in coal and natural gas. She has, too, abundant supplies of water, which is essential to such production. Recent oil strikes in the province have been most encouraging, but they have not, and probably will not, make Canada self-sufficient. Now is the time for experimentation and development of synthetic fuels, not when an emergency suddenly cuts off nine-tenths of the country's supply, says Calgary Herald.

BIRDS IN WINTER

When all the earth is white with snow
  And nature's feeding ends,
The winter birds are quick to know
  The homes that harbor friends,
And they will flock from miles around
To where some thought for them they've found.

I know not how the word is passed
  Nor how the news they hear,
But where some crumbs of bread are cast
  The birds will soon appear.
The sparrow first may tell the jay,
And they'll be there from day to day.

Oft as I watch them from above,
  I wonder how can it be
This is to prove the power of love,
  Or merely dinner free.
Still, in my mind the notion lurks
It is the magic friendship works.

Owing to the shortage of sugar there will be a great demand for maple sugar and syrup this season. This being the case all farmers who have Canadian Maple trees on their farms should get busy and produce these commodities upon as large a scale as possible.

The coal situation here was not improved today. It was expected that one or two cars of nut coal would arrive here last night or early this morning, but they failed to arrive. Today many orders were issued by the fuel controller for pea and mixed coal.

Mr. George H. Kingston, who for the past few years has been conducting a milling business at Stirling, has purchased a farm near that village and will take up residence there this spring. INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who composed "Hail Columbia?"

The patriotic song entitled "Hail Columbia" was composed by Joseph Hopkinson, Philadelphia lawyer, who served several terms in Congress and who was counsel in many notable law suits. His father was Francis Hopkinson, "the first American poet-composer," signer of the Declaration of Independence and reputed designer of the American flag.

Gilbert Fox, born in England in 1776, went to Philadelphia when a young man to pursue his art as engraver. After teaching drawing for a year he joined the Chestnut Street Theatre players as a singer and actor early in 1788. In May of that year Fox was billed for a special benefit performance. Fearful that his program might be a failure because it contained no novel number, he asked Hopkinson to write a song for him to the melody of "The Presidential March." The lawyer-poet complied, and, with the aid of his wife and her harpsichord, wrote what he called "The New Federal Song."

The Chestnut Street Theatre was filled on the evening of April 25, 1798, as a result of the announcement that Fox would sing a new patriotic song. It was a hit from the beginning. The singer was widely applauded and called on eight times to repeat "The New Federal Song." The ninth time Fox sang it the entire audience rose and joined in the chorus.

The next evening President John Adams and his wife, accompanied by high government officials, attended the theatre and Fox was called upon time after time to sing the new song. Almost spontaneously the public rechristened it "Hail Columbia." A crowd gathered before Hopkinson's house in the night and serenaded the author with his song.

At that time the anti-British and the anti-French factions were at one another's throats and war with England or France or both was generally regarded as inevitable. Hopkinson wrote long afterwards that he deliberately tried to compose a song that would appeal to Americans irrespective of political leanings. In his book of travels in the United States (1803) the Englishman John Davis wrote that "Hail Columbia exacts not less reverence in America than the Marseillaise hymn in France and Rule Britannia in England." Although critics say it is not of a "high order" in composition, the song appealed to the popular taste and it continues to maintain its position as one of the representative patriotic songs of America.

Gilbert Fox, who was responsible for Hopkinson's writing the song, appeared later on the stage in New York and Boston with considerable success. Nobody knows what became of him after 1807. In that year he disappeared and there is no record of him after that date.

The air of "Hail Columbia" was composed for Washington's first inauguration in 1789 by Philip Phyle, German "music leader" of the John Street Theatre in New York. On the evening of November 24, 1789, President Washington and a party of friends attended the theatre and as the President entered the box the musicians played the martial air composed by their leader. The air was first called "The Washington March," then "The Presidential March" and finally "The President's March" before it became identified with "Hail Columbia."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

FATHER WILLIAM

A reader sends the rhyme from Alice in Wonderland and ascribes it to a best seller of recent years. The reader thinks it applies to some of my (Brady's) silly performances, I gather—the reader doesn't call them silly, but I do.

In my youth, Father William replied to his son, I feared it might injure the brain; but now that I'm perfectly sure I have none, why, I do it again and again.

'S'matterfact a medical colleague who examined me five years ago, trying to find something we might blame that one world-shaking attack of vertigo I had one morning right after my morning rolls, advised me to cut out somersaulting but could give no particular reason why I should not roll on per omnia saeculorum.

I suppose it is a bit on the silly side for a gentleman of my eminence and dignity to roll somersaults on his bedroom or playroom floor. But what the heck, if I enjoy it, I'll roll my own as part of my setting-up drill every morning, and a string of 'em here by my desk whenever I get stalled in thinking something out.

I meant to mention that the medical colleague who warned me to stop such nonsense was at least ten years my junior but ten years more decrepit than I am, I believe.

If you have forgotten how to roll a somersault on the floor (never for an instant losing contact with the floor or mat or ground) or if you have not yet learned how to somersault wouldn't you like to try it out and see for yourself whether it is as beneficial as I think it is? If you would, then send me a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask in writing (a clipping will not suffice) for Invitation to the Somersaultaugus.

Some people who try somersaulting report that they became terribly dizzy or sick at the first attempt. It is sad to think that people allow themselves to get in such infirm, unfit state so long before they are ready for the chimney corner.

Somersaults are not exercise. But if you have only, say, fifteen or twenty seconds to spare, I think, that any exercise you might take in so short a time. Timing myself with the stainless steel, self-winding, waterproof, luminous dial wristwatch—I always regarded such trinkets as pretty-boy stuff until the war knocked that quaint notion out of my head — I find it takes me less than twelve seconds to do a half dozen rolls here by my desk.

One of the benefits to be derived from somersaulting every day is improved circulation, prevention or correction of poor circulation associated with cold feet, sallow complexion and "billiousness."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Iodin Ration

Please send me the iodine ration and advise what benefits are derived from taking it.

(Miss F. S.)

Hydrocele

Son has a hydrocele. One doctor drew the fluid out with a syringe and instructed him to return for a repitition of the treatment. Another doctor advised operation. Which is the correct method?

(Mrs. A. B. T)

Answer — Only exceptionally is tapping, that is, withdrawing the fluid with syringe, curative—that has to be repeated indefinitely. In some cases cure is effected by injection treatment, which does not interrupt the patient's work or ordinary activities. In some cases only operation which obliterates the sac, will cure. Some physicians have a reported cure by reinjecting intramuscularly a syringeful of the fluid withdrawn from the swelling. Hydrocele is merely an excessive accumulation of the serum or clear fluid a few drops of which are normally present in the sac to prevent friction the same serum as that present in the pleural sac around the lungs, the peritoneal sac or cavity around the abdominal organs and in the pericardium or sac around the heart.

Mental Disease

If a woman lost her mind going through change of life would her children or grandchildren be likely to inherit any sort of insanity?

(G. H. M.)

Answer — Change of life has nothing to do with the question of insanity and heredity. Impossible for me to form an opinion without knowledge of the nature of the woman's trouble. Probably the children and grandchildren have nothing to worry about. However, a much better opinion could be given by the physician who knows the nature of the woman's mental disease.

Alcohol

Under impression American Medical Association stated alcohol always a depressant in any illness.

(C.W.)

Answer—The American Medical Association in resolution declared:

Whereas, we believe that the use of alcohol is detrimental to the human economy . . . its use in therapeutics as a stimulant or tonic and for food has no scientific value . . . Resolved, that the American Medical Association is opposed to the use of alcohol as a beverage . . .

. . . But all that was before the Big Noise took over the organization of yesmen and changed their minds about it. Of course alcohol is always a depressant.

PIGEON AND YO YO PUT LIGHTS OUT

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 21 (AP)—A yo-yo is a harmless article, and so's a pigeon, but a combination of the two played hob with the power system here for a few minutes yesterday.

A lineman was called when lights went out in several residential section blocks. He found that the pigeons, its legs entangled in the yo-yo cord, had somehow managed to short-circuit the lines.

In 1939 Persia ranked fourth among oil-producing countries of the world although she produced only one-seventeenth as much as the leading country, the United States.

May Use Dynamite To Seal Bootleg Coal Mines

Halifax, Feb. 21 (CP) — The Halifax Herald said in a newspage story today that preparations are being made to seal Cape Breton bootleg coal mines with dynamite.

In a dispatch from Sydney, N.S. the newspaper said the step would be taken because efforts to curb truckmen from hauling the illegal fuel had been unsuccessful.

(More than 40 truck drivers have been fined and their coal seized within the last two weeks. The trade is illegal because the rights are held by a registered company.)

The Herald said "it is estimated that more than 300 families are dependent on the bootleg coal trade."

Search for Owner Swings to Lindsay

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Search for the owner of one of two $1,000 bonds dramatically discovered by a Toronto policeman posing as bank accountant who Thursday whipped out a revolver instead of a "payoff" last night swung to Lindsay, Ont.

Police headquarters announced that the bond, recovered by gunpint by plainclothesman Norman Woods in an east-central house "on the fringe of Toronto's underworld," is registered in the name of Minnie Whitehead, Winnipeg.

Late today, Winnipeg police inspector Dave Nicholson said that a Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead of that address have been living at Lindsay for the past two years.

Moreover he said there no connection between the bond and the $208,000 bond-security loot stolen from Winnipeg branch of the Royal Bank of Canada last Oct. 23 — the largest Bank robbery in that city's history.

SCOUT LEADERS' WIVES

Editor's note. Today Leaders' and Partners' Day, there will be many who will enjoy the words of Edgar Guest's poem: "Scout Leaders' Wives."

Here is the sacrificial life
Who is the Boy Scout Leader's wife,
For all alone at home she stays
While he is tramping woodland ways,
While she sits waiting for her squire
He teaches boys the art of fire;
And while the hours go dragging by
He teaches boys how knots to tie.
And while for him she burns a lamp
He spends six weeks or more in camp.

The Boy Scout Leader's wife must be
As wise in many arts as he;
Must learn to stretch a meal for four—
At times for eight or nine or more—
When Friends of his drop into town;
And never scold and never frown
At midnight when he brings them back
And asks for coffee and a snack;
And never sigh, when on the phone
He tells her she must dine alone.

The Boy Scout Leader's Wife must be
As fond of boyhood as is he,
And see the far off future when
Our country will have need of men,
Good men, intelligent and true,
And able men, its tasks to do,
And honest men, and clean and strong,
And men too big to stoop to wrong,
Or never she'd consent to be
The wife of such an absentee.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

COULD YOU DO IT?

With as much ease as we would touch an electric button, birds can perform many feats impossible for any other creature. Accurately the Gannet dives upon a fish, even from the amazing height of 100 feet. An escaped prize will be pursued under water, occasionally to a depth of 90 feet.

As they travel, Flycatchers trap insects, and some birds feed their young in mid-air. With rapid wing beats, a Hummingbird hovers over its baby to regurgitate nectar into the tiny throat; while a parent Swallow, flying above its offspring, drops a mouthful of food into the small bill. Certain Hawks, going at top speed, can transfer the prey from one to another. The parent higher up lets go, and the under bird, by making a half somersault backwards, catches the falling food in its talons.

On account of remarkable contrivances, even a sleeping bird manages to cling on a branch and keep its equilibrium. The bone of the lower part of the leg almost locks into a kind of socket in the upper bone, necessitating no muscular exertion to stand upright, even if using but one foot. Then the mere act of sitting down and bending the knees and ankles automatically tightens the tendons running along the bony lower leg. This tendon contracts the toes which grip the perch.

According to Audubon a Bald Eagle can lift from water anything less than its own weight. An Eagle has been known to carry a lamb five miles; and the story goes that a farmer's coat (gold watch and chain included) was once stolen from a fence post by an Osprey.

Johnnie's appetite may seem enormous; but compare it with the birds'. The day after a young Robin left the nest it ate 14 feet of worms! Baby Crows sometimes consume their own weight in 24 hours, and a House Wren was seen to make 1,217 trips during daylight of one day to feed her nestlings.

It seems impossible, but birds often eat more than their stomachs can hold: they continue until the crop also is crammed. Examining for biological purposes, it frequently happens that the pile of food taken from the bird's insides is two or three times as large as the stomach was when filled. One Nighthawk had eaten 500 mosquitoes; another 340 grasshoppers, 52 bugs, 3 beetles, 2 wasps and a spider. More than 72,000 seeds were found in a single Duck stomach.

PICTURE THAT ONLY COMES ONCE IN 94,000,000 TIMES

Mrs. Michael Walker is shown here in her Syracuse, N.Y., home with her two sets of triplets, after the newest arrivals had come home from the hospital. It has been estimated that not more than one woman in 94,000,000 births could give the world two sets of triplets. The four-and-one-half-year-old triplets (left to right), Patricia, Paul and Peter are shown holding infants Margaret Ann, Martin Stewart and Mary Cecilia, respectively.

Hospital Auxiliary Fashion Show Will Present Latest in Style Creations

The "New Look", Dame Fashion's startling change-challenge to women's discerning taste for modern apparel, will make its Belleville debut when the annual Fashion Show sponsored by the Woman's Hospital Auxiliary is offered at the Capitol Theatre here on March 3.

The latest fashion decrees in fabrics, color and design, promulgated on parade by the city's smartest models will feature the last word in street, sports, afternoon and evening wear.

The new silhouette, one of the latest style creations, will be exhibited with the minutest detail to cut and design in its many versions in this last-minute offering of 1948 creations in furs, coats, hats and accessories.

Should Satisfy Everyone

Fastidious critic and the most blase observer will respond with heart-warming thrills to the colorful display of what will be worn in 1948, as the show unfolds in beautiful sequence before them.

This year's Fashion Show is new, in the real sense of the word. To the ladies, it will be breath-taking. To the men, it should prove that their womenfolk are more than keeping pace with the rapidly-changing trend of fashion that is always of interest.

Valuable prizes will be given away to lucky winners. Angus McFee's Jewelry Store has donated two fine Gruen wrist watches in either lady's or gentleman's style. Walker's Hardware Store has offered two prizes, McNabb's Stores Ltd, a prize and Lattimer's Drug Store has given several boxes of Dorothy Gray Cosmetics. Other prizes are generously being contributed.

Business Firms Co-operate

Business and industrial men of the city are giving substantial and whole-hearted support towards the success of this enterprise. Coats, suits, dresses and ensembles will be available through the courtesy of McNabb's Stores Ltd., fur coats and neckpieces, by Ashley; gloves and purses by McIntosh Brothers; hats by Miss Campbell; costume jewelry by McFee's; flowers by J. S. Barber & Son, the florists; make-up by Lattimer's Drug Store; hair styling by Mrs. Cummins, Mrs. Ramsey and the Vogue Beauty Parlor. Spot-light by the Belle Theatre, the public address equipment by the Northern Electric Co., and announcements by CJBQ.

Music will be supplied by Mrs. W. Wareham, pianist, and Mrs. George H. Stobie will act as narrator for the show. Enthusiastic response is already noticed for this interesting coming attraction.

Educational Notes

(Contributed by Belleville Teachers' Council)

"Education does not end with school!" This quotation has been used so many times but what does it infer?

The schools, elementary and secondary, are endeavouring to provide the world with young citizens who have a forward outlook. It is the hope of the teachers that when these young people leave school they have a realization that they have just graduated from a school of Instruction to a School of Experience. As adults they must not stand still. Someone has said, "Where there is no vision the people perish." Today there are many sources from which this vision may be enlarged.

The Department of Education, realizing this need, offers extensive night courses in academic and vocational work. Extramural courses from our universities form another source from which this further education may be obtained.

The radio provides many phases of adult education. One of these, the Citizens' Forum, is a joint project of the Canadian Association for Adult Education and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Each Wednesday night small groups of citizens, in all provinces, discuss important questions of the day after listening to broadcasts by well-known authorities. A five page bulletin is sent each week to members of Citizens' Forum. This contains correct, up-to-date information on the topic of the weekly broadcast.

Those Canadians, who desire a well-rounded life, should plan to spend a part of their leisure time following some of the many lines of adult education.

Rawdon. — Mrs. Ross Hoard opened her home for the February meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon Woman's Missionary Society. Fourteen members and five visitors were in attendance.

The service opened with quiet music and Mrs. John Holmes presided using as her theme "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength".

"The Supply secretary read a letter re gifts of good used clothing for relief abroad and plans were made for two quiltings in the near future. There is also a need for more quilt blocks.

Mrs. Ross Jeffs gave a synopsis of "the Bible for China", telling of the work of Robert Morrison, whose hope for China has been fulfilled; Karl Gutzlaff, who trained 48 Chinese to go as Christian missionaries into the interior and Samuel Schereschewsky who lived in a wheel chair for twenty-one years, while he translated the whole Bible into "Easy Wenli" in addition to other translations.

Mrs. Will Potts gave a message on "The Stewardship of Time".

The World Day of Prayer program was used for the Worship Service. The president spoke on the value of prayer. Mrs. Elwood Johnson read a meditation on "The Lord's Prayer". The prayers were read by Mrs. George Weaver, Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mrs. Arthur Phillips, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Rev. N. Cole, Mrs. Lindsay McKeown; Mrs. Will Potts, Mrs. Ross Hoard, and Mrs. Cyrus Summers.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver sang "I need the prayers of those I love". Mrs. Herb. Smith read a story of Madame Chiang-Kai-Shek. The offering for the W.M.S. amounted to more than $7 and for the World Day of Prayer Inter-Church Council approximately $3.

The hostess served delicious home-made candy and was thanked for hospitality.

ELDORADO W. I.

Eldorado — (Special) — The Eldorado and Bannockburn W.I. held the February meeting in the home of Mrs. Joe Donley, the meeting being opened by the president, Mrs. Charles Carman.

Business was discussed and it was decided to hold a quilting and pot-luck dinner in the Sunday School rooms of Fox's Church to raise funds for the purchase of curtains and shades for the Orange Hall. It was voted to send $25 to the Canadian Appeal for Children overseas.

Mrs. Kenneth Bateman presented the topic for the month. A paper was read, entitled "Planning Ahead for Canada." Mrs. Frank Chambers had charge of the motto, "Live and Let Live," answering by the reading, "Fit Your Children to Meet Life's Hardships."

Music was furnished by Mrs. J. Donley. "The New Canadian" was read by Mrs. Oscar Wannamaker. At the close of the meeting dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

QUINTE W.I.

2nd Thurlow— Mrs. Clifford Reid was hostess, Tuesday evening to the members of the Quinte W.I., when Mrs. Bradshaw conducted a short business period, and $10 was voted to the "Canadian Appeal for Children".

Mrs. E. Sandercock, Health and Child Welfare convener, and Mrs. Harry Murphy, leader, presented an interesting and instructive program. Mrs. Noble Brown read a paper on the February motto and Mrs. Murphy spoke briefly, and read two resolutions on health units, passed by the Federated Board of the W.I., meeting recently in Toronto.

Mrs. Sandercock introduced Mr. Reid of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School staff, who spoke on "Mental Health". A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Reid by Mrs. Murphy for this informative address.

Mrs. Jack Parrott contributed a piano solo, which was greatly enjoyed. The meeting proper was closed, and the remainder of the evening was spent in progressive euchre, with 12 tables in play. Prizes were donated by Mrs. Sandercock and were awarded to the following: Ladies' 1st, Mrs. B. Docter; 2nd, Mrs. Roy Clazie; Consolation, Mrs. A. Reid; Men's 1st, Mr. S. Geddes; 2nd, Mr. Glen Bradshaw; Consolation, Mr. W. Gray; lone hands for men—Mr. Noble Brown and for ladies, Mrs. L. Roluf.

The collection amounted to $11.60. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and the conveners.

Miss Sue Bishop

Toronto, second year arts student, who was crowned Queen of the McGill University Winter Carnival last night. She is the first Ontario girl to be so honored.

ST. JOHN'S W.A.

Tweed—A very enjoyable meeting of the Women's Association of St. John's United Church was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday with the president, Mrs. Claud Barnett, in charge.

"Letters of appreciation for flowers were read and a few items of business were discussed. Mrs. Sisco gave the devotional reading, leaving with her listeners the verse "Create in Me a Clean Heart, O God, and Renew a Right Spirit Within Me." The program opened with a dialogue presented by Mrs. Chas. Ketcheson's group entitled "Adventures in Friendship," she was assisted by Mrs. Sharpe, Mrs. Moon, Mrs. Harold Foster, Miss Margaret Kerr and Miss C. Meiklejohn. This dialogue was both humorous and instructive, showing "the crying need of the church today in friendship and the coldness of the church toward people of other countries. If Canadians were more friendly the churches would be filled."

Some one was asked for a definition of Friends, the reply was "Friends are those who know all about us and love us just the same." Mrs. S. H. Connor sang a request number "Was That Somebody You?" Every one agreed that group No. 2 under the leadership of Mrs. Ketcheson had contributed a great deal to the spirit of good Christian Friendship. The meeting closed and afternoon tea was served by the group. The amount realized was $10.00.

Large Ankles Are Often The Result of Ill-Fitting Shoes

Frequent warm soapsuds baths, careful drying, help insure foot comfort

By HELEN FOLLETT

BLESSED with pretty feet and neat ankles, a girl is fairly well qualified to trot along the beauty way. The ankle should have a slight inward curve one inch above the ankle bone, then an outward one until it extends gracefully into the calf of the leg. It isn't the smallness of this pagt of the svelte anatomy so much as contour that counts.

Large ankles are often the result of wearing ill-fitting shoes that put strain on the muscles that extend from the feet up into the calves. Extremely high heels change the movements of the ankles that are one way hinges, that were never meant to sway from side to side. But what can be done about that? Nothing. High-heelers will go clumping along, no matter what happens to the feet or what happens to posture and body balance.

High Heels

Orthopedic specialists make this concession; if a woman will wear heels of moderate height during the day, she can prance around on her spikes in the evening. Feet must come down to earth now and then if they are to keep in a normal, healthy condition.

Lazy girls who get little exercise, never will walk if they can hop into the family bus, develop high arches; over-active ones, who are on their feet most of the time, develop low ones. The ideal arch is the medium one. The feet, like the human body, need a certain amount of exercise and a certain amount of relaxation.

Easy Exercise

While you are reading your mystery story before going to sleep, wriggle your toes. This easy exercise will stimulate circulation that is beneficial after the little dogs have been in their leather cases all day.

Bathe the feet when they are aired, then friction them briskly with a coarse towel, and massage lightly with mineral oil. Only takes a minute. This lubricating treatment will do a lot to keep corns and calloused spots from forming. And do wear stockings that are plenty long; short ones send toes into a huddle.

Amethyst is the Birthstone for Month of February

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the birthstone for the month of February? My birthday is the latter part of February, and I am thinking of having my birthstone in my engagement ring, instead of a diamond. Is there a special significance to the February birthstone?

Christine

The amethyst is the February birthstone. This brilliant stone of purple hue is symbolic of sincerity and perfection. Amethysts are mentioned in the Bible, and because of their religious symbolism they have long been used in ecclesiastical rings. Amethyst, which is about one-fifth lighter than the diamond, is durable and is high in the scale of hardness in stones. The amethyst is generally cut with facets, although a few are cut in the smooth, cabochon shape. And. . . on the romantic side. . . .St. Valentine himself is said to have worn an amethyst ring on which was engraved a cupid!

Her Wedding Cancelled . Bridesmaids Should be Reimbursed for Their Dresses

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I had planned to be married in several weeks and many of the wedding plans had been made. Now I have decided that it is necessary that I break the engagement. Fortunately, most of the wedding arrangements can be cancelled, and this I have done. But my attendants—maid of honor and four bridesmaids—have already bought and paid for the dresses I chose for them. (Fortunately I had not ordered their headdresses, which I had planned to give them.) Mother thinks I should reimburse each girl the entire amount she spent for her dress. I think this is unnecessary, or that at the most I should just offer to share, perhaps halve, the cost. What is your judgment?

Ex-fiancee

Your mother has the only fair and just point of view. . . certainly it is not the fault of the attendants that they are left "holding the bag", and you should be unwilling to penalize them because of your misfortune. Most definitely you should take it for granted that you are to reimburse each girl the full amount she paid for her dress; since you know what this cost is, you will not even have to discuss it with the girl, who naturally might be embarrassed by any discussion of this so-necessary reimbursement. And you should clear up this financial responsibility at no matter what sacrifice you have to make. (Since, fortunately, you were able to cancel the other arrangements, I judge that this reimbursement will not be too difficult for you to make.)

Combination Gift For Wedding and Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Last year, during a quite long illness of mine, a dear friend of mine was married. I was not able at that time to send her a wedding present. . .and now it's time for them to celebrate their first wedding anniversary! Shall I now send them a belated wedding present or something that would be appropriate for an anniversary present?

Clara B. D.

You will now have a good and wide choice of something that would be more or less a combination present for wedding and anniversary, a good-looking practical something that you are sure they will welcome. And the note you should write to enclose with this present should gracefully explain the "combination".

Bride's Father During the Ceremony

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Where does the bride's father stand during the marriage ceremony?

Bride-to-be

The father stands at the left of the bride until he has given her in marriage. Then he takes his place with the bride's mother in the first pew at the left of the aisle.

February . . . Birthstone, Flower, Pronunciation

The February birthstone is the Amethyst. The February flower pronunciation is Feb-ru-ary —every letter pronounced—not the incorrect and so-often-heard "Feb-oo-ary".

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Has Only Gone Halfway in Her Resolve

Something that gets a great many people into trouble is the temptation to go on playing with a situation after they have made up their minds to leave it alone.

"Mary M.," who writes me the following letter, seems to be doing just that.

"I have been told," she writes, "that I am suffering from nervous exhaustion. The doctor thinks it is because I lost my husband two years ago, but I am ashamed to tell him the real reason.

"I am 48, and the man in question is 52. He is married but does not live with his wife. I will not see him as he wants me to, but I can't sleep or eat and I am losing weight fast. His face is before me every hour when I am awake, and, worse still, I have two children at home, 17 and 12, and I take my emotions out on them, which I am sure isn't right.

"Will you tell me what to do, as I can't take much more?"

Now of course it is no wonder at all that this woman has become nervously exhausted, when her emotional energy is being constantly torn to tatters. If she could resolve to put this man out of her mind, as she says she has put him out of her life, in time the problem would take care of itself.

Apparently, however, she has not quite enough courage to go the whole way in this situation. She had the courage of her convictions when she told this man she wouldn't see him any more. But she is not courageous enough to deny herself the satisfaction of going to him in her thoughts.

In other words, she is trying to outwit the frustration of not seeing him in person by keeping in as close touch with him as she can in her mind. As a result, she is emotionally pulled in two directions at once. Away from him, in one way, and toward him, in another, and this state of affairs is directly responsible for her nervous exhaustion.

The fact that this woman was strong enough to take a stand in this matter shows that she wants to do right. But then she goes ahead and defeats a large part of her purpose—the purpose to do right—by permitting herself to do, in another way, what she knows is wrong. It is wrong to indulge herself in such wistful daydreams about this man that she is ruining her health. It is wrong to make her children victims of her bad physical condition and distracted state of mind. She looked at her first problem, decided what was right, and did it. Why can't she handle with equal strength of character her second problem of disciplining herself?

On top of all this, I am wondering if all this emotional conflict is being wasted on a man who is perhaps not worth it. Why, if he is separated from his wife, and in love with this other woman who is free to marry him, doesn't he take steps to free himself so that he could legitimately carry this second relationship to its logical conclusion? It may be, of course, that he has religious scruples against divorce, or other valid reasons for failing to obtain one. If so, that is an added reason why this woman should resolve to put all thoughts of him aside and stick with the resolve.

Illiteracy Big Problem in Spain

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Feb. 21. (CP)—Like a gang of men attacking a huge snowslide with shovels, Spanish government officials are trying to clear away the poverty and ignorance that has weighed on the country for centuries.

Some of their plans for social service and education are as ambitious as any in Europe. The trouble is there aren't enough shovels or men to wield them, and sometimes the men at work are at cross-purposes with their comrades.

Brilliant individual successes have been achieved in the form of modern schools and hospitals, but the task ahead is tremendous.

The most notable advances have been made in the field of social service. The government, which denies workers many liberties which are considered rights in other countries, has extended benefits of various kinds to more than one-third of the country's 28,000,000 inhabitants. Officials say enrolment is increasing steadily.

Health insurance is available to about one-quarter of the population. Family allowances and discounts on various services aid the married worker with children. Marriage loans can be obtained, repayable on easy terms and progressively wiped out by grants for the birth of children.

So far, city and suburban workers have benefited most from the scheme, but they are being extended steadily to the countryside, where most peasants live contentedly in conditions of squalor that are shocking to western sensibilities.

The main burden of financing these services falls on employers who complain the assessments are reflected in the steadily-soaring prices of their goods. Health insurance contributions are divided equally between worker and employer, but the latter pays the entire cost of accident insurance, and five-sixths of a special wage subsidy for married employees.

Spanish officials are sensitive to criticism, failing to agree to suggestions the world might understand them better if it knew more of the country's social problems. At the same time they readily admit that the mass of Spain's workers are too little educated to understand or appreciate the workings of democracy.

One unofficial but reliable source suggested the illiteracy rate is 40 per cent. Another informant with access to authentic information said there are 40,000 illiterate children in the seaport of Valencia (population 750,000) alone.

Principally this is due to the series of upheavals in Spanish politics during this century. Ministers of education bounced in and out of office, making a coordinated plan impossible. Republicans tried to take control of education from the Roman Catholic Church which had the most efficient system. The civil war wrecked what was left of teaching efforts.

Now the Franco system, in cooperation with the church, is trying to restore the system. More urgent building requirements have delayed the construction of badly-needed schools and poor pay has discouraged teachers, although some have succeeded in carrying through projects that British educationists describe as "models of their kind".

Eyes Respond Quikly To A Systematic Beauty Routine

To give lashes a charming upsweep, place them between the rubber edges of an eyelash curler, squeeze handles; hold for a half a minute

By HELEN FOLLETT

BEHOLD the lovely heroine in the movie! Get a close up and you will observe that when she lowers her eyelids her lashes form a heavy fringe. Did they ever grow that way? No, they did not. Counterfeit lashes rest among those to whom she is naturally attached. Not only that, but they are heavily beaded. They look grand before the camera, but do not be envious. You'd look funny if you had them.

Luxuriant lashes are what every girl wants. One can have them if one will take the trouble to cultivate them. It is surprising how quickly they respond to care. Ordinarly, they receive no attention at all. That is the trouble.

Bathe Your Eyes

Make it a practice to bathe your eyes twice a day, first with hot water, then with cold. And don't rush when doing it. There will be a quick reaction of the blood streams; that is what does the business. After drying the eyes gently with a soft towel—no quick gouging with the towel—apply a little mineral oil along the edges of the lids. Then stroke lightly back and forth with the fingertip. If the oil gets into the eyes, it won't matter. Make it a practice to do this every morning, also every night, just before you say your prayers and go to bed.

If you are in the habit of applying mascara, keep the brush clean. Eyebrow brushes get into a sad state now and then. Better have two of them.

Not For Lashes

The crayon is all right for eyebrows, but don't use it on the lashes. The crayon dust may get in your eyes. Anyhow it is never as satisfactory as mascara. Some girls have ideas of their own about make-up; sometimes they are not on the right track.

Young things who don't know better clip the lashes in the hope they will grow long. The result is a stubby line, as the soft, pointed, uptilted ends are removed.

An eyelash curler is a nice addition to your beauty equipment. This curler is designed so that you slip your lashes between its rubber-lined edges. When it is in place you squeeze the handles and hold for half a minute. The result will be pretty, upswept lashes.

STATEMENT

OF

Respective Functions of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario and the Municipal Hydro Commissions with Particular Reference to the

PRESENT EMERGENCY

In view of the apparent public misunderstanding of the respective functions of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of the Province and the Municipal Hydro Commissions in the municipalities, this statement is made to clarify the situation.

The function of the Provincial Commission is to generate or buy electric power and to sell electric power to Municipal Commissions and directly to rural consumers and to certain industries.

The function of each Municipal Commission is to sell to its consumers within the municipality the electric power purchased from the Provincial Commission.

In practice, the Provincial Commission and the Municipal Commissions endeavour to co-operate with each other in the public interest.

By reason of lack of rainfall last summer and autumn and by lack of thaws during the present winter, there has been a substantial depletion of the storage of water necessary to maintain a high level of continuous generation. The resulting loss of production of electric power has taken place in Ontario and elsewhere where power has been purchased both under contract and in excess of contract commitments by the Provincial Commission. This loss of production of electric energy has become so serious that certain of those who had contracts to supply the Provincial Commission with electric power have been compelled not only to withdraw the electric power they had been supplying in excess of contract commitments, but as well have been compelled to reduce delivery below contract requirements by a further reduction of 8,000,000 kilowatt-hours per week.

As long ago as December 15th, the Provincial Commission notified the Municipal Commissions and indicated to its direct consumers that, in addition to cuts already being applied to direct consumers, it was evident that, unless additional voluntary savings could be obtained, the Commission would be obliged to order the municipalities to reduce their loads from time to time by as much as 15 per cent or more. This notification was given for the express purpose of obtaining greater conservation of power and to enable each Municipal Commission to plan in advance the most equitable allocation of power within the municipality.

The Provincial Commission received notification that the most recent cut of power purchased under contract would be effective on Monday, February 16th. In order to make an equitable reduction of power delivery to all Municipal Commissions, it was necessary for the Provincial Commission to compute for each Municipal Commission the amount of reduction it would be called upon to absorb, after taking into account the amount of conservation already effected by each Municipal Commission since October, 1947. To enable the Provincial Commission to complete the necessary computations and to notify the majority of Municipal Commissions of the amount of reduction each would have to absorb by Wednesday, February 18th, it was necessary that a substantial reduction be placed in effect as of Monday, February 16, so that there would be no risk of an actual power stoppage in deliveries by the Provincial Commission. To accomplish this, the Provincial Commission requested the Municipal Commissions of Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Windsor and Peterborough to reduce their takings of electric power by specific amounts during specified times, and also requested these Municipal Commissions to, in the meantime, treat the request confidentially and not to give it to the press prior to the notification to all municipalities on Monday. This was done to avoid statements appearing which might have the effect of creating quite erroneous impressions of the amount of reduction necessary in each particular municipality throughout the Province.

In relation to the reduction of power, each Municipal Commission was faced with entirely different considerations as to how available power would be allocated within each municipality. For this reason, it was not feasible for the Provincial Commission by a general statement to indicate to the consumers in any particular municipality the allocation of available power that would be made by the Municipal Commissions.

The Provincial Commission is delivering to the Municipal Commissions and to its direct consumers all the electric power it is able to generate or buy.

It is the function of each Municipal Commission to determine not only the allocation of power among its consumers but, also what public explanation may be desirable in relation thereto.

Expert play of the cards at bridge is based upon the most expected division of unseen cards. There is no guesswork as to how cards split in the great majority of cases.

By advanced mathematics it has been figured out how any number of cards will divide most often. Their exact percentages are known. But it is not necessary to cram your head with these figures.

There is one simple general rule that will answer your purpose. The rule is this: An even number will most often divide unequally; an odd number as equally as possible.

Four, six, eight are even numbers. Most often they will split unequally; three-one, four-two, five-three. They will be so more often than two-two, three-three, four-four.

Three, five, seven are odd numbers. Most often they will split as equally as possible; two-one, three-two, four-three. They will be so more often than three-none, four-one, five-two.

South was declarer at seven clubs in this deal:

SOUTH

Opening lead from west was diamond jack. There is a possible loser in diamonds. The only hope of saving it is a sluff on dummy spades if that suit can be established.

South and dummy have seven spades. Opponents have six; an even number. Most often they divide unequally, four, two. If so, the dummy fifth spade is a sluffing vehicle.

Trick one goes to diamond ace. After two tops in trumps and spades a heart enters dummy. A spade is ruffed. South club six goes to dummy nine and another spade is ruffed.

Trump four goes to dummy five and a fifth spade is led. On this is sluffed south diamond and declarer harvests the rest.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 21 — (AP)— Throwing caution in all directions, let's sit down and try to dope the Academy Award winners.

It's just like picking a horse race. You study the condition of the horses (popularity of the actors), the speed of the track (number of good pictures) and then try to figure the sentimental factors. Of course, a dark horse might sneak under the wire a winner, but let's not think about that.

First of all, the pictures. Scratch "Crossfire" and "Miracle on 34th St." They may have been entertaining, but they aren't the type of prestige pictures that win Academy Awards. I think we can skip "The Bishop's Wife," since not everybody in Hollywood thinks it is an achievement.

That leaves "Great Expectations" and "Gentleman's Agreement." Both are excellent in all departments but the former will suffer in the voting because it was made in England. Choice: "Gentleman's Agreement."

Now it gets tougher. Among the ladies, Susan Hayward is getting much support, but her picture ("Smash Up") was not a smashing success. Likewise, Joan Crawford's ("Possessed") and besides she has an Oscar already. Dorothy McGuire's "Gentleman's Agreement" role was difficult, but not meaty enough.

Loretta Young in "The Farmer's Daughter" showed the most improvement, and that means a lot in Academy voting. But the part lacked the heavy dramatics afforded Rosalind Russell in "Mourning Becomes Electra." And Miss Russell has been close to an Oscar before. I'll pick Roz.

Lacks Prestige

Among the actors, John Garfield's entertaining "Body and Soul" lacks the prestige value of more expensive films. Michael Redgrave makes a strong bid with "Mourning" but he faces stiff competition.

It now looks like a neck-and-neck battle among William Powell ("Life With Father"), Ronald Colman ("Double Life") and Gregory Peck ("G.A.") but because a winning picture often sweeps the slate and because of his great popularity, I'll lay a buck on Peck. But remember—I've been wrong before.

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (CP) — The saving in United States dollars through restrictions on the importation of motor cars will amount to $75,000,000 a year, Trade Minister Howe said last night in the Commons.

Speaking as the Chamber continued detailed study of the government's currency conservation bill he said preliminary estimates had placed this saving at $35,000,000 but the future was moved sharply upwards when the import formula was devised.

Mr. Howe said imports of motor car parts last year amounted to $71,000,000. Imports of motor cars amounted to about $21,000,000.

Mr. MacDonnell said he was interested in knowing how the government had picked $35,000,000 as the figure possible savings that could be made through the motor car industry.

Mr. Howe said the figure was set at the start of the program but the government was interested in doing better and there was nothing to prevent them doing that.

In Manhattan

By PAT USSHER

New York, Feb. 21 (CP)— An elderly, bearded playwright, known for his penetrating views on modern society, is making a good showing on Broadway this season.

He is George Bernard Shaw, whose numerous plays are crammed with his ideas, sometimes unorthodox but always intelligent, on present-day society, economics and politics.

Maurice Evans currently is directing and acting in a successful revival of Shaw's "Man and Superman." Last week the Dublin Gate Theatre Company opened its New York stand with his "John Bull's Other Island." Next month yet another Shavian comedy, "You Never Can Tell," will be brought here by the Theatre Guild. The production, with a cast including Leo G. Carroll and Ralph Forbes, opened this week at Wilmington, Del.

Ireland Castigated

The Gate Theatre this week continued its local stand with an absorbing production of an unusual and interesting play, Denis Johnston's "The Old Lady says 'No!'" Micheal MacLiammoir plays the chief role, that of an actor who suffers a blow on the head and subsequently believes himself to be Robert Emmet, Irish 18th century patriot. He gives a fine, swaggering performance. Author Johnston sharply criticizes modern Ireland for its degradation, pretentiousness and lack of self-respect. Hilton Edwards' production is lively and forceful and the performance an interesting display of moods and caprices.

Rusty Performance

"Ghosts," Henrik Ibsen's sombre drama of retribution, was revived this week by the American Repertory Theatre with Eva Le Gallienne in the principal role. But the production at the Cort Theatre lacks the quality of shock and horror that it originally held. Miss Le Gallienne gives a poised and grim performance as Mrs. Alving but the staging by Margaret Webster is slow-paced and hampers the effectiveness of the drama. . . ."

New Elwood P. Dowd

Frank Fay will step out of the role of Elwood P. Dowd in the long-established "Harvey" next March 27 and his part in the Mary Chase comedy will be taken by James Stewart. Fay will start a lengthy road tour in the eastern States planned to last until the motion picture version of "Harvey" is released, perhaps early in 1950. Stewart, who stepped into the part temporarily last summer, is expected to remain with the company four weeks.

Katharine Cornell achieved a record last week when her production of "Antony and Cleopatra" at the Martin Beck Theatre reached 91 performances. It was the longest run the Shakespeare tragedy has had since it was written 340 years ago.

Barbara's Medals Packed Away At Ontario House

London, Feb. 21 (CP)—Barbara Ann Scott's medals were packed away last night in a sunken vault in Ontario House. They will stay there until a special government messenger picks them up and personally delivers them to a Canada-bound plane.

It was a harrowing day for the eight-inch-square packet holding Barbara Ann's Olympic, world European medals. This courier had looked after it for the last four days.

The box almost went begging for someone who would guarantee its transport safely to Ottawa.

"Send it by registered mail," said a Trans-Canada air lines official. "We can't give it to the pilot of the plane to deliver personally because he will bump into the customs and a lot of questions will be asked."

"I'm afraid the diplomatic pouch is for letters only," said a high official at Canada House.

But J. P. S. Armstrong, agent-general for Ontario, came to the aid of this harassed messenger. An immigrant plane is scheduled to leave Sunday for the Dominion, and he arranged to have the package placed on board.

UNSOLVED QUESTIONS AND U. N.

Wellington, N.Z., Feb. 20 (AP) —Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand said today the United Nations is in danger of becoming "a laughing stock to the peoples of the earth." Speaking before a conference of the U. N. Association of New Zealand, Fraser said this prospect would continue so long as the U. N. continued to tackle questions and leave them unsolved.

PRODUCED WAR FILMS

London — (CP) — Sqdn.-Ldr. W. T. S. Williams, D.S.C., who in his capacity as director of film activities for the air ministry during the war produced "Target for Tonight" and "Coastal Command," died following an operation, aged 50.

Bancroft

Trappers, Rovers Win Northern Playoff Games

Bancroft—In the first games of the Northern Hockey League playoffs which are home and home games with total goals to count, the two Bancroft teams emerged the winners on rather poor ice surfaces.

At Apsley, the second - place Rovers upset a determined Apsley squad by a narrow margin of 4-2. Fox and Maxam with a brace of goals each were the Bancroft Rover marksmen while Dungord and Howden notched counters for the home-town Aces. The Rovers will carry a two-goal margin into the next game on Bancroft ice.

In the other series the league-leading Bancroft Trappers upset the fourth-place Coe Hill Canucks by a 8-3 count and will proceed into the return game with a five-goal lead.

Kavanagh and N. Brough dented the twine twice each for the Bancroft cause while the other goals were divided evenly among Maxwell, Foster, E. Brough and Flagler.

E. Brough also garnered three assists on his linemate's goals.

Rev. F. Whitely, hard-working Coe Hill forward, was the most dangerous man against the Trappers. He potted two goals for the Canucks and set up the play for the third shot by diminutive Roy Turner. Peters was a standout in the visitors cage.

Return games will be played off just as soon as the rinks are again in shape for hockey.

SENDS SACK OF FLOUR AFTER FALLEN GLASSES

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 21 (AP)— A stiff breeze whisked the eye glasses off the nose of Joseph Kuenz as he flew 1,000 feet up over rural Jackson County.

Kuenz quickly dropped a small sack of flour he had intended to drop in the farm yard of a friend.

When he landed he drove to the vicinity 20 miles from here and found the glasses, one lens missing, about 1,000 feet from the flour marker.

Kitchener Takes Premier Trophy For First Time

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Some 500 weary curlers put away their rocks and brooms heard the winners declared and described it as the "toughest" although "most successful" annual Ontario bonspiel as the curling meet ended early today.

The premier Royal York Trophy was captured for the first time in 10 years by a Kitchener rink skipped by C. Asmussen. His vice-skip was C. Schmidt, telegraph editor of the Kitchener Record and veteran sportsmtn. His other two members were L. L. Shantz and C. Mitchell.

Veteran Tom Beattie and his Toronto Curling Club rink captured the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie Cup the Seiberling Trophy was won by E. H. Pooler's Toronto Granites; Chatham's foursome skipped by P. Gilbert won its first cut in the 'spiel's 21 years with the North American Life final; B. C. Hall's quartet skipped by W. A. Kennedy won O'Keefe's Cup; and Aany
Andy Grant's Toronto Royal Canadians took the Parker Pen Trophy.

The grand aggregate was discontinued last year with introduction of a new draw play, bringing it down to a five-day event.

Electric power interruptions and a pre-season thaw which caused water to drip from overhead girders delayed play several hours every day. However, before the 'spiel ended, more than half this year's curlers paid their 1949 entry fees.

In wind-up games last night, Andy Grant's Royals swamped a Toronto High Park group skipped by H. E. Burns, 12-3 in the Parker Pen finals. Hall's Kitchener rink defeated an Oshawa quartet skipped by Dr. A. W. Harding 13-10 in the Seagram finals. In the O'Keefe semi-finals Kennedy's Hamilton Thistles swept aside J. P. Walsh's Kingston rink 14-11. Harry Love's foursome from Barrie defeated the London rink skipped by Harry Sifton 12-9.

Not one 1947 top trophy winner captured cups this year.

Maple Leafs Need Win Over Detroit To Gain a Tie

The league-leading Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League haven't won a game in Toronto all season. But if they break the jinx and beat the Toronto Maple Leafs tonight, they're going to gain a four-point advantage over the second place Leafs. By the same token, the Leafs can tie Wings for the lead with a local victory.

Both the teams contesting the league title have two games over the weekend, so the results can be decisive with the schedule rapidly coming to its end March 21. Detroit has just 12 games left, Toronto 13.

Apart from the leaders, Montreal Canadiens tonight entertain Boston Bruins, and Canadiens badly need a victory in their effort to overtake Bruins in the fourth and last play-off spot.

Sunday the Wings are at home to Canadiens, Toronto goes to Chicago and Boston plays at New York Rangers.

The Wings' boss, John Adams, frankly admits that the Leafs are the team to beat so far as Detroit is concerned. But he also said after his team had a work-out in Toronto yesterday that "we've got a good hot club too."

Adams, who is no mean psychologist, with a young team riding hard for the league championship added that "this is the nicest bunch of kids I've had in my 20 years of coaching. There are no clubhouse lawyers. Coach Tommy Ivan and I could leave them alone for a week and they'd carry out instructions to the letter. Never a bit of trouble, and a really great spirit."

Leafs returned to Toronto immediately after the loss to Canadiens at Montreal, Thursday night, and they weren't called on for any practice Friday.

Incidentally the Bruins at Montreal tonight better beware of that famed Bouchard-Reardon defence. Kenny Reardon is always tough and big Dutch Bouchard is going to be full of beans. Yesterday he became the father of a son and Big Butch is going to be thinking of Little Butch when the Bruins forwards start rolling.

POSING AS ACCOUNTANT DETECTIVES ARREST THREE

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Posing as a bank accountant, a Toronto police detective arrested three men who accepted his offer to buy $2,000 in bonds, registered in the name of a Winnipeg man, for $400. The three are charged with receiving the bonds which police say they believe may be part of the $100,000 loot taken in a safety deposit vault robbery last December. Safety-deposit boxes in the Winnipeg bank were looted in a robbery similar to two in Toronto and one at Carp, Ont., last year.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Monday night will see the crucial" game for Bill Cook's Belleville Rockets insofar as the district Junior "B" group is concerned. The kidlets trek to Kingston to beard the Vics in their own den in the fifth game of the playoff series, and the clash should be a classic.

The Rockets clearly outplayed their classy opponents here on Wednesday night, and if they adhere to the same style of hockey, flaunt the same spirit of clean aggressiveness, keep their heads up and their bodies out of the sin-bin, then they should come back to the wigwams on the Moira with the Vics figurative scalps tacked to their belts.

Unfortunately for the Vics, it is feared they will be without the services of their stellar forward, Flint. The speedy youngster was on the receiving end of a hard but legal Defelice bodycheck on Wednesday night and the grapevine has it that he suffered injured shoulder ligaments. Murray, too, it is rumored, will not be on hand, and the loss of these two players will be keenly felt by the Limestone youngsters.

Tommy Schrieder, it was little known, played the entire game the other night with a badly swollen hand. The plucky kid refused to be left off the firing line and have the injured member attended to, and went out there and scored the picture goal of the evening. He will be in shape, however, for Monday night's tilt.

And here's that man again, Claude Kewley, Canadian representative of the Scottish Ice Hockey Association is on the prowl again for players for his loop in the land of the heather. He wants players of just over junior age, who are big and husky and not tied up with any professional club (what in these days, Claude, me lad?) The pay he says is forty bucks per week "and the kid who doesn't run wild can save $25 and work if he desires. Any youngster interested can reach M'siew Kewley at 58 Ulster Street, Toronto.

Frank Leahy, famous Notre Dame football coach is noted for his repartee. The story is told that back in 1943 after the Army had handed Notre Dame its first setback in 12 years in their series, a cadet shouted at Leahy, "Where's that team you had last year?"

Quick as a flash, Leahy replied, "They're down in Guadalcanal waiting for you guys to graduate."

The postponed meeting of the Belleville Softball Association will be held in the City Hall here on Sunday afternoon, a member of the executive informed this desk today. All members of last year's executive are requested ot put in an appearance, while anybody else interested in the game is invited to attend. It is important that all concerned be on hand as much business has to be done if the Association is to function anothre year. The meeting is called for 2.30 p.m.

Rumor has it that at least three senior teams are desirous of entering this year from city ranks. It is quite likely that Point Anne will also be interested, and a strong four of five team loop if properly administered should go a long way in assisting to restore the game to the status it enjoyed here several years ago. It has gotten into the doldrums the past two or three years, but there is nothing wrong with it that can't be cured by a little common sense and co-operation.

Looking over Franke Selke's fabulous sports encyclopedia during our recent brief sojourn "between the sheets" we noted some outstanding facts. The greatest baseball winning streak ever compiled was that manufactured by the Cincinatti Red Stockings in 1869 and 1870. Except for one intervening tie they'd won 78 straight victories before being toppled by the Brooklyn Atlantics (minus the "Lip") in the 11th inning.

Although the history of pugilism goes all the way back to pre-historic man, the art of boxing which is the scientific feature of pugilism, was introduced by an Italian priest, later St. Bernadine, in the 13th century. It means "boxing up" the attack of a foe. The first known record of fighting as a sport was taken from a temple in Mesopotania that was built around 3,000 B.C. A bronze figurine of two wrestlers at grips also was found there.

And here's how it came about that three prizes are generally given in sports events. A blundering silversmith back in 1609 fashioned a silver ball for the winner of a turf race. . . . It was rejected for inferior workmanship . . . . So was a second one before he clicked with the third. Eventually the best ball was awarded to the winner, the second best to the runner-up and the other one to the owner of the third place nag. And here's a juicy statistic. There are sixty-three quadrillion ways of making a billiard shot. That's what the man said, he did, swelp me. And don't ask me to prove it.

Just before World War II several British warships were steaming majestically into home port. The admiral in command—a most fastidious gentleman—ordered a message sent to the port commander to have his special laundress ready to take charge of the soiled linen that had accumulated during the voyage. Soon signal flags fluttered from the flagship, and not long after a chuckle rolled through the entire fleet. For the message, for all to see, read: "Please tell admiral's woman to be ready moment we heave-to."

When the effect of the message became apparent, the admiral turned on the unfortunate signalman. "Damn it, man," he exploded, "I said washer-woman! Not woman! Correct it!"

Up fluttered more flags, as the fleet watched. "Correction. Insert washer between admiral and woman."

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By JACK GRAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 21 —(CP)—Time was (as recently as the late winter Olympics) when the Scandinavians and Swiss dominated the skiing scene, but this correspondent, tenderly caressing a swollen ankle, predicts the scene shifters are at hand.

They're the thousands of juvenile Canadians who have taken to the slithering sport with all the zeal of a seal purspring a mackerel.

It's a natural for the Canadian winter landscape and the kids are getting such expert tree dodgers that the unwary strollers in the park (such as this reporter) are apt to come a cropper when averting a catastrophe (like me being hit by a hurtling heavyweight down some woodland lane.) You need rubber ankles in such circumstances.

And the size of some of them! Like Britt (North Bay Nugget) Jessup, who came away from the Laurentian Ski Club shaking his head in amazement over the midget-like maestros who swarmed over those hills, I clucked in wonderment over the pygmy-like meteors that are blazing a path to some future Olympics.

Comments Britt: "They stand about as high as a soda-fountain stool and their skis are about the length of a table knife, but they can really handle themselves."

Papa's Resistance

Signs of a new spirit stirring amid the allegedly-oppressed minions of the pro hockey teams are reported by Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle, who instances the case of a pro hockey scout taking a look at a sizzling prospect — a 16-year-old.

On the way they met the boy's father and the scout, on being introduced, said genially: "We are on our way to look at your boy. We may place him on our list."

"Oh, no you won't," exclaimed the father. "You'll make no chattel out of my boy."

The scout quietly intimated that if the club liked the boy they'd put him on their list and there wasn't much the father could do about it.

"Is that so?" cried the parent. "Let me tell you, I talked this over with a judge and I also consulted a lawyer . . . If you do any such tampering with my boy, I'll bring suit against you."

And, relates Andy, the scout after a moment of deep thought muttered: "I'm no longer interested in that young man, somehow."

Plymouth brings you
Still Greater Safety-

WITH—PLYMOUTH SAFETY-RIM WHEELS
AND SUPER CUSHION TIRES
AT NO EXTRA COST . . .

SINCE 1941, Plymouth owners have enjoyed the extra safety provided by Plymouth Safety-Rim Wheels. Now, with the new Super Cushion tires as STANDARD equipment on all models, Plymouth brings you still greater safety.

With Plymouth Safety-Rim Wheels it is almost impossible for a tire to twist or pull off the rim in the event of a blowout. Super Cushion tires with 26% more air volume at only 24 pounds maximum pressure provide a "softer" air and cooler running which lessens the chances of a blowout. The combination of these new tires with Plymouth Safety-Rim Wheels will raise the present standards of safety in motoring.

In brilliant pantomimic array, enhanced by a changing panorama of blending and contrasting costuming, the glittering background of multi-colored lighting effects and the individual and collective artistry of the cast, the Eighth Annual Winter Ice Show of the Quinte Skating Club glided to a successful seasonal debut before 1,600 people in Memorial Arena last night.

The show will be presented again at a matinee this afternoon beginning at 2.15 and concluding with a performance tonight at 8.15.

The show as a whole is a near-riot of color. The costuming, one of the features of the attraction, is cleverly done, well-designed and eye-pleasing. The program is a continuous variable parade of pageantry and color, interspersed by the mastery on skates of the Quinte Clubs stars, and the clever interpretation of members of the Toronto Skating Club. Music over a public address system, is appropriate, tuneful and in melodic keeping with the various numbers of the score.

Good Comedy Numbers

The presentation is plentifully sprinkled with hilarious comedy, exceptionally well done by members of the club. New innovations are introduced this year to dress up skits of former attractions and the whole is a delightful humorous insertion to the more serious motif of the pageants of "Make-Believe" and the graceful symmetric motion of individual artists.

The well-known fairy story of Hansel and Gretel opens the show with the Misses Marylin and Doris Kerr in the title roles. Flame-colored "birds" flit over the scene heralding the approach of Fairy Queen Nancy David and her pretty, clever fairy-in-waiting, Mary Lou Cook. Two lost fairies wander about and one of them tiny Linda Kells, nearly stole the act when she decided to stage a "single" on her own.

A cloud of white-clad fairies, wings aflutter, with a background of green-garbed gnomes, a "guiding bird" and a wicked witch clad in traditional apparel enhance the colorful scene as does a galaxy of "gingerbread men." The whole provides a brilliant presentation of the famous story.

Mysterious China with its haunting music and Oriental costuming features the number "In a Chinese Garden." Yellow-and-black garbed mandarins, pig-tailed and smocked do a captivating Chinese dance with pretty blue garbed collie girls. Wilma Graham and Gladys Beatty impersonate Ana Mae and Wong, while Doris Kerr as the Golden Butterfly gives an outstanding performance in her solo role. The entire skit is cleverly done.

The riotous gay coloring of South America is seen in the number the "South American Sway" in which ten couples representing senoritas and caballeros glide through and intricate maze of skating figures to typical South American rhythms. Gordon Davies and Olivia Weese head this skit with a smart performance.

Lovely Irish Number

Forty attractive young colleens in the traditional green of Old Ireland, present an attractive collective number with the Irish Maid, Wilma Graham, topping off the skit with a clever solo performance.

One of the outstanding features of the show is the presentation of "Scotch on Ice". Forty kilted lasses, with white blouses and glengarries to the skirl of the plattered bagpipes go through a military precision drill that drew rounds of applause. They glided through several changes of formation, whirled in circles, paraded in "column of route" and review order in a performance that was one of the best color bits on the program.

"Mystic India" rounds out the pageantry part of the show, with a delightful offering of colorful costumes and effects appropriate to the theme. Sultan Gordon Davies reclines lazily on a divan while black slaves wave large gaily colored fans over him. Eight harem girls dance for his pleasure to the haunting melodies of Indian music.

Tumbling Acts

Enter the snake-charmer Marylin Kerr, who beguiles four beautiful snake girls from hiding with her flute and artistry. The Sultan, however looks over the harem and decides Miss Betty McNally is "it." She does a rapid change, and with the Sultan glides away in a fine "pair" performance.

Jack Dickens does a tumbling comedy act in true Charlie Chaplin style while Clare Ridley and Ann Putman nearly bring the house down as instructor and pupil. Ridley's mastery of his skates is plainly evident as he tries to emulate the motions of a ballet dancer. The result is hilarious.

Rae Lancaster as the surgeon, Rubin Kline as an interne, Stan Keays and Jim Calnan as nurses and Everett Close as the patient do a side-splitting skit in an "operating room" scene. After extracting numerous articles from a hose-pipe to a log of wood from the patient's "inards," the latter finally "dies" only to "come-to" and chase his tormenters from the scene. The whole is cleverly done, with Lancaster topping off the skit with some neat comedy on skates.

Toronto Skaters Perform

Miss Bessie Henry and Mr. W. A. de Nance Jr. of the Toronto Skating Club delighted the audience with their graceful performance in a "doubles" number. Miss Bette Wrinch and Thornton Opie, junior skating champions of 1947 also gave a sparkling doubles number, and their grace and symmetry of motion easily marked them as top-flight artists. They were given a fine ovation and responded with an encore.

Miss Francis Dafoe, also of Toronto, and a popular favorite here glided over the ice in perfect form. Clad in dark blue with brilliants, the dainty young skater afforded a beautiful picture as she whirled, pirouetted and spun through many difficult ice figures.

Clare Ridley, demonstrated his versatility with a fine singles effort, and his performance left nothing to, be desired. Club waltzes and ten-steps rounded out a splendid program.

FAMED COUNTRY PARSON DIES

Middleton, Conn., Feb. 21 — (AP)— Rev. George B. Gilbert, 76, of Middletown, famed country parson, collapsed and died yesterday.

Mr. Gilbert wrote the book "40 Years a Country Preacher."

Some years ago Mr. Gilbert was chosen as "typical country parson of the whole United States," in a survey conducted by the Christian Herald and Harper's Magazine.

People and the Solunar Tables

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

A good many years ago, while ruminating on the Solunar Theory and the scope of its influence the thought came to me that there was no reason why its effects should not show up in the behavior of people. After all, Homa Sapiens is a mammal, an animal of the higher order of development, and, as such, should have the same awareness and natural inclinations that are evident in other animals. I decided to see what I could find out.

There is a word in our language called "lunacy", stemming from the latin word "luna", or moon. In the development of our language over a period of many hundreds of years, insanity was attributed to the deleterious effects of the moon on certain unfortunate individuals — hence, "lunacy". Well—the Solunar Theory is closely related to moon positions. It might be that this old belief held something that would be of use.

As a starting point, I called on the head physician of one of our State institutions for the insane. He was interested in my idea and we had quite a long talk about it. He told me that at two times during the lunar month—at full moon and again at new moon—he and his staff were kept abnormally busy with the more severe cases in his care. It had not occurred to him to keep track of any daily fluctuation in behavior but he promised to check-up and see if there was anything to it. Six months later he reported to me that, while his findings were still far from conclusive, there was enough evidence of a rhythmic hour-to-hour and day-to-day pattern of behavior to warrant further observation.

With that as a starter, I decided to do some observing on my own score.

Human beings, living regimented lives and finding little need for the finer uses of the senses, have allowed them to become semi-atrophied so that their keeness does not compare with the senses of the wild creatures. Thus, to observe individuals probably would be of little avail. However, group reactions often can be seen quite plainly, as minor effects are multiplied in groups or gatherings until they assume the proportion of major ones.

At that time I was connected with a large New York bank and in our department were one hundred and twenty-seven people. To my surprise and delight, I found that this group reacted, as a group, as completely to the promptings of a Solunar Period as does a school of trout in a stream or a covey of quail in a feeding patch. Between Solunar Periods, the department usually was quiet, people going about their work methodically and not making much fuss about it. With the arrival of a Solunar Period, however, came a pronounced change in tempo. Gradually the office noise and bustle increased; there was more conversation and more moving about; folks seemed to laugh more easily and were generally better-natured. This sort of thing went on for about two hours. Then the activity settled back to normal and remained so for the next three or four hours.

At theatres I found that the same general phenomenon was evident. Anyone who is connected with the theatrical business knows about this. As a matter of fact, they have a name for it. You have heard of a "warm house" or a "cold house". A "warm house" means a responsive audience which laughs and applauds easily. A "cold house" is exactly the reverse.

The reaction is felt on the stage as well as in the audience. Some performances come off with a snap and dash about them that makes them fairly sparkle. Other performances are dull and uninspired, routine business of the day. As I say, I made it my business to check up on this group reaction. I watched audiences and questioned actors and I found that there was practically a one-hundred-per cent co-ordination with the Solunar schedule, particularly when there was a Major Solunar Period in progress during a performance.

Without going too much into detail, this pattern of human behavior shows up in the most surprising places—athletic contests and games, on the golf course, the tennis courts, and the skeet and trap ranges; even at religious services.

Just for the fun of it this winter, keep track of the Solunar Periods when you attend theatres, meetings, lectures, luncheons, etc. Group response is a fairly evident thing, easy to distinguish and interesting to observe. If you happen to be the owner of an inquiring mind, some observations along the lines suggested will give you a great deal of food for thought.

Sam Baroudie, 21, Dies After Being K.O'd in Ring

Chicago, Feb. 21 (AP) — Sam Baroudi, 20, New York and Akron light heavyweight boxer, died in hospital today, six hours after he was knocked out by Ezzard Charles in the 10th and last round of their bout in Chicago stadium last night. He died without regaining consciousness.

Physicians had diagnosed his injury as a cerebral haemorrhage but decided against immediate surgery. He had been taken to the hospital after firemen had failed to revive him in his dressing room.

The young boxer was knocked out for the first time last night when he went to the canvas under the withering attack of Charles, who is ranked the leading challenger to the 175-pound title.

Charles dealt out severe punishment to the New York Negro in the final round of their bout in Chicago stadium, which drew a crowd of more than 11,000. After smashing several blows to the body, Charles, Cincinnati Negro, ripped a left to the chin, sending Baroudi to the canvass.

The knockout was one of Charles' most spectacular during a career of punching his way to recognition as the ranking No. 1 challenger to the 175 pound title held by Gus Lesnevich. It was the first time his young opponent ever had been knocked out or spilled off his feet.

Baroudi came up through the Golden Gloves ranks. He won the Cleveland Golden Gloves crown in 1945 and fought 50 amateur bouts.

Last night's bout was Baroudi's 46th as a professional. Before tangling with the sharp-punching Charles, he had won 40 of his pro bouts, 23 by knockouts.

Baroudi was outweighed seven pounds, scaling 169 to 176 for Charles.

Canadian Junior Track and Field Stars in N.Y.

(By The Canadian Press)

Eight Canadian Junior track and field stars left Toronto yesterday for New York to compete in the United States Interscholastical championship meet at Madison Square Gardens, Saturday. The contingent, in charge of Lloyd Percival of Toronto's Sports College, will meet the cream of U.S. High School, Collegiate and preparatory athletes. Team members are from Toronto, Ottawa, Barrie and Hamilton.

Johnny Clifford, of the Ottawa Ski Club, won the Senior Cross Country race in yesterday's opening event of the Central Canada Ski Championships at Ste. Marguerite, Que. Toronto Marlies Whip Hamilton In Playoff Game

(By The Canadian Press)

Although it's no sure indication to what will follow, last night's two Ontario Hockey Association senior "A" playoff games were very closely - matched affairs — just as fans expected them to be. By contrast, the one junior playoff tilt was a walk-away for the winners.

The semi-finals between Hamilton Tigers and Toronto Marlboros kept some 10,000 Queen city fans on their feet as the youthful Duke crew came from behind to win their first game of the best-of-seven series "A" playoffs by a 3-1 count. Over at Stratford, the Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen and Stratford Indians battled it out on even terms for two periods without either team marking the score sheet. The Dutchmen finally rang up three goals in the final frame to Stratford's one, and took a 3-1 decision. This was the first game of a best-of-three quarter-final series "B."

Hamilton Tigers and Toronto Marlboros skated until the 19:50 mark of the first period before Johnny Conick sneaked the puck past Howie Harvey in the Duke nets after taking a pass from Tom Smelle. Little Ike Hildebrand tied the score early in the middle frame and then both teams played scoreless hockey until the final period.

The Hamilton team tired in the fast going as Marlie went all out to take the lead. Defenceman Harry Psutka scored the winning tally on a pass from Johnny McCormack and then Leo Curik salted the game away with the third Marlboro marker.

Play Was Fast

Play was fast all the way and surprisingly clean, with only 3 penalties being called, two against the Tigers and the other against the Dukes. Howie Harvey in the Duke nets played stellar hockey as he turned aside waves of Hamilton attackers.

The Kitchener - Waterloo - Stratford Indians game was a tight, hard-checking tilt all the way and only a third - period Stratford lapse gave the Dutchmen the chance to rap in the winning goals.

Two periods of scoreless hockey went by as play was closely-matched, and then in the final frame Kitchener went two up on markers by Johnny Blute and Roy Bauer. Mike Dzuira put Stratford back in the game with a goal a few minutes later. Then, with only 27 seconds remaining, goalie Bob Bindernagel was yanked as Stratford went all out for the tieing goal, only to have the strategy backfire as Bobby Bauer scored on an empty net from centre ice.

Officials kept the game well in hand and ruled strictly as 12 minor penalties were handed out.

Barrie Flyers weren't extended much in taking their win from Stratford Kroehlers. The major portion of the night's play was down in the Kroehler zone. Barrie led 1-0 at the end of the first period, moved up to 4-1 at the end of the second and added another in the third.

Bruno Favero was top sniper with two goals while Rusty Aikin, Whit Mousseau and Stan Long added one each. The lone Kroehler marker came from right-winger George Armstrong.

Tonight, series "C" of the senior loop between Hamilton Pats and Owen Sound gets under way at Owen Sound. The junior league will see Oshawa at Windsor for the first game of series "A" and St. Catharines at Galt for the first tilt of series "C."

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 18.

She would be sympathetic, she couldn't blame him. It might be she would love him all the more—if she knew. Women, the right kind of women, were dearly peculiar that way.

"Leaving us, Mr. Orville?" asked the affable clerk.

"Yes. I hope to be here again—when I have more time to—enjoy myself. Any mail for me?"

The clerk handed two letters to Tom.

He glanced at them indifferently. One letter was from the Carryville Flour Mill. Th eother was in an unfamiliar handwriting. He paid his bill and went out to a taxi.

He sank into the cool leather seat with a sigh. Oh well, Velma and he would grin and bear it—somehow. She was a sweet, courageous little thing. He read the short but heartening letter from Mr. Milligen. He had been obliged to confide in the president of the company before coming on this unsavory trip.

"Fine man!" thought Tom. "Solid gold! He's a friend I can rely upon."

He turned the other envelope over curiously. Feminine handwriting! He tore the envelope open eargly. He snatched out the letter and glanced at the signature. It was—it was from Velma! Then his eyes caught the "goodbye" above her name. What the duce!

An instant more and his white face looked out the taxi window as if he were seeing ghosts. But it was only the phanton of the vanishing hope and trust he had so recently placed i none woman.

To receive such a message—when he had been so certain of her confidence in him! To receive this—when he needed the stimulus of her love!

But say! Might this not be further trickery from Louise? Velma couldn't have written this!

He examined the scrawled words more closely. At any rate, it wasn't Louise's backhand penmanship. It was to be expected, though, that the girl was as good at disguishing her writing as she was at prevarication. The scheming little cheat! Yet—the letter said, "I don't believe in your innocence." How would Louise know about the alley affair?

However, she might have happened to be around that night—might have seen a great deal. It must be Louise, all right. Velma wouldn't treat him like this. Louise had been left off to easily after all her treachery. If he and Velma had dealt harshly with her, she wouldn't have dared to try this!

The taxi stopped at the railroad station. Tom glanced at his wrist watch, quickly paid the driver and ran into the waiting room.

To a girl on the switchboard he said, urgently, "Get me Carryville—hurry! My train leaves in ten minutes! Get Miss Wilkins—Velma Wilkins in the Forland Dress Shop!"

The girl nodded, began pulling plugs in and out of the intricate looking instrument board before her. She mumbled, with maddening calm, into the rubber funnel attached to her head. She finally turned to Tom, saying "Number four, please."

Tom raised his twitching eyes to a long row of booths, caught an illuminated "4" over a door and sprinted toward it.

"Hello—Velma!" he was saying a moment later.

There came a faint. "Yes?"

"It's Tom! I'm in Denver! I got your letter!"

"Yes." Her voice sounded singularly cool.

"Velma—do you mean—you wrote that letter?"

"Yes—why not? Sorry—I'm busy."

The receiver clicked. She had cut him off!

Sweat stood out on Tom's pale face. Slowly he pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and wiped his brow. He realized vaguely that he was standing in an managed to pull back the door.

He staggered toward the train ramp like a drunken man. A porter found his bag, asked to see his tickets, noted his reservation, and led him out through the shed to his car.

Tom felt dead in life as the train pulled out for the east. He didn't much care if he were dead. Living was torture. Velma! Velma! Why had she done this to him? He'd been foolish not to tell her the truth from the very beginning. He might have saved himself this jolt.

Still—if a woman couldn't stick to a man when he was in trouble, she wasn't made of the right stuff, was she?

Yes, Velma was, in spite of her change of mind. Something must have happened.

He'd get back to Carryville, talk to her, and fix things up again. She was the only woman in the world he could love—to lose her would be inconceivable.

At twilight, he wandered to the observation platform. He was sitting there alone smoking a cigarette when a girl and boy came out, hand in hand. Soon they were surreptiously kissing. Tom's sigh was fileld with bitter disillusionment. He flung his cigarette to the tracks, reentered the lounge, thinking, "What a fool a man can be over a pretty woman! When he's in luck, she's charming to him. But let him lose that luck and where is she? Bah!"

After the hasty, nerve-racking conversation with Tom, it took all the will power Velma possessed to drag through the remainder of the day. Oh, if she were only free to sob her heart out! But she must prance and strut instead—in formal after formal, to satisfy a woman whose weight was heavy—like her bank account. Why, the inflated idiot couldn't look right in anything!

She wondered what would happen if she should scream—scream as loudly as she could. What a relief that would be! Only they'd think her slightly mad—and maybe she was.

With a set smile on her rouged face, she modeled finally a rose ..satin, backless creation which, at her age, the customer never should look at twice. The exquisite little train switched after Velma's meticulously lifted gray satin heels, the skirt billowing about her slight figure in rich gleaming folds. It made her look almost too beautiful. It was kind of ethereal beauty too fragile to be human.

The customer was enchanted. She would take the gown, in a larger size , of course.

"It may be kittenish for a woman of my years—but never grow old, I say!"

Mae Forland hastily concealed an amused smile and lifted a significant eyebrow in Velma's direction. But Velma ignored it. Nothing could amuse her today—this day when her world had crashed about her in ruins. Tom had received her letter! Tom knew she had written it.

She wondered how long she could hold out against a man she loved so deeply—how long she could hold out against him, even for his own welfare. But then, it probably wouldn't be necessary to worry about that. From now on he'd be disgusted with her. He never would try to get in touch with her again.

For several days after returning to Carryville, Tom alternately felt impelled to telephone Velma, then resisted the insistent throb of his heart—strings. One moment he was grimly determined to have it out with her, the next he had decided he could endure her streak of perverseness, or whatever it was, quite as long as she could. But finally this mood melted altogther. He called her.

"I wish you wouldn't try to talk to me," she said unsteadily. "You see, I'm busy."

"Busy? On a grand moonlight night like this, you must be terribly busy—shut up in a room in an exciting place like the Y.W. You owe me an explanation, Velma. I'll be around in an hour with the car. We might even go dancing. Please, dear."

A tear rolled down her cheek. She sobbed out "Da—dancing? I should think—think you'd—oh, I can't—can't—" and cut him off.

Tom was firmally resolved to see her. Within the hour, he arrived at the Y.W.C.A. and asked the clerk to inform Miss Wilkins he was waiting in the lobby.

FRANCO HOPEFUL OF RECOGNITION BY DEMOCRACIES

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Feb. 21 (CP) — An expectation that the coming year will see Franco Spain recognized and accepted by the western democracies throbs in this capital today.

"You will see our foreign economic difficulties disappear as now have disappeared all of our supposed international political problems," Foreign Minister Martin Artajo said in an interview in which he discussed the prospects for 1948. Already, he said, several nations have adopted a more friendly attitude.

Hopes of further recognition—and with it inclusion in the Marshall aid program—appear based on belief that the democracies are coalescing in a stern front against Communism. Spain regards herself as a veteran of the anti-Communist struggle, and as such entitled to an honored place if the campaign becomes international.

Some non-Spanish observes here go even farther and say that Gen. Francisco Franco and his followers are tending to base their plans on the probability of war between the West and Russia. Naturally government spokesmen maintain discreet silence on this subject, but one high official said in an interview with The Canadian Press:

Another assured me, perhaps over-optimistically, that Spain, as a result of her years-long campaign against Communism, is the only country in Western Europe in which a Communist fifth column does not exist. Her army of 400,000 capable of being expanded to 1,000,000 could guard her as a beachhead in a hostile Europe.

Expressions of doubt that the difference between East and West could lead to war in the near future are met by pointing to the consistently anti - Communist statements of Franco and his henchmen.

"He's been right all along in saying this is a world menace," is the general attitude.

Varying Opinions

Even critics of the Franco regime talk about Spain's participation in the Marshall Plan as "inevitable." Left-wingers, however, set it as a sinister alliance with western capitalism. Conservative critics say it is the only security can be guaranteed in Spain.

"Inflation is becoming so serious that we are headed for a collapse" said a prominent man of commerce. "The United States cannot permit that to happen, with all that the ensuing political confusion would entail."

He admitted grudgingly that the effect of such help probably would be to share up the regime he disliked.

Another argument advanced for Spanish inclusion in the Marshall Plan is along economic lines—that Spain already is a heavy exporter to the rest of Europe, and that with some assistance she could increase these exports and correspondingly lighten the burden of United States' contributions.

Larger imports of fertilizers to increase her agricultural output, rolling stock to aid her overworked transport system, 2,000,000 additional tons of coal a year, cotton for her textile mills, cellulose, tin-plate, sugar, factory machinery and hydro-electric equipment are some of the things she hopes to receive from this source.

Spanish people largely are uncritical of the Franco regime., They may make cynical little jokes about it, but there is no one to suggest publicly that the present economic hardships are due to its shortcomings.

The newspapers give full prominence to anything that can be interpreted as a softening of the foreign attitude toward Spain. Such reports make warming reading Spaniards, who nod agreement when government spokesmen declare: "We told you so."

Dodge Wins Court Case

Dodge, who has a mansion at Windsor, claimed he was tricked into buying the painting during a farewell party before his return to America in November, 1945.'

Reviewing the testimony, Lord Goddard, the trial judge, said that Dodge "from his demeanor and evidence may be described as an alcoholic" and, "on his own showing, was behaving at the material time in what would be described in his own country as 'a common drunk.'"

Lord Goddard said that Eli Berenes, an agent for the sale, is "a person who in business dealings is one to whom one would give a wide berth."

CHEATED CHAIR NINE TIMES

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 21 — (AP) — Lawrence Nathaniel Phillips beat the electric chair again — this time for good. Nine times Governor James Folsom had granted stays of execution, once after the 22-year-old Negro had eaten his "last meal." Last night Folsom commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

Parts of Hong Kong Report Will Be Disclosed

Ottawa, Feb. 21 — (CP)—Some parts of the carefully - guarded evidence of the Royal Commission on Hong Kong may soon be made public, it was learned last night.

Other portions of the probe made in 1942, less than a year after the British colony fell to the Japanese, still are regarded as a military secret.

An informed source said the United Kingdom government has agreed to publication of certain portions of the evidence but prefers that other sections remain undisclosed.

This is the gist of the British government's reply to Prime Minister Mackenzie King's request for permission to table the Royal Commission evidence in the Canadian Commons. John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, has asked that it be produced.

Mr. King gave some indication of British reservations on the subject when he told the Commons yesterday he wished to show the reply to Mr. Bracken before making a public statement.

It was learned that the United Kingdom government coupled with its reply a reservation that inter-governmental correspondence henceforth remain confidential.

Canada had two regiments — the Royal Rifles of Canada and the Winnipeg Grenadiers — in the unsuccessful Hong Kong defence. Total Canadian strength was 2,017.

Hong Kong also has figured prominently in recent Commons discussion of the Canadian Army's special Pacific campaign pay. Defence Minister Claxton said yesterday the government has decided it would not be justified to pay "Pacific rates" to Hong Kong survivors. They were not members of the Army's Pacific force, for which the special pay was authorized.

A government return earlier this week disclosed that none of the 1,825 men who received the pay served in the Pacific theatre of operations.

$30,000 Fire at Vankleek Hill

Vankleek Hill, Ont., Feb. 21—(CP)—A spectacular fire which broke out in the garage of W. R. Willis gutted the building with damage estimated at $30,000.

Firemen, operating the town pumper from cisterns, were unable to check the blaze. Cause of the fire was not known.

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (CP)—As the Commons Price Committee launched its inquiry into recent increases in bread costs in central and eastern Canada, a chain grocery concern advised the committee its profit mark-up on bread was "very much smaller" than on most other fast-selling commodities.

This evidence came from R. G. Meech, vice-president of Loblaw Groceterias, and first witness called as the committee turned its attention to bread.

Asked how the margin on bread compared with those for other fast-selling products, Mr. Meech said it was "smaller."

However, under further questioning, he said the over-all spread on fresh milk was "very much smaller" than on bread.

On bread, it was 17 per cent. On fresh-milk it was five per cent. For butter, the margin was five to seven per cent. Fresh fruits and vegetables had a margin of between 27 and 32 per cent.

Asked for the company's overall mark-up on all sales last August, Mr. Meech said it would be about 17 3-4 per cent.

Security Police Take Headquarters From Socialists

Benes Holds Conferences In Effort to Save Situation

Prague, Feb. 23 (AP)— Communist bidding for supreme power put their security police today before all Czechoslovak government buildings and foreign embassies. Opposition speech was at last partly stifled.

Headquarters of the Czech Nationalist Socialist Party, one of three which withdrew Friday from the government coalition, was seized by police armed with sub-machine guns.

Czechoslovak Nationals virtually were frozen inside the country by an Interior Ministry order requiring new stamps of approval on valid passports.

Police, directed by Communists heading the Interior Ministry, arrested notable foes of the Communists.

Dr. Zdenek Marjanko, Justice Ministry employee who involved a Communist in the perfume box bomb plot last Fall against three ministers, was jailed.

Police were looking for D. Vladimir Krajina, Secretary-General of the National Socialist party, who directed investigations that uncovered the bomb plot. They seized Zdenek Uhl, President of the Medical Students' Union, and Jiri Ptak, former head of the Engineers' Union.

First Display of 'Arms

The display of arms was the first since the political crisis started Friday night with the resignation of 12 anti-Communists ministers from the coalition of Premier Klement Gottwald, a Communist. President Eduard Bennes is carrying out conferences to save the situation.

Communist controllers were in charge of radio and press centres in Slovakia. Armed police surrounded the Czech wireless in Prague.

(In London a Foreign Office spokesman commented that the presence in Prague of V. A. Zorin, Russian Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, "recalls the presence of Vishinsky in Bucharest in 1945." Communist Premier Petru Groza seized power in Romania during a visit of Andrei Y. Vishinsky, First Vice-Minister of the Russian Foreign Ministry.)

In the election campaigning and party strife that has swelled and ebbed in Czechoslovakia for five months, the Communists and their fellow travellers have call-

Anne is a Roman Catholic, while Michael's family belong to the National Orthodox Church of Romania. Under ordinary church procedure, special dispensation is necessary in the marriage of a Catholic to a non-Catholic.

Flier Suffered Torture of Thirst And Hunger for 9 Days on Raft

Brownsville, Tex., Feb. 23 (AP) —Mexican flier, Esteban De Leon, 26, weak after nine days at sea on a rubber raft, told on Saturday how his companion was lost after their plane crashed in the Gulf of Mexico.

Le Leon said pilot Neil Womack, 37, was lost from the bobbing, wave-tossed raft sometime during the second night after the crash.

The twin-engined DC-3 the men were flying crashed Feb. 10, within five minutes of its destination, Ciudad Del Carmen, Campeche, Mexico. It had taken off from Brownsville.

The two managed to get onto the rubber raft the plane carried.

De Leon said pilot Neil Wom- delirious on Feb. 12 and was obsessed with the idea that his wife was waiting for him and all he had to do was step from the raft to greet her.

"Sometime in the night I was awakened when he shouted my name, but by the time I became fully awake Womack was gone from the raft," De Leon said.

"I do not know whether he fell from the raft or was seized and dragged from it by a shark.

"I shouted his name until I was exhausted, but neither saw nor heard him again."

De Leon said he had no water during the nine days on the raft. For food he had only a bird and two fish he managed to catch.

De Leon and Womack were flying seafood from Yucatan Peninsula to Texas and New Orleans.

"Suddenly the left engine began to miss, and immediately caught fire. The right engine quit running and we started down real fast. We levelled out and stalled about 200 feet above the sea," De Leon said.

"The plane fell in from that altitude. I received a few bruises, but Womack was unhurt."

De Leon said he believed the plane remained afloat less than a minute and remembered little of the days after Womack's disappearance.

"All I know is that the sun beat down unmercifully upon me each day, and that from time to time I either went to sleep or lost consciousness."

IMAM OF YEMEN 82-YEAR RULER REPORTED SLAIN

First Intimation is Given in Cairo Newspaper of the Assassination

Cairo, Feb. 23 (AP)—A dispatch to the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram today said the Imam of Yemen was slain in his capital at San'a last Tuesday by assassins who fired from an automobile.

The dispatch, from San'a, said the 82-year-old ruler, Yehia Hamid El Din, died along with his Prime Minister, a grandson, an aide and the driver of the car. Dispatches to Aden last Thursday told of the Imam's death, but gave scant details.

Arab League investigators were en route to Yemen today to look into a civil war reported in progress there in the wake of the old Kiod's death.

The dispatch said three of the Imam's 16 sons took refuge in the palace in San'a but were followed by troops supporting the new regime. Two of them were killed.

Yemen is known to the outside world chiefly for its production of Mocha coffee.

HAREWOOD ESTATE PROBATED

London, Feb. 23 — (AP) —The Earl of Harewood, the King's brother-in-law who died last May, left an estate valued at £549,120 ($2,196,480), it was disclosed in probate court today.

His widow, the Princess Royal, and their two sons, Viscount Lascelles and Gerald, were named beneficiaries after payment of £182,018 ($728,072) inheritance tax.

The estate consists largely of land and stables, industrial securities and ancestral gold and silver plate.

INDIAN STABBED TO DEATH DURING DRINKING PARTY

Charge of Murder Has Been Laid

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 23 (CP) — A charge of murder has been laid against Robert Craig, 27, following the slaying of a 32-year-old Indian who was stabbed to death during a scuffle at a drinking party here early today.

Craig, in whose apartment the party was held, will be arraigned in city magistrate's court and remanded a week without plea.

Craig was reported to have said he and Solomon had been the best of friends over a period of years and they served together with the Canadian army in Italy. Police have not yet determined the cause of the argument which led to the fight.

Seven persons, including Solomon and his wife Mary, attended the party. Police said they found five empty wine bottles in the kitchen.

They said indications were that the two men had several drinks and engaged in a quarrel which ended with Craig taking the hunting knife from a drawer. The struggle for the razor-sharp weapon ensued, police believe, and Solomon was stabbed.

Held as Witness

Craig's wife, Bertha, 25, is being held as a material witness.

"Look what I have done, Bud," he said to Constable Coxon when the officers entered and he pointed to the kitchen sink. There police found the weapon with part of the blood washed off by the tap water.

Police had difficulty forcing their way into the bedroom. Solomon had fallen partly under a day bed and one of his legs was braced against the closed door.

The officers arrived less than ten minutes after the stabbing at 2.30 a.m. but Solomon already was dead.

Solomon, an employee of a Detroit auto plant, was the father of a 21-months-old daughter.

Says First Plan Would Have Wrecked Ruhr

Washington, Feb. 23 (AP)— Henry L. Stimson says the first Morgenthau plan for Germany would have stripped all industry from the huge Ruhr area and "thoroughly wrecked" the mines.

The United States Secretary of War recalls that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill initialled the plan at Quebec in September, 1944. But later, when he read the exact words of the agreement to the President "he (Roosevelt) was frankly staggered and said he had no idea how he could have initialled that: That he had evidently done it without much thought."

In an article in the Ladies Home Journal, Stimson recalls the United States cabinet struggle over the Morgenthau plan.

Work on occupation plans for Germany began in July 1944. Several cabinet meetings took up the subject in September. In mid-September Roosevelt met Churchill at Quebec, where Morgenthau's ideas were approved, it was related. Two months later the plan had been shelved.

FOUND DEAD IN LONELY CABIN

Kirkland Lake, Feb. 23 (CP)— Police Constables Stan Timmerman and Bud Lebar of this town fought their way through chest deep snow yesterday to reach the lonely cabin where Mike Samppi, 66, lived in the Benoit district, northeast of Bourkes. When they arrived they found Samppi dead, and three hungry Persian cats guarding the body.

Samppi or Johnson, was last seen alive Thursday. He evidently had a heart attack. Police brought the body to Kirkland Lake.

Winnipeg, Feb. 23 (CP)—Frank Ferraro, 33, of Belleville, was acquitted Saturday on a charge of murder in the dance hall death Jan. 20 of taxi driver, Hugh Scott, 48. The jury deliberated 15 minutes. Mr. Justice A.M. Campbell, in discharging Ferraro, told the jury he agreed with the verdict. Scott had been killed in a fight at the dance hall that broke out between members of two parties, one of whoch included Scott and the other Ferraro.

Winter Conditions Blamed for 48 Deaths in France

Paris, Feb. 23 —(AP)— Hazardous winter conditions were blamed today for weekend accidents which killed 48 persons and injured 68 others in France and Switzerland. A bus, a plane and a train were involved in three separate mishaps.

Near historic Utah Beach, on the French channel coast, a huge new 90-passenger, six-engined flying boat plunged into the sea Saturday afternoon and police said they were sure all 19 persons aboard were dead.

Two bodies, mangled beyond recognition, washed ashore last night and gendarmes said they felt certain they were from the plane.

The craft — making an experimental run — was last seen fighting through a snowstorm trying to gain altitude.

Near Lyon, a bus carrying members of the Lyon cross country team, skidded on a snow-packed highway, slid into a ravine and plunged into a river yesterday. Ten young athletes died, 20 others were taken to hospital.

At Wadenswil, Switzerland, near Zurich, at least 19 persons were killed and 48 were hurt yesterday when a ski train was derailed and rammed into a three-storey building. Icy rails and faulty brakes were blamed.

Escapes Through Ventilator Near Whirling Fans

Dundas, Ont., Feb. 23 (CP) — Held in the cells under Dundas town hall on a drunk charge, Hector McKinnon of Brantford escaped through a 30-foot cold air ventilator during the supper hour last night, came out of the duct into the furnace room and raced out a rear cellar door, police said today. Earl Jack, Chief Constable, and other officers were absent at the time.

Although there are three cells in the centre of the block, police said McKinnon had not been locked in one of them, and was free to walk about the concrete room.

Chief Jack said he found a break in a huge elbow of the duct only two feet above whirling circulating fans.

"Another two feet along the duct" the Chief said, "and he would have been chewed up by the fans."

ARM OF LAW EFFECTIVE

Brantford, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Reaching across 7½ years, the long arm of the law caught up with Hercules Reeves of Hamilton. Reeves was convicted of a charge of failing to report an accident here Oct. 31, 1940.

The accident involved injuries to a Brantford girl. Evidence was introduced at the trial today that Reeves had been summoned to police court on Nov. 6, 1940, but had failed to appear. A bench warrant was then issued but wasn't executed until Reeves returned to Brantford several days ago when he was arrested He was fined $25 including costs.

BRITAIN'S MERCHANT FLEET NEAR PRE-WAR SIZE

London, Feb. 23 — (AP)—Britain's merchant fleet is nearing restoration despite "unparalleled wartime losses," the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom said last night. In 1939, the mercantile fleet stood at 17,750,000 gross tons. Despite the losses, the tonnage at the end of 1947 was 16,000,000 excluding 1,000,000 tons of returnable tonnage.

SOMES CASES OF 'RETALIATION' CHARGED

Official Asks For Hearing at Probe

Ottawa, Feb. 23 (CP)—Wholesalers have begun "retaliating" against some retailers because of their evidence given before the Commons Prices Committee, it was charged today before the Committee.

This accusation was made in a telegram from George Christensen, association director of the Foods Division of the Retail Merchants' Association, who was a committee witness last week.

Mr. Christensen's wire was read to the committee by Ralph Maybank (L-Winnipeg South Centre), acting chairman, as the body opened another week of investigation into recent rises in Canadian commodity prices.

The retail official also charged he had not received co-operation in his appearance before the committee, and he asked for another hearing tomorrow at which Association witnesses might give further evidence. It was decided to have the committee's steering group work out a time for the appearance.

R. G. Meech, Vice-President of Loblaw Groceterias, today resumed evidence concerning bread prices, which he opened on Friday.

Under questioning by Roland Beaudry (L-Montreal-St. James) Mr. Meech said there was no financial tie-up between his firm and Canada Bread.

Commission Chairman H. A. Dyde asked Mr. Meech why there had been an increase from 2.55 to 3.65 cents a loaf in the spread on Canada Bread sold by Loblaws in Toronto between last Sept. 1 and Jan. 27.

Mr. Meech said the price had gone up, and the percentage increase was only from 25.5 to 28 per cent.

"We don't think that is out of line," the groceteria executive added. He said the real reason for the larger spread probably was that this type of bread was selling through the trade at the same price.

Kingston Taxi Driver Robbed Of $2,200

Kingston, Feb. 23 — (CP) — George Smyth, 22, told police in hospital today he was slugged at 3:30 a.m. by two soldiers of Barriefield camp here and robbed of $2,200. Extent of the head injuries was not yet determined.

Smyth, owner of a taxicab service, said he drove the soldiers from a restaurant to the camp and was in the act of making change when he was struck without warning. He estimated he was unconscious an hour and then made his way to the married quarters at the camp and gave the alarm. He collapsed after telling police officers of the assault.

Sixteen Pelee Island Residents Have Narrow Escape From Drowning

Pelee Island, Ont., Feb. 23 — (CP) — Sixteen residents of this Lake Erie island were safe at home today, shuddering a little at the realization of how close they came Sunday to crashing through the ice into 40 feet of water.

"They might have all been drowned," said Frank Logan, secretary of the Pelee island telephone system, who made two frantic but unsuccessful attempts to warn the party that a 100-ft. split in the ice blocked their path homeward to Pelee.

The 13 men, two women and one child had set out around noon Sunday in four automobiles and a truck on a trip to Put-in Bay on the Ohio mainland.

They made the trip despite the threat of an east wind which, as every Pelee Islander knows, can blow the ice out in hardly any time at all.

On the return trip Mr. Logan telephoned to Put-in Bay to warn them of the ice rift. He missed them there and was also too late at North Bass Island, the last stepping off place 12 miles southwest of Pelee.

Just a short distance off the shores of North Pass Island the truck driven by William Lamb broke through the ice and submerged. The five occupants managed to jump to safety.

The party, realizing the ice was unsafe, headed back to North Pass Island.

There they learned that the break-through of the truck was a blessing in disguise for it saved them from the possibility of meeting a worse fate in the ice-rift 10 miles further on, just off the shores of Pelee.

A telephone call was made to Put-in Bay and Milton Herschberger took off in his twin-engined transport, landed on the ice at North Bass, picked up the stranded Pelee Islanders and brought them safely home.

The cars probably will remain on the island until the Spring break-up permits a scow to bring them back to Pelee. An attempt to salvage the truck might also be made later.

9 British Soldiers Killed In Fighting After Explosion

Arabs Claim Their Forces Responsible for Bombing

By JAMES M. LONG

Jerusalem, Feb. 23 (AP) — Jerusalem was virtually paralyzed today as gun-carrying Arabs, Britons and Jews patrolled a city made bitter and tense by yesterday's bombing of the Jewish sector, in which at least 52 persons died.

Rescue workers clawing at the wreckage of two hotels, three apartment houses and scores of shops along two blocks of Ben Yehuda Street extricated nine more bodies today, boosting to 52 the number of dead At least 88 injured have been dug from the debris. Hagana workers said there possibly were more victims in the rubble.

Jews Blame British

Arab leaders said their commandoes set off two truck loads of explosives which caused the blast but Jews seemed convinced that British troops were somehow responsible. Nine British soldiers were killed in retaliatory gun fighting after the explosion and three Jews lost their lives. The death toll for the day thus stood at 64.

One of the dead Britons was identified at Flt. Lt. Graham Douglas Cox, 28, nephew of Col. A. N. Jones of Halifax. Cox was a member of a R.A.F. regiment stationed here.

Streets were mined and a triple guard stood duty at British Security Zone gates and at vital administrative and military buildings.

Jews worked feverishly to strengthen their own barbed wire and cement block barricades.

All Jewish sections of the city were ordered out of bounds to the military.

Threat of Execution

Irgun Zval, extremist Jewish underground group, proclaimed: "As from today all British personnel, military and police, entering Jewish sections will be subject to execution."

The already crippled civil administration was rendered virtually non-existent as the city was blocked off into three zones of war.

Jewish rescue workers refused to use British firefighting and debris clearing apparatus sent to the scene. One of the first British policemen to arrive after the blast was beaten and British correspondents were threatened.

There was no official estimate of the damage caused by the blast. A Jewish source said it amounted to "millions of pounds."

One Arab military source said the explosives were placed by "seven Arab commandoes" in Palestine police uniform. The Commandoes had been trained in Syria under Czechoslovak officers."

Reports that the attackers were in uniform increased anti-British feeling among the Jews.

FIRE DAMAGES SEPARATE SCHOOL AT KINGSTON

Children at Time Were in Yard Enjoying Their Morning Recess

Kingston, Feb. 23 (CP)—Damage was estimated at between $6,000-$8,000 when fire late this morning swept through partitions of the north-side rooms of the 94-year-old St. Mary's separate school.

Firemen confined the blaze to the one section of the stone structure and main damage was caused to the furnace room, an office and two classrooms.

Cause of the fire is not known. No one was injured in the blaze which broke out while most of the children were in the yard enjoying their morning recess.

Only a few of the children had re-entered the school and these were guided to safety within a few minutes.

Miss Almon Doolan, principal of the school, said she could not say how or where the fire broke out. "I smelled smoke while the children were at recess. One of the boys and I went down to the furnace room but there was no sign of smoke.

"Then all of a sudden the whole building was filled with smoke and we called the fire department."

Firemen were delayed for a few minutes in the early stage of the blaze when it was found that a nearby hydrant was frozen.

This was the second serious fire in the school within five years. In 1943 extensive damage was caused in the same section.

Police Help Get Blood Supply To Sick Woman

London, Ont., Feb. 23 (CP) — Provincial Police rushed a quantity of blood to Tillsonburg hospital last night after an auto carrying three men on the emergency trip rolled over and burned on a highway east of London.

Her husband, Norman, brother-in-law, Kenneth Karns, and her brother Elmer Long were en route to hospital here for a supply of blood for a transfusion when their car came to grief.

The three men luckily escaped injury and hitch-hiked to London, obtained the blood and then hitch-hiked to Ingersoll where Provincial Constable Neil Chamberlain learned of the emergency. He completed the trip in a police cruiser.

Merchants Generally Observe Ten O'Clock Opening Hour

Local merchants showed about 90 per cent co-operation in the voluntary 10 o'clock opening hour this morning, it was shown by a survey of the business section between nine and ten o'clock.

At Friday's meeting of the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce held to discuss the current power shortage, merchants voted to voluntarily keep their stores closed until ten in the morning as a measure to conserve power. Merchants, also, indicated they could save power by reducing the number of lights in their stores.

All Larger Stores Closed

All the larger stores on both sides of Front Street complied 100 per cent with the voluntary late opening, although some of the smaller stores were seen to be burning lights and in some instances doing business.

Tobacco stores, almost without exception were open and doing business, although in some instances lighting had been cut; also drug stores and restaurants were open. One or two of the smaller groceries were open with lights burning while the same number of smaller butcher stores were burning what appeared to be a normal complement of lights. One shoe store was fully lighted.

But for the most part merchants had complied to the letter with the voluntary 10 o'clock opening, with the majority of doors being locked and only a night light left burning. In others one or two lights were seen as employees supplied shelves in preparation for the day's business.

15 P. C. Loss for Workers

As result of the compulsory power interruptions ordered by the local utilities commission, local industrial workers will lose approximately 15 per cent of continue. their pay as long as interruptions

This was the estimate over the weekend of a number of local industrialists who stated in their respective plants the wage loss to workers would range between $900 and $1,500 per week. Loss to industries from a dollar and cent standpoint was not estimated but industrialists stated production had been cut up to 20 per cent. In some operations continuous power is necessary.

Starting today power interruptions will affect industry for one hour and in some instances one and one half hours. Power will be shut off from seven until eight in the morning and from five until six in the afternoon. The last power interruption will affect industry only where plants operate after five o'clock.

One Plant Open Saturday

One plant in the city will make a temporary return to Saturday operation in an effort to maintain factory production at a normal level.

Public Utilities Manager, O. H. Scott, has stated that Belleville's power allotment from the Hydro Electric Power Commission had been cut to 100,000 kilowatt hours per day, meaning a reduction of approximately 15,000 kilowatt hours from the normal daily demand.

If through voluntary consumption in the homes and in industry and stores, the consumption was not held below the above allotment, then power interruptions would be necessary until the power situation improved with the coming of spring thaws.

Crowds of people thronged the east bank of the Moira River south of the lower city bridge on Sunday afternoon, their gaze centred on activities in connection with the laying of the 18-inch water main now in the process of installation.

As they looked, a helmeted figure, grotesque in appearance, emerged from a shack erected on the causeway. It ambled slowly towards the ice-strewn water. Men made certain adjustments to the figure's equipment Snake-like lengths of hose were laid out.

Sinks Like Stone

Poised for a moment above the water, the figure nonchalantly stepped off the planked temporary wharf. A splash and it sank like a stone. Bubbles of air gurgled on the surface of the water.

An hour and a half later there came a signal from the depths. The circular-shaped helmet broke water and ice, and with the help of workmen the figure scrambled to the wharf.

Inside the strange apparel, heavily weighted with lead and other metals, and encased in huge boots weighing 25 pounds each, was Duncan Hand, foreman of the Canadian Dredge and Dock Company, Toronto, who specializes in diving work for his company which is installing the large pipe on the bottom of the river.

Not Always Easy

"Nothing to it," murmured a spectator, as Hand slowly waddled toward the shack. But Hand has other ideas. He has had seven years' experience in this type of underwater work, and it is not all beer and skittles.

Take today for instance. This morning he went down through ice-plugged twelve feet of water to connect two of the thirty-six sections of pipes. He sank slowly through water that was transformed into a soupy mass by accumulation of frazil ice. The density of the water was such that he was practically helpless. He could hardly move his arms.

Near him the pipe showed dully through the thick mass like a dormant snake. He endeavored to make his way to the joint, but the water was so thick with ice he could make but very slow headway. He signalled to his mates above. And it was not without strenuous effort on their part that he was brought to the surface. Operations were called off for today, or until the water is clear, more or less, of the mushy ice.

Diving for Seven Years

But that is all in the day's work for Hand. He has been doing diving work for the past seven years, making his first descent when he was sixteen years of age. A strong husky lad, he tips the scales at over 200 pounds, and in full equipment causes quite a water displacement.

His work here demands from 90 minutes to two and one-half hours to complete one joint. Working slowly, methodically, yet efficiently, he painstakingly inserts ten-inch bolts into position after a "collar" has been placed over the joint, and with his wrenches, fixes them firmly in position. Sandbags are placed in position around the joint to protect it. He works without a light in twelve feet of water. Pressure is light averaging around five pounds. The only heat is generated from his body and in water like that in the Moira at the present time, "a fellow has to keep working to remain warm."

Heavily Weighted

The heavy divers boots he wears are weighted with lead, and weigh about 25 pounds each. Around his waist Hand wears a special belt, studded with lead ingots. The whole affair weighs over 100 pounds. A brass helmet, and shoulder piece, heavy rubberized suit, two of three suits of underwear, sweaters, pants and heavy socks complete the outfit. Yet under water he works with little or no discomfort, albeit the speed of production is slowed down considerably.

"Here," he smiled to a reporter this morning, "is the chap who carries my life in his hand." He pointed to Roy Chisamore, who hails from below Kingston, who is Hand's "tender." Chisamore directs the air-pump which sends life-giving air to Hand while below. He is in direct talking communication with the diver at all times, and controls air-flow at the latter's directions.

In lighter vein, the reporter asked Hand if he saw any fish during his underwater operations. diver looked up and shook his head.

Too Impure for Fish

"Listen, sir," he said, and there was sincerity in his voice. "From what I've seen down there I don't think a fish could live in this river. This is the first city of its size that I've seen that uses its own river for a sewage disposal plant."

Seven joints will be necessary to complete the pipeline. Five have been completed, and the remaining two would have been completed today if weather had permitted.

Hand started diving when he was a mere stripling. Came the war and he joined the Canadian Navy as an able seaman. He was sent to Halifax when he engaged in diving operations for the Navy. His work consisted of repairs to damaged warships and merchantmen and at times he went down as far as 130 feet. After two years he was discharged and resumed his civilian capacity with the Canadian Dredge and Dock Company.

"You think this is a job," he smiled. "There's one under way in Toronto that calls for a pipe nine feet in diameter, in lengths of 100 feet that each weigh 280 tons."

Mr. Jack Stokes is the superintendent of the company here and is in charge of all operations.

More Than 8,000 Driving Licences Suspended in '47

Toronto, Feb. 23 (CP)—Driving licences of more than 8,000 Ontario motorists were suspended last year in an effort to keep reckless and irresponsible drivers off the roads, the Highways Department said today.

The Highway Traffic Act provides for suspension of the driver's licence and owner's permit pending proof of financial responsibility. This measure is evoked following a variety of convictions ranging from inadequate lights to manslaughter.

Licences were also suspended at the discretion of the highways minister in the case of motorists convicted of careless driving, driving while intoxicated, reckless and dangerous driving, and theft of motor vehicles.

The act provides $25-$100 fines with possible imprisonment of 30 days for the first conviction of driving while under suspension and for a repeated offence, fines up to $500 and imprisonment not exceeding six months.

Coroner's Jury Returns Open Verdict in Deaths of R. Gannon And Miss H. Beary Near Foxboro

A completely open verdict was returned here Saturday night by a coroner's jury at the adjourned inquest looking into the deaths of Miss Hilda Beary, Dundas St., and Robert Gannon, local taxi driver, who met death early on Christmas morning as a result of a two-car auto crash on Highway No. 14, just west of Foxboro.

No blame was laid against either the dead taxi driver or against Dr. R. Vandervoort, driver of the second car. The two cars collided almost headon, resulting in instant death for Miss Beary and Mr. Gannon, and sent three others to hospital.

Conflicting Evidence

Conflicting evidence from eye-witnesses of the fatal crash which killed the two local persons served to confuse the jury but they deliberated only 35 minutes before bringing in their verdict.

First witness called at the adjourned hearing was Keith Scott, Ottawa, who with Mrs. Scott had seen the fatal crash.

Mr. Scott said that he and Mrs. Scott, with Mrs. Scott driving, had been proceeding west toward Stirling when some distance west of Foxboro their auto had been passed by the Vandervoort car. "The Vandervoort car passed us and the crash between it and the taxi took place almost immediately," he said. He could not judge the speed of the Vandervoort car although he said "it passed us rather quickly."

Questioned as to which side of the highway the accident had occurred, Mr. Scott stated that the taxi, or eastbound car, "seemed to be on its own side of the road."

Evidence Corroborated

Mrs. Scott corroborated her husband's testimony, stating that their car had been travelling between 35 and 40 miles per hour when it was passed by the Vandervoort auto. She had seen the car coming up from behind, and had also seen the lights of the car approaching from the opposite direction.

"I was so frightened when the Vandervoort car turned out to pass that I just automatically slammed on the brakes," she said.

Questioned as to whether the Vandervoort car had completely passed their car before the crash took place, Mrs. Scott replied that she could not see how the Vandervoort car could have had time to get back to its own side of the road. She could not state how far ahead the Vandervoort car was when the crash occurred.

Passenger Gives Evidence

Miss Helen Munroe, passenger in the taxi driven by Mr. Gannon, told how she and Miss Beary had accompanied the taxi driver when he took two passengers to Stirling. On their return to Belleville she recalled they had met two autos "when the one behind apparently turned out to pass."

As she recalled it the car in front had already passed their vehicle when the car behind turned out as if to pass only to crash into the car in which she was riding.

This part of the evidence given by Miss Munro conflicted with that given by Mr. and Mrs. Scott who stated that the Vandervoort car had already passed their vehicle when the crash occurred.

Miss Munroe could not say on which side of the road the crash had occurred although she was quite sure "we were on our own side of the road and that Bob did not turn out." She admitted that there had been drinking in her car but stated the driver had not been travelling unduly fast.

Seemed to be Back

Mrs. Vandervoort recalled their car catching up to the car ahead and of following it for some distance before turning out to pass. "We seemed to be back on our own side of the road and with nothing to worry about," she said. "I am certain we were on our own side of the road when the crash occurred."

Her first impression of the oncoming car was when she saw the lights directly in front, she said.

Dr. Vandervoort was also positive that his car had got back onto the right side of the road when the crash occurred. His recollection of events immediately preceding the accident were hazy and he could not definitely recall passing the Scott car.

His first intimation of the oncoming car had been simultaneous with his wife crying "look at those bright headlights."

"The car then seemed to be right on top of us," stated the witness.

In comment to the jury Coroner Dr. Carleton pointed to the medical report showing that alcohol had been present in the blood of both the dead taxi driver and of Miss Beary. He also stressed that a person taking a drink of intoxicant had no business driving a car.

Three Toronto Men Arrested After Wild Chase

Toronto, Feb. 23 (CP)—A wild chase through West Toronto streets early yesterday resulted in the arrest of three Toronto men— one shot in the stomach— and climaxed an alleged break-in at th Ontario Licence Bureau office at Fort Erie The trio is held on charges of shopbreaking while a fourth man is being south by the police.

Fort Erie police said the men— Edward Blair, 28; Mickie Metrunitz, 30, and Mike Stefanick, 30, all of Toronto— were caught in the bureau about 2 a.m. yesterday. After a tussle in which Metrunitz was shot in the stomach, they fled towards Toronto in an automobile. Early reports said amount of loot, if any, was unknown.

About an hour later, a Toronto police cruiser sighted the getaway car nearing the city's west limits and gave chase.

On west-central Northcote Avenue, the car, which police said was driven by Metrunitz, smashed into a police car which was parked as a road-block.

ed for the arrest of Dr. Peten Zenkl, National Socialist Deputy Premier.

Zenkl and all the other ministers still have parliamentary immunity. So has Krajina, a deputy. Unless the Interior Ministry rides down the consitutional processes, they cannot be arrested.

The National Socialist Party headquarters were seized just before noon. The party is one of three seeking to withdraw from the coalition government headed by the Communist Premier, Klement Gottwald.

Two hours after the seizure, the Czech press agency professed to know nothing of the situation. The Ministry of Interior, controlled by the Communists gave no explanation.

Dr. Dzenek Marjanko, an employee of the Ministry of Justice, was arrested earlier. Marjanko worked for the Ministry headed by Prokop Drtina, a National Socialist and one of the 12 anti-Communist ministers who resigned Friday.

President Eduard Benes began new conferences in an effort to save the situation.

Refuses Premier's Demand

Since Friday night he has refused Communist Premier Klement Gottwald's demand that Gottwald be allowed to appoint Communist sympathizers to succeed 12 non-Communist ministers who have offered their resignations.

His first scheduled meeting today was with leaders of the Slovak Democrats, the dominant Anti-Communist Party in semi-autonomous Slovakia and one of the three parties that withdrew ministers. The President is an Independent.

The Communist Ministry of the Interior imposed new police measures. The first was announcement of the Czechoslovak radio today that passports of Czechoslovak nations are not valid from now on unless they bear a special new stamp of the Ministry.

In Bratislava, Slovakia's state capital, a censor was placed in the office of the Slovak Democratic newspaper Cas (Times), whose Saturday edition was confiscated.

The Anti-Communist ministers belong to the Slovak Democratic, Czech National Socialist and Catholic People's Parties. They handed in resignations Friday because the Communists would not withdraw an order replacing non-Communists with Communists in the security police.

Benes has refused to accept the resignations or to give Gottwald his way.

$600 of Wearing Apparel Stolen From Goodman's Men's Wear Store

Wearing apparel with a value of approximately $600 was taken from Goodman's Men's Wear store on Front Street some time early Sunday morning when the place of business was entered by a back window. The loss was discovered on Sunday.

Investigating police stated that entry into the store had been gained by a rear window where an iron bar was loosened from the sash and the pane broken. The thief or thieves then scooped up shirts, shoes, sweaters, raincoats and a radio and left by the back doors of the shop.

When the breakin was discovered both of the back doors of the shop were open.

Two Homes Entered

The homes of William Eaton, 154 Church Street, and also that of Berkley Stenson, 154 1-2 Church Street, were also entered Saturday night with approximately $20 in cash being taken from the Stenson home. Both homes were ransacked, the thief apparently looking for cash.

A window at Kirkwood's Tobacco Store, Front Street, was also broken, but the proprietor of the store told police nothing had been taken.

Purse of $725 Presented Farmer Who Lost Barn, Livestock in Fire

The good neighbor spirit as well as that of the Good Samaritan still exists in the world. If you don't believe it just ask Kenneth Yorke, Sidney township farmer, who two weeks ago lost his barn and livestock in a fire which burned his large barn to the ground.

Still at loss as to whether to attempt to rebuild his barn and restock his farm, Mr. Yorke was surprised last Thursday evening when a group of neighbors walked into his home and later formally presented him with a purse of $725. The money had been contributed by friends and neighbors of Mr. Yorke. Ex-Reeve Sam Nicholson presided during the presentation of the purse. The list of contributors contained the names of 280 friends and neighbors.

9 BRITISH SOLDIERS

An Arab military leader commented that "the fact the men who bombed Ben Yehuda Street wore British uniforms should not be surprising to the Jews. They have been wearing stolen uniforms and driving stolen British trucks on their jobs for six years."

In Tel Aviv armed Jews who attempted to enter Barclay's bank were driven off by police fire.

In Damascus, Syria, an Arab officer said British intervention in the Hula and Belsan areas of Palestine had checked Arab plans for an early offensive.

The officer said fighting in the Belsan area, some 50 miles north of Jerusalem, halted yesterday. He said 80 British armored vehicles moved between the Arab lines and a concentration of 1,200 Hagana fighters.

The Falklands

Falkland Islands, now in the limelight, are two large islands, East and West Falkland, together of 5,300 square miles, with about one hundred islands surrounding them, the latter having an area of about 1,200 square miles. They lie in the South Atlantic about 300 miles east of the Strait of Magellan. Scenery of the islands bears a remarkable resemblance to parts of the Western Highlands of Scotland. The coast is deeply indented and possesses many fine anchorages. Sheep raising is the chief occupation on two and a quarter million acres. As for the climate it is strictly oceanic, marked by strong winds, equable temperature and moderate fall of rain. Whaling has been one of the most developed of its industries.

The population is small, 2,087. Though the islands are far south, wireless telegraphy was installed in 1912 and cable communication in 1915.

The islands were discovered exactly a century after Columbus discovered America and the discoverer was Captain Davis and Sir Richard Hawkins. The French founded a settlement in 1764 and sold their rights to Spain the next year and six years later Spain relinquished them. A British colony was established in 1765, says the Encyclopaedia Americana, but withdrawn nine years later.

Great Britain has occupied the islands for a long time. In 1928 Argentina reopened the question of validity of claims to ownership, claiming prior rights on historic grounds.

From the time of the discovery of the islands by John Davis and Sir Richard Hawkins, who touched there, Argentina did not show an interest until 1829 when she landed a few soldiers and colonists, who stayed there until 1833 and this is the basis of the Argentine claim. Lately that country has been holding extensive manoeuvres off the islands. Chile has sent a cruiser, which landed President on one of the southern Falkland Islands and laid claim on behalf of Chile.

Readers old enough remember that off the Falklands in 1914 was fought the historic battle between the British fleet under Admiral Sturdee and the German under Von Spee. The German who thought the time opportune to seize the islands, arrived too late by one day, as two British battle cruisers, the Invincible and Inflexible were ready to waylay him. Von Spee was outmatched and the German admiral went down with his flagship. But one of the German squadron escaped, the Dresden. This event gave the British an early command of the faraway seas.

Psychiatric Ward

Portsmouth Penitentiary is soon to have a psychiatric ward with accommodation for twelve patients. The latest in treatment for those confined to the ward will be provided such as electro-therapy and physiotherapy. In the course of time there will be psychiatrists in the prisons of the country.

The ward will be able to apply the principles of treatment to prisoners and to heal the minds of those with an impulse or a warp which has set them at opposition to their fellowmen.

Modern science has made great strides and is adding to its achievements for the good of the individual and society.

That more and more attention will be given to the place of psychiatry in prisons and jails is a certainty, because the public more and more is coming to know the importance of the application of healing and direction especially in this modern day when a great many persons feel the strain and stress of this age.

Unexampled Progress

Movies have so developed that it is difficult even for those who frequented the first motion picture houses back in the first decade of this century to recall what these shows provided as fare, so small was it as compared with the feasts of color, sound, scenery which the movies offer today, when it has become one of the leading industries of the globe. For the great bulk of the people of today the early days are too long ago to remember for that was before most of the people now living were born. The penny show was then offered—one had to drop a penny into a slot and look through a small window at a pint-sized movie which lasted a quarter of a minute. Receipts for the opening day of the peep show were U. S. Battleships, 25 cents; Joseph Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle," 43 cents; "Ballet Dancer, $1.05 and "Girl Climbing an Apple Tree," $3.65. These facts are given in the Royal Bank monthly letter had passed and in that year came one-reel stories. First on the list of these was "The Great Train Robbery." For the next ten years the cinema developed with the stress on the spectacular.

From this has come one of man's greatest industries in history. What will be developments to come? What it has achieved is an amazing growth, the artistry is at the highest peak, the plays are well plotted, they have brought the finest productions to the humblest. There has come the movie actor. The plays have color and they have sound. So advanced are they that millions take their fare in entertainment from the screen. Here are some facts from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Box office returns of the 1,477 theatres in Canada amounted to seventy-five million dollars in 1946 of which the Government collected fifteen million dollars in taxes. For Canada the per capita expenditure in 1938 was $3.02. In 1946 it was $6.15. Two years ago the people of Canada paid 227,538,798 admissions and in Ontario the admissions were nearly ninety-seven million.

102 Great Ideas

The University of Chicago and the Encyclopaedia Britannica have decided between them that 102 great ideas are the basis of western civilization. Five years, almost $1,000,000, and a powerful deal of scholarship have been spent in indexing these ideas (each of which has more than 330 subdivisions) as they are to be traced through 432 "basic" great books by 71 authors from Homer to Freud.

Fine. The specialization of modern society has produced educated men and women who speak no common "language," even when they speak the same tongue. The great ideas which have held society together in the past have been lost sight of by individuals who have devoted themselves to highly specialized skills and techniques. There is imperative need for an atomized society to remind itself of its common heritage of ideas aspiring toward a universal goal.

But we note with raised eyebrows two omissions from this catalogue. The words Spirit and Woman are included only as subdivisions of other ideas. Does this betray an overintellectualized approach, a lop-sided emphasis on masculine logic as divorced from feminine insight, an insufficient recognition that "the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life"?

We note that one of the scholars who worked on the project wrote his own college thesis on "Misspellings in Old Southern Cookbooks." The women who used the cookbooks doubtless overlooked the misspellings and were certainly ignorant of their linguistic implications, but they produced a savory burgoo that surpassed the the descriptive power of words. On a higher level, man and woman jointly must bring these "great ideas" into practical relations with modern life by uniting rational analysis with spiritual glow and grace. — Christian Science Monitor.

NO TOY ATOMIC SETS

Britain has suggested to the United Nations that world scientists be forbidden to manufacture toy atomic sets, "which might prove very dangerous in the hands of our young." Considering the trouble we're having with control of the senior, or adult model, that sounds like a very wise idea. No matter how small an atom you split, it seems bound to make quite a mess of things. — Cornwall Standard Freeholder.

Our youth and manhood are due to our country but our declining years are due to ourselves. — Pliny.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

FOR THE AVERAGE MAN

In a troubled world like this,
What's the average man to do?
Give his wife an extra kiss
And an extra hug or two;
Leave the petty cares behind
As he passes through the door,
And sit down with peace of mind,
Glad to be at home once more.

There is talk of war again,
Though the people long for peace.
Hatred rules the powerful men
And their quarrels never cease.
In the moments tense and grim,
No one heeds the common man.
It is always left for him
To be happy while he can.

In a troubled world like this,
Now the average man should try
Not a single joy to miss
War would certainly deny;
Keep the home a happy spot;
Share the children's hour of play,
Let the worries be forgot;
Make the most of every day.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Did George Washington use tobacco?

Although George Washington raised tobacco for sale as a "cash crop," he did not habitually use tobacco in any form.

Some authorities think he may have smoked a pipe and used snuff for a period before the Revolution. Later, however, he seems to have been definitely allergic to tobacco smoke.

George Washington Parke Custis wrote that Washington could not endure tobacco smoke and had the "utmost abhorrence" of it. According to Custis, who was reared by Washington, the Father of His Country, even when compelled by courtesy and custom to take a whiff from the calumet while conferring with Indians, "drank" as little of the smoke as possible, made a wry face and passed the pipe of peace quickly along to the next person.

But on July 11, 1794, John Quincy Adams attended a reception given to a delegation of Chickshaw Indians by President Washington and Adams wrote in his diary: "As soon as the whole were seated, the ceremony of smoking began. A large East Indian pipe was placed in the middle of the Hall. The tube, which appeared to be of leather, was 12 or 15 feet in length. The President began, and after two or three whiffs, passed the tube to Piomingo; he to the next Chief and to all round."

Under date of April 2, 1767, Washington noted in his "Ledger A": "By 1 Paper Snuff Box 7/6." This appears to be the only entry of its kind in his accounts and does not prove that he was a snuff user. In those days snuff-boxes were a common present and Washington received and gave away many of them.

Representatives Of Britain And U.S. Leave Hall

Vienna, Feb. 23 (AP) — Diplomative representatives of Britain and the United States' legations walked out yesterday on a speech in which the Russian high commissioner to Austria, said the western powers are spending millions to foster war against the Soviet Union.

Charge d'Affaires John Cheetham of Britain, later said he had "started to fidget" when Kourassov began to accuse the "Imperialistic western" powers of having "subsidized Hitlers war."

"When he told the audience that the same powers were now spending millions of dollars to foster another war against the Soviet Union," Cheetham said, "I thought his remarks were too insulting to my country and to the United States Mr. and Mrs Mellan felt the same, and we all left the hall together" (Sidney Mellan represented the United States at the meetings.)

All Air Flights Into Mukden Are Cancelled

Tsingtao, Feb. 23 (AP) —The Chinese air force suddenly cancelled all flights into Mukden today as the plight of that Manchurian city became desperate.

Chinese Communist troops were believed striking an airfield one and one-half miles southwest of Mukden where the Chinese air force was based The city has at least two other fields, however, and a commercial airline was continuing evacuation flights

Six commercial plane flights were scheduled out of Mukden yesterday —enough, officials here estimated, to remove all remaining foreigners except consular staffs

Rev. N. O. Dalhsten, a Seventh Day Adventist missionary, arrived from Mukden yesterday and described conditions there as intolerable."

Winnipeg Moves To Repeal By-Law

Winnipeg Feb. 21 (CP) —The city of Winnipeg is moving to repeal by-law 148 passed by 130 electors in 1881 giving the Canadian Pacific Railway permanent exemption from city taxation.

It was reported today that Monday night council will be asked to consider repealing the by-law and also applying to the Provincial government for ratification of such action by declaring that the rule in question is of no force or effect.

The steps were recommended in the interim report of W.P. Fillmore, special counsel engaged by the city to investigate the whole question of tax exemptions in Winnipeg.

In his report of last Nov. 20 Mr. Fillmore said: "It is submitted that the city of Winnipeg has sound and meritorious grounds on which to base an appeal to the provincial government for remedial legislation."

Only one person voted against by-law 148 which exempted the C.P.R. from city taxation in perpetuity, the railway in turn committing itself to maintain its principal stockyards and workshops in the city.

Local officials question the moral and legal right of any council to pass allegedly unrepealable legislation that would bind all future councils.

In 1881 Winnipeg had a population of approximately 8,000 and Mr. Fillmore said there must have been several thousand voters on the list.

"It seems monstrous to us that 130 voters could forever have exempted the property of the C.P.R. from taxation by the city of Winnipeg."

WHAT DOES A BLOOD COUNT MEAN?

There are approximately five million red blood corpuscles in each cubic millimeter (perhaps 50 cubic millimeters make a drop of blood) of the blood of a healthy person, and 7000 white corpuscles in each cubic millimeter.

The laboratory "blood count" includes usually a reasonably accurate estimation of the number of red corpuscles present in the specimen of freshly drawn blood (from a pin or needle prick of finger or ear lobe). Less than a drop of the blood is drawn into a glass tube up to a mark marked on the tube, and then a kind of clear salt solution is drawn into the tube up to a higher mark, so the blood is diluted in the proportion of one to two hundred from the corpuscles in undiluted blood are so densely concentrated that it is impossible to count them. The diluted blood is placed in a minute chamber in or on a glass holder that is scientifically designated to hold precisely a stated volume of the diluted blood. The specimen is covered with a very thin clear glass, and it is ready for the count.

Under the microscope the yellowish or salmon colored corpuscles (they appear red only when in mass) within several of the ruled squares are counted and the total multiplied b y200 (the dilution) and by 50 since the volume of blood counted is one-fiftieth of a cubic millimeter, to get the number of red cells per cubic millimeter of blood.

Even in the hands of trained technicians the blood count may be in error by three or four hundred thousand red corpuscles per cubic millimeter of blood. Nevertheless it is the most accurate or precise way to measure the strength of the blood.

The white blood corpuscle count is made in a similar way, most frequently to determine whether leukocytosis is present. Leuko (white); cyte (cell); -osis (disease, morbid process). This means a mobilizing of an increase in the number of leukocytes, white corpuscles, phagocytes (phago meaning to eat, swallow)—a good sign that there is acute inflammation, infection or septicemia (blood poisoning) —as in many cases of acute bellyache or "indigestion" where the blood count shows, say: 12,000 to 16,000 instead of 7,000 to 8,000 leukocytes per cubic millimeter, confirming the diagnosis of acute appendicitis and the advisability and need for immediate operation. If the leukocytosis (phagocytosis) is much greater say 20,000 or more in such a case, it indicates gangrenous appendicitis or perforation and the spread of infection through the adbomen and beginning of peritonitis ("inflammation of the bowels"), and every minute the operation is delayed in that stage lessens the fifty-fifty chance of recovery.

Leukocytosis occurs in most acute infections with pus-producing cocci, such as pneumonia, meningitis, tonsillitis, erysipelas, or abscess or acute inflammation anywhere in the body.

In the leukemias the blood count generally shows 100,000 whites per cubic millimeter, but these are chiefly white cells which do not function as phagocytes (ingesting and destroying germs).

Leukocytosis (doubling or tripling of the number of white corpuscles in the blood) is a sign that the body is defending itself against the invading germs. If the blood count in the early stage of pneumonia, for example, shows little or no increase in the number of white cells, the outlook for the patient is not so good.

I accept as fact everything you teach, except about drafts. Every time I get in a draft where body temperature is not the same on all sides I begin sneezing...I believe I must have the germ at all times and it becomes active when conditions are favorable. (J. S. C.)

Answer—More likely you are subject to chronic sinusitis or othre chronic trouble in upper resipratory tract, with which germs have little trouble. Why not have a nose and throat examination and find out?

Bed Wetting

I am 13 years old, big and strong for my age, but I wet the bed almost every night. Have been to two doctors but they did not help me. (K. M.)

Answer—Write again, inclose stamped self-addressed envelope. ask for pamphlet on Bed-Wetting. A great many boys and girls of your age and older still wet the bed. The trouble required treatment in a considerable number of youths before they were ready for training in the Army and Navy.

Marmora Edges Stirling 8-6 In T.V.L. Playoff

Marmora (Special) — In their opening semi-final game with Stirling at Madoc on Friday evening, Marmora won a hard fought game by the score of 8-6. The score was tied three times within the first two periods and although the game was fast, it was very clean and only two minor penalties were meted out. For the winners, Earl Trumble of the kid line starred in getting three goals, one in each period, while his brother Ken, known as "Stubby" topped off a fine performance by scoring twice in quick succession in the third period. The Leonard Brothers were in their usual good form and Gus got in on the scoring list. The whole team combined well to secure the win. D. Bastedo got three goals for his team and the Stirling boys as a whole gave a good account of themselves and the issue of the game was in doubt until the last few minutes. The attendance was probably the best seen on the Madoc rink this season.

Miss Morrow's stay in her home town would be brief. She would leave tonight for Edmonton to begin a month-long exhibition skating tour which will take in Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and St. Catharines.

The Morrow-Distelmeyer team earlier surprised Winter Olympic ice experts by placing third in the Olympic mixed pairs at St. Moritz. In the Olympic singles event Suzanne placed 14th.

Announcement of the award was made by Senator W. Rupert Davies, chairman, Canadian section, Empire Press Union. Competition for the award was under the Union's auspices. He resigned from the Herald last year to join the editorial staff of The Standard.

Taylor Attacks Presiding Judge At War Trial

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 23 (AP) — The latest war crimes trial, besides sending some German commanders to prison, has resulted in an unprecedented attack by Brig.-Gen. Telford Taylor, chief United States war crimes prosecutor, upon the Iowa judge who presided.

The judge, in turn, is quoted as attacking the prosecution's conduct of the trial.

A newspaper man's charge of wire tapping added today to a situation which is likely to bring smiles to German faces.

This was how it came about, by days:

Thursday—The War Crimes Tribunal, with three United States judges in charge, sentenced German Field Marshal Wilhelm List to life imprisonment and other German commanders to lesser terms for war crimes in the killing of hostages in the Balkans.

Friday—Charles F. Wennerstrum, Iowa Supreme Court justice who presided, gave an interview to Hal Foust of the Chicago Tribune. Foust said the judge was disillusioned; that he felt the war crimes trials were too nationalistic in character, and that the prosecution of the almost recent trial "failed to maintain objectivity aloof from vindictiveness."

Saturday—The interview had not been published, but Taylor, somehow learned what it contained.

Sunday — The army's public relations office came out with a Taylor statement blasting Judge Wennerstrum and saying the interview was "subversive of the interests and policies of the United States." Later the Chicago Tribune printed the interview. Its correspondent Foust said "United States army wire-tapping of press communications appeared evident."

Monday—Judge Wennerstrum's comments on Taylor's charges are awaited. He is en route to the United States by plane.

Foust said he interviewed Judge Wennerstrum behind locked doors and sent the story to the Tribune's Berlin office.

"Obviously," said Foust, "somebody at Nuernberg read my copy and reported it to Gen. Taylor."

E. C. Deane, public information oficer here, said he read the story Saturday but was not free to tell how he "came into possession" of it.

He first learned of it Friday night, he said, from somebody who had overheard the interview. He reported he then tried to talk Foust out of sending it, only to be told it already was on its way.

Student Held As Suspect After Shooting

Havana, Feb. 23 (AP)—Manolo Castro, 37, Inspector General of Cuban sports and a former President of the University Students Federation of Havana, was shot and killed by unknown assailants last night.

Carlos Puchol, who was accompanying Castro, also was slain, police said, and two other persons were wounded.

Police said a student had been arrested as a suspect.

Castro was indicted by a United States grand jury at Jacksonville Fla., last November for conspiring to export munitions to Cuba in connection with a revolutionary plot against the Dominican Republic.

GEORGE PARKER
A Set Up Operator in the AO Belleville Plant

Through the above picture we'd like you to meet George Parker, one of the new employees in the Belleville plant of American Optical Company Canada Limited. We are particularly interested in George because he is an emigrant from England who has decided to settle permanently in Canada. The fact that he came to Belleville and accepted a position with this company is indeed flattering and we shall certainly do everything within our power to assure him his decision was wise.

George Parker's World War II record indicates he has the necessary qualities to succeed in his new home. As a member of the Royal Air Force he served in England, Canada, France and Germany. We need men like George to help build Canada and therefore welcome him heartily.

Employed by AO for the past four months, George has already mastered his work which consists of adjusting machines utilized in the grinding of AO ophthalmic lenses. This work, by the way, is particularly important because an improperly adjusted grinding machine spells trouble in the lens manufacturing process.

A member of the AO Social and Service Club, George is also affiliated with the Loyal Order of Moose Lodge. His favorite sport is football.

Mrs. Parker and the children arrived in Canada the week before Christmas, and they have already begun to establish themselves as good neighbors and good Canadian citizens.

OUR GOAL: TO BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR AND A GOOD CITIZEN.

WEDDINGS

CLARK—McNARY

Holloway St. United Church, in Belleville, effectively decorated with ferns and standards of Spring blooms, was the scene of a pretty wedding at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, when Edna Ruth McNary, only daughter of Mrs. Ross McNary, Trent Road, and the late Mr. McNary, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with John William Clark, only son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Clark, of Ottawa. Rev. Charles A. Perkins, minister of the church, officiated, assisted by Rev. John McAvany, of Calvary United Church, Kingston, who is a close friend of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her cousin, Mr. Robert Maxwell, of Stockdale, made a charming picture in her gown of white satin, cut on princess lines with a high neckline, and an allround lace trimmed shoulder collar, the sleeves long with pointed cuffs, with her long embroidered veil falling from a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried an arm bouquet of Bettertime roses.

Mr. Wm. Connor, church organist, accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Edward Cotton, of Kingston, who sang "Because" during the signing of the register. Mr. Connor rendered "O Promise Me" as an organ solo before the ceremony, and played "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" for the processional and recessional respectively.

Miss Loreen May, of Belleville, was her cousin's maid-of-honor, wearing a full floor length model of blush pink taffeta, with matching net headdress, flower trimmed, and long gloves. The bridesmaid was Miss Irene Griffiths, of Belleville, attired in a gown of blue taffeta, fashioned similarly to that worn by Miss May, with matching headdress and gloves. Both attendants carried colonial nosegays of Briarcliffe roses and sweet peas.

The groomsman was Mr. Robert A. Scott, of Ottawa, and the ushers were Mr. Douglas Wiley, of Shannonville, brother-in-law of the groom, and Mr. Garnet May of Belleville, cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a reception for sixty guests was held at the home of the bride, where the spacious rooms presented a gala appearance, decorated in a color scheme of pink and white, with streamers, and bouquets of tulips, daffodils and snapdragons.

Guests were received by the mother of the bride, who wore a gown of blue shadow crepe and a corsage of Briarcliffe rosebuds. She was assisted by the mother of the groom, wearing a gown of emerald green crepe, with gold trim, and a corsage of Bettertime rosebuds.

In the dining room the table with its lace cover, and silver appointments, centred with the wedding cake, made by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. G. W. Bates, over which was suspended a wedding bell used on the occasion of her mother's marriage. Serviteurs for the delicious wedding luncheon were Misses Ruth Spafford, Betty McConnell, Rena Harder and Bernice Williams. Rev. C. Perkins was the genial toastmaster, proposing the toast to the bride, to which the groom capably responded. Other toasts included were to the bridesmaid, to the maid-of-honor, to the bride's mother, to the groom's mother and to the bride's grandmother. Rev. J. McAvany also extended felicitations.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Clark entrained for Toronto, the bride choosing for travelling a suit of grey herringbone, with matching topcoat. She wore black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Following their return Mr. and Mrs. Clark will reside in Kingston.

The bride's gift to the groom was a fitted dressing case, to her attendants silver jewellery, to the serviteurs cups and saucers. The groom's gift to the groomsman and to the ushers were billfolds.

Out of town guests were from Ottawa, Toronto, Kingston, Stirling and Stockdale, Ont.

Dr. Faulkner drew a general word picture of the marvellous achievements of the medical unit which followed field activities in the war zone, under the command of General Wingate.

Personal reminiscences of Dr. Faulkner's experiences among the wounded and sick of his military division, and a brief description of local customs and diseases in the East were presented. One touching tale of the fidelity which marks a genuine soldier "even when the chips are all down" brought the address to a close, and was followed by an interesting discussion arising from questions asked.

Thanks were expressed to the speaker by Miss Anna Johnson, M.A. of Trenton.

Refreshments were served and a happy social time brought a profitable evening to a close.

Veteran Canadian Actress Recalls Some of Her Early Life on Stage

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Feb. 23 — (CP) — After four decades of acting experience, much of it in Canada, Ruth Amos has settled into a Broadway role which marks her first really successful invasion of Manhattan.

The veteran actress, whose first professional experience was in Calgary in 1909, now has a principal role in the comedy, "Strange Bedfellows," at the Morosco Theatre. She tackled Broadway twice previously in two abortive efforts: "Slightly Delirious" and "Please Mrs. Garibaldi."

In her novice days she also played in Saskatoon and Edmonton and during the '20s was leading actress for six years with the Vaughan Glaser Players in Toronto.

Calgary in Boom Days

In an interview the other day she recalled some of the vicissitudes of her 39 years on the stage. Calgary was a boom town when she made her debut there in her teens. It was so crowded that the Repertory Company with which she signed was housed in tents. After each night's performance, members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police escorted the players from the theatre to their tents to protect them from uproarious Indians, who were inclined to get drunk and shoot up the town on the slightest pretext.

While still a novice, Miss Amos at the age of 16 was persuaded to play the leading role in "Camille." She laughed as she recalled the performance termed by reviewers in Calgary as "somewhat different."

Miss Amos, who was born in Detroit, said she always had a "bursting interest" in the theatre.

Glaser 'Rather Difficult'

Eight leading women preceded her with the Vaughan Glaser Players, she said, adding that Glaser himself was "rather difficult to get on with."

During the first 2½ years she played only in straight dramas, not in the musical comedies which were produced at five week intervals. Then one day she asked for and got a part in "Tangerine."

Periodically there were mishaps or near-mishaps to mar the smooth running of productions, some of which were quite elaborate and cost up to $17,000, a large sum of money in those days for a single production.

One play, "Polly of the Circus," called for a small girl to ride a pony onto the stage. On the first night, a Toronto girl, Betty Kinney, duly appeared on the pony. The horse, unused to the stage lights, headed directly for them. But the quick-thinking child averted disaster by leaning forward and biting one of the pony's ears. It stopped.

In Toronto Year Ago

Miss Amos' last appearance in Toronto was a year ago when she played with Luise Rainer in "A Gift for the Bride." "Toronto people hadn't forgotten me," she said. "I was surprised at the number who came backstage afterwards to congratulate me."

She stepped into her current role in "Strange Bedfellows" on five days' notice. Then on opening night here she suffered from an infection in both feet which made it agony to walk. But she played her part, with a doctor and nurse standing by to give emergency treatment if necessary.

Ladies' Auxiliary Sponsors Successful Cubs, Scouts Banquet

On Saturday evening a successful "Father and Son" banquet in Christ Church parish hall was sponsored by the auxiliary ladies of the 8th Belleville pack. Guests to the number of 100 were welcomed by the president, Mrs. M. Button, and the tables were decorated with flags and the colors of the 8th Belleville Cubs and Scouts. A delicious supper was served for which the ladies were thanked by Mr. Latchford, chairman of the men's committee. Mrs. McBride was at the piano for community singing led by Ray Poste, Gordon St. Lewis was invested into the Cubs by Gene Button, Cub Master.

Considerable interest was manifested in the investment of Ray Poste as Scout Master. This impressive service was conducted by Scout Master Douglas Burns. Mr. M. Button, president of the local association, presented the 2nd. class badge to Harry Jeffs, the first scout of the 8th. to earn this honor. Mr. Button congratulated the new Scout Master on obtaining this rank, and expressed appreciation for the fine leadership he has given the boys. First proficiency badges were presented to Max Wodzak and Harry Jeffs by Mr. Jones, a member of the local association, and one-year service stars were presented to Scouts James Cooke, Billie Post, Charles Jeffs, Jack Lafferty, Harry Jeffs and Max Wodzak by Scout Master Douglas Burns Gene Button, Cub Master, followed with a going-up ceremony for three Cubs into the scouts, namely G. Sinfield, Tommy Findlay and Ernest Laney.

Mr. Jones, assisted by Mr. Wagar, kindly showed some fine films, which were much enjoyed by all present. A vote of thanks and appreciation was presented to the ladies of the 8th auxiliary, and to all who had helped to make the evening a success, by Mr. Garrison, Mr. Meagher and Mr. Wagar.

Breathe Deep For Beauty

Evelyn Keyes, of the Silver Screen, knows the beauty advantages of deep breathing.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO you know that you can pluck rosy cheeks out of the air? Lovely blushes that no rouge pad can duplicate! You'll never have them if you are a cushion sitter and hate to move about. Activity is a law of life; outdoor activity that spurs circulation and makes the muscles peppy is a law of beauty.

It was meant that the lungs should be air-washed, that oxygen should be lapped up freely, drawn down into the lowest lobes of your bellows. Stale air must be fully expelled. These practices have wonderful cosmetic values. While there are many healthy girls who are not beautiful, there are no beauties who are not healthy. Vitality and well being are essential to pulchritude.

Deep Breathing

By deep breathing is meant a rhythmical lifting and descending of the diaphragm, done slowly and regularly. This exercise compresses the stomach, the liver and the intestinal tract, thereby helping them to function normally and toning the muscles of the internal organs. Maybe you are not interested in your insides, lady? You'd better be. They are influences that mold the figure for better or worse. They can have favorable or unfavorable effects upon the complexion.

Whenever you are hoofing it, do your breathing exercises; the passerby won't know that you are attending to a good looks duty.

Count Five

With a certain number of steps draw in the air, hold it while you count five; with the same number of steps, exhale. It is like a game. First thing you know your flesh will be warm and glowing. You will experience a sense of well being.

Poor sleepers should practice deep breathing. They should lie on the back in bed, breathe deeply and lowly. By flushing the cells of the lungs they will stimulate the blood streams in their work of picking up fatigue poisons that cause one to be weary, nervous and restless. Insomnia victims have more than their share of beauty woes. No body repairs going on, according to Nature's plan.

COURTEOUS

You MAY never meet her but you do know her courteous, friendly "Number Please" and polite "Thank You."

Though switchboards are busier than ever with the many new telephones, hers is still "The Voice with a Smile."

More telephones are being added right along. Our constant aim is to provide more and better service . . . always at the lowest possible cost . . . to give greater value to every telephone user.

Rent and Eviction Controls on Some Buildings Lifted

Ottawa, Feb. 23 (CP) — The Prices Board last night announced that rent and eviction controls have been lifted from tourist cabins, summer cottages, ski lodges, winter chalets and hunting chalets which now are vacant or may become unoccupied.

Current tenants are still protected by rental regulations and cannot be required to vacate so long as they are well behaved. If a tenant vacates then the accommodation will be free of control.

Officials explained that the type of accommodation covered by the order is considered in the same category as hotel accommodation. Last spring hotel rooms were freed from rent control.

FASHIONS IN MAKE-UP

We've heard enough goodness knows, about changing one's shape to suit the styles of the moment. As fashions in clothes do a turn-about, so do fashions in faces. Must we make over our faces? Looks very much like it. Clothes have gone quaint; the highlighted complexion looks funny with the small waist, peplums and all that.

Make-up of course, is an individual matter. No matter what the beauticians say, the average woman is going to lay on the paint and calcimine according to her own fancy. Which is pretty silly, since a good deal can be learned about cutaneous decorations.

When you apply a foundation cream, do you spread it over your countenance, as you apply cold cream at night? It is bad technique. You should place a dot of the foundation on your forehead nose, cheeks, chin and neck. Then unite these dots with the balls of your fingers until you have a light, even film, using upward movements to give the flesh a "lift."

The color of the foundation should be the same color as the skin, or slightly darker — although, in the summer season, one can go a bit golden, if one desires. To use too much of the foundation is to make the face look heavy. The skin will lose delicacy of appearance.

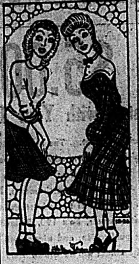
Apply powder lightly. Make-up artists often use a pledget of cotton after putting on the powder with a pad. By this means the powder is never patchy; it is perfectly distributed. Use the eyebrow brush then. See that every bit of powder is removed from the lashes.

If you are still an addict of the commercial blush, this is the time to form cheek roses. Let us suggest that, if you use cream rouge, you tap it on lightly and blend. The highest point of the coloring should be on the cheek bone. To place low is to give the face a dragged-down look. Why women do that, goodness only knows.

If the compact is the favorite, start under the eye, go up toward temple, down to the centre of the cheek, back to starting point.

Don't fancy you can paint yourself a new mouth of entirely different design. It cannot be done without giving an appearance of artificiality, which is distinctly out of today's mode. Don't let the rosy glow pass over the white skin surface. Outline the lips and fill in.

The lipstick brush is a cute little trick. If you haven't tried it, get one. It puts the coloring into all the little creases, and that is necessary for glamorous results.



Must we make over our faces.

104th Birthday Is Celebrated

London, Ont., Feb. 23 (CP)—Mrs. James H. Campbell, today 'stayed up' beyond her regular retiring time and said she was very disappointed that there was not enough snow to allow her to take a horse-drawn cutter ride to celebrate her 104th birthday.

Recalling that early Canadians "went to bed with the chickens," Mrs Campbell said:

"There is something different about this day and age .. but there is something nice about getting old .. you get lots of attention."

As she received telegrams of congratulations — many from Peterborough County where she was born—Mrs. Campbell said she wasn't too disappointed about not having the cutter ride because promise of more snow might make the trip possible in the future.

MURDERER EXECUTED

San Quentin, Calif., Feb. 23 — (AP)— Thomas H. McMonicle, 37 died in the state's gas chamber for the 1945 sex killing of a girl whose body never has been found. Thora Chamberlain, 15, disappeared after last being seen entering McMonicle's car.

BIDDING BRISK

Delhi, Feb. 23 — (CP) — A community used-car auction drew a big crowd here Saturday. Bidding was brisk as 18 cars and light trucks valued at about $20,000 altogether went on the block. Six vehicles were sold, none for less than $1,000.

FIT OUT ARSENAL

St. Catharines, Feb. 23 —(CP) —Thieves who broke into a north-end home last night could almost fit out an arsenal. They took nine revolvers — as well as a new pigskin bag and a quantity of jewelry.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Her Mother Trained Her in the Pleasant Habit of Using Names.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother had a very charming habit of using the name of the person to whom she was speaking: for example, using the name after her "How do you do," also when she said goodbye, and often during the conversation. Even as a quite young child I remember how engaging this way, and so I "copied" this habit of hers and have always held it. But I've realized lately that sometimes it gets me into a bit of difficulty, and so this is my question: If I am not absolutely sure that I correctly caught the name of the person to whom I am introduced, is it proper for me to ask the person to repeat his or her name? I find that sometimes, in trying to avoid doing this, I may perhaps mispronounce the name, or at least mumble it so that the mispronunciation may not be noticed. What is your suggestion?

—Carola D. L.

What a charming and appealing memory, this one of your concerning your mother's use of names .. it is indeed a lovely habit, and I completely understand that your impulse to use names frequently might, sometimes, lead to the difficulty you mention. However, please don't give up this so-pleasant habit, and, on the other hand, don't attempt to guess at a name you haven't heard distinctly. Remember that a person's name is very precious to him .. that he wants it pronounced correctly .. and doesn't at all mind being asked, "I'm so sorry, but I did not hear your name clearly .. and I really want to know it."

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like very much to have my father, who is to give me in marriage, stand with my mother in the receiving line at our wedding reception, and he would like to do this. But we have been told that this is not correct procedure. Isn't it? And, if it isn't, why isn't it? It seems to us that, as host, father should receive the guests, with mother as hostess.

—Lola.

There is no reason in the world why the bride's father should not be a member of the receiving line (1) if he wishes to, and (2) if the bride wishes to have him. He is the host of this important occasion, and it is quite natural for him to wish to stand with his wife, the hostess, to greet and welcome their guests. This is not, of course, a necessary procedure, nor, in some communities is it customary .. for many fathers of brides prefer to mingle with the wedding guests, making necessary introductions and seeing that all is well with the comfort and happiness of the wedding guests.

Should a Secretary Introduce Herself?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

"I have just started my position as secretary to a prominent doctor, and since he is a consultant only, many patients come from other places, near and far, to see him. When either the patient, or the doctor who is with a patient, introduces himself or herself to me, should I introduce myself? To me this doesn't seem necessary. If you agree, what receiving formula would you suggest I use?

—Florence M.

In most cases I suggest as your "receiving-formula" in answer to the person's saying, "I am Mrs. Brown" (or "I am Dr. Foster"). "Yes, Mrs. Brown (or 'Dr. Foster'), Dr. Wells is expecting you .. I'll tell him you are here." If, as might be, it seems practical to introduce yourself, say "I am Miss Martin, Dr. Wells' secretary."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

What can happen to you in a bridge game is enough to make you swear off. It does not seem possible that cards can do you like they sometimes do. See what it did to west in this deal:

South kept fighting the club rebids of his partner. With his neck bowed he landed as declarer at a grand slam contract of seven notrump. Only an ox could be that stubborn.

West elected to start with an opening lead of his spade five. Anyone else might have felt a twinge of remorse after seeing the dummy cards. But south never batted an eye.

He played dummy spade jack and it held the first trick. Dummy diamond jack was led. This rode for trick two when east refused to cover. So, diamond nine was led from dummy.

Again east refused to cover. South coppered it with the ten and led a diamond king. West discarded his small club on this. Dummy also threw a small club on it.

Diamond ace was then led and you can see the position west was in. He dared not give up club queen or king. And if he gives up a heart, declarer has four heart tricks. The same in spades.

West cannot go home. At least not yet. He must let go of some card. After a couple of squirms and a grunt, he reluctantly gave up a heart. Now it was all over but the hauling in.

Already south has in a spade and four diamonds. He has another diamond, two more spades and club ace. With four hearts now good, he has his total of 13 tricks.

West was simply squeezed out of his heart protector. It is what frequently happens when a player is trying to guard three suits.

Such things are likely to drive a man back to playing pinochle. What a revolting development.

The Movie Column

(By BOB THOMAS)

Holleywood, Feb. 23 —(AP)— A lanky, one-legged Texan arrives in Hollywood this week for an honor afforded few men — to witness the filming of his own life story.

He is Monte Stratton, six-foot, five-inch boy from Greenville, Tex., who made good in big league baseball. Pitching for Chicago White Sox in his third year in the Majors, 1938, he was the best right-hander in the league. White Sox manager Jimmy Dykes said he might become one of the three greatest pitchers of all time.

After the 1938 season, Monte went back to what he liked best next to baseball—hunting. While he was climbing over a fence, a jutting wire pulled the trigger of his rifle. His right legs nearly shot away, he was barely able to crawl for help.

Monte lost his leg above the knee and baseball lost a fine pitcher. The news made headlines and then Monte lapsed into the oblivion of faded ball players.

Scene Shifts

The scene shifts to Hollywood eight years later. A screen writer, Douglas Morrow, was watching a baseball game at the Sawtelle Soldier's Home. Seeing the armless and legless spectators, Morrow had the desire to find a film story that would give them hope. Then he remembered Monte Stratton.

He could only remember that Stratton was a Texan. So he instructed the long-distance operator to try every Texas city and the ball club thereof for a listing or information of Stratton. After a few hours' search, Stratton was reached in Greenville.

"I'm pitching tomorrow night for the Sherman Club," the Texan said.

Morrow flew to Sherman and watched Stratton pitch and win for the East Texas league team. (In 1946, he pitched nine games in a row without a base on balls.) The writer found that Stratton had kept in training on his Greenville cotton farm and had waited eight years before trying pro ball again. He tried to sell Monte on the idea of a picture.

"Naw," drawled Monte, "I don't want other people lookin' in my winda."

Morrow pointed out that "the story of Monte Stratton" would inspire new hope for men who suffered the pain of war. Only then did Monte give in. At first he wanted no pay for the story rights. But Morrow explained that he, as writer, the studio (M.G.M.) and the star (Van Johnson) would not be doing the picture on a non-profit basis.

"If you put it that way," smiled the Texan, "I'll take the money."

Sports Shorts from Britain

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 21 (CP)—When Les Strongman, 23-year-old Winnipegger threw a broken hockey stick over the boards last season he started a romance that will lead to wedding bells this spring.

Playing for Nottingham Panthers of the British National Hockey League, Strongman smashed the stick in a scramble along the rail and hustling back to the bench for a new weapon, heaved the fragments more or less at the blonde head of 19-year-old Elizabeth (Mickey) Tomlinson.

Miss Tomlison was heard to remark to a friend: "I never liked that big so-and-so anyway."

But she exercised her woman's perogative when Les came around after the game to introduce himself and apologize. Cupid blitzed them and the wedding will take place at the end of this season. They plan to live in Winnipeg.

Zhukov is a racehorse with a will of his own—and, when he says neigh he means neigh.

Running at Sandown Park in a recent jumping event, he was galloping along contentedly, well in the rear of a three-horse field and, as the winner past the post, came to the second-last obstacle.

He fell and threw his rider. The jockey remounted and — thinking of the third-place money there for the taking—backed Zhukov up 100 yards and took another try at the fence. Zhukov stopped dead at the barrier and tossed his rider again.

Five times the jockey tried the fence and five times Zhukov vetoed the plan. Bookies were laying 5-2 against the animal finished when the rider at length gave up and led his mount back to the stables.

Liza Mandy is a horse of a different color. At the same meeting she was trailing another three-horse field when she slipped at the water jump and gave herself and her rider a thorough soaking. He remounted and off they went again, with the crowd offering loud, if faintly sarcastic, encouragement. Liza Mandy pricked lesslу to the last obstacle where she fell again.

Her jockey climbed back aboard, took another try at the fence and his mount sailed across splendidly, finishing amidst lusty applause several minutes after the other runners and winning £24 ($96) prize money.

LOOKING IN ON THE ZAVADA QUADS

Owner Decides To Retire Assault

Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 —(AP)— Assault, Texas-bred champion whose fighting heart overcame a club foot to earn $626,620 will be retired from racing effective immediately.

The great chestnut handicap speedster, voted the "horse of the year" in 1946 after winning the "triple crown," will be sent to Robert J. Kleberg's King Ranch outside of Lexington, Ky.

It would have been a better ending if Assault had won his last race in a dramatic stretch drive, But he didn't.

Against his arch rival, Calumet Farm's Armed, Assault ran fifth in the Widener classic Saturday, four lengths behind the Calumet horse which came in fourth.

Kleberg said the decision to retire Assault was made after it was found he had burst an osslet in the race. An osslet is a growth on the ankle which racing thoroughbreds sometimes get as a result of the hard pounding on the turf.

GoodSupplyBacon Gardiner States

Woodstock, Feb. 23 (CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner said here Saturday that Canada will be able to supply quantities of bacon required under contract with Britain and still have a surplus.

He told the Oxford County Federation of Agriculture there were 48 per cent more hogs marketed in January than in the same month last year. They were not old brood sows, either, he added.

Commenting on the butter problem, the minister said the commodity is a buffer for assured milk production. While butter must be produce to assure sufficient for Canadians, it is not possible in Canada to make butter for export at the present price.

Mr. Gardiner said he still believes the United States is the natural outlet for Canadian beef cattle and this country must get back into it "as soon as we can."

Joe Louis, mindful of food and commodity difficulties in England, is taking 300 steaks together with plenty of other food as he sails from New York with his wife, Marva, for England on the Queen Mary. He will appear daily at the health exposition in London. There will be three sparring sessions each day and Joe hopes to work off some of his 220 pounds and be in the pink as well when he returns April 12th to train for his June 23rd go with Jersey Joe Walcott at the Yankee Stadium.

Toronto Maple Leafs Win Two Games Over Weekend to Tie Detroit for Loop Leadership

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Setting the stage for one of the great stretch drives of hockey history, the Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs today are once more deadlocked for the National Hockey League leadership.

Leafs got back on even terms with the Wings by their victory over the Detroit squad Saturday and each team chalked up another triumph Sunday night. But the Leafs have one more game left than Detroit, 11 games to 10 for the Wings, and that extra game might well mean the league title.

Right now the Leafs and the Wings are closer than ham and eggs. Leafs beat Wings 3-3 on Saturday at Toronto, while Boston Bruins were beating Montreal Canadiens 3-1. On Sunday the Leafs edged Chicago Black Hawks 3-2, Wings topped the Canadiens 4-3 and Boston were walloped 4-1 by the New York Rangers, who alone hold third place.

Incidentally the Rangers are still only two points ahead of Boston, but the latter in fourth and last play-off spot is drawing farther away from the two bottom teams. Montreal in fifth position now is seven points back of Boston and Chicago is eleven points back. For Montreal and Chicago the play-off picture is just about fogged out.

Close Checking Seen

The five weekend games saw close, hard-checking hockey all the way with penalties at a minimum except in the Toronto-Chicago game, and they were all minors. But they also produced heroes of the night.

At Toronto Saturday it was hard-working Joe Klukay, Toronto stalwart whose specialty is killing off penalties, who fired what proved the winning goal against Detroit. Pete Horeck's Detroit goal was matched by Sid Smith, of Toronto, in the second period, and bashing Bill Barilko made it 2-1 for Toronto in the third.

Klukay snared a loose puck to score cleanly for Toronto's third goal with an assist from Syl Apps, and in the six minutes remaining Turk Broda in the Toronto nets lost only one more, to Red Kelly.

Brimsek at His Best

There were 14,567 fans on hand for the Detroit-Toronto clash, but only 11,230 turned out at the Montreal Forum where Bruins played a close-checking game while the Canadiens looked powerless, especially with the Bruin defence and goalie Frankie Brimsek at their best.

Woody Dumart, Grant Warwick and Don Gallinger rolled up a 3-0 lead for the Bruins before Murphy Chamberlain spoiled a shut-out for Brimsek when his pass-out slipped into the net off a Boston skate.

At Chicago Sunday 16,649 saw the Leafs ahead after the first period but the margin never was more than a single goal. Young Emile Francis turned in a great game in Chicago nets but his forwards couldnt get the tying counter Syl Apps put Toronto ahead in the first five minutes, and after Bill Mosienko tied it, Nick Metz scored Toronto's second.

Meeker Forced Out

The middle frame was half gone when Ted Kennedy scored Toronto's third goal, and Red Hamill got Chicago's second while the Leafs were down to four men through penalties. Howie Meeker, Toronto forward, was crashed heavily into the boards by Bill Gadsby and forced out of the game.

Gadsby accused Ted Kennedy of high-sticking and cutting his forehead in the last minute of the game, but the other players kept them apart. The game's 14 penalties were evenly divided between the teams.

At Detroit Sunday the Wings were always ahead of the Canadiens, and Leo Reise, the rugged Detroit rearguard, played a key role although hampered by a painful leg cut suffered last week at New York. Reise also had learned Sunday that his wife had been severely hurt in a car accident near Windsor in which his infant son suffered scratches.

Anyway, Reise had an assist on the goals by Pete Horeck and Jim McFadden and personally scored the third goal, with an assist from Don Morrison. Rod Morrison got the fourth. Maurice (Rocket) Richard got two of the Canadien counters, Bob Fillion scoring the other.

For Rangers, the 4-1 victory over Bruins was their first in eight starts. Tony Leswick scored twice, Buddy O'Connor got his 100th. N.H.L. goal and Phil Watson scored the other Boston's only goal was the shot from Murray Henderson which beat Jim Henry after sliding off Neil Colville's leg

The Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Buddy O'Connor of New York, picked one goal—the 100th. of his N.H.L. career in Rangers only weekend game to retain his five-point edge in the scoring race over Toronto's Max Bentley who was held to one assist in Leafs' two games. Biggest producers of the weekend were Elmer Lach of Canadiens, Syl Apps of Leafs, and Detroit's Jim McFadden, who picked up two points apiece. Lach took over third place while McFadden moved into fourth slot tied with Bud Poile of Chicago.

Windsor Spitfires And Galt Rockets Win Playoff Games

(By The Canadian Press)

Contrary to general expectations, last Saturday's three Ontario Hockey Association playoff tilts — one in the Senior A division and two in the junior — were't such closely matched affairs after all, as winning teams outscored losers 30-11.

The widest gap between winner and loser was at Galt where the Rockets handed St. Catharines Tepees a 12-3 trouncing. Windsor had a smaller 6-2 margin over Oshawa Generals and in the lone senior fixture, Owen Sound Mercurys swamped Hamilton Pats 12-5.

Another feature of the weekend playoff tilts was the strict officiating as officials took the O.H.A. executive committee's orders to heart and clamped down on rough play. Forty-six penalties were handed out in the two junior tilts and three in the senior. Of these 44 banishments, the Galt-St. Catharines game had 24, including six majors and two misconducts, while the Windsor-Oshawa tilt had 20 penalties, including one misconduct.

Windsor Leads All the Way

Spitfires led all the way in winning the first game of their best-of-seven semi-final series from the Generals who didn't get on the score sheet until late in the second period. Windsor led 3-0 at the end of the first, upped the count to 5-1 at the end of the second and closed out at 6-2.

Galt walked away with the first game of their best-of-three quarter-final with St. Catharines and led 11-0 with just 15 minutes left of play. Stellar defensive work by the Rocket rearguard kept the Tepee forwards well out and forced them to shoot mostly from the blue line. By contrast, the Tepee defence was sieve-like as Galt attackers drove in on goalie Cec Gruhl.

Pidhirny Big Gun

Big gun for the Rockets was Harry Pidhirny as he blazed four shots into the Tepee nets. Next came Wiggie Wylie and Harry Marchand with two goals apiece, while Art Guallauzzi, Ken McNally and Sam Mulholland each counted one.

Best man on the ice for Tepees was Topper Toppazzini and although he didn't score, helped on two markers. Gib Service, Fred Hildebrand and Red Sullivan notched the Tepee goals.

A last seven-minute scoring spree caused the wide margin Owen Sound had over the Hamilton Pats in the first game of their best-of-three quarter-finals. With just seven minutes left to play, Jack Ingoldsby and Murray Fife of the Mercurys ran wild as they personally rapped in six goals—two by Ingoldsby and four in a row by Fife.

Earlier, play was closer with Hamilton even leading 3-2 at the end of the initial frame. The Sounders came back in the second to go ahead and lead 6-4. Hamilton had its last goal early in the third and then Owen Sound galloped ahead on Ingoldsby's and Fife's sharpshooting.

Fife Paces Mercurys

Fife paced the Mercurys with four markers while Ingoldsby and Tommy Burlington each collected three goals. Jim Boddy and Pat McCreavy completed the Owen Sound scoring.

Nick Phillips, Killer Kilpatrick, Doug Runions, Hugh Barlow and Bryan Robinson were the Hamilton goal-getters.

Playffo games continue in the senior division tonight as Hamilton Tigers and Toronto Marlboros hook up at Hamilton for the second game of their best-of-seven semi-finals and Hamilton Pats meet Owen Sound at Owen Sound for the second game of their best--of-three quarter-finals.

In the junior divisioin, Oshawa stays at Windsor for the second tilt of their best-of-seven semi-finals, Barrie Flyers move to Stratford for their best-of-three ququarter-finals and Galt goes to St. Catharines for the second game of their best-of-three quarter-final series.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Since writing the following paragraphs re the Saints-Legion game Saturday, we learn the series has been changed to 3 of five. However, the paper "went to bed" before any change could be made, so there it is. If the Legionnaires are as good tonight as Saturday, this comment won't be out of place — merely a day ahead of time.

The Kingston Saints, their press-gilded halos adroop like an Anzac's service hat after a rainstorm, nudged the Belleville Reds quietly resting in the cot of hockey oblivion, smiled weakly and said, "Shove over, buddies, we're now in the same class as you."

That happened on Saturday night when the Peterborough Legionnaires giving little regard for the advance ballyhoo of the Limestone laddies, proceeded to swamp them under an 11-3 score, and sent them to roost with the "much chagrined and astonished Belleville Vets."

And now we trust, both Kingston and the Belleville managements are convinced that hockey silk purses cannot be made out of sows ears, despite the valiant efforts of a few to maintain teams equivalent to the Peterborough conquerors.

Even the at-times eloquent references to the "illustrious Locos" of two years ago, failed to give the Saints the required ability to sink the Legionnaire ship. Hockey at times is something like poker. You can bluff your way to the occasional pot but in the long run, if you have not got the cards, you've had it.

And it looks quite plain now, that even with the benefit of pre-season training and skating, something the Peterborough squads did not have, the ingston and Belleville teams were short the proper manpower that was necessary to cope with the Liftlock lads after they got the kinks out of their legs and arms.

And now . to put.. a final quietus on the humors which were circulated from Kingston and in the Kingston press. M'sieu Maureese LeFort, sensational goalie of the Belleville Rockets is not suspended by the O.H.A.; never has been, and will be in his post between the pipes when the Rockets step out against the Vics on Kingston ice tonight.

And the authority for that statement is none other than a gentleman by the name of Panter, who happens to be the prexy of the Ontario Hockey Association and should know whereof he speaks. In conversation with Manager Bill Cook of the Rockets on Saturday, Mr. Panter informed him that he knew nothing of any suspension on the part of LeFort, and that as far as he was concerned he was eligible to play for the Rocks tonight.

Mr. Michael Rodden writing in the Kingston Whig Standard on Saturday said; quote. "The case of Goalkeeper Maurice LeFort of the Belleville juniors continues to be intriguing but it has been alleged that two certificates show him to be eligible while another has it he was born on November 11, 1925. Thus two certificates make him eligible and the other denies the same.

The onuns is on the player to furnish proof in such jams and evidently President George Panter of the OHA is going to follow that line of reasoning. In the meantime it is understood that LeFort stands suspended," end quote.

In a recent column, Mr. Rodden mentioned something about "ugly rumors being started about a Belleville star, and an investigation, rightly so, is being made by the Vics."

He goes on to say in the Saturday edition," officials of the Belleville club should not resent this investigation. The rule is there for the protection of all clubs and only chaos and evasion would result if the OHA executive did not stick to its guns."

The Belleville management, cording to Bill Cook, does not resent the investigation. In fact, with tongue pushing the traditional cheek out a foot, they took the news with the same alarm and lack of slumber as they do when Ozark Ike is kidnapped by big interests, or Little Slobbovia goes down to defeat before the Dogpatchers.

In fact the news did not disturb the even tenor of their way, only to the extent that they fully agreed with Mr. Rodden that the rule is there for the protection of all clubs etc, if the investigation was conducted for that reason, and not for what appears to be quite obvious, to avoid the possible elimination of the Vics, by the pre - season underdog Rockets, with the loss of their star goalie. And they go on to say —between prodigious yawns — if the latter is not the case why all this fury and turmoil, investigations etc. now, instead of when the Vics first learned LeFort had been signed by the Rocks?

Looks as though the Rockets will not lack for home-town support tonight in Kingston. Two buses are taking the players and fans, and other supporters are travelling by private car. The Rockets had a light skating workout over the weekend, and Manager Bill Cook says his kidlets are ready and rarin' to go. Should be a dilly of a battle, with the odds on the Rocks. Murray will not be playing for Vics and it's not likely that the starry "Flicker" Flint, will be seen in action, if the shoulder injury he received here is as serious as was at first reported.

The Belleville Merchants Midget "B's" fresh from their victories over the Brockville squad trek to Omemee tomorrow night where they meet the strong Peterborough Rotary squad in their first game of the goals-to-count third round playdowns. The second game is scheduled for the Memorial Arena here Thursday night and the winners will be acclaimed the Eastern Ontario champions. The Merchants have been going well against outside teams and it is felt they will face their severest test to date when they meet the Petes kids. So how about a little support for the youngsters here on Thursday night, win lose or draw tonight.

The meeting of the Belleville Softball Association called for over the weekend did not function althonugh a fairly good representation was present. President Thibault and Secretary Don Barrett could not put in an appearance and the conclave was laid over until Tuesday night at eight o'clock at the City Hall. Everybody interested in the game is requested to be present, Tuesday night, City Hall 8 o'clock.

"Red" Townsend informs us that the Second Annual Boys' night of B.C.I. scheduled for March 4 and 5th is something that should not be missed. Over sixty promising young athletes are taking part in this outstanding display of physical prowess and there will be music, entertainment, and what-not for your edification. The student athletes are practicing faithfully under "Red's" tutelage, and they are rounding into grand shape. Tick the dates on your Calendar. More later.

FREEDOM isn't FREE!

Freedom, like anything worth having, carries a price tag. We can't enjoy it without accepting its responsibilities.

There's freedom of speech—and we have to accept the responsibility for what we say.

There's freedom to worship as we please—and the responsibility is ours to see that others aren't persecuted, either.

There are lots of freedoms, and they all have their responsibilities.

The freedom to use whiskey for instance. That carries a three-fold responsibility: to ourselves, to our families and to our communities.

Schoolboys Earn New Track Honors At N.Y. Meet

New York, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Canada has new track honors today by virtue of the brilliant display during the weekend of an inexperienced team of eight Ontario schoolboys in the National Track and Field Championships.

The boys won six medals competing against some of the finest runners in the United States as 500 contestants from 79 schools gathered for the interscholastic event held in conjunction with the National Amateur Athletic Union Indoor Track and Field Championships.

In the senior event, however, R. M. (Bob) McFarlane, Canada's 440-yard champion and top Olympic track hope, was elliminated in a final heat of the feature 600-yard run after placing second in a preliminary heat.

The schoolboys team, first sent from the Dominion to the annual event, won one first place, two seconds, one third, two fourths and a seventh despite the fact that only two of the team had competed indoors before.

Lloyd Percival of Toronto's Sports College, who coached and financed the schoolboy team, hailed the victories as a proof of the theory that Canadians with the proper training can compete with the world's best in track and field events.

The 20 points garnered by the Canadian team was half-point more than that of the winning team from Boys High of Brooklyn, N.Y. However, the Canadians were recognized only as representing the individual schools which they attend.

This ruling, however, gave Westdale Collegiate of Hamilton a fifth place in the team standing by virtue of seven points picked up by two of its students, Gordon Haight and Don Stonehouse.

Haight, 18-year-old holder of the Lord Alexander trophy as Canada's best junior athlete in 1947, gained the lone Canadian first place in the meet when he came from behind in the last lap of the 1,000-yard run to win in 2:19.6. The time was 4-10th of a second short of a meet record.

Stonehouse, also 18, placed fourth in the 60-yard run. He is the 110 and 120-yard Canadian junior champion.

Tony Leswick, Ranger forward who fired two goals as New York beat Boston 4-1 Sunday.

Maurice Richard, Montreal, who returned to form Sunday with two goals as Canadiens lost to Detroit.

may be caused by kidneys!

Every drop of blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every 7 minutes. When kidneys fail to filter out impurities, your system slows down. You may feel tired, headachy—with painful joints and aching back!

Because both kidneys and liver act as purifiers of the blood, the most effective treatment should help both. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills do this, thoroughly and efficiently. When you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, you can be sure of a reliable product used by Canadians for over half a century.

Cleveland Barons Given Even Chance To Win Top Spot

(By The Canadian Press)

With 10 league games left to play, Cleveland Barons today were given an even chance of walking off with top honors in the American Hockey League's western circuit.

The red - hot Barons, who have two games in hand over the leading Pittsburgh Hornets, moved to within three points of Pittsburgh over the weekend by sinking Springfield 9-1 Saturday and Providence 7-5 yesterday. Cleveland now has won 13 straight.

Meanwhile the Wasps were held to a 2-2 draw by the faltering Hershey Bears Saturday. The third - place Buffalo Bisons split a twin bill with St. Louis Flyers, dropping a 4-3 decision on Saturday but coming back to win 7-4 Sunday.

Indianapolis Caps dropped a close 4-2 verdict to Philadelphia on Saturday but came through last night with an 8-5 triumph over Springfield.

New Haven thumped Washington Lions 10-3 in the only other weekend tilt.

Leswick Spearhead

Pete Leswick spearheaded the Cleveland attack against Springfield with three goals while Jack Lavoie and Roy Kelly tallied twice each. The Barons' other goal was by centre Johnny Holota. Paul Courteau accounted for the Springfield marker.

Kelly and Lavoie stood out for Barons again on Sunday, each scoring a brace of goals. Other Cleveland goalgetters were Holota, Leswick and Ed Wares. Carl Liscombe headed the Providence attack with a pair of tallies while Ray LaPlante, Roger Bedard and Ed Prokop each picked up one.

At Pittsburgh, Johnny O'Flaherty and Tod Sloan scored for Hornets while Gordie Bruce and Mark Marquess drove in counters for Bears.

Paul Gladu notched a pair of goals to spark St. Louis to an upset victory over Bisons. Hec Pozzo and Black scored the other Flyer markers while Tommy Cooper, Doug Lewis and Les Hickey tallied for Buffalo.

Score Four in Third

It was a different story in Buffalo but the Bisons needed a four - goal third period performance to turn the trick. Tod Campeau was the sparkplug of the Buffalo attack with two goals while Lewis, Hickey, Les Douglas, Cooper and Murdo Mackay scored one each. Don Grosso racked up two goals for the Flyers with one each going to Billy McComb and Henry Backor.

Big Eddie Bush stole the spotlight at Philadelphia as he set two league records for defencemen. The Rocket rearguard fired his 23rd goal of the season and boosted his point total to 58 with an assist. The previous records, set by Roger Leger, now with Montreal Canadiens, were 22 goals and 57 points.

At Indianapolis Sunday, Baldy Mackay scored three goals to spark Caps to a convincing triumph over Springfield. Cliff Simpson and Paul Courteau picked up two goals each while Enio Sclisizzi completed the scoring for the victors. Bill Gooden paced Indians with three goals while Alan Kuntz and Wimpy Jones scored one each.

Special Awards Will be Given By Hockey Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

The American Hockey League this season will present special awards for the most valuable player, outstanding rookie player, league leading scorer, leading goal-tender and for the player with the "cleanest" record, League President Maurice Podoloff announced yesterday. Each of the awards will carry with it a cash prize of $300.

A 23-year-old tiny Minneapolis speed - demon, John Werket, outskated some of the world's fastest skaters at Oslo, Norway, yesterday to win the international speedskating meet there. Werket, only five feet 4½ inches tall, completed four races with a low total of 198.203 points to capture the all-round trophy.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Rugby Football union at Toronto Saturday named Harold Smith of Toronto president, succeeding Eddie McLean of Hamilton. Harold Bailey was re-appointed secretary, and Col. Harry Hatch of Hamilton, was named vice-president. The meeting indicated that the same six teams will line up again this fall.

The meeting decided it would ask the Canadian Rugby Football Union to make a revision in the third down blocked kick rule so that if the kicking side does not make yards after recovering the ball, possession be awarded the defending team at a point where the ball becomes dead.

The provincial lawn bowling championships for 1948 will be held on the Roselawn greens at Hamilton, Sept. 6-7, it was announced at Toronto Saturday.

District winners would have to be declared by Aug. 15 and club championships by July 15. A large entry is expected for the provincial lawn bowling tournament at Toronto Aug. 16 and Many Canadians are expected to enter the United States National tourney at Niagara Falls, N. Y., during the week commencing July 20.

Emile Allais, ace French skier who coached Canada's Olympic ski team, declared Saturday he was confident Canadian skiers would dominate the North American championship scene by 1950.

"The finest skiing prospects I have seen outside Europe are the Canadians but they still need a couple of seasons' training before reaching the top (of international competition)," he said.

University of Toronto Blues defeated McGill 2-1 in a two-period exhibition hockey tilt at Montreal Saturday as part of McGill's winter carnival. Bob Henry and Don Bark scored for the Blues while Pete Henry nicked the McGill marker.

Bob Hamilton today headed for the nex twinter golf tournament at St. Petersburg, Fla., after winning the $10,000 New Orleans Open yesterday. The victory earned him $2,000. His 280 gave him first place here by one stroke. The tournament ended without any of the current hottest players up in front.

Canada's Barbara Ann Scott yesterday thrilled 8,000 freezing Danish spectators at an artificial outdoor skating rink when she exhibited the same flawless free-skating that helped her win the Olympic, European and world championships. Switzerland's Hans Gerschweiler and Denmark's Percock Clausen also gave free - skating exhibitions.

Legionnaires Beat Kingston Saints

Kingston, Feb. 23 — Kingston Saints will oppose Peterborough Legionnaires in Lindsay Monday night and prospects that they will escape OHA Senior 'B' elimination are not bright. If there had been any lingering doubt about the superiority of the Peterborough soldiers it was wiped out Saturday evening when the visitors whipped the local 11-3. The Legionnaires won the first of the group semi-finals last Wednesday, 4-2.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP)— All of a sudden, Miami has found that boom times are back and most folks don't know what to make of it .. a little more than a week ago there weren't any crowds around .. then, with no warning the hotels filled up, the race track began doing the same sort of business it did a year ago .. when they ran the Widener at Hialeah Saturday, attendance and betting records were broken — and most of the customers were broke. They did all their betting on Armed and Assault.

Big Hearted Guy

Joe Dimaggio, who is amazingly obliging for a guy who earns some $80,000 a year, made a flying trip here during the weekend to help publicize a heart fund drive and to attend a dinner in honor of Babe Ruth .. the only time he really loosened up was when he visited a children's cardiac hospital and solemnly warned the youngsters, "take care of yourself."

Two Strikes on Danny

Danny Lamont, the Altoona, Pa., business man whose colt, El Mono, won the $50,000 Widener Saturday, struck out twice before he hit that home run .. Lamont, who also owns a pro football club at Altoona, claimed El Mono for $10,000 at Atlantic City last summer .. just two races before then, El Mono ran with a $5,000 claiming tag attaching .. and last week, when the colt won the McLennan, Lamont didn't bet a nickle on him .. "I was looking out the window," Danny explained. "I didn't know what this new trainer or the jockey could do so I just didn't bet.'

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By PAUL DUBOIS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Feb.23—(CP)—Some fans are of the opinion that Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadians isn't doing the best he can to break out of season-long slump while others believe there's internal friction in the club and that his teammates aren't pulling with him.

Elmer(Montreal Herald) Ferguson boldly disputes the fan's way of thinking and uses a few quotes from team coach Dick Irwin to back up his theory.

He says Irwin, in a recent interview, said that "every player on the team knows that Richard is our key man—that the club goes as Richard goes—and every player on the team is pulling for him."

"Why in practice last Wednesday," Irwin added "every player was rooting for the rocket and goaler Bill Durhan didn't try too hard to block him when he got in close because he figured the Rocket might restore his confidence if he could poke in a few practice goals."

Dick admits that the Rocket, who established a National Hockey League record by scoring 50 goals in the same number of games in the 1944-45 season, and finished second in the point department last season, may not recover his scoring ability in time to help the club gain a playoff berth this season. But he says, "there's always next year."

Frank Selke, general manager of the team, who sat back and listened while his coach discussed the scoring merits of Richard, came up with the suggestion that Bud Poile of Chicago might take the League's all-star right wing selection.

Irwin failed to see it this way and had a fast answer to question, "can you pick one to beat Poile?"

"Sure, Richard, and I'll tell you why.

"For three seasons Richard has been the most closely checked player in the business. He's been hooked, held, tripped, chopped and hammered into the fences. He's scored goals with players actually on his back. He has been driven to distraction with illegal cross-checking tactics used against him.

"But now that he's in the middle of a scoring slump, the boys are liable to lay off him and give him an even break, then he'll get going again."

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 19.

Her telephone bell was like a die summons. She dared not answer it. She suspected that either Tom was in the building or calling her again to fling out threats of being here. If she saw him and Louise heard of it, unpleasant things would begin to happen.

Besides, how could he, in his precarious position, suggest dancing? Oh, it was inconceivable that this man, in whom she had placed such confidence, should prove to be common clay. It couldn't be—it just couldn't! Anyway, it would be for his best interest not to see him.

The telephone continued to ring. Velma sat rigidly in a chair, desperately clutching its arms to keep from rushing to the receiver. If she heard Tom's voice once more, she might not have the strength to refuse to see him.

Finally, there came deep thick silence. Its hopelessness enveloped her on all sides. She burst into tears. She flung herself on her bed and cried herself to sleep. She was surprised in the morning to find herself lying there fully dressed.

She got up wearily and staggered to her dressing table mirror. Displaced bobby pins crazily tilted her golden curls, her face was red and swollen, her eyes were bloodshed. Never had she had so vile a headache.

She banged down the window against a cold crizzle of rain. Then she called Miss Forland's apartment and explained that she was too ill to be at the shop that morning.

She was sitting in a tub of soothing hot water when she heard a knock on the door. She called out, "Who is it?"

"Telegram for Miss Wilkins," said a strange voice.

"Please shove it under the door," she answered, wondering who would wire her.

It might be Tom, of course. She had refused to talk to him over the phone, so now he was sending her telegramss. She smiled a little whimicaly as she stood up and began to rub her slim white body into a glow with a heavy bath towel.

Tom! What a sweet, contradictory fellow he was! One time, levelheaded, so much in love with her; another time, irresponsibly running from a murder, scarcely conscious of her existence. Now, of all things, he wanted to dance!

Her bare feet made wet prints on the rug as she hurried to get the yellow envelope on the floor.

A wave of acute disappointment surged through her when she read the message:

Darling visit me for a month stop my family going to Europe stop lots doing here come at once love

"Millie"

Velma sighed forlornly. The spoiled Millie, who never had had to do a day's work of any sort, thought her old friend could drop a decent salaried position at a moment's notice, and take the chance of losing it while she was flitting about in butterfly abandon with the old gay crowd. She would send Millie Roberts an air-mail letter of refusal. It would be cheaper than a wire. That was how thrifty Velma Wilkins had become!

Her lips trembled, her hands shook, she was weak from lack of food. She called the dining room and ordered a pot of coffee and whole wheat muffins.

She wrapped herself in a gold velveteen negligee which had seen better days. She remembered how exquisite it had been when she purchased it in London for the equivalent of what was now her month's living expense. Those happy, carefree days! Yet she had leared much since they had vanished. She doubted now if she could willingly return to so useless an existence. A littlee partying now and then would be blessed relief, but to make it her daily business again might prove irksome.

PEANUT-PICKING ROBOT

Mechanical peanut pickers can pick two acres of peanuts an hour compared with 32 man hours required per acre for hand harvesting.

Laddie, the 4-year-old seeing-eye dog that was shot and bludgeoned to death during a robbery in Toronto Thursday morning, is lowered to his grave at Toronto Dog and Pet Cemetery, Dundas Highway, by cemetery officials Arthur Willis and Jack Seel. John Berezanki, Laddie's blind master and owner of the Standard Auto Body Co. where the $350 robbery was staged, has offered $100 reward for capture of the thugs, and the police have added $500, the first time a reward has been posted by the commission in connection with the killing of a dog.

Almost a self-contained village is this lumber camp in the Timmins area where 100 Polish DP's learn the ropes of bush work. The modern auto in foreground looks strangely out of place. It belongs to the French-Canadian foreman. These frame buildings will be moved elsewhere when the best timber has been cut.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa:

Some Members Believe Parliament Will Complete Work by End of June

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Feb. 23 (CP) —Some members of the Commons are confident the work of the session will be completed before the end of June and that it will be unnecessary for Parliament to adjourn for July and August.

They said Prime Minister Mackenzie King's announcement Friday that a two-month summer recess would be taken if the work was not finished by the end of June gave members a prorogation date at which to aim. Members now could judge how much time to spend on different pieces of legislation.

Another factor that likely will contribute to the June adjournment is the question of money. Members like others are feeling the pinch of high living costs and at the rate their indemnities now are being paid it is estimated their full $6,000 will be paid by mid-June.

No Additional Money

If they adjourned for two months and returned in the fall to continue the session, they would not receive additional money unless some special provision was made.

Some method of speeding work may be devised by the small committee appointed last week to study speaker Gaspard Fauteux' suggestions for changes in house rules.

With all parties having equal representation on the committee, it is expected it will make better headway than previous committees which were much larger and which failed to agree on changes.

Wheat Price

The government is expected to announce to the Commons this week the amount by which it plans to increase the initial price paid to Prairie farmers for their wheat upon delivery to the Canadian Wheat Board.

The initial price now is $1.35 a bushel and the expectation is that the government will increase this by 25 cents a bushel or more to around $1.60. As the increase is to be made retroactive to the 45 crop year, this will bring an estimated $200,000,000 in cash to the pockets of prairie producers, based upon their deliveries in the last three crop years.

The increase will be put into effect through an amendment to the Canadian Wheat Board Act. The government already has moved a resolution preliminary to the enabling bill.

Six in Family Perish in Fire

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 23 — (AP) — Six persons in one family — four of them children—perished early today when flames swept their 16-room house.

Dead were H. Alan Gregg, 40, his wife, Ann, and their four children — Susan, 9; H. Alan, Jr., 8; Peter, 3; and Thomas, 10 months old.

The only one to escape as flames raced through the rambling three - storey wooden house was the family maid, Edna Roper, 29. She was injured critically, firemen said, when she apparently toppled through a second-storey window.

At least a dozen fiermen and the department's fire chaplain — Rev. Thomas Tierney — were overcome attempting to rescue the trapped family.

The whole inside of the house was a roaring inferno before the firemen got there, Deputy Chief Henry Kilfoyle said.

All six members of the Gregg family were found in their second-floor bed rooms.

Detroit Police Apprehend Two Ontario Youths

Detroit, Feb. 22 — (CP) — By gunpoint and ruse, Detroit and Windsor police ended what they called a "night of crime" Saturday when they arrested two Ontario youths.

In custody today are Harold Souchie, 19, of Windsor, and Peter Tarasick, 22, of St. Catharines.

Police here said Souchie admitted that he and his companion made repeated trips from Canada to commit armed holdups in the Detroit area, and that they robbed two taxi drivers of a total of $24 Saturday night.

In a subsequent chase, Souchie drove off in an automobile while Tarasick fled on foot. The former abandoned the car and was later captured on a bus.

At headquarters, officers persuaded Souchie to telephone Tarasick to arrange a meeting in Windsor. When Tarasick arrived at the rendezvous Windsor and Detroit police captured him.

Soaring Prices Keep Spaniards on Peseta Hunt

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Feb. 23—(CP)— If you know any good wisecracks about the high cost of living, export them to Spain where prices are moving steadily upward.

They'll be appreciated by hard-working Spaniards, whose grumble in smart boulevard cafes and country markets is the same: the money runs away faster then it comes in.

The trend has been accelerated in recent months. More and more money is in circulation, but it buys less. An unofficial but unquestionably accurate estimate is that the buying power of the peseta is one-fifth what it was in 1935.

Now the government has ordained that notes in circulation this month must not exceed 28,000,000,000 pesetas as (approximately $3,052,000 at official exchange rates). This is seven times the number of notes in circulation in 1935, and an increase of nearly 7,000,000 pesetas in a year.

"Every day I go to market I seem to get less," complained a housewife.

"Materials and labor are becoming so expensive I predict building will have to cease within three months," said a business man. "People cannot pay the rents it is necessary to demand in order to meet the construction costs."

Some financiers think the only solution to the situation is a quick devaluation of the pesetas. Now, for trade purposes, only 10.95 pesetas are exchanged for $1. But in European black markets a dollar bill may get you 30 or 40.

Government Cautions

Several times there have been rumors that devaluations was at hand, but always the government drew back. Some people say it is a case of Spanish pride, although already there has been a concession in that respect, with a more generous exchange rate for tourists.

Otheres say that Gen. Franco, who takes an active interest in economic affairs, is holding out because he expects aid under the Marshall program to save him. But business men complain that time means money. Britain, they say, took only one-third of what it would have liked from the current orange crop due to the high price, leaving Spain with 200,000 tons to sell elsewhere.

Meanwhile thousands of Spaniards meet the situation in the most practical way they can—by doing as many jobs as possible. Even clerks, professors and civil servants have two and sometimes three sources of income.

Some turn to the black market as a source of riches, taking part in the thriving sidewalk trade that covers every scarce small article from bread rolls to fountain pens. Well-to-do housewives complain their maids are forsaking them because they can make more money in this pavement racket.

Unofficial indices on the base mid-1936 equals 100, put the cost of living level last May at 422, compared with 405 in December, 1946, and 274 in 1945. The monthly average of wholesale prices rose from 162 in 1940 to 311.2 in 1945 and 388.6 in 1946. The national debt in 1947 was an estimated 54,800,000,000 pesetas, almost double the 1941 figure.

I was eating breakfist slow and feeling glad it was Satturday, and ma said, I wish I could sit there like that, dawdling like an aimless butterfly.

Well why cant you, ma? You're your own boss, I said, and ma said, This house is my boss, and it has a lot of rooms to keep cleen.

Do you want me to help you, ma? I said, and she said, Oh, I guess I can struggle through by myself, thanks. Go ahead and injoy your Satturday, she said.

Well G, ma, I can at least cleen my own room, I said, and ma said, Well now that mite be a very good idea. A little good through werk to start off the morning mite be the very thing to make you appriciate your freedom for the rest of the day, she said.

Sure, ma, I'll start by dusting everything with a dust cloth and then I'll take the broom and sweep every part of the floor including under the bed, I said, and ma said, As long as you're doing it, you mite as well do it sensibly by sweeping ferst and then dusting, instead of dusting ferst and then making more dust.

I'll do better than that, ma, I'll dust and then I'll sweep and then I'll dust again, so that way I'll catch the dust coming and going, so I'll be sure not to miss any, I said. I'll even dust the books on my book shelf, like you do when you have exter time. And I'll arrange my closit so perfect you'll feel like taking a picture of it for future generations, I said, and ma said, Well, you know what the proverb says, if a thing's werth doing, there's no time like the present. So get started, she said.

Well aw G, ma, I'm kind of exhawsted thinking about it and planning it, so maybe I better put off the actual werk till next Satturday when there'll be another more week of dust to show the good results, I said.

The result being I did it this Satturday, feeling against it.

Unknown Number Missing, One Dead In Quebec Fire

Apartment House, Other Buildings Are Destroyed

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Feb. 24 — (CP) — An early-morning fire in the apartment district of Quebec's famed Mountain Hill today took one life and left an undetermined number of persons missing.

One unconfirmed report was that six were missing. But a fireman, pausing for a moment in his fight against the flames, said, — "We don't know how many are missing — there may be only one or half a dozen."

When firemen entered the apartment house they found 45-year-old Mrs. Blanche Mercier unconscious at the bottom of the staircase. She had apparently tried to escape but was overcome before she could reach the door.

Firefighters were summoned by bus conductor F. Fesbesquets who was returning home from work. He reported that he saw several persons in the house where the fire started and could hear them calling for help.

Apartment Side Wall Collapses

Some 200 firemen battled the fire, and at times, the heat forced them to kneel down in attempts to get close to the houses and direct their hoses on the blaze.

Mrs. Mercier was found unconscious almost at her door to the street and safety. A faint spark of life remained when she was reached. In her night clothes she was carried to the front steps of a business building out of reach of the fire and there she died after a priest administered the last sacraments of the Roman Catholic Church.

Reports, unconfirmed, said that a man and two children were among the missing and the object of a search.

A furnace explosion was believed to have started the fire at 2 a.m. in the apartment house on the "S Hill" that winds down beside the Chateau Frontenac to Lower Town and the Levis ferry across the St. Lawrence River.

Seven hours later it had spread to other buildings, jumped the narrow street and appeared to be concentrated in the Mountain Inn Hotel.

Police and firemen said the difficulty in determining how many were missing came from the fact that nobody seemed able to estimate coherently just how many people may have been in the apartment buildings.

Many Driven into Cold

Many were driven from their homes into weather about 10 degrees above zero. Smoke rose over the old city and could be seen from across the river by watchers in Levis.

The fire was one of the most spectacular of the winter in Quebec.

The call "99" went out to Quebec's firemen soon after the blaze started. That is given only in extreme cases and every fireman in the city answered the call.

POWER BREAKS MAY BE LIMITED TO ONE A DAY

Reshuffling of Available Supplies May Ease the Situation

Toronto, Feb. 24. (CP) — A reshuffling of available power supplies may enable Toronto and other large Ontario cities to keep electricity cutoff at one a day.

With this aim, the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission is surveying power supplies in all municipalities. Those which appear to have more than they need as compared with other districts will be given a lower quota. Large cities, with heavy industrial demand for power, may benefit.

Only one cutoff was expected today in Toronto, Hamilton, London and Windsor. With heavy voluntary saving pledged, Stratford looked forward to a day free from power breaks. Sarnia prepared for three half-hour interruptions, Woodstock for two.

Across the industrial southern half of the province and in the gold-mining region of the north, officials emphasized that economy in the use of electric energy was needed until the Spring break-up in northern rivers swells the water supply at generating plants. With a week of intensive power-saving efforts behind them, officials could estimate the load reductions to be expected from cutoffs and from voluntary efforts.

"The whole situation is steadying away," said an Ontario Hydro Commission spokesman.

"If the public will only remember to turn off lights not needed, we may avoid the inconveniences of last week."

Meanwhile the Commission announced that construction of a hydro frequency changer at London and installation of a high-tension line from Sarnia to the new station is expected to add 26,000 horsepower a day to Ontario circuits by October 1. The arrangement will enable the commission to take power from the Polymer plant at Sarnia, change it from 60-cycle to 25-cycle current at the London Station and inject it into the provincial system.

Ottawa, which so far has avoided cutoffs by using automatic induction regulators to reduce voltage on its lines, announced last night it expected to get through this week without interruptions but had worked out a schedule for two hour-long power breaks a day in case the load on its system passed a certain limit.

DECLINES WITH AGE

London, Feb. 24 — (CP) — Reading books is a habit which declines with age, says a survey on a North London public library service. On the 16-20 age group, four persons in five read books, the report says. In the 20-40 group the rate is three in five and in the over 40s two in five.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Feb. 24 (CP)—Synopsis: A very extensive mass of polar air covers Eastern Canada and the Eastern States. Along the west side of this cold air mass warmer moister air is flowing from the south and causing an extensive area of rain, drizzle and snow. A disturbance west of Lake Superior is moving rapidly northeastward and behind this a new outbreak of cold air will move into Northern Ontario and the Upper Lakes Regions by Wednesday morning and cover most of the province by Wednesday evening. In advance of this new outbreak of colder air, snow and freezing drizzle will fall today over northern sections of the province and rain will be general on Wednesday over southern sections.

PROGRAM PERMITS EXPANSION CAR, MOVIE INDUSTRIES

Bill Cannot be Used As Protective Tariff

Ottawa, Feb. 24 — (CP)—Trade Minister Howe told the Commons yesterday that Canada's exchange-conservation program will permit expansion of the automobile, motion picture and other industries in the Dominion, but he warned that no industry should attempt to expand simply to take advantage of the temporary import restrictions.

He issued the warning as members completed study of the itemized schedules of the bill, which has provoked more than 10 days of discussion. He said it was not the purpose of the government to use the bill, which will likely come up for third and final reading today, as a protective tariff.

He said if any member knew of any industry undertaking expansion of new production based on the protection it will get from the import restrictions, "I certainly hope that he will advise them not to proceed."

"I might go further than that," he added, "and say that if it is found that any existing industry is using the schedule, or this emergency legislation, as a protective tariff it is not unlikely that some import permits will be granted to discourage that idea."

Progressive Conservative members tried unsuccessfully to learn how much would be saved in U.S. dollars by the restrictions and how long the restrictions would remain in force.

No Figure Given

Mr. Howe said it was originally estimated that $100,000,000 in U.S. funds would be saved annually, but now it appeared that this estimate was too low. The saving might be $150,000,000 but it was difficult to give a definite figure.

Premier Drew May Discuss Hydro In Radio Address

Toronto, Feb. 24 (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario gives a half-hour radio broadcast Thursday night on a Provincial CBC network, it was made known today. There was immediate speculation in government circles that the Premier would discuss the current shortage of electrical power in the province.

This speculation was linked to the Premier's weekend visit to Quebec, from which he returns today, and it was suggested that he may have held discussions with Premier Duplessis about power development.

The Premier's speech, and another tonight by Labor Minister Daley, may also deal with the coming season of the Ontario legislature which opens March 3.

Six Puma Roam N.B. Wilderness, Remnants of Family Thought Extinct

Ottawa, Feb. 24 — (CP) — Six slinking eastern puma, remnants of a cat family believed extinct for nearly a century, have been tracked in the wilderness of New Brunswick bordering on the Bay of Fundy.

Dr. A. W. Banfield, resources department mammalogist, said today in an interview that discovery o fthe cougar species, last reported in the eastern half of North America more than 60 years ago, is "the most spectacular find in recent years."

The resources department had been aware of the find for more than a month but kept mum, fearing the sure aim and tracking of New Brunswick hunters.

"Only six are known to exist," said Dr. Banfield, adding there was little the resources department could do to protect the rare animals.

"They come under provincial jurisdiction and this dpeartment will not interfere."

First word of the find came last night from the Wild Life Management Institute in Washington where N. Galerielson, president of the Wild Life Conservation Organization, said one of its agents has "conclusive proof" that a remnant of the cougar species still roamed in New Brunswick.

The eastern puma's relative, the mountain lion, panther or long-tailed cat, is fairly common in the Rocky Mountains, but was thought to have been exterminated in Eastern Canada long before the turn of the century.

Dr. Banfield said Bruce S. Wright, an officer of the American WildLife Man - can Wild Life Management Institute at the northeastern wild life station in New Brunswick, was responsible for the discovery.

"A month ago he wrote us saying he had positive proof of the animal's existence and we were very surprised."

Chief Causes of Allied Failure to Check Japs In Southwest Pacific

London, Feb. 24 (Reuters) — Inadequate air forces, lack of air cover for a severely-reduced naval striking force and the failure of land reinforcements to arrive until too late were the chief causes of Allied failure to check the Japanese advance in the southwest Pacific.

The acute difficulties under which the United States, British, Dutch and Australian joint command operated in January and February, 1942, were disclosed by the war office in the dispatch of General (now Field Marshal) Viscount Wavell, at that time supreme Allied commander in the southwest Pacific.

Summing up the situation which drove the Allies back through the Netherlands East Indies and Malaya, Lord Wavell declared:

"Our enemies moved too quickly on a simple effective plan and never gave us time to collect forces necessary to remedy our initial weakness and to make headway against them."

He said that the Japanese air arm was not really a formidable force once it could be met on anything like equal terms, but the Allies had had no time to assemble a sufficient force or to create favorable conditions for it to operate.

On paper the air force looked formidable. The United States had placed 1,000 aircraft on order for ABDA command — the joint command formed on Jan. 15, 1942 to cover Burma, Malaya, Netherlands East Indies and the Philippines. These were due to arrive within the next two or three months but ABDA command was dissolved on Feb. 25, 41 days after it was formed.

If all aircraft promised had been delivered safely and on time, and well-protected airdromes and effecient ground organization could have been established, "all would have been well," Wavell declared.

But distances by sea from sources of supply, Britain and the United States, were so great that few aircraft arrived before the evacuation.

"The United States Air Force never had complete ground crews and their aircraft worked under a considerable handicap accordingly," the report said.

The effort to hold The Netherlands East Indies against the Japanese attack caused the loss of Burma and endangered India and Ceylon, Lord Wavell wrote, but he claimed it was "the right, the only decision ... It would have been as unthinkable to abandon our stout-hearted Dutch allies without the utmost effort to help them..."

Detailing Allied efforts to stop the advance of the enemy and particularly the attack on Singapore, Lord Wavell said United States heavy bombers had been the only available aircraft capable of carrying out attacks against the enemy convoys and landing forces. These did "most effective work" but were too few in numbers.

B.C. Coalition Government Wins Both By-elections

Victoria, Feb. 24 (CP) — The British Columbia Coalition government which has never lost a by-election in its seven-year tenure today once more flew victorious banners.

On the basis of nearly-complete returns, candidates of the Liberal Progressive Conservative Coalition yesterday registered a double victory in Premier Byron I. Johnson's first test at the polls.

In a by-election in Vancouver Island's Saanich riding, the election of Arthur J. R. Ash, 40-year-old grocer and former Ottawa alderman, was conceded by The Canadian Press two hours and 25 minutes after polls closed. Mr. Ash, who will occupy the seat left vacant by the appointment of Norman W. Whittaker, former speaker, to the Supreme Court of British Clumbia, topped the five-man contest with 5,621 votes on the basis of 47 of 48 polls. Runner-up was Colin Cameron, C.C.F., with 4,156.

The Coalitionists swept to their second victory in the interior B.C. Cariboo riding with Walter Hogg, 60-year-old retired rancher, topping the C.C.F. nominee A. Thomas by 378 votes. With results from 42 of 49 polls received, Mr. Hogg polled 1,746 votes against 1,368 for the C.N.R. trainman; his only opponent.

The five man Saanich contest proved to be a two-man race with three contestants lagging badly on returns available, Arthur H Jukes, Social Credit, gathered 535 votes, Thomas Dixon, Independent Farm Labor, 192 and W. R. Smith, the Democratic party, 38.

The present standing in the 48-member legislature is Coalition 35; C.C.F. 10; Labor one and Independent Coalition two.

Barbara Bews Elected Officer Levana Society

Kingston, Feb. 24 — (CP) — Wilhelmina Dowler of Ottawa has been elected president of Levana Society, the co-eds governing body at Queen's University, for 1948-49, it was announced today.

About 70-per-cent of those eligible voted.

Other new officers include: — Barbara Bews, Belleville, senior Ams representative; Nancy Chalmers, Sudbury, treasurer; Elspeth Wallace, Kingston, daughter of Principal R. C. Wallace, senior representative and Peggy House, St. Catharines, junior representative.

OLDER BABY-SITTERS

Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 24 (CP) —Grandmothers are replacing bobby-soxers as baby-sitters in this northern Ontario town. Mrs. Jack Brooks, organizer of a sitting service, says that only girls and married women over 18 years of age work fo rthe service.

H.E. McCallum Elected Mayor, Replaces Saunders

Toronto, Feb. 24 —(CP)— Hiram E. McCallum, a successful businessman who has served on city council and alderman and controller for the last eight years, was elected unanimously mayor of Toronto late yesterday as council filled the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mayor Robert Saunders last week.

Mr. Saunders was appointed chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario by Premier Drew.

Vice-chairman of the board of control and one of its most popular members, he entered civic politics in 1941 and was an alderman for three years. His first try for a board of control seat was defeated in 1944 but he made a successful bid the next year.

Proud of the fact he is the only member of city council who can milk a cow, Mayor McCallum was born on a farm in Caledon East 49 years ago. He was educated in Toronto and worked as a clerk with the old Mail and Empire before going in 1922 to the Farmers' Sun as a salesman. He became manager and in 1926 was appointed sales manager of the Ontario Press, continuing until he started his own business.

Two Mayors in Ontario

Toronto, Feb. 24 —(CP)— With the election yesterday of Hiram Emerson McCallum as mayor of Toronto, there now are two Mayor McCallums in Ontario.

The other, Frank Noble McCallum, is serving his third year as chief magistrate of Oshawa. That makes him senior in length of service to his brother, the new Toronto mayor.

But in years, at 48 Mayor McCallum of Toronto is senior to Mayor McCallum of Oshawa who is 45.

Like Toronto's ex-mayor, Robert Saunders, as boys both sold newspapers on Toronto streets.

DIES IN HOSPITAL

Toronto, Feb. 24 (CP)—Olga Campbell, 35, of Toronto died in hospital today of head and internal inujries allegedly inflicted by William Dimwoodie, 35, last October.

At that time Dimwoodie was arrested on a charge of wounding and aggravated assault and committed for trial. He was to have appeared in court here March 10. Police said it will be decided today whether the charge will be changed in view of the woman's death.

THINKS THIEF VERY SMALL MAN

Collingwood, Feb. 24 (CP) — Chief of Police Roy Haley believes the thief who last night broke into a local jewelry store and escaped with 40 watches valued at $2,000 must be a very small man.

The thief apparently crawled through a window one foot square.

ROAD SUBSIDIES TO CORPORATIONS TOTAL $15,700,000

Minister Says Winter Maintenance Costly

Toronto, Feb. 24. (CP)—Ontario government road subsidies to municipalities, which six years ago were $3,600,000, totalled $15,700,000 for 1947, Highways Minister Doucett today told the Ontario Good Roads Association.

"This increase, you will appreciate, represents no inconsiderable part of our provincial revenues," he said in an address prepared for delivery to the Association's annual meeting. "I think I should say frankly that it is about as far as we are prepared to go at this time and I hope the municipalities will govern themselves accordingly."

Rising costs in all phases of road administration and upkeep were detailed by the Minister.

"Approved municipal road expenditures for 1947 were $30,698,983, and of this amount approximately $2,225,000 represented supplementary departmental approvals," he declared. "I need not add that the department does not favor supplementary approvals except in case of emergency."

He said the actual municipal expenditures for the year totalled $28,135,387.

Gov't to Carry Fund

He said he spoke for the government in declaring his anxiety to avoid additional taxation and cited the unsatisfied judgments fund which became effective on July 1 last year. It was designed to protect victims of traffic accidents unable to collect damages from the offending party.

The fund would be established by collection of a sum "not exceeding $1" from drivers. Despite the impression that this would be collected this year, "it was felt the government could well carry the fund for the present year without imposing any additional charge against the holders of drivers' licences, and accordingly this is being done."

Claims against the fund have not been heavy as yet, said Mr. Doucett.

Increase Share

Discussing criticism over the province retaining the three-cent gasoline tax after this field was relinquished by the Federal government, the minister noted that legislation last year provided for the extension of the subsidy system to include cities, towns and villages. During 1947 the number of organizations entitled to share these subsidies increased by 348.

Thirteen machinery tools for upkeep of roads have been established with the approximate total cost $443,000. In 1933 counties spent $52,000 on winter maintenance, 1.7 per cent of their total road expenditure. In 1947, out of $11,400,000 spent on county roads, $1,600,000 or 14 per cent went for winter control.

"I know that our municipal governments and our municipal officials and our municipal taxpayers will not resent it when I suggest that perhaps we are demanding too much off a luxury nature in relation to winter roads at the expense of the practicalities of the whole problem."

PLUNGES TO DEATH

Port Alberni, B. C., Feb. 24 — (CP) — J. E. McEachern, 55, of Port Alberni, B. C., plunged to a fiery death last night through an incinerator manhole at the Alberni Pacific lumber shingle mill. Witnesses told police they heard a faint scream and turned to see McEachern's body disappear into the incinerator fire box. An inquest will be held today.

Betting Scandal Involving 2 NHL Players Reported

Detroit Times Says Bets Placed on Games Played

Detroit, Feb. 24 — (AP)—Police Commissioner Harry Toy said today that information had reached him connecting two National Hockey League players with an ex-convict suspected of heading a gambling ring.

Toy said he was seeking a "complete report of the whole affair."

Earlier, the Detroit Times, in a copyrighted story, said police had information that "at least two" National Hockey League players made "substantial" bets on games in which they played.

Bet Against Own Team

One player, the newspaper said, bet $550 against his own team.

The Times said the two players were members of Boston Bruins.

Toy said he did not know the names of the two players involved in the report which reached him.

Toy said Art Ross, manager of the Boston team, called him from Toronto today to seek information. Toy said he gave Ross the following statement:

"We have been investigating James Tamer and some information did come to the police department which had reference to some hockey games, indicating some contact between Tamer and two hockey players. It wasn't of sufficient strength, however, to base an accusation."

Tamer, 36, is a convicted bank robber, who was returned to Southern Michigan prison last week as a parole violator.

The police commissioner said the two hockey players made the connection, if there was one, from another city, while Tamer was in Detroit, presumably by telephone.

Bruins' Owner to Check

In Boston, owner Weston Adams of the Bruins, said we are going to run this case down all the way."

"If there is anything in it we certainly want to know about it," he added. "I did not believe any member of the Bruins or, for that matter, any other National Hockey League player is involved in this case."

In Toronto, Conn Smythe, president and general managing director of the Toronto Maple Leafs and a governor of the N.H.L., said: "It's all news to me. It's the first I've heard of it."

Doesn't Believe Report

Toronto — (CP) — Art Ross, vice president and manager of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, said today that "I don't believe a word" of a Detroit story that two members of the Bruins had made substantial bets on games in which he had played.

However, said Ross, "we are investigating." He added that a thorough probe would take some time and he doubted that he would be able to report on its result until tomorrow.

The Detroit story said police there had information that "at least two" N.H.L. players made bets on games and that both were members of the Bruins.

SUSPECT RELEASED

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 24 — (AP) — Human Siegel, held for questioning in the gangland slaying in California of Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegal, was released yesterday. Police requested that charges of vagrancy against Siegel be dropped. Siegel is not related to the slain gambler.

Chiang Meditates in Mountain Lair Planning Strategy to Smash Reds

By HAROLD K. MILKS

Nanking, Feb. 24 — (AP) — Chiang Kai-Shek is meditating in a mountain hideout, China's crisis — a crisis so acute that his naval commander declared the United States fleet must stand by to protect northern ports.

A government official, asked to explain Chiang's long absence in one of the most crucial periods in China's history, replied today:

"The Generalissimo thinks best when he is alone and undisturbed. Kuling (the summer capital) offers a perfect opportunity for such meditations."

He is conferring with some of his top military leaders. Reports indicate they are planning a new master strategy to defeat the Chinese communists, whose upsurge has engulfed all but the heart of Manchuria.

In Tsingtao, Admiral Kwei Yung-Ching, commander-in-chief of the Chinese navy, told interviewers:

"It is very important that the American navy remain in Chinese waters as long as we are unable to protect the coast.

"This is particularly so at the present time because Dairen and Port Arthur (major Manchurian posts) are not yet in our control." Both are occupied by Russia under a 1945 Chinese-Russian treaty. The treaty, Admiral Kwei commented, was "stupid, badly bungled."

Peiping dispatches from Manchuria said the Reds had encircled Penki, coal mining centre 35 miles southeast of Mukden, but said the government still held the town.

2 TRAIMEN DEAD, THIRD MISSING IN TRAIN WRECK

Engine and Teuder Plunge Over Embankment After Hitting Rockslide

Lytton, B.C., Feb. 24 (CP) — Two trainmen are known dead and a third is missing following the plunge of a Canadian National Railways freight engine and tender over a 50 foot embankment, 50 miles east of here.

The extra freight, westbound out of Kamloops, struck a rockslide near Gossett, B.C., late last night, but only two of the 45 freight cars were derailed.

The dead are: Engineer Archie Legg and fireman C. E. Merrick both of Kamloops.

Missing is brakeman G. F. Donley, also of Kamloops, who was riding in the engine. The bodies of the engineer and fireman have been recovered.

Security Police Invade S.D. Party Offices in Prague

Prague, Feb. 24 (AP)—A score of Czechoslovak security police, armed with bayonetted rifles, entered the headquarters of the Social Democratic Party late today.

The move of the Communist-directed police was not immediately explained. The Communists are grasping for full control of Czechoslovakia.

About 10 riflemen remained in the offices of the National Socialist Party, whose headquarters were seized and searched yesterday. Most of the party secretariat staff was back at work. The police said they were assigned as a defence guard. They said that similar guards were on duty at Communist party headquarters.

Trade unions staged a one-hour strike at noon as a token of their solidarity with the Communists.

Communist Premier Klement Gottwald predicted victory for his party within hours or days.

"It may be in several hours, but it will certainly be in several days," the Communist premier said at a meeting to form an "action committee" for Prague.

Even as he spoke, the Communists, emboldened by a split in Social Democrat ranks, pushed for an open showdown. The Social Democratic party has held the balance of power in the four-year-old political crisis.

President Eduard Benes is under heavy pressure to let the Communists reorganize the cabinet with their own men.

The very active Eighth Belleville Scout and Cub Troops will hold a paper collection drive in Murney Ward on Friday evening between the hours of five and seven P.M.

So, residents of Murney Ward your co-operation with the boys will be appreciated, and when a fine young scout or cub calls at your door Friday evening, the paper you save and give to him will pay dividends in the future in the splendid boys' work amongst the youth of the City.

WEEKEND PLAYERS FIRST PRODUCTION

First stage presentation of the organization known as the 'Week-End Players', the comedy "Dear Ruth", by Norman Krasna, will be presented Wednesday evening at the Collegiate Auditorium.

Movie goers will remember "Dear Ruth" when several months ago, the comedy played at a local theatre and the stage presentation of the play as presented by the "Week-Enders" promises to be every bit as entertaining. The "Week-End Players" are a group of young people interested in the theatre, all former, students of B.C.I., who last October formed themselves into a dramatic club the aims of which are to provide a further field for their dramatic talent. "Dear Ruth" is their first stage presentation and possibly the forerunner of other such presentations to be seen in the future.

WILFRID HOLMES COMPLETES 34 YEARS AS CITY CLERK

Thirty-four years' service as clerk of the municipality, was recognized by members of city council last evening when City Clerk Wilfrid Holmes accepted verbal appreciation and was formally presented with a pen and pencil set.

The council meeting was briefly interrupted for the presentation with Mayor D. L. Storey calling on the dean of city councillors, Alderman Clarke, to tender the appreciation of the council and to make the presentation. In accepting the gift City Clerk Holmes stated he felt always that the city had first call on his time. It would continue to be this way as long as he was in the service of the city.

Little Danger Of Flood Says City Engineer

With mild weather conditions prevailing and if extensive rainfall is not encountered there should be little danger of the Moira River creating a flood hazard this Spring, members of city council were told last evening through a report from City Engineer Charles Mott.

Mr. Mott stated that during the past week he had made daily inspections of the river and expressed the opinion that under normal conditions the river ice should wear down gradually and without trouble.

As result of the recent mild spell there was a strong current in the river with two channels at the C.P.R. bridge already being open. These channels, one on each side of the river were from 200 to 300 feet in length.

Continuing the engineer pointed out that in several places between the city and Cannifton the river was open with a strong current being visible. Surface ice above the Cannifton dam was still intact and if it did not break up until the ice in the lower part of the river moves out then, according to the engineer, there should be no serious flood.

Rotary to Retain Camp Property

The Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon almost unanimously voted against the suggestion that its property housing the Boys' Camp at Moira Lake be turned over to the local branch of the Y.M.C.A.. .With approximately eighty members in attendance, only four gave affirmative votes.

The decision culminated a lengthy discussion on the matter which was held over from the luncheon meeting of two weeks ago in order that members could give the matter serious consideration .

The property, some seven acres on the shores of Moira Lake, was acquired by the club about twenty years ago, and has since been operated by the Y.M.C.A. as a boys 'and girls' camp. The camp boys' and girls' camp. The camp camp facilities and grants from the Rotary Club.

Six new members were officially welcomed into the club during the meeting. They included Rotarians Bob Boyce, Ken. Griffiths, Freeman Burrows, "Al" Davis, George Campbell and Court Miller. Rotarian "Ozzy" Scott was the official "greeter".

Several Picton Rotarians were guests at the luncheon and contributed to a number of humorous situations.

Providing the musical part of the luncheon was Mr. Ed. Fraser, of Toronto, and formerly of Trenton, who is a basso-profundo of prominence in the Queen City. His three solos were given a fine reception by the clubmen. President Alex Nathan was in the chair.

Council Approves High Land North Docter Sub-Division and Area East Of Bull Street for Residential Area

Preparatory to utilizing the area for residential purposes, a contour plan of all the high land property in the area immediately to the north of the Docter subdivision and to the east of the Bull Street residential area, will be prepared by the engineering firm of Gore and Storrie, Toronto.

Members of council at their regular meeting Monday evening voted that the above engineering firm prepare the contour plan of this particular area to determine what portion could be drained into the MacDonald Street sewer. Following annexation of the property to the city it is planned to sub-divide the high land area and erect approximately 200 homes to be constructed under the government rehabilitation program for 1948.

Don't Want Industrial Area

Alderman Angus Duffy told council members there was a feeling among Bull Street residents that the property immediately to the east of their homes was to be used as an industrial area and that in view of this there was a movement afoot to block annexation proceedings. "I would like it to be made known to these people that city council had never officially approved this particular area for industrial purposes," he said.

The alderman stated the idea that this particular area was to be used for industrial purposes resulted from a map of the proposed annexation area to the east of the city being published in the local newspaper, the map designating the area north of the Docter sub-division as an industrial area.

"If these people can be assured that the property immediately to the east of Bull Street will be used for residential purposes I do not think there would be much opposition at the public hearing on annexation to be heard March 4th."

Claims Petition Circulating

Alderman Allin, as chairman of industry, stated that as far as he knew people in the Bull St. area had no objection to the proposed industrial area. Alderman Duffy, however, stated that already a petition was being raised to oppose annexation proceedings. This was borne out by Alderman Brown and Alderman Follwell.

Alderman Armstrong pointed out that the Docter sub-division was laid out for residential purposes only and no industry was to be permitted to locate in the subdivision. Also, the high land immediately to the north of the Docter sub-division, or east of the Bull Street area, would be subdivided for construction of approximately 200 houses.

By-Law to Acquire General Hospital, Provide Funds For Home for Aged Given Approval

Drainage of roof and surface water into the sanitary sewer system will not be permitted in the city after July 1st, 1948, members of council voted last evening when they passed a by-law covering the above.

According to the by-law existing drains leading roof water or surface water into the sanitary sewers must be disconnected by the above date and no connection will be permitted in the case of new construction. Penalties are provided for non-compliance with the terms of the by-law.

A second by-law passed at the meeting was in connection with the acquisition of the Belleville General Hospital by the city, the city agreeing to turn over to the Women's Christian Association a sum up to $100,000 for the construction of an old people's home, site to be approved by the city.

Council failed to ratify a previous committee recommendation authorizing the call for tenders for the construction of a new sidewalk from Zellers Store to the Upper Bridge. The matter was laid over until the next committee meeting in order that it may be determined if the contractor who successfully tendered for the work two years ago is still willing to carry out the project.

City to Pay Bill

An account for $90 for moving a house excavation to conform with the existing street line at Bleecker and Pine Street was ordered paid as was a bill for $46.90 for meals for firemen at the time of the fire at the Chamber of Commerce building. The firemen were fed at the direction of Chairman of Fire Alderman Angus Duffy.

Approval was granted for the appointment of a traffic guide to protect school children crossing at Bridge and Ann Streets.

Alderman H. J. Clarke reported on a recent meeting of the Moira Valley Conservation Authority, stating that it was expected the survey of the Moira Watershed would take place this year but there would be no development of the project for two years. There is a meeting this afternoon with Hon. Dana Porter, minister of planning and development.

Many Inquiries

Under inquiries Alderman Allin asked for a report from the Harbor Board and also asked if traffic lights on Front Street could not be synchronized. He also asked why street excavations made by the Bell Telephone were not properly filled in. City Engineer C. Mott replied that these sunken excavation fills were being filled in as rapidly as they appeared.

Alderman Follwell wanted to know why something could not be done to curb jay walkers who were persistent in crossing downtown streets at points between the intersections. The question of parking meters being out of order came up for discussion with result that the attendant who services the meters will report to council.

Alderman Lazenby asked what was holding up the distribution of scrolls to veterans of the last war, stating they should have been received by the veterans months ago.

$39,477 Fire Loss During '47 Says Fire Chief

Fire losses in Belleville for 1947 totalled $39,477, members of city council were informed last evening through the annual report of Fire Chief William Lynch. By comparison losses the year previous were $151,560, and in 1945 $26,893.

The number of alarms answered by the fire department was also down from the year previous with firemen receiving 251 calls as compared with 312 in 1946.

Fires in dwellings caused by far the greatest number of alarms with 94 such calls being received, places of business were next in line with 23 premises of this nature receiving attention of firemen in extinguishing blazes. Ten garages were reported afire and 11 manufacturing plants. Firemen were called four times to hotels, six times to churches and eight times to public buildings.

Firemen answered 11 calls for assistance in fighting fires outside the city limits. They were called in twelve instances to assist in rescuing persons from drowning. There were 10 false alarms turned in during the year.

Chimneys Greatest Cause

Chimneys were the greatest cause of fires with 38 being reported while stovepipes accounted for 14 alarms and electric wiring 20 alarms. Oil burners resulted in 16 alarms and careless smokers 14 alarms.

And just as evidence that firemen have to be versatile in their accomplishments the annual report noted that cats in trees accounted for two alarms while the department was called on three occasions to rescue dogs from the river. In one instance they were called when a householder's baby had a choking spell.

Members of the department had 40 ladder drills during the year and had 50 first aid classes.

Time lost through sickness during the year was 141 days. Of this time lost Fireman Jack Grills lost 120 days, leaving a balance of 21 days for the other members of the department. One hundred and thirty one men were detailed to dance halls and to public functions during the year for the protection of the public.

In conclusion Fire Chief Lynch recommended the construction of a new fire hall as soon as possible, and also that a new fire inspector be acquired for the city. Three hundred feet of 2½ inch hose and ten waterproof raincoats were recommended purchased.

Appreciation to the police department for their co-operation whenever assistance was required, and to all city officials and residents for their co-operation was expressed by the Chief.

Parks Board Seeks Council Approval To Change Name

Members of the local parks board appeared before city council last evening seeking approval of council members to two requests, one to change the name of the parks board, and the other for permission to appear before the Ontario Hydro Commission seeking more favorable hydro rates for flood lighting of the exhibition grounds.

As spokesman for the parks board delegation Chairman Cleo Colling told council that as a parks board the local organization did not have membership in the National Parks and Recreation Commission organization and therefore were not entitled to literature.

Also if the name of the local organization was not changed to conform with the national set-up then possibly they would not be able to lay claim to any grants which might be forthcoming from the government.

"All we are asking is that the name be changed," pointed out Chairman Colling. "We are not asking that control of recreation in the city be turned over to us."

Council approved of the parks board request and turned the matter over to the city solicitor for investigation as to any legal obstruction.

Parks Board Secretary O. Pinkston asked that permission of council be given for the local exhibition park to be considered as recreational grounds as then they would be permited to come under hydro rates for municipally operated parks. Last year service charges for flood-lighting the exhibition park amounted to approximately $19 per game which was considered expensive for nightly operation. Permission was granted for board members to appear before the Hydro Commission.

Judge 'Standing Pat' on Words On Crimes Trials

Westover, Mass., Feb. 24 (AP)—Judge Charles F. Wennerstrum said on arrival by air today he was "standing pat" on his statement that the prosecution in German war crimes trials "failed to attain objectivity aloof from vindictiveness" and "personal ambitions for convictions."

Wennerstrum, who presided at the latest trials at Nuernberg, said that he had "no apologies to make for any statements I made to newsmen in Germany."

He did not intend "to engage in any recriminations as to General Taylor's criticisms of my statements," but he added:

"I rank my loyalty to the United States as high or on a higher plane as the gentleman who criticized me."

The reference was to Brig-Gen Telford Taylor, the prosecutor, who said Wennerstrum's statements would be "used by all the worst elements in Germany against the best."

(Wennerstrum's original statement was made in an exclusive interview obtained by Hal Faust of the Chicago Tribune last Saturday. Before it appeared in print, however, Taylor somehow learned what the interview contained and he issued a statement criticizing Wennerstrum and saying the interview was "subversive of the interestes and policies of the United States.")

Correctly Reported Says Wennerstrum

Wennerstrum said reporters in Germany quoted him correctly as saying the high ideals announced as the motives for creating the war crimes tribunals have "not been evident."

He reiterated that the war crimes trials have "convinced the Germans merely that their leaders lost the war to tough conquerors."

Wennerstrum was quoted in the original interview as directing criticism at persons "with personal ambitions" being involved in prosecuting the defendants.

He identified those persons today as "the prosecutors and their superiors, which means this general."

Wennerstrum was accompanied by Judge Edward F. Carter of the Nebraska Supreme Court and George J. Burke, General Counsel for the University of Michigan.

Both sat with him in the trial of war criminals and likewise are returning home.

Carter and Burke, denying knowledge of Wennerstrum's statements in his interview, refused comment other than to express belief that the opinion in the trial at which they sat as judges was "well thought out."

Wennerstrum said that one of his particular criticisms was that the German defendants had no channels for appeal— no rights to appeal.

Three dwellings, a hotel and the glass store quickly fell prey to the flames but by 8 a.m. The Mountain Inn Hotel, an ancient, four-storey structure was bearing the brunt of the blaze.

A house on Notre Dame Street across the bottom of the hill and occupied by two families also fell prey to the fire.

Mountain Hill offices on both sides of the fire were damaged by smoke and water.

Homes Evacuated

People in surrounding dwellings evacuated their homes taking with them whatever they could carry.

The evacuation of the Mountain Hill Hotel was orderly and soon after the general alarm the manager said all the hotel rooms had been emptied.

Prices Committee Probes Rising Cost of Bread

Ottawa, Feb. 24 (CP) — Digging into the rising cost of bread in the household, the Commons Prices Committee today had before it evidence that some bakers indicate to stores the retail price for their loaves.

On its records, too, was testimony that several bakeries had hoisted prices simultaneously and identically to the Dominion Stores, chain grocery concern, in Montreal and Toronto since last August.

Louis B. Squair of Toronto, executive vice-president of Dominion Stores, gave this evidence to the committee yesterday but said he would not term these practices price-fixing.

However, Angus MacInnis (CCF —Vancouver East), a committee member, drew from Mr. Squair's evidence there was an "understanding" among bakers in selling to retailers and that they impelled retailers to sell to consumers "at a certain price."

Hughes Cleaver (L—Halton) also commented that "it looks as if somebody fixes prices."

Both Mr. Squair and R. G. Meech, vice-president of Loblaw Groceterias told the committee their companies had no agreements or understandings with bread firms for the setting of prices. Mr. Meech wound up testimony he began Friday.

Other developments yesterday:

1. The committee warned against discrimination by other business men toward persons giving evidence to the body after George Christensen of Toronto, National Director of the Foods Division, Retail Merchants' Association, had claimed some wholesalers were "retaliating" for evidence given by retailers last week.

2. The committee decided to undertake analysis of all bread mentioned in evidence before it, to determine relative values.

Under questioning, Mr. Squair listed five Montreal bakery firms and two in Toronto that had engaged in simultaneous and similar price increases. The increases were not similar as between cities, however.

One-Half Hour Afternoon Power Cut As Result of Co-operation

Voluntary power savings on the part of local merchants who last week voted to keep stores closed until ten o'clock in the morning, together with a reduction of power used throughout the day, have been successful in saving sufficient power to permit a shorter power interruption in the afternoon, it was announced this morning by O. H. Scott, public utilities manager.

As result of power savings effected yesterday, the afternoon power interruption today will be only 30 minutes, from five until five-thirty, instead of the full hour.

Agreeably Surprised

"The commission was agreeably surprised by the support which merchants have given the move to voluntarily save power," stated Mr. Scott today. 'Actually they did a very fine job and sufficient power was saved to permit a half hour interruption this afternoon.'

It was stressed, however, that the power shortage is still serious and calls for the fullest cooperation on the part of householders and industry as well as on the part of commercial users.

Might Rmove Afternoon Cut

Mr. Scott intimated that if continued savings in the consumption of power were made, it may be possible to eliminate the afternoon power shut-off completely.

So for this evening at least, local housewives will be able to get dinner started at five-thirty with prospects of serving the meal at near the regular time.

Routine Matters Main Business At Board Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held at new board rooms at Queen Alexandra School when accounts for the previous month were passed and other matters of business discussed.

Following considerable discussion on the matter, board members decided that in the future there will be no payment of accounts for accidents unless the application is accompanied by receipted bills. This pertains to accidents to pupils who are covered by accident insurance.

Cordial Relations Praised

A letter from the Teachers' Federation was read complimenting the Board for the fine spirit existing between the teachers and the board of Education.

The Department of Education has notified the board that grants for 1948 will be the same as for 1947. The grant for public schools will be 35 per cent of the approved costs, less ten per cent and for the Collegiate 40 per cent of the approved costs, less nine per cent. For the vocational school the same schedule of grants, less seven per cent, will apply.

Teachers on the staff of the various schools in the city will be encouraged to attend summer school, it was decided with the board voting a grant of $40 to each teacher attending summer school by way of assisting with expenses.

To Improve Washrooms

Instruction was given for further improvement in the washrooms of the public schools. The rooms will be painted and screens provided, while air driers for hands will be procured, if possible.

Safety films and lectures on safety provided by the Ontario Safety League will be made use of in schools, it was decided. A membership in the Associated High Schools Board was ordered taken. W. Bell, an employee of the Northern Electric Company, was appointed as member to the Advisory Vocational Committee, replacing Mr. D. Martin.

A speaker equipment for use with the Hammond Electric organ to be placed in the Collegiate as a memorial to former students who gave their lives in the last war, was recommended purchased. This speaker equipment will cost $644.

Traffic Control

City Council will be asked to extend its traffic control facilities to include traffic direction at the corner of Ann and Bridge Streets. The system of traffic control for the protection of children at busy intersections near schools has proven out very satisfactory.

Public Schools accounts for February, totalling $20,441.81, were ordered paid, as were Collegiate accounts of $18,857.25 and Vocational School accounts of $7,560.47.

Ratification to recommendations of the Collegiate management committee was given. This included approval for the Northern Electric Company to survey and report on a school telephone system and for action to be taken at once providing the cost was not over $200.

Picture Accepted

The Board accepted a picture of the late P.C. MacLaurin, former principal, to be hung in the library of the school, and also granted approval for the placing of a memorial plaque at the main entrance of the school.

New band instruments for use by the school band were recommended purchased at a cost of $975, the amount being covered in the requisition for the year.

Present at the meeting were Chairman Harold Seldon, and members Miss J. Tickell, Arthur Burke, E. A. Geen, Alex Nathan, Dr. Tennent, Dr. Walters and Frank Cushing.

POLICE BLOTTER

Theft of an overcoat from a car parked at the rear of Vandusen's Store on Front Street was reported to the police station on Monday. The coat was stolen some time over the weekend, it was stated.

A local taxi driver reported his taxi had struck and killed a dog on Bridge Street, West. The dog was owned by R. J. Goodfellow.

Icy road conditions at the south end of Coleman Street were responsible this morning for a motor accident resulting in approximately $150 damage. Stan William, Picton, was driving toward the city, when a southbound car driven by Bert Fitzgibbon, city, collided at the intersection.

Britain's Recovery

Views on the situation in Britain by leading bankers of the United Kingdom are quoted in the latest supplement to the Bank of Montreal Business Summary. Among them are those of the Marquess of Linlithgow, chairman of the Midland Bank on the lessons of 1947. He says the past year has been one of progress "in the sense that it has brought a more realistic appreciation of the resources and potentialities of our country."

The result is a clearer insight into the effects of the war and the toll it took of our energies and inner resources. We emerged more exhausted than we then knew, and correspondingly more receptive of easy optimism about the immediate future. I believe that the period since then was marked by progressive enlightenment as to the facts of our situation, by the formation of more sober views of the tasks before us, and by the resurgence of a characteristic determination to overcome the difficulties in the way of full economic recovery.

"We have been living through a phase of readjustment, both material and psychological; and it is because we are seeing our problems more clearly and showing ourselves readier to take the measure of them, that we can look back upon an eventful year with considerable satisfaction, and forward to the promise of better times in years that lie ahead."

On the international scene Lord Linlithgow sees encouraging evidences "where our problems are of more immediate urgency. . . . Once again Great Britain has had cause, in her latest emergency, for unmeasured thankfulness for the practical good will of British countries overseas, while Britain's determination still to be great, in spite of all difficulties, is demonstrated by the farseeing now launched for econbmic development and social improvement in colonial territories."

The Marshall plan, he says, presents a magnificent opportunity for a co-operative effort directed to the reinforcement of European economies in general. This last great concept, however, he believes, cannot be fully effective, unless the countries receiving help live up to the moral obligations accepted by them in the early stages of drafting the plan.

Population

Interest was aroused by the Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, when he predicted that if Canadians all became busy and boosted, the Dominion's population could be doubled in the next fifteen years. As he figures it, the natural increase in the number of people in that time would be 4,500,000. He referred to the view of Winston Churchill that Britain could stand the reduction of her population by 7,000,000.

Mr. Gardiner wants to see more than half a million added to the population yearly with the hope of reaching a million increase annually by the end of a ten-year period.

Advantages of the greater population he pointed out would be a larger home market for the produce of the country.

At the same time a great population would lead to the development of the Dominion at an accelerated rate. Canada has resources of the greatest importance and she is rich in many materials and products that many other countries lack.

Canada has a large territory and is now bringing in immigrants from the British Isles and numbers of displaced persons from Europe, these latter having gone through the awful ordeal of having during the war been at the mercy of the German Nazis.

Besides British newcomers are newcomers from The Netherlands who are making their new home in Canada as a land of freedom and opportunity.

Looking Forward

Since the intensely severe winter weather has given place to milder temperatures mixed with some dips of the mercury during the night but not recently to the zero zone, people are getting their first opportunity of bright sunlight, disappearing snowbanks and such a drawback as ice frozen on the walks making walking more or less difficult. That however is just a small drawback for the sign in the firmament is that spring is not so far off. In fact it is less than four weeks away.

That does not promise of course absence of unruly weather, for March has yet to come in next Monday and it may have the qualities of the raging lion or act like a gambolling lamb. As a matter of personal interest most people will prefer a wintry aspect on the entry of March if the adage has any truth in it, rather than an entry so lamblike as to deceive. If all recollections do not fail, the latter part of last winter was mild and the old adage was proven for when spring should have come in, everything was suggestive of winter and spring was late as everyone recalls. It is over four weeks since the bear or the woodchuck here had an opportunity to see his shadow in the sunlight and didn't, so there are hopes that when the next three and a half weeks are rolled around, or even a little later, spring may come in earnest and so please countrymen and city dwellers.

This present time suggests that dangers of ultimate floods are disappearing as the snow gets an opportunity to melt and the river ice is wearing away.

New York Roads

One of the effects of the severe winter in and around New York, and in the northern states of the United States, it is said, is that "even the best concrete highways show extensive cracks. Defects vary in area and depth from minor annoyances that make driving noisy and unpleasant to large craters that threaten broken springs or loss of car control. At ordinary driving speeds," says the New York Times, "danger of accident is greatly increased. In northern New Jersey conditions are reported to be so bad that a general warning has been issued to motorists to use their cars as little as possible, especially at night. "Further disintegration of surfaces may be expected for some weeks as the frost comes out of the ground and traffic makes the holes deeper and extends their edges. The situation is the expected aftermath of an unusually severe and protracted period of snow and ice."

The eastern States have been buffeted by storms during the winter which have been more severe than those which came around to the north of the Great Lakes.

However with the approach of ultimately milder weather, caution with everyone everywhere on the continent, where ice and snow have been on the roads, is advised with reduction of speed and more attention to care in the operation of motor vehicles. Too great speed for conditions is a fertile condition for mishaps and this applies to the use of roads where there may be a thin coating of snow or patches of ice.

New York Times, mindful of the blizzard which struck New York State after Christmas, calls the roads "post-blizzard roads."

Up Warwick way (Queensland) hens are laying eggs colored cyclamen and mauve, says Australian News.

A mulberry tree is believed to be responsible for the pretty pastel shaded shells. Large quantities of berries were knocked into a poultry yard by flying foxes (phalangers) and eaten by the hens. Since then they have laid in technicolor.

Russian scientist is convinced, after examining big crater, that the earth was visited by men from Mars in 1908. The fact they have not returned perhaps speaks for itself, notes the Hamilton Spectator.

THE EYE RESTER

When the honeymoon is over, and upon the couch he lies,
With the subtle explanation it is just
"to rest his eyes,"
The bride will soon discover, what her mother early knew,
It is good-bye to the movies, for he'll sleep the evening through.

Oh, I wonder did her mother never counsel or advise
That she mustn't for a minute, let her husband rest his eyes?
Did she never see her father, in the days before she wed,
Plead for forty winks, then slumber until time to go to bed?

My mother used to shudder at the ending of the day
When, "I'll rest my eyes a minute," she heard father softly say,
For she knew when dad had settled on the sofa, there he'd lie
And snore throughout the evening in a way to terrify.

Now a nearby couch is tempting to all husbands after tea,
And once they settle on it sound asleep
they soon will be.
Lest the evening will be wasted, wives should wary be, and wise,
And never, for a minute, let them down to "rest their eyes."

Mr. Percy Cole is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. Francis Mackie is home on a visit from Detroit, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. George Reid, Queen Street, spent last evening with friends in Napanee.

Dr. Fraser and ex. Reeve Fred Curry of Madoc were in town yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. David Bates have left for their home at Grand Coulee, Sask., after visiting his father, Mr. G. W. Bates, Avondale. Mr. Bates is engaged successfully in farming; he owns two sections in Saskatchewan, most of which is under cultivation.

A citizen suggests that an effort should be made to have a registered Government thermometer placed outside the city post office. At present there are many thermometers and no two agree. These are hanging outside shops on Front Street, but owing to the variety of readings, the public does not know which one is correct — if any.

The Rev. C. G. Smith, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church is spending a few days in Toronto.

What will the sporting youth of the city do for a playground and the gallant Fifteenth do for a drill ground when the hospital lot is built upon?. The arrangements of the good people of St. Michael's Church are about to knock old customs "galley west". It will seem odd when the good old hospital lot can not be used as a recreation ground. However, Father Twomey and his flock are to be commended for their enterprise and energy. A large stone school with architecture to match the handsome St. Michael's Church will be a decided ornament to the locality and a credit to the city.

Mr. William McIntosh is spending a few days in New York City on business.

Capt. Matheson, teller in the Merchants Bank here, who for the past four years has been connected with the Governor General's Body Guard, Ottawa, will be transferred to the 15th. Battalion and will command No. 3 Company in place of Capt. J. E. Walmsley, who retired recently.

Mr. William Cross, barrister, Madoc, was in town today.

Mr. Ruben S. Sills of this city who left recently for Vancouver B. C., has purchased a hardware business in that city.

Mr. John Watts of this city has left to assume his duties in the barber shop in the Revere Hotel, Brockville.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

The literal meaning of "Missouri" is not known.

When Louis Jolliet and Jacques Marquette descended the Mississippi in 1673 they tried to learn from the Indians as much as they could about the tribes living along the banks of the stream later known as the Missouri. The French explorers were told of a Siouian tribe which called itself Nieutachi but which the Algonquians called Emissourita. This tribe was closely related to the Iowas and Otos and on his map Marquette located it on the upper Missouri in what is now Nebraska.

At first the French called the large river Ouchage (Osage), but later that name attached to a tributory and the large river was called Missouri. The spelling of the name in English did not become fixed until toward the end of the 18th century.

Some authorities suppose that "Missouri" was derived from an Illinois Indian phrase literally meaning "big - canoe - haver." There seems to be no foundation for the popular belief that the first part of "Missouri" is the same as the first part of "Mississippi" and that the name means "big muddy" in allusion to its turbid water.

Missouri was part of the Louisiana Purchase Territory of 1803 and was included in what was known as Upper Louisiana. Louisiana proper was admitted into the Union as a State April 8, 1812, and for nearly two months the rest of the territory continued to be called Lounsiana Territory. On June 4, 1812, Congress declared that "the territory hereafter called Louisiana shell hereafter be called Missouri." Part of this Missouri territory became the State of Missouri August 10, 1821.

The pronunciation of the name varies. Missourians generally pronounce the name of their State "miz-SOOR-uh." People elsewhere are more likely to pronounce it "ma-ZOOR-a" or "ma-ZOOR-ee."

To avoid confusion with "Miss.", the abbreviation of "Mississippi," "Missouri" is abbreviated "Mo." It is the only State name that is abbreviated by adding an "internal letter" to the initial letter. All other State names are abbreviated by using initial letters of the name, or initial letters of parts of it when it is a two-word name, or by combining initial and final letters.

The capital of three States of the Union are situated on the Missouri River — Jefferson City, Mo.; Pierre, S. D.; and Bismark, N. D.

Family Court Approved By London Council

London, Ont., Feb. 24 (CP) — London City Council, sitting in committee last night, approved in principal the idea of a family court and sent the matter to estimates for approval. Cost of establishing such a court here has been estimated at $16,000.

C. C. Carrothers, one of a large delegation representing social agencies of this city, told the council that "Londoner's spent $3,200,000 on likquor last year" and one of the main objectives of the family court would be to offset "thme effect liquor has on London homes."

Ald. Cameron Wilson's motion to approve the court in principle was adopted. Last year the family court question was defeated after being sent to estimates for consideration.

KEEP OFF THE ICE

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—(CP)—After two youths succeeded in crossing the thin ice on the St. Mary's River, police warned residents to "keep off," adding it was a miracle the youths didn't go through. A ferry plies between here and the American Sault across the river.

PROGRAM PERMITS

Finance Minister Abbott said the restrictions would be retained until Canada's U.S. dollar reserves reached a "normal and reasonable" level and showed signs of remaining there. He did not know when that would be.

With the exchange bill reported out of committee, Mr. Abbott began piloting through a resolution to a bill that will give statutory efect to the 25-percent excise tax imposed on a lengthy list of goods when the import restrictions were announced Nov. 17.

During brief discussion, Ross Thatcher (CCF-Moose Jaw) said the taxes were "inflationary" and were put into effect contrary to Canadian law. Mr. Abbott replied the taxes were intended to "drain off excess purchasing power." They were far from "inflationary" and, in fact helped to counteract inflationary tendencies.

Mr. Thatcher said the taxes had been in effect since Nov. 17 despite the fact they had not been approved by Parliament. It was "conceivable" that adoption of the measure might create a precedent, paving the way for future similar action by the cabinet.

Extend Farm Act

Mr. Abbott said the government gave notice of the taxes Nov. 17. This procedure was the same as presentation of a budget. The articles affected by the taxes were not necessities of life and purchases of them could be deferred.

In opening proceedings, W. Chester S. McLure (PC-Queens) protested that for the second year in succession Prince Edward Island was not represented on the committee of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

Mr. Abbott obtained first reading of a bill extending for three years the provisions of the Farm Loans Improvement Act of 1944, scheduled to expire at the end of this month.

Mr. Abbott said a change would be made in the new bill to allow banks to take a mortgage on the construction, repair, alteration and additions to any building or structure on a farm. In the existing bill such mortgages could only be taken when the loan exceeded $2,000 and was for a period of more than five years.

Referring to the general principle of capital import restrictions, Mr. Howe said the government aimed to encourage industries, activities and practices which will earn or save U.S. dollars, using Canadian resources as far as possible, and insisting that new industries be economically sound once the temporary protection is withdrawn.

Discussions Proceeding

He pointed to "disturbing inflationary possibilities" in a proposed capital investment of $2,800,000,000 this year and said "some postponement of less essential expenditures in this program would be far from harmful."

In fact, he said, "our over-all investment picture would be such that some deferment of expenditures would in any case be economically desirable and sound" regardless of the dollar shortage. These deferred projects could stimulate employment and income in the future.

"Discussions with the industry are proceeding," Mr. Howe said.

"It is our hope that the movie industry will contribute to the solution of the Canadian exchange problem, not by contraction of business in Canada, but by the development of production in Canada and the use of the American and international network of distribution outlets of the chief U. S. companies. An important by-product, of course, would be the publicity and resulting tourist business stimulated by a development of this nature."

M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, suggested that a public authority similar to the CBC could do something in the way of making full-length films of Canadian life.

Mr. Howe also dealt in detail with the automobile manufacturing industry and said some $70,000,000 to $75,000,000 would be saved through import limitations on automobile parts and cars made wholly in the U. S.

NAMESAKE'S BADGE FOR NEW DESTROYER

Nashwaaksis, N.B.,—(CP)—The new Canadian destroyer Athabaskan, recently commissioned at Halifax, carries a bit of her predecessor's memory with her.

Mrs. R.M. Lawrence of Nashwaaksis donated a ship's badge to the commanding officer in memory of her husband, Lt. Lawrence, executive officer of the original Athabaskan, sunk by enemy action in 1944.

The badge was designed by officers of the first Athabaskan who shortly before their ship was sunk, gave orders to have a woodcut made by a firm in Scotland. Mrs. Lawrence had the badge completed and brought to Canada.

A resolution, warning the president that his actions jeojardized the life of the Democratic party, was adopted.

HOW YANKEE WISEACRES LOVE GADGETRY!

I'll print here (if the editors permit) any such disapproval, criticism of condemnation any physician of standing cares to get over to my readers, provided, of course, that the physician or physicians consent to the printing of name or names.

If that is not desirable, then at any rate I assure any reputable physician who may offer me any criticism of suggestion or advice that I can take it in good spirit and that I have never yet betrayed confidence.

It must give the real doctors, I mean the men and women who engage in private practice as family physicians without any pretense of being specialists, it must give them a pain in the neck when their patients cite me or my teachings, more or less inaccurately, as not agreeing with whatever the practitioner happens to advise. I'm sorry about that, but there's nothing I can do about it if the rank and file of the profession persists in clinging to so many quaint notions.

As for the brass specialists, the medical hucksters, the "clinic" racketeers, the hokum merchants who practice machine medicine, they never did approve of anything I teach here, and I'd feel abashed if they did. A brass specialist, in my lexicon, is a physician who, having some means other than income from practice, elects to sit on his dignity and wait for Yankee Wiseacre customers to come and pay him fancy fees as a "specialist." Any physician who has a license to practice medicine may set up as a "specialist" in any branch he or she chooses—few know that.

Most of you have a wide-eyed belief that your brass specialist would not dare to pose as a specialist if he were not somehow more skilled than the "ordinary" doctor — but in that you are wrong, my dear morons. Any physician with a license to practice medicine and surgery can practice any branch of medicine or surgery he cares to, and the law gives him or her that right.

The difference between the real specialist and the brass specialist is a matter of medical ethics. The real specialist is a physician whose skill and training and special qualifications is recognized by his professional colleagues, by the general practitioners of his community, who refer cases to the specialist for counsel of special treatment or call upon the specialist for service in special cases. The brass specialist is just a slick quack competing with the honest doctors of the community for public patronage — and how Yankee Wiseacres love the gadgetry the brass specialist uses to catch trade!

Frexamp the basal metabolism machine.

When the glorified office girl or the near-nurse wheels the basal metabolism machine into your bill you're going to be stung—and it serves you right. You just love that sort of gadgetry, else you wouldn't be patronizing the brass specialist.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

No Guide Books

I have been unable to find a copy of Joslin's, Allen's or Duffie's handbooks for diabetics. I am sure you can recommend something else that will help me.

(Mrs. C. C. B.)

Answer—I hope publication of such useful guide books is not postponed because of paper shortage—enough paper in the form of imitation newspapers litter our doorstep or the curb before our residence each week to make two or three such books. Perhaps you can find one of the diabetes manuals in your public library. I have a Little Lesson—"Training for Diabetes"—which will do you no harm. For copy send ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

The Guzzler

My brother, 34, drinks 10 or 12 glasses of beer in the course of a night. His stomach has expanded enormously. I tell him it will injure his health, but he insists there is no harm in it. He appreciates your opinion about it.

(B. G.)

Answer—It may not be too late even now for him to quit guzzling beer. Fatty liver is a common development in such heavy beer drinkers. The man's argument that there is no harm it it is the usual childish excuse the alcohol addict makes.

Eggs

I eat one or two eggs a day. As I am past middle age I wonder whether it is all right to do so.

(Mrs. E. M. L.)

Answer—Eggs cooked as you prefer are excellent food for anybody, young or old.

Blue Eyes

You stated all babies are born with brown eyes. (R.S.)

Answer—All babies are born with "blue" eyes, and the eyes become "grey", "brown" or "black" in four to six weeks, depending on the amount of pigment deposited in the irises (color rings around central dark pupils). The actual color of all human eyes is brown—in all races that is the color of the pigment in eyes, hair, skin, if it is examined under microscope.

Community Centre Committee Named For Coming Year

Stirling (Special)—The executive of the Stirling Community Recreational Centre met on Wednesday afternoon in the local agricultural office for the purpose of electing a 1948 executive. In the absence of President Brown, the chair was occupied by Mr. H. R. Tompkins.

The new executive is as follows:

Honorary president: Mr. Harry Brown; President: P. Mayhew; Vice president: Dr. Wm. Cornett; Treasurer: F. D. Pepperall; Secretary: R. D. Patterson;

Executive Committee: Harold Wells, Wm. Sutherland, E. G. Bailey, R. A. Patterson, H. R. Tompkins, Harry Brown and F.A. Sprentall.

Finance Committee: E. G. Bailey, chairman, A. K. Stinson and J. W. Munro.

Grounds Committee: W. T. Elliott, Harry Brooks, M. Fraser and Percy Utman.

General Discussion

After the election of officers, President Mayhew took the chair and there followed a general discussion with respect to various activities of the recreational centre.

During the discussion the opinion was voiced that the Fair Grounds would provide a better locale than the present site at the High School. All present agreed that the Fair Grounds locality had much to offer, however there are certain factors which make it impossible to situate the centre at the west end location. Some factors which make the Fair Grounds site impossible are:

To run a power line inside the Fair Grounds would entail a much bigger expenditure. Poles and wire are expensive and difficult to obtain. To erect the poles properly would necessitate blasting the rock which underlies most of the surface.

It has been suggested that the Fair Grounds location would make it possible for both softball and hardball. Lighting equipment for a hardball diamond, costs as much as $10,000. To raise such an amount puts that prospect out of the question.

The Fair Grounds are at a remote edge of the village. The centre will be erected with the view to making it available for all sports. It would be impossible to have a well - illuminated open air rink for public skating during the winter. The high school adjacent to the recreational centre has a modern gym, and dressing rooms, it could possibly be arranged to use these facilities for recreational activities.

Parking Facilities Better

The High School grounds are central and while it has been pointed out that the Fair Grounds provide better parking facilities, however the many fans who attend the hockey games at the local arena seem to find adequate parking space even in the winter. It is quite possible that good parking facilities can be obtained close to the high school.

During the few games at the High School last year the money obtained by "passing the hat" exceeded that taken by the same means at the Fair Grounds.

President Mayhew has called a meeting of the executive for next Wednesday, February 25th at 2 p.m. in the local agricultural office. The public are cordially invited to attend.

With prospects for a good start this Spring the Recreational Centre Committee hopes to provide Stirling and District with a recreational centre to be truly proud of.

100-Year Mystery Of Lost Painting Solved in Africa

Port Elizabeth, South Africa,— (CP) — The 100-year-old mystery of the missing portrait has been cleared up at last.

Wheerabouts of a portrait of a beautiful young 18th. century woman has long puzzled historians delving into the life of the English novelist, Henry Fielding. Painted by an unknown artist two centuries ago, it is the picture of Sarah Andrews of Bellairs, Lyme Regis, believed to be the original Sophia Western of Fielding's classic "Tom Jones."

For this reason the painting was once pointed out to all who visited the stately English home of its owner in Dorsetshire. Then, for almost 100 years it simply disappeared.

"Fifty years ago," wrote G. M. Godden in a book published in 1910 on the life of Fielding, "a portrait of the beautiful heiress in the character of Sophia Western was still preserved in the house of Bellairs, near Exeter, then the property of the Rhodes family. The present ownership of the picture has so far eluded inquiry."

But the mystery was cleared up recently when Mrs. E. G. Greer, of Port Elizabeth, disclosed the painting has been in her possession for ten years, and today hangs in the room where she lives on Bearson street.

Found Clue in Book,

It was while reading another book about Fielding in the Port Elizabeth public library, "A True Born Englisman," by M. P. Willcocks, that Mrs. Greer realized that the picture that hung facing her was the one for which art dealers had been searching for so long.

There is nothing mysterious about how Mrs. Greer came to have the portrait. Her husband is a direct descendant of Sarah Andrews, and, as members of the family died, treasures were subdivided as generation succeeded generation.

Eight years ago, on the death of a relative in Britain, Mrs. Greer received the unframed canvas of Sarah Andrews, together with other family heirlooms.

Behind the portrait which now hangs in a Port Elizabeth house lies a story of young love enacted in the then small village of Lyme Regis more than 200 years ago.

Henry Fielding, barely 19, fell in love with the lovely Sarah Andrews. But their matchmaking families had other ideas about their future.

It is said that Fielding tried to abduct Sarah one Sunday morning while she was on her way to church, but the attempt failed. Sarah Andrews, a few years later became Mrs. Sarah Rhodes.

Problem of Sex Criminal Topic Of Discussion

"The Problem of the Sex Criminal" was the topic for discussion at the February meeting of the Young Women's Guild, held Monday evening, at the home of Mrs. G. Coulter, Evans St.

Mrs. A. D. Archibald presided and conducted the regular business. Correspondence was received from the recipients of the boxes of food and clothing sent to France and Britain.

Mrs. Coulter presented an inspiring devotional theme on the subject of Ambassadors. The ambassadors from one country to another try to live a life typical of their native country and to have it upheld and respected. Ambassadors of the Christian way of living should reflect the life of Christ. Mrs. Wesley Mifflin sang a very appropriate solo "Living for Jesus".

Mrs. H. Gibson assisted by Mrs. Wilkes and Mrs. Stanton conducted the discussion on the Problem of the Sex Criminal. The citizens of this country have declared war on the sexual psychopath. Millions of aroused and angered people are demanding that the Criminal Code be reconstructed to guarantee his removal from society. This national concern is urgent, just and long overdue. The tragedy is, that it should have taken such a mounting toll of child murders to stir the public to its present concern.

Found in all Races, Faiths

The sexual psychopath is found in any race, class of society, or calling, and with any degree of education. They often appear in every other respect to be ordinary members of society hence they are infinitely more dangerous than the thief, forger, or bank bandit. It is an illness, some curable, some incurable and should be treated as such.

Parents can do much by making their children aware of the dangers. They should be warned about talking with strangers, they should not be allowed out alone after dark, and they should be encouraged to report any peculiar behavior towards them. It is a public responsibility in order to assist in stamping out this evil, for any evidence of questionable behavior to be reported. Efforts should be made to secure better illumination in badly lighted districts, where most of the offenses occur.

Are Often Repeaters

A person does not have to be a court official to know with what disastrous regularity the sex criminal returns again and again for sentence. Each release from a penitentiary looses upon the public a lurking danger of horrible and all too predictable potentialities.

The sexual psychopath must be apprehended and removed from society, but the legal machinery can only be worked out by experts. As the law stands, the police have no authority to arrest individuals unless they are believed to have committed a crime or broken the law. Legal opinions differ as to the best method of assuring the detention of this type of criminal, until he can be cured. There is a lack of definite knowledge as to the proper treatment. Some difficulty lies in the fact, that sex crimes come under Federal jurisdiction, while mental health, is dealt with provincially.

Mentally Diseased

It is agreed that the sex psychopath is a mentally diseased individual, and must be given treatment. The whole field of treatment is so relatively new, that the few people doing research on the subject are baffled, and certainly not unanimous in any accepted methods.

The best clinic at present is the Quaker Clinic in New York city, to which sex offenders are sent for treatment. Canadian psychiatrists are studying their methods, but Canada's handful of psychiatrists are already swamped in their present work of caring for the insane and other problems of mental health, that at present their numbers would not be adequate to cope with this additional problem.

Recent changes in personnel in the Canadian Penitentiary Commission with psychiatrists and educationists being added to the commission is a good omen for better handling of the sex criminal.

Detention Sought

It was decided to petition the local federal member to support changes in the Criminal Code, that would secure the detention of convicted sex criminals until they are safe to be at large again.

Obsolete, vindictive treatment of the sex offender has brought tragedy and suffering to thousands of Canadian homes, hundreds of crimes are committed annually by men who have already been punished for the same offense. By releasing them without treatment of any kind, a golden opportunity for the prevention of indescribable crimes before they occur, is being ignored.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His Explanation Had Bette Be Good

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was married when I was just 14 years old. I have two children, am separated from my husband, and am waiting for my divorce to come through.

Right after my husband and I separated, I met a fine fellow and have been going with him now for two years. He has told me that he loves me and the children, and has asked me to marry him when I get my divorce.

His family have objected to his marrying a girl with two children, and we have not been out with each other for a month now. I have just been sitting home waiting for him to come. My sisters tell me I am a fool to do this and that I should go out with others, but I cannot because I love him. Do you think that if he loved me he would have acted like this? He is 21 and I am 20.

"A. J."

Dear "A. J.":

I certainly don't think that it this man had the feeling for you that a man should have for a girl he wants to marry, he would have stayed away from you without any word for so long.

Twenty-one is pretty young for a man to take on the responsibility of a wife and two children, and it may be, of course, that his family has convinced him it would be unwise for him to do so. If this is the case, however, he should certainly tell you so frankly, and not leave you to wait and wonder.

I think you are foolish to sit aronud and wait as you are doing, and I think you should certainly go about with your other friends, since this particular one seems to have fallen down on you. You don't want to seem to run after him. If he doesn't show up with a good explanation pretty soon, you had just better decide the affair is closed.

Making Friends in the Office

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 25 years old and work for a large corporation as a typist. Recently a very nice man came to work in th esam concern. He is about 37 years old and is divorced. He is general manager of another department.

I would like to know how I can get to meet him and, when I do, just how I should act in order to win his friendship and make it a lasting one. I see him in the hall, and he walks past my desk as though he, also, were interest in meeting me.

"Anxious"

Dear "Anxious": Since you and this man both work for the same company, it seems to be there should be many opportunities for you two to become acquainted. Certainly any man who is interested in a girl in his own office would, it seems to me, make it his business to create such an opportunity. There would be no reason in the world why he couldn't stop to speak to you as he walked by your desk or met you in the hall. A darmal introduction would hardly be necessary in your particular circumstances.

On your side, you could certainly smile at him when you run into him, or he passes your desk, or even make some pleasant remark that might open the way to a conversation. Your best plan is to create an opening and, if he follows it up, "how you can act" to win his friendship is just the way you would act with anyone yo umeet. If he fails to follow your lead, then I think you will have to accept the fact that he is not as interested in you as you are in him.

Suggestions For a Lonely Widow

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was married for 26 years and lost my husband this year after a long illness. While he was alive, he never wanted me to make friends or to go out, and now that he is gone I am very, very lonesome and blue. I go out to meetings in my lodge once in a while, but it is only for women, and I live in a small country town.

"Lonesome"

Dear "Lonesome": After living such a restricted life for so long, it is no wonder that you find yourself at a loss to know how to begin to make friends, whether among men or women. Happily, however, it is never too late to start.

Of course, when one lives ina small place, the opportunities for making friends are far more limited than if you live in a city. Since you are now alone, wouldn't you be free to strike out along new lines—move to another place and begin to make an interesting life for yourself? Or wouldn't you care to leave the place you now live in? I think the possibility of woving to new surroundings is something to consider.

At any rate, it is usually possible to increase your circle of acquaintances no matter where you live, and I suggest that you look around right in your own town and in nearby places for social possibilities. Find out what clubs there are you might join, investigate job possibilities, and make a survey of activities open to a single woman. The way to make friends is to be interested in a great many things. Try this plan and see if it doesn't help.

Trouble With Husband Who Gambles

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 32 and the mother of three children. My husband is a terrible gambler and it makes me very miserable to live with him. This has been going on for 12 years. I tried to overlook things, but they are getting so bad now that Ijust can't.

I have met a man at a party, and we have been seeing each other now and then. He told me he was in love with me and was willing to take me and my three children. He is 36.

Should I give up my husband for this man, or should I go on for the rest of my life living in misery? If you think I should give up my husband, how should I go about it?

"T.G."

Dear "T. G.":

You don't say whether or not your husband's gampling seriously interferes with his support of his family. If he provides you and your children with what you need, that is one thing. If he doesn't that is something else again, and I should think that your decision whether or not to leave him would depend in some degree, at least, on which of these two situations exists.

Are you certain this other man would make life any easier for you? Do you know him well enough to know just what sort of person he is? Your letter sounds as though you were not too well acquainted with him.

If you are convinced that life would be much happier and more satisfactory with him than with your husband, and if you are also convinced that your husband will never do any better by you than he has been doing for 12 years, then it seems to me you would be perfectly justified in leaving him. As for the legal aspects of such a move, you would have to consult a lawyer. And as for whether or not you should marry this other man, you had better go slow until you are perfectly sure you would not be jumping "out of the frying pan into the fire."

Marriage is Serious Business

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been engaged to a boy for six months and up to this time I thought I really loved him. But recently I met a sailor who was very nice. He is so wonderful to me and is everything I have ever dreamed of. He has two years to serve yet, but he has asked me to wait for him.

My fiance and I have had many disagreements and I have considered breaking our engagement because we seem to have done nothing but scrap ever since we became engaged. I really don't know what to do. Please help me decide which one of them I should take.

"Blue"

Dear "Blue":

If you and your fiance are continually quarelling, it seems it would be silly to continue your engagement. Such a situation does not make chances for a happy marriage look very bright. Moreover, I hardly think you could have been very much in love with him if you allowed your friendship for the sailor to get to the point where he was asking you to wait for him, when you were already engaged to another man.

You certainly don't sound as though you were sure of your own feelings. And I strongly advise you not to enter into any more engagements until you have grown up a bit emotionally. Promising to marry someone is a matter that should be taken a lot more seriously than you seem to be doing.

How To Address Cards, Letters to Married Woman, Widow, Divorcee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending greetings cards of any kind (birthday, Christmas Easter, and so forth) how should one address the following: (1) a married woman whose husband is living; (2) a widow, and (3) a divorced woman?

C.R.E.

(1) A birthday card or letter to a married woman should be addressed to: Mrs. John Clark. A Christmas card or Easter greeting card would be addressed to: Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, whether or not you know both husband and wife.

(2) A greeting card or letter to a widow should be addressed to: Mrs. William Brown. Correctly, a widow should use exactly the same form of name she used when her husband was living.

(3) A greeting card or letter to a divorcee should be addressed: Mrs. Carter Robinson. Correctly, a divorcee drops her husband's first name, and in its place uses her maiden surname. Therefore Mary Carter, having married and divorced John Robinson, becomes, after the divorce, Mrs. Carter Robinson.

The most important point about these correct forms of names is that they all avoid that socially-taboo form, Mrs. Mary Smith. And socially, a woman should avoid using her first name after "Mrs."

The Duties of the Maid of Honor

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

Will you please tell me the duties of the maid of honor?

L. E.

First the maid of honor should be graciously co-operative with all the plans of the bride-to-be. She, like all the other bridal attendants, pays for her own costume (dress, hat, slippers, and so forth) although it is the bride who chooses every detail of the costume. She is as charming and gracious as possible at all the parties given in honor of the bride and groom or given by the bride; at the rehearsal; at the wedding reception. At the wedding rehearsal she receives instructions from the minister as to her position and duties at the altar. In the vestibule, before the start of the processional, the maid of honor arranges the bride's train and veil, unless someone not in the bridal party has been assigned this duty. Early in the ceremony she takes the bride's bouquet, holding it until after the ceremony (handing her own bouquet to the nearest bridesmaid). In a double-ring ceremony, the maid of honor usually carries the groom's ring, handing it to the bride when the best man gives the bride's ring to the groom.

Address of Invitation to Men-and-Women Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In a few weeks I am giving a large shower for a very dear friend of mine, and I have had printed invitations made. It is to be for both men and women, and I have hired several musicians to play for dancing. Is it correct to send an invitation to this kind of shower addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. John Jones," when you know both the husband and the wife very well?

H.J.

Yes, this invitation may correctly be addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." since you are inviting both men and women to the shower and since you know both the husband and wife. Of if (as is very often the plan) only the women are to be invited to the shwer itself, that is, for the presentation and opening of the gifts, and the men are to come in later, you might address the invitation to "Mrs." and explain this plan on the invitation, stating the hour for the arrival of "Mr."

Fashion Flashes

SOMETHING new for evening wear come Summer will be the ankle-length dress of iridescent cotton woven with fine gold thread.

SIMPLY BEAUTIFUL resort dresses include one dream made of Swiss organdie hand-painted all over with tiny flowers in delicate tones of mauve, blue and rose. Bodice has a deep collarless V neckline, and push-up sleeves. A fitted midriff rises to a point at the base of the neckline. Ankle-length skirt has deep hem ruffle.

BY POPULAR REQUEST the print dress and long coat ensemble is better than ever. Silk crepe in a rich leaf print in shades of terra cotta, dark orange, rust-brown and green is used for a simple shirtwaist frock, the neckline tied into a huge bow, the skirt softly pleated. Over it a long coat of gray sheer woollen with a linen-like weave, the coat lined in the dress print.

IT'S WONDERFUL how fur pelts are handled these days. A beautiful coat of black Russian Persian lamb has a tightly fitted bodice that flares into a peplum effect achieved by three pockets on either side, with stiffened pocket flaps. The graceful skirt is very soft and full, rippling in back.

JUST THE THING to give body to suits and dresses of lightweight fabric is the ballerina-length half slip. These petticoats, cut with bouffant folds, have either a pleated or a ruffled flounce, and are made of such fabrics as taffeta, faille and starched organdie, this last for evening.

FINE DETAIL adds distinction to many new frocks designed for the matron. Lightweight sheer navy blue woollen makes a handsome frock, untrimmed except for narrow tucked folds of the fabric that form the collarless neckline and continue over the bodice in wide interlooped scallops to open and spread out below the waist into a group of finely pleated centre inset pleats.

Shortages Hinder Franco's Efforts To Back Industry

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Feb. 24 (CP)—Too many new babies are hampering Spain's efforts to achieve a balanced economy.

A population rising by an average of 3,000,000 every 10 years—the latest estimated population is 28,000,000—means a steady increase in home consumption. Domestic production can't keep up with it.

Many factors contribute to this difficulty. Spanish farms badly need fertilizers and equipment; factories are idle for lack of machinery and raw materials; there isn't enough coal and the transport system urgently requires reinforcements.

Drought Reduces Output

Franco has tried to speed the industrialization of what is still primarily an agricultural nation. During and since the war many new factories were built and hydro-electric projects started. But even nature has conspired against these plans. Drought conditions over a period of years have lowered farm output and made it necessary to restrict electricity consumption severely.

"Spain remains the last great European country which invited development and exploitation," is a remark often heard in Madrid, both from Franco supporters and business men unfriendly to the government.

An immediate problem is to close the gap between imports and exports, which in 1946 amolnted to $44,000,000. Like many other countries, Spain purchased more heavily in the United States than elsewhere, while the United Kingdom was her largest market.

Trade with Canada is in Spain's favor. The Dominion sent goods worth $719,000, mostly raw aluminum, in 1946 and imported nuts, cork and olive oil worth $2,179,000. Sales of Canadian-made cars in Spain numbered three compared with 2,527 in 1935.

Heavy Cereal Importer

Although at least 50 per cent of her people are rural dwellers, Spain has to import 1,500,000 tons of cereals annually. This is primarily due to the primitive farming shortages.

Going from their huddled stone villages to lonely fields, millions of peasants still use wooden plows with metal-sheated shares. Many lack a mule or a horse to aid them. Production per acre is one-third what it was in Britain. However, output last year increased by more than 1,000,000 tons over 1945 to 3,618,000.

The orange crop remains one of the mainstays of Spanish agriculture although drought cut production to 584,000 tons last year, but here again domestic consumption has steadily increased and high prices have scared many foreign buyers.

The textile industry, largely concentrated in the Barcelona area, has led the way in manufactured goods and threatens to deprive Britain of some of her markets if prices can be kept down. But difficulties have developed in the supply of raw materials.

Iron, Coal Mines

Spain also has great hopes for her heavy industry, centred around mines that produced 2,365,000 tons of iron in 1946. She is also a heavy producer of manganese and wolfram. Wartime exports of the latter gave her a favorable trade balance for several years. Her coal production runs around 10,000,000 tons, about 2,000,000 below requirements.

What Spain hopes for is Marshall Plan aid to enable her to bridge the many gaps in her economic structure, and steadily expand it on a self-sufficient basis. Then babies can come as fast as they like.

PAINS IN BACK

Here's a way to relief . .

Do you know that a common cause of backache lies in the kidneys? When they are healthy they help to filter impurities out of the system. When they grow sluggish, these impurities accumulate and the resulting congestion may be one of the causes of backache. De Witt's Pills are specially prepared to help wake up sluggish kidneys. They act directly on these vital organs, helping to soothe them, toning them up and helping to restore them to their natural activity. For over half a century De Witt's Pills have been bringing relief to sufferers from backache and we have received countless letters of gratitude. Go to your drug store and get a supply to-day.

Farm Cisterns, Wells Replenished By Recent Thaw

Toronto, Feb. 24 (CP)—Recent mild weather has thawed snow-covered fields replenishing Ontario farm wells and cisterns which had reached dangerously low levels, it was indicated today in the Ontario Department of Agriculture weekly crop report.

In Cochrane south, however, weather has not been sufficiently warm to cause snow to settle. Some thawing this week in the Temiskaming district would be some help to farmers who have been short of water most of the winter. Last week's mild weather left Lambton County fields bare of snow, and farms were flooded by snow-plugged ditches and outlet drains.

Interest in seed grains appeared to be increasing throughout the province. Bruce County demand for seed grain began earlier than usual. Durham County had more seed grain for distribution than was anticipated.

In most Ontario centres farmers still were looking for hired help. The Durham County Labor shortage however, was eased by industrial layoffs in Oshawa.

FEWER ATTEND CLASS IN PROSPECTING

Toronto, Feb. 24 —(CP)— A drop in attendance at provincial government prospectors' classes in Northern Ontario centres was attributed today by Mines Minister Frost to "diminishing interest in prospecting as a result of the drop in the price of Canadian funds."

Classse were given at Timmins, Red Lake, Fort Frances, Fort William and Port Arthur by Dr. W. D. Harding of the geological branch of the mines department.

Mechanic Sought On Murder Count

North Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 24 —(CP)—William Piercey, 35-year-old mechanic of North Vancouver, B.C., today was sought by police on a murder charge in connection with the shotgun slaying of Bernard H. Smith, whose body was found in a woodshed behind his home.

The murder charge was laid following discovery of the body by Smiths wife. Police said the 39-year-old father of two children had been shot through the back as he was gathering firewood.

F. R. Anderson, Jr., Vancouver lawyer, told police a man he identified as Piercey had gone to his home and said:

"I shot a man. I need help."

Mr. Anderson said he refused to discuss the matter with him and immediately notified police.

Police said there had been a long-standing feud between the two families.

COMMUNIST SPEAKS

Appearing before the U.S. House Un-American Activities committee in Washington, Benjamin J. Davis, New York city councilman and a member of the Communist party, was given a polite brushoff. The legislators dismissed him without questioning after he defied Congress to pass any measures outlawing or controlling his party. He stated that members would refuse to register as agents of a foreign power or do anything not required of other parties.

WRECKAGE SIGHTED

St. Thomas, Feb. 24 —(CP)— Wreckage of a plane in which Dr. C. W. Murray and his pilot, Ivan E. Martin, left Houghton Lake for Flint, Mich., last Thursday, Feb. 19, has been sighted in heavy bush country south of Houghton Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Moore of St. Thomas, said last night.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore said they received a phone call from their daughter, wife of the pilot, last night, telling that one of the search planes had sighted what it took to be wreckage of the plane in dense bush, about three miles from a road. A rescue party will be sent tomorrow.

Mummy... I'm Hungry

HOW WOULD YOU FEEL if this were your child . . . and you had to say: "Sorry, darling, there just isn't anything"?

GIVE to the Canadian APPEAL FOR CHILDREN

YET many a mother — and father — is faced today with just such a tragic fact. Throughout Europe and Asia children are literally starving — cold and miserable because they have no warm clothing.

Millions of them are in desperate need — for food, clothing, shelter, education. We in Canada are going to do our share to help meet those urgent needs. The Canadian Appeal for Children, now being conducted, has a minimum objective of $10,000,000 as Canada's contribution to the saving of the world's children and the world's future.

YOU CAN HELP by doing just this:

Go to any Branch of THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA — or any other chartered bank. Hand your contribution to the teller. He is ready to accept it, and will turn the money over to the Canadian Appeal for Children. Every cent collected will be distributed, where need is greatest, under the strict supervision of responsible United Nations' operating agencies.

How much you give is a question for your own conscience. Act TODAY; you will sleep better tonight knowing you have done your part for these millions of little ones who look to you for help.

"...and please hurry Doctor!"

If you have ever been faced with an emergency, you know how important it is for party line "partners" to give each other right-of-way on urgent calls. Please clear the line immediately.

PARTY LINE COURTESY IS CATCHING...

Putting it into practice on every call you make is your best guarantee that others will do the same for you.

1. Keep calls brief.
2. Space your calls.
3. Give right-of-way to emergency calls.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Somewhere near the start of my lectures comes choice of suits as a topic. It follows closely after the lesson in biddable suits and suits that are rebiddable.

The rule is: With equal length suits, first bid the higher rank; with different length suits, first bid the longer. Therefore, a lower rank is always known to be longer if bid before a higher rank.

Comes a question from the listeners: What if the shorter suit is much stronger? The answer is that strength has nothing to do with it. Strength does not change the order. Only length.

♥A K Q J
♦J 9 8 4 2
♣A Q 4

If you are bidding this hand, they are asked, which suit would you mention first? Diamonds, they are told. Despite the strength you see in the heart suit, first bid the longer suit of diamonds.

This produces a spotty sputter of protest that is music to my ears. It is probably my first assurance that the men have not gone to sleep on me. The ones dragged there by their wives, I mean.

Will then come a booming voice to say: "It would be a shame to be left in diamonds if partner should pass." And it looks as if he has got something there until you peer into the future.

If hearts are trumps you can take your tricks in that suit and probably none in diamonds. If diamonds are trumps you can use some of them for ruffing and still take heart tricks.

Therefore, if partner has no bid, you prefer to be in diamonds as the trump suit. They have some developing value when they are the trumps. But they have practically no trick value as a side suit.

On the other hand, partner generally has a responding bid of some kind. When he bids you can show the hearts and he has a choice. By then he has learned that you have more diamonds than hearts.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 24— (AP)—More Hollywood companies are planning to film pictures in Europe. The latest is Robert Cumming's new outfit.

Cummings, now making his first independent film, "Let's live a little," says he may accept invitations to shoot "Password to Love" in Sweden. It's a swashbuckling Dumas yarn which would be filmed with a nucleus of United States payers in Swedish studios.

In addition, Columbia is planning another film in Italy, Selznick has announced "A Doll's House" in Sweden and Norway and "Scarlet Lily" in Italy, and Paul Henreid plans "Cartouche" in France.

—(Lucious Lush)—

Vera-Ellen, one of the best gal dancers in the films today, jumped from her Goldwyn contract to one at M.G.M. She goes into the Rodgers-Hart Biography, "Words and Music," which stars Mickey Rooney, Frank Sinatra and Gene Kelly.

Ingrid Bergman is a bit concerned about her role in "Under Capricorn," which she will make in Britain with Alfred Hitchcock.

She still plans to make the film the picture three years ago," she said, "when I thought the role would be novel. But then came 'The Lost Weekend,' 'Smash-Up,' 'Humoresque' and other drinking pictures."

She still plans to make the film after she winds up "Joan or Arc."

Dorothy Lamour is negotiating for the life of Helen Morgan . . . Don Ameche is reported to have dropped a pile in the commodity price slump.

—(Odds And Ends)—

Edward G. Robinson joins his wife in Europe after he finishes, "Key Largo." . . . Producer Paul Jones wants Cary Grant to co-star with Greer Garson in the "Saintly Miss Peters." That would be a neat combination . . .

Hot Rods

Keenan Wynn, a racing bug, is enthusiastic about the picture he'll do with Mickey Rooney and Wally Berry. It'll be about motorcycles, midgets and hot rods, and Keenan claims he'll do his own riding . . .

Lizabeth Scott and Henry Fonda will co-star for Casey Robinson in "Rain Before Seven." That is, if Fonda can ever get away from his new broadway hit, "Mister Roberts."

Miami, Feb. 24 — (AP)—The fight mob is here for tonight's Willie Pep-Humberto Sierra tussle, but the fighter who really has the managers drooling is a college boy . . . he's Arthur Saey who does his punching for the University of Miami and never has been beaten in two years of college boxing . . . Saey, a tall, handsome 23-year-old heavyweight, won the National Collegiate title as a freshman last year and has kayoed four of his five opponents this season . . . since college bouts (never call them fights) are limited to three two-minute rounds, that's an impressive feat . . .

Willie Pep, one of the busiest boxing champions on the list, apparently isn't going to run out of opposition . . . Only yesterday manager Lou Viscusi received a wire from the Los Angeles Catholic Youth Organization making a date to discuss a possible title bout against Carlos Chavez with the C. Y. O. benefitting . . . Viscusi previously had a $35,000 offer for a Los Angeles fight . . . Elmer (Violent) Ray, who has been on the receiving end often enough that he ought to know a good fighter when he sees one, just shook his head while watching Sweden's Olle Tandberg work out yesterday and mumbled something about an 'amateur.' ... Sun-worshipper Joe DiMaggio, who spent most of his week-end here moaning because he didn't have this good hot weather when he took a Florida vacation last month, tried his throwing arm Sunday for the first time since he had some bone chips removed last Nov. Joe reported it felt fine, but he didn't have to throw hard.

INDIANS MODERNIZE THE SIGN LANGUAGE

Vancouver,— (CP)— Prairie Indians have kept up with the times by covering everything from aircraft to coffee percolators in the age-old sign language, W. Bleasdell Cameron, said in an address of the University of British Columbia.

Mr. Cameron, sole survivor of massacre of 1885, said that Indians have made numerous additions to their 1,000-symbol language in recent years.

"Holding the hands wing-fashion," he said, "denotes an airplane. A series of brewing and drinking motions mean 'coffee,' if you happen to know your Indian lingo."

74-Year-Old Haligonian Chops His Way to Bathe in Zero Weather

Halifax, Feb. —(CP)—As the steely grey dawn cracks icily over the waters of Halifax's grey Northwest Arm, 74-year-old John F. McCarthy follows a habit of almost 40 years' standing and takes his daily swim.

Several mornings this winter he has been confronted by a thick layer of ice, but the well-known athlete of bygone days keeps a shovel and an axe for just such a condition.

The coldest day this winter so far was seven degrees below zero, although Mr. McCarthy didn't consider it much worse than ordinary zero weather. His favorite spot for swimming is in front of the Northwest Arm Rowing Club and the most likely hour to find him is about 6.30.

A native of Ireland, John McCarthy is the last surviving member of the Halifax Polar Bears Club, whose ranks were once 12 strong. The other hardies have all died and there has been no one to take their places.

Also by the way of keeping in trim, Mr. McCarthy dons the blades and spends some of his time gliding over the ice. He has a particular fondness for figure skating and is vice-president of the Bluenose as well as a life member of the Halifax Skating Club.

Rugger Enthusiast

His abandoned career covers service as a player and later coach of Wanderers football team in Halifax, coach of Cape Breton's famed Caledonia rugby team and rugby coach at Dalhousie and Acadia Universities. He is generally credited with introducing Rugby League football in Canada.

An equally ardent oarsmen, he rowed with the Dolphin Rowing Club of Dublin. He also held a county cap for lacrosse and was winner of the Ulster title for the quarter-mile swim.

When Mr McCarthy isn't flexing his muscles, he earns a living as collector for a Halifax trust company—a job he prefers because it keeps him out of doors so much of the time. He has no plans for retirement.

If there is one aversion in his life, it is his antipathy to newspaper reporters. When he goes in for a swim he does it for enjoyment and doesn't want any photographers taking pictures of him "or a lot of stuff in the papers."

Kingston Vics Win Junior B Group, Defeating Belleville Rockets 6-3 in Fifth Game

Belleville's junior "B" Rockets faded out of the group playoff picture in the Jock Harty Arena Kingston last night, going down fighting after a shaky start before a hard-checking Kingston Vic squad by a 6-3 score.

The game was the fifth of the best of five series between the two squads, and on the night's play the better team won. The game was lost as far as the Rockets were concerned in the first period when they spotted the speedy Vics three goals before they tallied a marker.

The handicap was too great, and although the Rockets battled gamely in the second and third periods they failed to overcome the margin and came home on the short end of the score.

It was a close hard checking game being more or less decided the game being more less decided by the defensive tactics of both teams, although the Vics took advantage of every opportunity that came their way, with the Rockets being out-lucked on several occasions when in close scoring position, or being outguessed by Stone in the Vics nets.

Winners Backcheck Hard

The winner's defence was good all night and their speedy forwards backchecked like fiends. On the other hand the Rockets left their checks wide open at times and the surging Vic forwards took plenty of advantage of this lapse in their style of play. At times the game turned into a ganging attack on the part of both teams with the play surging from one end of the rink to the other. Lefort in the Rockets nets turned in another spectacular game despite the fact that he was beaten by six goals, while Stone in the Vic citadel likewise turned aside many Belleville threats from close-in.

The Rockets, in the best hockey of the night in the second period, flew back savagely to the attack after that first period three-goal set-back, but they were met with a solid Kingston defence and the speedy hardchecking Vic forwards. Green missed an open net in the first ten seconds of play and Flint and Hurst drew penalties.

Scores Pretty Goal

Angy Defelice in one of the prettiest goals of the night stickhandled his way through the Kingston defence to give the Rockets their second goal. Hurst was no sooner back on the ice than Don Semark drew a sin ticket and then Graves got himself a two-minute rest and a misconduct. Schrieder followed soon after and the Vics turned on the heat with Lefort kicking out plenty of rubber. Defelice, Echrieder and Green broke in the clear and on a neat passing play swept in on Stone, but Green's hard shot missed the corner by inches.

Kingston scored their fifth goal of the night when Aitken, Flint and Patterson forayed swiftly to the Rockets goal. Aiken's shot bounced off Lefort's pads, and the puck rolled out, weaved crazily and slowly trickled over the goal-line for the score.

Flint sent the Vics to a four-goal lead shortly after the third period started taking Woodman's pass to bang the rubber home. The tempo quickened and tempers began to fray a bit as the Rockets put on the pressure. Hurst and McKeown went off together and seven minutes later McKeown drew another penalty closely followed by Joyce. With a two-man advantage, the Rockets drove hard for a score but were unable to count as the Vics forwards threw the puck down the ice at every opportunity.

Maintain Pressure

The Rockets maintained the pressure and for the last four minutes hemmed the Vics in their own end. Milligan finally dunked the rubber at the sixteen minute mark with assists from Defelice and D. Semark, and that was that.

Jud Semark was knocked out cold by a stiff but legal body check during the game, but returned to the wars after a brief rest. Johnny Green aggravated an injured knee and limped off the ice in the third period, and when the game was over had to be assisted to the dressing room.

Angy defelice and Tommy Schreider with Lefort in the nets were easily the pick of the Rockets, with Don Semark and Jud also turning in good efforts. Defelice figured in all three Rocket markers scoring one and assisting with two while Don Semark got a goal and an assist. Milligan accounted for the third Belleville goal.

Standout Line

Joyce, Flint, who was not handicapped to any extent by an injured shoulder, Aiken and McKeown, were the standouts for the Vics with Patterson and Woodman turning in sterling jobs behind the blue-line. Graves spoiled an otherwise good effort with a minor and a misconduct.

Referees Jack McEachern, and Andy Bellamer of Toronto dished out twelve penalties, and clamped down heavily in the third period when matters started to roughen. Kingston drew eight of the sentences with Hurst with two, D. Semark, and Schreider doing penance for the Rockets.

The Teams

Pep to Defend Featherweight Title in Florida

Miami, Feb. 24. (AP)— The rather common belief that Willie Pep will be defending his featherweight boxing title tonight against a whittled-down lightweight appears slightly incorrect.

Pep takes on Humberto Sierra of Cuba in a 15-round title bout at the Orange Bowl and Humberto won't have any weight trouble. In most of his previous bouts, Sierra has weighed in the neighborhood of 131 pounds and the story got around that he'd have a hard time making the 127-pound limit without sawing off an arm.

In a check-up yesterday, however, Sierra scaled only 125 1-2 pounds and the local boxing commission physician reported the rangy Cuban appeared to be in the finest condition he ever has attained.

Sierra is the first Cuban to fight for a championship since the day of Kid Chocolate, about 20 years ago. But there's nothing in his record to stamp him as a formidable title contender or even as an interesting opponent for Pep. Winner of seven of his nine fights in the United States, the Cuban lost in his overweight match with Pep and to Nick Stato as the result of a cut eye.

Most of the support for Sierra —and odds favor Pep at 11 to 5— is based on his local performances and the fact that Willie never has been as good since he was seriously injured in a plane crash 14 months ago.

Pep spent some time in a cast recovering from a broken back and leg and the injuries still cause him some pain. Nevertheless, he has won 14 fights since he returned to action in June.

Legionnaires Beat Kingston Saints For Third Time

Lindsay, Feb. 24. (CP)— Pressing strongly in the final period, Peterborough Legion defeated Kingston Saints 3-1 here last night in their third game of the Central Ontario Hockey Association Senior B Group semi-final playoffs.

It was a fast, fairly clean game throughout and provided more than 800 fans with plenty of thrills. There were only five penalties ,one of them to Udall, Kingston goalie, for interference.

The first and second periods saw the teams deadlocked with an equal amount of play at both ends of the ice and both goalies forced to make numerous saves.

Saints pressed at the beginning of the third but later slackened and Legion took the offensive in earnest.

Nicholls got the first of his goals at 5:05 of the first period to give Peterborough a 1-0 lead. It was scored unassisted. Ohlke, also on a solo effort, tied the score when he counted at 11.50 of the first frame.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Wrestling fans hereabouts will recall a few years ago the night they stood up in the aisles and gasped in amazement when a physical monstrosity with a grotesque, miss-shapen head, a body built like a rum puncheon and arms a-swing like a gorilla, climbed into the ring and in a savage exhibition of sheer brute force proceeded calmly to dismember, figuratively, the towering opposition.

He was Maurice Tillet (The Angel) who has made a career of being ugly, and is now once more back in America to divert some of the fast - flowing dollars that stream annually from the pockets of the wrestling faithful to the capacious receptacles in his private jeans.

• • •

By far the biggest human freak ever to invade the realm of pachydermy, Tillet has turned his gargoyle features and powerful body into the wrestling goose that has been consistently producing the golden eggs. A victim of prognathism, his powerful jaws can snap together with the force of a bear trap.

• • •

This closest approach to Neanderthal man first discovered his abnormal strength in a brawl in a Singajore bistro. Seems as if a gang of toughs made fun of his appearance and Maurice took objection. A few minutes later what was left of the roughies was plastered in several large juicy sections over the floor and walls of the joint.

• • •

Watching the fun was a professional wrestler by the name of Karl Pojello. He spoke to Tillet who had just been discharged from the submarine service of the French Navy and was working in China with a French movie company. Popello asked him if he would like to try pro wrestling. Tillet waggled his ears which aren't much smaller than those of a baby African elephant, and there on the spot started a strong friendship.

• • •

Training finished, Tillet and Pojello invaded France, Belgium, Switzerland and Italy before going to England. He drew twice with the British champion and a national picture magazine gave him so much publicity that Harvard scientists practically met him at the dock when he later landed in America. They gave the "Angel" the once-over and announced that his grotesque physique was the result of the pituitary gland going haywire. Primo Carnera was a similar case.

Five feet eight inches in height., weighing 276 pounds, The Angel has most of his weight from the hips up. He likes to stay on his feet, and he doesn't exactly tickle when he clamps his favorite hold, the bear-hug, on an unfortunate opponent.

• • •

Son of middle - class French parents, the Angel was born in Rheims. His father was an engineer and his mother a professor of romance languages. She was teaching until a few years ago at the Rheims University and formerly taught at the University of Moscow.

The Angel has attracted the attention of scientists and medical men wherever he has wrestled. In Buffalo, five of the leading X-ray experts looked into the Tillet cranium and said he possessed the largest brain cavity in the world and had a skull so thick you could drive a ten-penny nail into it without damaging the brain.

Tillet's bones are twice the anatomical size and twice the weight of the average wrestler's. He has been called an anatomical freak, "a fellow who looks like the most powerful man who ever lived."

X-Rays also showed that the sella turcica — cavity in which the pituitary gland is situated—was two and one half times the size of that of a heavyweight and that the occipital protuberance — that bump on the back of your noggin — is 20 times the size of that of the average man. Tillet's brain, normal in all respects, is larger than the average college professor's. The spine was twice and, in some places, four times the size of that of a six-footer. His ribs were three times as thick as those of a fellow like Wild Bill Longson.

Most interesting was Tillet's head, so large that the doctors couldn't get all the chin on the X-ray plate. More amazing however, was the change that had come in 15 years. Tillet was perfectly normal until he was about 13 and was one of outstanding soccer players in France competing several times in international matches.

• • •

He is once again on the wrestling warpath and engaged in a bout in Toronto in a few days. It is quite likely that Belleville fans will have the opportunity come spring — and a floor in the Arena — to once more see this grotesque little-big pachyderm in bear hug action.

• • •

Tonight's hockey serve-up is the clash between the Trenton Flyers and the Cobourg Pavilions, Trenton town is sitting pretty on top of the Intermediate "A" heap and the Flyers and Cobourg are battling for the second-third playoff slots. These squads generally dish up a nifty hockey battle and the fans should turn out and give the squads some support in their quest for the playoff slots.

Well, that's another that. The second Belleville hockey squad faded into playoff oblivion last night in Kingston when the Rockets juniors went down fighting before a speedy Kingston Vics squad. It was a hard-fought battle all through with the Rockets trying desperately to overcome their shortcomings by sheer fight and gameness. The joust was practically lost, as it afterwards turned out, in the first period when Bill Cook's kids couldn't get started on the right foot, and saw the red light flash behind Lefort three times before they came to scoring life.

This is no alibi for the Belleville defeat. The Vics were the better team on the night's play and as such fully deserved their victory. But the Rockets did not play the style of hockey that characterized their play when the teams met the last time and the Vics went home on the short end of a 7-3 count. The team - play was missing. the defence was lacking in power and the team as a whole could have covered their checks better.

• • •

On the other hand the Vics' front lines were clicking perfectly most of the time, although two of their goals came from breakaways and a third was of a fluky nature as the puck slowly dribbled across the goal-line. But that's hockey, and it's goals that win hockey games. The homesters took full advantage of the sometimes loose play of the Rockets and they swept in dangerously time after time.

The Rockets were outlucked more or less consistently in front of the foemen's nets, and Green, Defelice, Semark and Milligan missed close-in shots that appeared labelled. Maurice Lefort kicked out a lot of rubber and by the same token Stone in the Vic nets was given some anxious moments on several occasions.

Oh, well, we've still got the Merchants Midgets in the hunt. And speaking of those kids, they go to Omemee tonight to take on the Peterboro Rotary Midgets in the first game of their third round "B" series. The teams play the return game here on Thursday night and they should be given a right royal reception by the fans whether they win, lose or draw.

• • •

While the Vics were rubbing out our Rockets, the Peterboro Legion team eliminated the Kingston Saints in Omemee last night with their third straight victory. So it's the Petes Hockey Club and the Legion now for the Senior "B" group title.

Money-Winning Record of Stymie Safe for Time

New York, Feb. 24 (AP)—Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Stymie, which has earned more money than any other horse in turf history, can finish his winter vacation down in Virginia with the record safe for the time being.

The big seven year old Chestnut's all-time earnings record of $816,060 is beyond the reach of any thoroughbred now in training .

For a time it looked as if Calumet Farm's Armed, second high in the money-winning race might pass Stymie during the winter campaign in Florida.

But with Armed sidelined temporarily and King Ranch's Assault permanently following their poor showings in the Widener at Hialeah Saturday, Stymie has no immediate worries.

Armed's total in the money chase is $773,700 followed by Assault with $626,620.

Assault, the 1946 triple crown winner, came to the end of his racing days Saturday. Assault injured an ankle in the Widener and has been retired to stud at the age of five.

The seven-year-old Armed will take a rest after finishing fourth in the Widener, just ahead of Assault. Trainer Jimmy Jones says the great gelding can't go on carrying 130 pounds — his and Assault's weight for the Widener.

The other seven in the top 10 all-time cash collectors in order are Whirlaway, Seabiscuit, First Fiddle, Sun Beau, Pavot, Gallorette, and Alsab. Only W. L. Brann's Gallorette, with earnings of $351,365, is still racing.

Hamilton Tigers Even Series With Toronto Marlies

(By The Canadian Press)

Two teams tied their series, one went into a two game lead and another dropped by the wayside in the four Ontario Hockey Association playoff tilts — one in the Senior "A" division and three in the Junior — played last night.

Playing to sell-out crowds right around the circuit, the clubs put on a rugged display of hockey as officials continued to rule strictly in an effort to stamp out rough play.

In the lone senior tilt, Hamilton Tigers played a solid-checking game to hand Toronto Marlboros a 5-1 setback and even their best of seven semi-final series at one game each.

Of the three games in the junior loop, the Windsor-Oshawa fixture was the most closely fought and two periods of overtime had to be played before a winner was declared with Windsor taking the final 7-6 nod. Windsor now holds a two-game lead in their best-of-seven semi-final series. Barrie Flyers edged Stratford Kroehlers 2-1 to win their second straight game and eliminate Stratford from their best-of-three quarter-finals. The St. Catharines-Galt affair was a rousing battle as fights, scuffles and shoving matches broke out several times before the game ended at 9-4 for the Teepees. The win left St. Catharines and Galt tied at one game each in their best of three series.

Tigers Control Play

Hamilton Tigers controlled the play in their game against the Marlies and only in the second frame did the Toronto crew show flashes of superior hockey.

Tigers opened the scoring early in the initial frame as Frankie Liscombe connected and Clare Shillington added another before the period ended. In the second period the Dukes applied the pressure and Bobby Hassard, a former junior player, counted their first goal. Tom Tindale came back with just a few seconds of the period remaining and widened the gap again. The third frame saw two Tigers tallies as Ab Conick scored one and Johnny Conick received credit for another when the puck bounced off Duke Bob Paul's skates into the net.

With the score tied 5-5 at the end of regulation time and 6-6 at the end of the first overtime period, Jack Taylor was the payoff man for the Spitfires in the 7-6 win over Oshawa. Taylor scored the winning marker at 10:48 of the second overtime sudden-death period to give the Windsor crew their victory.

Johnny Wilson and Jack Taylor were Spitfires' leading snipers with a brace apiece. Gord Haldy, Jim Uniac and Jim McKay were the other Windsor scorers. Gerry Scott and Eric Pogue scored twice each for the Generals while Ray Ceresino and Sandy Air each nicked one.

Go Down Battling

Stratford Kroehlers went down battling as they dropped their second straight decision to Barrie Flyers. Barrie now meets the winner of the St. Catharines-Galt series for the right to go against the winners of the Windsor-Oshawa tilts for the league title.

Kroehlers missed right-winger George Armstrong who was injured in the first period and did not return to the ice again. Officiating was strict as 21 penalties were ladled out.

The team battled on scoreless terms until 14:29 of the second frame when Paul Meger put the Flyers into a one-goal lead. Then just a little more than a minute later Dinny Flanagan evened the count for Kroehlers. At 10:38 of the final, Frenchy Mayer slapped the winning Barrie marker home.

20 Penalties Imposed

The 9-4 score between St. Catharines and Galt doesn't indicate the real pattern of the play as Galt had many chances to whittle down the lead but failed because of poor shooting. The game was roughly played as more than 20 penalties were imposed. Policemen had to be called twice to halt the fighting. Hal Hopper was the bad man of the night as he received two majors and a misconduct. At one time almost the entire Teepee team ganged up on Hopper after he had hit Cec Gruhl over the head and at another time both teams slugged it out from the goal to the blue-line.

Topper Toppazzina paced the Teepees with three goals while Fred Hildbrand, Tom Buck, Bill Kodatsky, Bill McIntyre, Joe Krahulec and Bill Buschlen each sniped one. Pete Tkachuk, Art Gualazzi, Harry Marchand and Wiggie Wylie counted for the Rockets.

Two senior games are billed for tonight as Stratford goes to Kitchener-Waterloo and Hamilton Pats move into Owen Sound for the second games of their best of three quarter-finals series.

Barbara Ann's Medals Arrive From London

(By The Canadian Press)

Barbara Ann Scott's precious medals arrived at Toronto by air from London last night, completing a 6,000-mile trip that started when the Ottawa figure-skater entrusted them to Jack Sullivan, Canadian Press staff writer, at Davos, Switzerland. The medals arrived on a plane carrying 38 immigrants and confusion arose over the fact that the airline was not authorized to handle freight.

Two jewelry company officials arrived just as the medals were being transferred to an Ottawa-bound plane and took them to the company vault for the night.

Everyone seemed anxious to get rid of the medals as Sullivan who had never let the precious trust out of his sight from Davos to London and sighed with relief when Ontario House took charge of them there.

The Illinois State Athletic Commission yesterday ordered Mike Spinelli, New York textile trucker, to show cause on March 8 why he should not be suspended as a boxing manager in connection with the ring death of boxer Sam Baroudi.

The Commission said that as Baroudi's manager, Spinelli falsely gave 21 as the age of the 20-year-old Akron, Ohio, Negro fighter, who died of cerebral hemorrhage early Saturday in a 10-round bout with Ezzard Charles.

Under the Illinois code, a fighter under 21 cannot participate in bouts of more than six rounds. The Commission also intends to question Spinelli about his "conduct" after Baroudi was floored. Spinelli had attempted to leave Chicago a few hours after Baroudi died and had with him the fighter's share of the purse.

Bob Hector, Oregon State College skier, may not have won the ski-jumping event at the University of Nevada winter carnival meet yesterday, but he certainly made a terrific broad jump. Hector lost both his skis in mid-air after a perfect take-off. He landed on both boots, slid and then ran several steps before doing a forward somersault to wind up standing and unhurt. The ski-less wonder had sailed through the air 63 feet before making his unorthodox landing — just five feet short of the winning 68-foot leap.

Promoter Jack Solomons yesterday called off plans for a light - heavyweight fight April 19 between Freddie Mills of Britain and Tami Mauriello of New York at London's Harringay Arena. Solomons said Mauriello had not replied to his offer to match him against Mills and that another opponent would be selected.

Ottawa Trojans Football Club, last year's O. R. F. U. champions, may merge this year with Ottawa Rough Riders in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union. Presidents of both clubs met last night with Central Canada Exhibition Association officials and stated they were trying to effect an amalgamation in order to field one strong Senior Ottawa club.

Percy Nicklin, general manager of the Harringay Arena Corporation, said yesterday at Winnipeg that calibre of play in the National Hockey League in the United Kingdom "is generally on a par with the senior amateur brand in Canada." Nicklin, a former Winnipegger now in Canada on a combined business - pleasure trip, coached Moncton Hawks to two Allan Cup titles in the early '30s.

He said that British hockey teams did not compare "with your Allan Cup contenders such as Calgary, Edmonton, Montreal Royals or Ottawa Senators the semi pro class — but we could definitely hold our own with the average senior team."

The Canadian badminton championships will be held at Toronto March 3-6, and selections for Thomas Cup matches in world competition will be based in part on performances in the tournament. The Thomas Cup preliminaries have Mexico, India, the United States and Canada matched in the American zone, with the winning team meeting the European zone champions.

Toronto Byers Defeat Petes By 6 to 4 Count

Oshawa, Feb. 24 (CP) — Toronto Byers Motors defeated Peterborough Triple Links 6-4 in overtime to even their Junior B hockey playoff series at a game and a tie each.

The first period Peterborough had a definite edge in territorial play, but they couldn't capitalize and the period ended 1-1.

Dugan, on a solo effort, got the first goal at 6:36 of the initial period to shoot the Peterborough team into a 1-0 lead on a pass from Weatherell, tied the score at 1-1.

Keeble of Toronto accounted for 2 goals in the second frame to send his squad into a 3-1 lead. Byers had by this time shown more condition and were starting to outplay their rivals on the ice.

The third period was featured by hard-checking and a strong rally by Peterborough. Toronto made it 4-2 before the visitors came to life and pulled even when Pagett scored twice to make the score 4-4 and force the game into overtime.

In the extra session Toronto showed a definite margin all the way to score two goals and end the game 6-4.

Hall put Toronto out in front 5-4 with a goal at 1:30 of the overtime period and then Keeble got his third goal of the game when he counted at 6:02 to end the scoring.

Halifax, Feb. 24 — (CP)—Exhibition games may be fun for the paying guests, but they often knock the stuffings out of a team's ego and reputation.

Every time this season a crew from the Maritime Big Four League, purportedly the finest collection of rinksters in the area and at least the most publicized, ventured out against a senior 'B' or junior team, the smart money was plunked down on the underdog.

Moncton Hawks and Truro Bearcats, who finished first and second in Big Four standing, have both gone to their knees before Stellarton Royals, a "B" team. Halifax Crescents came out second best against St. Mary's Juniors, who also topped Stellarton Royals.

"Just what do exhibition games mean? Are they a fair test of strength? Could you be guided by the actual results?"

That's Ace (Halifax Chronicle) Foley acting as quizmaster and before you can get to an encyclopedia, he's supplied the reply himself:

"The general answer is 'no.' That may seem a bit abrupt so we'll stickhandle around a bit and try to make sense out of it."

Big-timers, says Ace, use a non-league match usually to polish up a few plays, earn a bit of pin-money and have an enjoyable evening. Although they may regret the final score no end, they seldom take the game seriously. The lesser lights, on the other hand, have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Much as Ace would like to think so, this doesn't mean the winner of an exhibition is necessarily the stronger. When the blue chips are down and the trophies are in the offing, the Foley sheckles back the big boys.

Dream Game

In another corner of the rink, Don (Moncton Transcript) Fay has been doing a little stickhandling himself on the subject of match between top-spot Moncton Hawks and the Big Four all-star team compiled by The Canadian Press last week from candidates picked by Maritime sports writers.

Hawks placed only one man — centre Buck Whitlock, the league's top scorer — on the hypothetical aggregation and Don suggests the all-stars replace him with the second best centre.

WHERE THE HECK IS THAT HANDKERCHIEF? IF THAT JERK IS CROSSIN' ME, WHAT I DO TO THAT NAG AIN'T NOTHIN' TO WHAT I'LL DO TO HIM!

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 19.

The hot drink cleared her brain and her head nearly stopped aching. She would leave the sanitary ing. She would leave the sanitary all-whiteness of this room, go for a long walk. White walls, white walls, white woodwork, white furniture. It grew monotonous to the sight after a while. She must get some fiery red articicial roses and stick them in a bright colored vase

By the time she had dressed it had stopped raining. Soon, she was striding through the early morning's foggy mist. She loved the dampness on her burning cheeks, her long dark lashes blinking with wetness. There was something about walking during the after rain which seemed to release pent up tension.

She was wearing a swagger coat of camel's-hair over a plain green frock. Even the green of her hat could not take away the feverish glea mof her cheeks. She was feeling desparately wretched, but she looked adorable.

Miss Forland was surprised when she entered the shop soon after it opened. She was not too much so, however, never being quite able to predict what this betwitching model would do next. But this morning Mae Forland's sharp gaze penetrated beneath Velma's veneer of smart grooming; she sensed that the girl was deeply disturbed.

They had a long confidential chat, although Velma did not reveal the gnawing secret of Tom's evident disgrace. Miss Forland was convinced that Velma, for some reason, was nervously exhausted and needed a change. In the end, it was decided that she should have a two-weeks vacation and go to visit Millie Roberts in Chicago.

Velma had abruptly concluded on the way downtown that it would be best to accept Millie's invitation, even though she dreaded to see the old Chicago crowd. It would take her away from Carryville—perhaps be the saving of Tom. If she remained here, she was positive he would arrange to see her, and catastrophe would be the result. So she would go-away—she would literally run away from him.

It was a cool evening as Velma's train was pulling into Chicago. She drew on her new wine toque and tucked her golden hair under its edge. Her brown eyes stared from under the level brows at her reflection in the mirrored walls of the ladies dressing room. There was moodiness in their dark depths, a drooping despair in her slightly parted lips.

Mae Forland had persuaded her to buy at cost the wine-colored ensemble, topcoat and suit, that brought out Velma's boyish slimness and was quite as good-looking an outfit as any she had owned in more opulent days at a far greater outlay. In fact, she was returning to Chicago with every appearance of being a prosperous young business woman.

She gave a downward tug to her plain, tightly-buttoned jacket, picked up her coat and overnight bag, and went with fearful expectancy to wait in the aisle with the other passengers in her car for the train to come to a stop.

Millie was to meet her. Velma hoped she would be alone. Already, she was beginning to feel strange to the old enviroment she was reentering.

The string of pullmans eased sloly through the long station shed. There was the usual tinge of excitement in the air, contingent upon the arrival of passengers at any railroad terminal. Velma could see it registered on the faces surrounding her. She felt it herself, but with confused emotions as doubtless had these passengers for theirs. Some must be experienced gay emotions, some sad. Whether her mood was either, she did not pause to analize. She only knew that she was a little excited, in danger of becoming hysterically moved. Now, after long months, she was running back to everything from which she had run in a burst of restlessness and apprehension. This might be a stimulating vacation or a cruedly unbearable one. She almost wished she hadn't come. Then she thought of Tom and knew that she must go through with it.

Millie, with Virginia Dewey, Joe Ramble, and Gordon Peel rushed forward as Velma followed a redcap up the station ramp. The girls burst into high-pitched welcome an hasty kisses. Joe and Gordon got in kisses on their own account. Flanders Smith suddenly stepped out of the crowd and cordially shook her hand.

For a brief instant, Velma was slightly bewildered. Then a surge of the old light-heartedness went through her. Why, everything was all right. It was all a sort of game. These people, who had once allowed her to go her own way without protest, were taking her up again. Was it out of curiosity?

She laughed with these girls in their bewitchingly lovely fur evening clothes, as they strolled through the station and outside into a fast fall of snow. The chauffeur's livery was instantly flecked with tiny sparkling flakes of white when he got out to open the limousine's doors. Undr th brilliant lights, the city had taken on a fairylike unreality.

Velma was suddenly enchanted. She would enjoy the present, forget Carryville and every one in it. She would be gay

But she found that this was not too easily accomplished, for in the next instant all the old painful memory returned. The proximity to Virginia Dewey brought back the loss of her dear father, the vanishing (of his fortune through the maneuvering of Merry Dewey. A lump rose in her throat.

The embarrassment of Flanders fascinated her. He desperately desired to intimate to Velma that her presence still stirred him, but he dared not cease his attentions to the watchful Virginia.

"His fool antics don't impress me, if he only realized it," sighed Velma, to herself.

The chauffer drove them swiftly through downtown Chicago. The big car swirled and skidded corners to the accompaniment of incessant chatter inside and roar of the city outside. Velma was again in the midst of commotion, speed, high flippancy.

She smiled a great deal. Not with these old friends, as they thought, but at them. Everything they did and said was so transparent to her now. She was seeing them for the first time as might a stranger.

Point Traverse

Excellent Quality Of Ice Harvested

Point Traverse, Feb. 24.—The harvesting of some 600 tons of ice at the local fishing colony, was started over the weekend. The ice is of excellent quality, being some 22 inches in thickness.

The large quantity of ice that is being stored, is used for the packing of all lake fish brought in by the commercial fishermen operating out of this harbor during the Summer months.

No ice is being put up at the Main Duck Island, and recent years fishermen at the island colony have been securing their ice from here.

Many Ducks

Large numbers of wild ducks, such as whistlers, and cow hens and also many cormorants, are disporting about in open waters off here.

Three adult bald eagles have made their home here during the winter. They nest on Timber Island during the Summer and cross over to this mainland in search of food.

A large flock of Canada geese flying in a northerly direction, was reported to have passed over this point last week. Observers claim this is very unusual as these birds do not migrate from the south until about a month later.

Open Water

Waters surrounding the Duck Islands are practically free of any ice, as high winds have broken up much solid ice off here, and carried it into the eastern section of the lake.

There is much open water in South Bay, and commercial fishermen are anticipating an early opening, if favorable weather continues during March.

Reputed Russian Prince Pleads 'Not Guilty'

Toronto, Feb. 24. (CP)—Constantine Nakashidze, reputed Russian prince, pleaded innocent here yesterday to charges that took 20 minutes to read in County Criminal court.

They included 35 accusations of theft, fraud, forgery uttering and publication of business prospectives known "to be false in certain material particulars." Nakashidze denied all charges which involve more than $30,000 and several thousand shares of mining stock.

Barton S. Sheldon, formerly a director of Enterprises Finance Co., of which Nakashidze was president, testified he was persuaded by the latter to invest $2,000 in a "pool" that was buying and selling stocks. He said he had absolute confidence in the promoter but that he got back only $1,100 of his investment.

Another witness, William J. Chafe, said he had been led to invest in the pool through favorable reports by Sheldon and Nakashidze and that a few days before the assignment in bankruptcy of Nakashidze last June the promoter admitted "there was no pool."

Union Officials Say Companies Must Sign Contract

Toronto, Feb. 24. (CP)—Harry Davis, president of the Canadian Seamen's Union (T.L.C.) yesterday told the seventh biennial convention of the union that "this convention should authorize a strike against those lake companies who do not sign contracts by the opening of the navigation season."

Mr. Davis said that Capt. Scott Misener, president of the Sarnia and Colonial Steamship lines, "in defiance of this country's labor laws," has said that he does not intend to deal with the C.S.U. or name a representative to the Conciliation Board.

(Capt. Misener said Saturday that the Sarnia and Colonial Steamship companies have notified the Ontario Labor Department that they will not deal with the C.S.U. until present Union leaders have been replaced. A letter from Capt. Misener to Conciliation Officer F. J. Ainsborough Feb. 2 stated that "our companies will not negotiate with a communistic group.")

"We do not want a strike," Mr. Davis said. "Last year we went to great length to prevent one. However, we are not going to permit a repetition of the companies' actions of last year. The responsibility for any strike on the lakes this year rests with these companies and the government."

New contracts between the C.S.U. and the Quebec and Ontario Paper Company were signed yesterday with terms calling for $25-$35 a month wage increases, reduction of the work week in port to 48 hours, an increase of 10 cents an hour in overtime rates, two weeks' holidays with pay—and for the first time in Great Lakes' history—union checkoff and closed shop.

Three companies have signed 1948 agreements and negotiations with other lake companies have been placed before the conciliation board, Mr. Davis said.

Co-op Program Slashes Costs, Builds Houses

By EARL ARONSON

Millinocket, Me., —(AP)— Tidy new homes rising rapidly here to ease the housing shortage are monuments to the co-operative spirit in this little northern Maine paper-manufacturing town.

The people, the Great Northern Paper Company and a bank joined the community endeavor which is providing dwellings at a cost of about $575 per room, compared with approximately $1,500 elsewhere.

With many willing hands pitching in, new houses complete and heating are going up at with cellar, electricity, plumbing costs of $4,000 to $6,500. Without the co-operativee action, the cost would be approximately double.

The paper concern, principal industry for the 6,300 inhabitants, began the enterprise a year ago. It laid out 51 lots. Seven others were laid out elsewhere by individuals. The company constructed sewers and built streets.

The Great Northern reserved five lots in scattered parts of the development and on them is building six-room houses to rent to employees for $45 a month. These homes, not part of the cooperative plan, cost $3,500.

The other 46 company lots—averaging 100 feet deep with a 60-foot frontage—were sold for an average of $240 each on an easy monthly payment basis. The purchasers planned to build their own dwellings hiring what labor was necessary to do work they and their friends couldn't accomplish.

A dozen men went into the woods to cut logs for lumber. Others began casting cement blocks for construction. Paper company officials offered their business experience to determine the best means of financing the new buildings.

Trust Company Helps

As many lot owners were war veterans, they first called in Veterans Administration officials for discussion, and the Millinocket Truct Company presented an attractive proposition with loans which can be liquidated in 10 to 15 years. The interest rate is five per cent.

Ground for the first house was broken last April, and construction has started on all but six lots. Eight homes were completed by mid-December. Work will continue through the winter when weather permits.

The typical dwelling has five or six rooms and a bath. Some are bungalow-style; others have two stories. Walls are insulated. Garages will be built later.

The houess are not monotonously similar. The individual owner's taste in design and color is carried out as practically, as possible. Company architects who planned the five company houses also designed the others.

The original co-operative plan for small groups of volunteers to work a few hours in the evening or on on days off was outgrown quickly. Volunteers increased and as many as 40 worked on a single building at one time. They brought their own tools.

The owner of one finished home supplied electric current to illuminate night work on nearby houses. When the Bangor Hydro-Electric Company learned of his generosity, it whittled his bill to average monthly size.

Dominie Bemoans Phony Phonetics

Auckland, N. Z., —(CP)— University authorities in New Zealand are complaining that many pupils who learn by phonetic methods at school never learn to spell correctly.

In support of this claim the chancellor of the University of New Zealand, Sir David Smith, quoted the report of Dr. Kenneth Cumberland on spelling mistakes in a set of geography papers he marked for the university entrance examinations.

"Cereals are often serials, cerials, or games," Dr. Cumberland stated. "Citrus becomes cityrus, siterous, citrious or citerus. Less than 10 per cent of the candidates have this word correctly. There is less excuse for lemmons, proones, raisons or raysens; still less for walm, wett, soyle and sylte. Accros, occurr, ammount, scetch mape, seanic ressorts, furtile and cerplus or surplace for surplus, are all very frequent."

Dr. Cumberland found insulideg or inchalage for ensilage, irogated orchids, irogation, irragation, truncaded spurrs, lose-earn (for lucerne), iren orr, tinn, zic lede, mangnise, tusocke desserte, thatshed rooves, and prise powltery and fouls. Peninsular was used instead of the noun peninsula in all except two of 583 scripts.

Errors in place names included Panimar, Sidney, Otargo, Shieargo, Edinbowrugh, Rhur, Rur, Rurh, Glasscow (very frequently), Livvetpoole, and Cambera, Fedrol Capitol and seet of government.

Many New Zealand employees state that the university criticisms are fully justified and that many of their younger employees make mistakes in the simplest words.

25 P.C. Excise Tax Under Fire In Parliament

Ottawa, Feb. 24 (CP)—The government's 25-per-cent excise tax on a long list of durable consumer goods came under opposition fire last night as the Commons resumed study of another phase of the restrictions announced last Nov. 17 by Finance Minister Abbott.

Ross Thatcher (CCF—Moose Jaw) initiated the attack with a charge that "executive government" imposed the tax "arbitrarily and autocratically."

He believed it was "contrary to the laws of this country" because for 700 years it had been a recognized principle in all British nations "that only parliament can impose taxation on the people."

Parliament was not consulted on the excise tax and had not yet approved it, "yet the tax has been collected by the (finance) minister's officials for over two months."

"If this resolution is passed, we will have created a precedent which will mean that in the future the government will be able to impose taxes and then three months or six months afterward come to parliament and say, 'we have imposed these, approve them'."

"In taxing these necessities of life 25 per cent the minister is adding to the cost of living and pushing the spiral of inflation that much further upward," he said.

Mr. Abbott said he already had made it clear that in announcing the excise tax "the government was giving notice to the people of Canada who would be affected by it that parliament would be asked to impose this tax and impose it retroactively to the night I made my announcement."

Mr. Abbott said he does not agree the tax is inflationary.

"One of the means of combatting inflation when there is an excess of purchasing power is by imposing taxes such as these that drain off purchasing power. Far from their being inflationary, they will have if anything a deflationary effect."

BUILDS MODELS FOR WAR MUSEUM

Toronto, —(CP)— When Alyn Jones was a boy of 11 he started building models of ships as a hobby. Now a veteran of the Second World War, he has signed a contract with the government to build models of army vehicles to form part of a permanent war museum at Ottawa.

All models are built to scale in brass or wood. They are constructed to stand the strain of excessive handling and age. The parts are all constructed by the Toronto man in the basement workshop where he has lathes so small they fit into a man's hand.

R.C.M.P. Plane Patrols Lonely North Country

Edmonton, —(CP)— The modern methods employed by the R.C.M.P. to police and govern Canada's remote northland are typified by the sturdy Norseman aircraft known as CF-MPF which in two years of operation has covered hundreds of thousands of miles north along the Mackenzie River and into the islands of the Arctic ocean.

For the two years the pilot has been Sgt. J. H. Reid, 25-year-old native of Sydney, N.S. who has flown out of Edmonton with the R.C.A.F. and the R.C.M.P. since 1941.

The engineer is Special Constable H.F. McCready, a war veteran who trained in the United States and served for several years as flight engineer with the U.S. forces in the Aleutians.

Sgt. Reid's flights are directed from the headquarters of "K" division here by radio and the system of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals.

To the experienced crew of the little aircraft forced landings usually caused by unexpected weather conditions, are matters of course. Emergency landings average eight to 10 a year. The plane is equipped with skis for most of the flying season. Floats are used in the summer months when the lakes are open.

No Close Calls

Despite the danger of most of the plane's flights, its pilot reported no "close calls" during his 3,600 hours of northern flying time. The crew has never been stranded for any long period nor has the ship suffered serious damage in forced landings.

Prisoners being brought out are always under escort. So far none has undertaken a desperate attempt to regain his freedom.

One result of the plane's trips is an improvement in the diet of officers at remote detachments. On every trip the aircraft carries as much fresh food as possible. Most supplies are transported aboard one or two boats a year, but such commodities as eggs and vegetables go in regularly by air.

Another service performed by the plane has been establishment of wood and food caches along the route of the lonely dog team patrols over the frozen tundra.

Working out of river posts, Sgt. Reid has carried fuel and frozen fish an caches them in prearranged spots for the use of constables on their periodic patrols. This practice greatly lightens the load carried by the patrolling officer on his trip of 600 to 800 miles.

In one trip, Sgt. Reid and Special Constable McCready see more north country than do most Canadians in a lifetime. And in the line of routine duty they convey through the Territories and Arctic the realization to the natives that the law of Canada is never far distant from any settlement.

British Skilled In Serving Wines

Winnipeg, —(CP)— Henry Donaldson, valet and waiter to British notables for 20 years, is continuing his career in one of Winnipeg's larger hotels.

Mr. Donaldson immigrated to this country recently and now is living here at the home of his war-bride daughter and-son-in-law. His first trip to Canada was in 1930, he recalled.

"At that time I was valet for Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton whom I met while serving with the Royal Scots in the first World War. I accompanied the general on his tour, but we didn't get as far west as Winnipeg on that occasion," he added.

The most recent thrill experienced by Mr. Donaldson was the unexpected visit of Princess Elizabeth and a group of her lady friends at the Savoy Hotel shortly before her wedding.

"We had no notice that she would be arriving," he said, "and no special arrangements were made to receive her, but we all recognized her as she entered the hotel."

After service of one day in a Canadian Hotel Mr. Donaldson said he had noticed two striking differences from what he has been accustomed to in Britain.

"At home we have to know the correct way to serve wines and champagne, while here wines are not even served at meals," he said. He also added that a waiter in a British dining room never goes to the kitchen while in Canada he may pick up orders there.

Full Probe Of Hockey Gambling Charges To Be Made

May Take Week Or More To Bare All Information

Gambler Associates Two Hockey Players With Bets

Detroit, Feb. 25 —(CP)— President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said today the Detroit police department has offered full co-operation in investigation of hockey gambling charges but so far there is little definite information to go on.

He told The Canadian Press all he could do for the present was to await further investigation by Detroit police into the gambling reports which linked two N.H.L. players with an ex-convict's betting activities. He added he probably would return to Montreal and come back to Detroit only if developments warrant.

Campbell said that if "strong circumstantial evidence of a player-gambling tieup" is uncovered it will be fully investigated.

He spoke after an hour-long conference with Detroit Police Commissioner Harry Toy who told the N.H.L. head that he has reason to believe that conversations between N.H.L. players and gambler James Tamer did take place. However, Toy said he did not know who the players are and it might take a week or more to uncover the information.

The National Hockey League president went into immediate conference with Toy upon his arrival this morning from Montreal for his investigation.

Earlier Campbell called reports of a possible betting scandal in professional hockey "ridiculous."

At the same time he promised a full inquiry.

Toy issued a statement yesterday associating two professional players with an ex-convict in the reported bets. He did not name the rinkmen, but said one was a member of Boston Bruins and the other played with New York Rangers.

He said reports were of supposed telephone conversations regarding bets on league games between the players and James Tamer, 36-year-old convicted bank robber who recently was returned to prison as a parole violator. Tamer is suspected of heading a Detroit gambling ring.

The Commissioner pointed out that his information "does not sustain any criminal case" and was not of "sufficient strength to base an accusation."

"I don't care whether it is legal evidence or not if it establishes the fact to my satisfaction," Campbell announced in New York before heading here by way of Toronto.

"If anything contrary to NHL regulations has transpired, the league's rules are adequate to deal with the situation."

Toy said he would be "glad to turn over to the league officials any information I have that would be useful in any investigation they care to make."

Campbell stopped in Toronto last night to confer with Art Ross general manager and coach Dit Clapper of the Bruins.

Boys Deny Charge

"We don't believe a word of it," asserted Ross, who said he had interviewed all his players.

"They have denied the charges 100 per cent," he said. "I believe every one of the boys."

In New York Manager Frank Boucher of the Rangers called the report "fantastic" and said he had questioned his players individually with all of them denying knowledge of any betting activities.

Toy said the hockey angle "is very incidental to our whole investigation of Tamer and his associates, which has been going on for some time.

NEW WEAPONS ARE PLANNED FOR BRITAIN'S ARMY

Expenditure for Army in 1948-49 is Reduced by 83 Million Pounds

London, Feb. 25 (Reuters) — Expenditure of the British Army in 1948-49 will be cut by £83,000,000 ($332,000,000) official army estimates showed today.

Total net expenditure proposed is £305,000,000 compared with £388,000,000 in 1947-48 and £682,000,000 in 1946-47.

Today's estimates show a cut in the gross annual cost of the army of more than £520,000,000 —60 per cent — in the last two years. The actual saving, it was stated is greater, for the 1946-47 total did not include payments for stores covered in later figures.

The new estimates still include war-to-peace transitional costs, but further large reductions in army strength are to take place during the year.

The statement on the estimates signed by War Minister Shinwell said new weapons were being planned for the army.

"The objective is to produce equipment which is a definite stride ahead in development rather than a modification of an existing type," the statement said.

It was hoped that repatriation of German prisoners-of-war from Britain would be completed by July, 1948, and from the Middle East by October, 1948.

Unless any major setback occurred, the Polish Resettlement Corps, with the exception of small liquidation units, would be dispersed by the end of the 1948-49 army year.

EXCHANGE BILL CARRIES IN HOUSE BY CLOSE MARGIN

Opposition Amendment Defeated by 104 to 96

Ottawa, Feb. 25 —(CP)— The government's contentious exchange - conservation bill won approval by a narrow margin in the Commons yesterday and then members quickly adopted a bill extending for three years the Farm Loans Improvement Act of 1944.

The exchange bill, first important piece of legislation to be passed since the session opened Dec. 5, barely skimmed over its last hurdle in the wake of concerted attacks which saw the opposition come within eight votes of defeating the government.

That division, followed by another which the government won by 10 votes, came on a Progressive Conservative amendment which would have limited currency-saving import restrictions in the exchange bill to hard currency — dollar — countries only, mainly the United States. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 104 to 96, and shortly after the bill, which now goes to the Senate, was adopted by a vote of 102 to 92.

The three opposition parties voted as a bloc in both divisions. To support their arguments that the import restrictions should not be made applicable against the United Kingdom and other sterling countries.

Finance Minister Abbott replied that the government could not accept an amendment that would turn the bill from a non-discriminatory one into legislation that would discriminate mainly against the United States.

Passes Without Division

The Farm Loans Improvement Bill passed without division, although spokesmen for the opposition parties urged that the interest rate should be reduced from its present five per cent.

Future of U.S. Air Base on Persian Gulf Depends on Ibn Saud's Goodwill

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Drahran, Saudi Arabia, Feb. 25 —(AP)—It's 950 miles as a bomber flies from this American super Superfortress base on the Persian Gulf to Russia's vital oil field at Baku.

On splendid runways of crushed rock almost a mile and a half long, the B-29s that never flew in combat in Europe now come to rest almost daily after training hops non-stop from Germany.

Their bomb racks are empty but guns poke out from metal blisters on their silver fuselage.

From Central Europe all the way to the Orient, Drahran ranks first in strategic importance to the United States Air Forces. Pilots are getting to know the terrain under Russia's belly like the palm of their hand.

No American military man underestimates the current value of the friendship of Ibn Saud, Saudi Arabians' formidable king, who made the air base at Drahran possible.

It originally was planned as a way-stop for American aircraft transferring from the European theatre to carry on the war against Japan.

It was carried to completion in March, 1946, six months after Japan surrendered. By the terms of a wartime agreement with Ibn Saud it is under United States control until April 1, 1949.

After that?

The future of the Drahran field, which is reported to have cost $5,000,000 to construct, largely depends on the international relations of the United States with the Arab world, according to sources here.

Until the voted partition of Palestine set off the Arab-Jewish warfare, it was believed likely Saudi Arabia would voluntarily seek to prolong the American air force's stay at Drahran. Although about 30 young Arabs are being trained to take over the airport administration in the future it is not considered possible for an adequate Arab staff to be ready by the time the contract is due to end.

Americans also have a hand in training Arab civilian pilots for the Saudi Arabian airline.

As yet, the airlines' dozen transports are skippered by former American Army pilots, but each has an Arab co-pilot and an Arab crew.

Field Commander Lt.-Col. Dale Seeds command here includes 200 American officers and men and a large complement of Arab civilian workers.

Although American military aircraft have free access to Saudi Arabian skies, they are strictly briefed to avoid Mecca and Medina, the most sacred cities of the Moslem faith, and Riyadhn, the capital. By Arab belief, the king must not look up to any man. Pilots overhead might cause him to do so if they flew over Riyadh.

Czechs Have Long Looked To Benes in Times of Crisis

London, Feb. 25 (AP)—President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia, 64, and ailing, gave ground today to Communists demands for control, with their Left Wing allies, over the Czech government.

It was to Benes, who has fought for Czechoslovak rights from the time of the Hapsburgs to Hitler, that his people looked for guidance in times of crisis.

Now, tired after an exhausting career with his health impaired, he chose to accept the Cabinet presented by Communist Premier Klement Gottwald.

Benes was a leader in the long struggle against Hapsburg rule. Ten years ago he fought against the Munich accord which gave his country to Adolf Hitler.

Since the liberation he has advised in grave moments on how to unite the country, set up parliament and make the wobbly coalition government work.

He is tired after an exhausting career and his health is not robust. But the elements which tried to oppose the Communist surge to power were hopeful he might have some solution which may have something of representative government in Czechoslovakia.

The popular attitude toward Benes in Czechoslovakia is almost reverential. Above parties — he would not even vote in the last election to avoid any impression of taking sides—he has been able to hold together a difficult coalition since the liberation from the Germans in May, 1945, his voice is respected above any other that might speak in the present emergency.

Speculating on what plan he may offer, most persons who know him are confident he will hold to his tough democratic idealism. It is a solid conviction with him. As a practical statesman he may devise compromises, but it is being said of him that he is unlikely to yield on a matter of fundamental principle.

START OF NEW MOVES

Washington —(AP) — Ferenc Nagy, former Hungarian Premier, sees the Czech crisis as only the start of new Communist moves in Europe. He thinks the western powers can now expect a series of Moscow-inspired threats against the governments of Austria, France and Italy.

Nagy fled his country last May after a Communist coup similar to the one in Czechoslovakia.

He said in an interview today, "the fate of Czechoslovakia shows how indefensible the other nations were whose governments were unseated by Moscow. Czechoslovakia was the only middle European nation not occupied by Russian troops, and yet nothing could save her."

Kingston Man Injured When Plane Crashes

Halleybury, Feb. 25. (CP)— Moise Charron of Notre Dame De La Paix, Que., was killed and Russel James Gray of Kingtson, was seriously injured today when a two-seater Fleet Canuck aircraft piloted by Gray crashed in underbrush near the town limits here.

The plane had taken off from Lake Temiskaming about five minutes prior to the crash.

Charron, a passenger in the aircraft, was dead when Provincial Police reached the scene a few minutes after the crash. His head was badly crushed. Gray, seriously injured with head lacerations, a fractured leg, and other injuries, was taken to hospital here.

Gray was too seriously injured to give police a clear account of the accident this afternoon. An inquest will likely be held, Dr. W. C. Arnold, coroner, said.

Tommy-Gunners Storm Court And Kill Arab

Jerusalem, Feb. 25 (AP)— Police said Jewish tommy-gunners stormed a Jerusalem military court today and killed an Arab guard. The party wounded two others and pelted smoke bombs both inside and outside the buildings.

The court had tried Jews arrested for underground activities.

Smoke clouded the whole area.

Jewish dynamiters blew up four Arab houses in the borderland between Tel Aviv and Haifa, killing two Arabs. At least 20 explosions shook the coastal cities. Small arms crackled. A Jew was shot in the back and died in a hospital.

A 53rd body was dug from the ruins of Jewish business houses and hotels in Ben Yehuda Street of Jerusalem. Arabs said they engineered the explosion Sunday, but the Jews blamed British personnel.

1947 Marked Year In Highway Improvement

Toronto, Feb. 25 (CP) — J.D. Miller, Deuty Minister of Highways for Ontario, today told the annual meeting of the Provincial Good Roads Association that 1947 was "an outstanding year in highway improvement."

Mr. Miller said the department and various municipalities undertook the largest program in the history of the province during the fiscal year that ends next month.

"When the books are closed, it is estimated that $75,000,000 will have been devoted to the improvement of rural highways in the province," he said.

Mr. Miller said most of the contracts were for grading, and tenders for this type of work were in range with the prices in 1939. "Increased costs for wages, materials and machinery were met by increased production from machines developed during the war."

He said two outstanding features of highway development during the year were completion of the Red Lake Highway in Northwestern Ontario and paving of the Highway stretch between Oshawa and Highland Creek, East of Toronto.

Blind Man Refuses Kind Offer By Cornwall Man

Toronto, Feb. 25 (CP) —John Berezanski, blind Toronto garage operator whose seeing-eye dog was killed recently by thieves tonight gratefully refused an offer by E. M. Sacoble of Cornwall to give one of his eyes to Berezanski.

"Iwould never forgive myself if anything happened to this man's sight if he gave me one of his eyes," said Berezanski. "When a person has one eye removed, you can never be sure that the other will not be affected.

"I am 65 years old and I've been blind for 19 years. I've got used to it and I get along pretty well. Since my dog was killed, everybody has been wonderful to me."

TOBACCO BARN BURNS

Vanessa, Ont., Feb. 25 —(CP)— Loss estimated at $8,000 was caused by a fire of unknown origin this morning in the tobacco barn on the farm owned and operated by Aaron Melmar, one mile north of this Brant county community. The barn, strip room and six kilns of tobacco were lost.

REFER FALKLAND IS. DISPUTE TO THE HAGUE—BEVEN

Rejects Suggestion To Send Case to U.N.

London, Feb. 25 —(CP)— Foreign Secretary Bevin today rejected a suggestion that the three-county dispute over Falkland Islands and dependencies be brought before the United Nations Security Council.

He told the House of Commons that "peopel cannot go on interfering with British territory and then as a result of kicking up a row expect us to go to the Security Council"

Bevin insisted that rival claims by Chile and Argentina to the British-governed Falkland Islands should be referred to the International Court of Justice at The Hague before any further action can be taken.

Britain wanted the dispute to go to the international court because she believed that international discussions could scarcely be profitable until the question of title had been legally examined, he said.

Chile, said Bevin, had suggested that the British offer to accept the opinion of the court was not a fair one because it was asking the other party to appear as plaintiffs.

Willing to Make Agreement

"The British government desires to reaffirm that if the Argentine and Chilean governments are willing to make an agreement with us under which the court shall pronounce the title of these territories we shall be glad to collaborate in such an agreement."

Bevin said that he had been informed by the Argentine government that the Argentine naval task force at Deception Island, one of the South Shetland group belong to the Falkland Dependencies, had no intention of asserting any right or taking possession of any territory. They were merely there to carry out routine exercises.

He said that the British government did not consider the Chilean and Argentine expeditions and the statements by officials accompanying them, as affecting the title and sovereignty in the disputed Antarctic areas.

"They are gestures by the parties concerned in support of their claims which of course are not recognized by the other parties and insofar as they create excitement and ill-feeling they appear to the British government highly regrettable," Bevin added.

LOUIS NOW IN LONDON

London, Feb. 25 —(AP) — Joe Louis arrived in London today and ambled through the biggest crowd of backslapping boxing fans ever assembled at Waterloo Station.

The heavyweight champion will give training and sparring exhibitions at Earl's Court. He brought along 300 steaks.

Accepts Cabinet Of Communists Led By Gottwald

Opposition Parties Have No Chance to Smash Coup

Prague, Feb. 25 (AP)—President Eduard Benes announced he has accepted a new cabinet presented by Communist Premier Klement Gottwald, composed chiefly of Communists and their left wing supporters.

The government radio announced shortly before that the president had capitulated to Communist demands, indicating the last obstacle to iron Communist control of the entire country had been swept away.

The new cabinet includes Social Democrats, who swung back to Communist support this week after several months of estrangement. Other parties also are represented.

Masaryk Retained

A statement from the president's office said that two Social Democrats resigned before the new list was accepted. They were right wing member Vaclav Majer, Minister of Food, and Frantisek Tymes, Deputy Premier, thought to hold leftist views.

Jan Masaryk, non-party member of the cabinet, continues as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The announcement came as vast crowds gathered in the public square, prepared under Communist leadership to stage a demonstration in support of Gottwald. In another quarter of the business centre, National Socialist party student members gathered for a counter-demonstration.

The president's palace was surrounded by hundreds of police and soldiers, armed with rifles and sub-machine guns.

The Communists had posed a threat of a general strike to enforce their demands.

Control Radio

The radio, now in Communist hands, said the president had accepted the resignations of 12 anti-Communist ministers from the coalition cabinet. This would clear the way for the Communist seizure of complete power.

The president's office declined to make any statement immediately but did not deny the report. A statement was promised later today.

Communist Premier Klement Gottwald went to the presidential palace to present a list of ministers for a new cabinet. The radio said an announcement of a new government was expected momentarily.

The Communists clamped a grip on communications as the coup rushed to a climax. Nowhere, now, do the opposition parties have a chance to oppose Gottwald publicly.

Czech Frontier Tightly Sealed

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 25 — (AP) — The United States army said today a heavily-armed Czech guard has tightly sealed Czechoslovakia's western border.

"Czechoslovak security police are in complete control of the border, a report from headquarters said.

"Guards are placed very close together, armed with sub-machine guns and pistols. Where 30 security troops are normally stationed in (the border town of) Asch, there are now at least 300."

Even train crews at the border are reported armed.

A proclamation given to Bavarian border police by Czechs at the frontier said no Czechoslovak citizen is permitted to leave that country "under any circumstances."

German police at Munich said they arrested three men who crossed the border and said they were anti-Communist politicians of the Catholic Peoples Party. Their names were withheld. Military government officials indicated any authentic political refugee would be granted asylum.

Robot Tortoise Constructed By Brain Scientist

London, Feb. 25. (CP)—The Daily Express reported today that Dr. W. Grey Walter, 38-year-old brain scientist, has built a robot tortoise which is so human that it likes company recognizes voices and comes to heel when called.

The paper said that the tortoise avoids cold or damp weather, great heat or bright lights, likes women but dislikes men.

"It can be temperamental and will be neurotic and sulky for days if teased or given too many contradictory instructions," The Express added.

The paper said that Dr. Walter, who is at the Burden Neurological Institute at Bristol, built the tortoise with ordinary radio tubes, switch relays, miniature microphones for registering sound and photo-electric cells for recognizing color and shape.

3,500 Prisoners to Have 'New Deal' In Canada's Seven Penitentiaries

Ottawa, Feb. 25 —(CP)— A "new deal"—with the accent on rehabilitation rather than punishment—is coming for 3,500 prisoners in Canada's seven penitentiaries. The Federal Penitentiaries Commission has initiated a policy of education rather than the old-fashioned rule of punishment for the crime.

As a start, 25 burly prison officers, schooled to dominate by fear of authority, have temporarily discarded their prison dress and donned the garb of "students."

"And they are not doing badly," Maj.-Gen. R. B. Gibson, penitentiaries commissioner, said today in an interview.

The "students" are avidly absorbing authoritative teachings on the science of prisoner recovery.

At a school in the R.C.M.P. barracks at nearby Rockcliffe, they are being told that efficiency as officials does not depend on physical strength but on knowledge of what makes a criminal "tick."

Forerunners of the 1,100 officers to be trained, the introductory class brings into being the recommendations of the Archambault commission which 10 years ago called for the raising of the efficiency of Canadian penal officers.

The "khaki-clad" students take notes on psychiatry, psychology, hte nature of crime and the reasons for the criminal. At the conclusion of a six-weeks course, they will take back with them new ideas in penalogy to pass along to fellow officers.

Don't get the idea that prison officials are becoming soft. Prisoners can anticipate new treatment but there will be no "kid glove" treatment for those who don't respond.

The officers are being trained to handle all types of military weapons and physical holds.

They'll be "criminal doctors" when they go back to their institutions, but they'll be tough "criminal doctors" at that.

GAME ASSOCIATION DEFEATS MOTION TO MOVE SEASON BACK

The Peterborough Fish and Game Association decisively defeated a move to have the deer season moved back to the first Monday in November instead of the Monday nearest the 8th of the month, at a recent meeting. Some members said that freezing set in before the deer season had come to an end and they wanted the calendar revised but the majority voted it down.

DEER SWEPT TO DEATH TRYING TO CROSS ICE

If a jury were sitting on this case it would likely return a verdict of unintentional suicide.

It happened on the Trent Canal opposite the power house in Campbellford.

Skaters out for an afternoon frolic saw a young deer frisking along the banks of the canal at the edge of the town. Becoming frightened at the sight of so many humans, the deer attempted to bolt across the ice.

Half way across the canal, the deer slipped and it slid into a hole in the ice caused by a swiftly moving current. In a valiant struggle for life the animal threshed in the water, but its efforts were futile and it was swept down stream.

Police and fire departments of the village were notified, but despite their co-ordinated efforts the deer was swept to its death beneath the ice.

"Dear Ruth: You're wonderful. See you at the B.C.I.V.S. tonight. B.B."

Housewife Has Narrow Escape In Stove Mishap

Result of a peculiar accident which occurred when water was turned into a hot water front, a coal range at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ferr, 27 Cannifton Road, exploded Tuesday and caused approximately $500 damage to the kitchen.

Mrs. Ferr, who was in the kitchen at the time, fortunately escaped with but the side of her face being slightly burned and her hair scorched. Firemen were called and extinguished the flames which spread throughout the kitchen.

Fire Chief William Lynch reported Mrs. Ferr as saying the water pipes had frozen and the water to the hot water tank in the kitchen had been turned off. Mrs. Ferr later had started the coal fire in the range and had turned the water into the hot waterfront. As result steam quicly built up sufficient pressure to blow the entire top and front off the stove."

Red hot coals were scattered about the kitchen some embedding in the ceiling which burned through before firemen were able to extinguish the flames.

Mrs. Helen Murray Arrested On Charge of Arson

Charged with arson in connection with the partial burning of her one-storey home in Hillcrest (Stoney Lonesome) Mrs. Helen Murray, age 37, wife of Fred Murray, was arrested yesterday in Toronto and is being brought to Belleville to stand trial. Mrs. Murray is expected to appear in police court on Thursday.

The Murray home was damaged by fire one evening two weeks ago shortly after Mrs. Murray and two children had left the house to take the train to Toronto. The fire was noticed by neighbors and firemen arrived in time to save the structure although the interior was badly damaged.

The blaze was investigated by the fire marshal's department with result that Mrs. Murray's arrest was ordered by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan. Mrs. Murray is being brought back from Toronto today.

Chamber to Have Fine New Office In City Hall

At Monday night's council meeting, it was proposed that arrangements be made to quarter the Chamber of Commerce in the City Hall building. The old offices of the Chamber were destroyed by fire on the morning of January 31.

The suggestion was that the Welfare Department vacate the corner space to the right of the main entrance. Alterations necessary to enlarge the present partitioned office space would be made to insure the Chamber of spacious 17' x 25' accommodation. The Welfare Department would occupy the space formerly required for the local ration board, behind its present location and facing Market Street.

Operations are under way for the installation of the City Hall's new switchboard. This addition to the building's facilities will connect all the offices to one central unit. Mr. Gordon Leggat will operate the board which will be in operation in the near future.

Belleville Kiltie Band May be Forced To Break up Unless Funds Provided

There are very few residents of the city who cannot at once call to mind the thrill experienced when they have lined the curbs and cheered the Belleville Kiltie Band.

Today this organization, which has been so much in the eyes of an admiring public, faces possible disbandment through a lack of funds. Consistent appearances before the public and in some cases non-payment for these services have depleted the resources of this group to a point whereby it must be given support or disband.

On numerous occasions the group has paraded the streets in support of church organizations, lodges, and welcoming organizations. Mustering full strength, they number about twenty to twenty-five. Wear and tear on the uniforms and equipment have put the band in a position that the members feel that any alternative would be better than putting on a shoddy appearance, and thus besmirching the past grandeur of this public-spirited group.

It is generally felt that the people of Belleville will not stand by and watch the deterioration of such a useful corps. New uniforms and instruments are the main requirements necessary for the band to maintain its colorful appearance for the public.

Pipe Major John Browning extends a welcome to all interested to attend practices on Monday nights at the armouries. The band is carrying on in full esprit de corps, hoping that the citizens will not let them down.

Activities of Ungainly Clam Shovel Big Attraction for News Room Staff

The news rooms of a newspaper office are usually (usually, that is) the home of a happy family. The even tenor of life rolls along more or less peacefully despite good natured political bickerings; the arguments anent the respective abilities of the Dodgers and the Yankees; comments re the ninth wife of Tommy Manville; the local hockey teams; Mahatma Gandhi's demise, and the New Look.

But newspapermen, like other males of the species, have their weaknesses. Give 'em an electric train, the funnies; or anything that appeals to the "boy" in them, and they'll revert back to the public school age quicker than your next breath.

Right now all is not well in the news rooms of this newspaper. For an intruder has inserted itself and has more or less disrupted the even tenor of life in this balliwick of typewriters, teletypes, obituaries, phone calls, reporters, and guys asking to have their names kept out of the paper because of a binge that had a sorry ending.

It's a snorting steam-breathing monster that has thrown a monkey wrench into the ordinarily well-oiled (don't misinterpret that) machinery of this news dispensary.

Daily, it exudes squeaks, rattles and the occasional roar. Any exceptional rat-a-plan from this contraption causes the editor, sport editor, excitable city editor, and the ordinarily under-control managing editor, to leap from their feet, kick over paste-pots, impale the paste brush on the nearest spike file, kick over two or more reporters, and rush for the window to see "What's cooking."

Yep, that danged steam-shovel that is exploring the innards and depths of the Moira River which flows more or less gently beneath the office windows, has raised hob with the news room morale.

Just let a big story break. Let the King of Lower Slobbovia be assassinated by one of the Hatfields; let Moscow declare war on a satellite; let Barbara Ann Scott be defeated by the Zwick's Island champion.

Pure trivia, men. But let the river - snooping, pipe - laying monstrosity below the windows let out a series of mechanical burps, and there's a rush for the windows, that would make the Charge of the Light Brigade look like a funeral procession.

But that is not all. The other day a diver inserted himself into the picture. That did it. Just mention "Here he comes" and there's a concerted rush for the windows, that would do credit to a Notre Dame backfield.

Just where and how it will end is a matter for conjecture. Editors sit in their chairs, every nerve tense. They are beginning to go cross-eyed trying to keep one eye on copy and the other on the windows.

And if it were summertime, we wouldn't have been a bit surprised to see the news room moved to the river-bank below; editors parked in easy chairs doing their work by remote control to the cacophony of the underwater activities machinery fifty or sixty feet away.

But it shouldn't last much longer. When it is over, all that will be necessary is to fill in the tracks worn from the city and other desks to the windows; take up a collection to buy ye editors toy mechanical shovels, with a diver to boot, and the rest of them can settle down once more to the ordered routine of newspaper life.

Justice Cameron To Head Board Of Conciliation

Ottawa, Feb. 25 (CP) — Mr. Justice J.C.A. Cameron of the Exchequer court of Canada, has been appointed chairman of a conciliation board established to deal with a wage dispute involving Canadian Railways and a group of International Unions, Labor Minister Mitchell announced today.

The Unions represent approximately 125,000 of the employees of the railways involved, which include the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway, and the Ontario Northland Railway.

The dispute arose from demands of employees for a wage increase of 35 cents an hour, effective last Dec. 20.

Food for Britain National Project Of Kinsmen Club

With the passing of the "Milk for Britain Fund" campaign responsible for sending millions of quarts of milk to young Britons during the war years, Kinsmen Clubs throughout Canada have now turned to a "Food for Britain" campaign as a national effort.

Already thousands of food parcels have been forwarded by Kinsmen Clubs across the Dominion and the objective is for a specified number of parcels to be sent each week to distressed families in the Old Country. Unlike in Canada strict food rationing prevails in England and the food parcels are needed to maintain health standards.

The Belleville Kinsmen Club is taking part in the national campaign to send food parcels to England and part of its fund raising campaign for the year will be earmarked for this purpose. So the support of the Kinsmen Club in their several yearly projects, is urged.

Funds raised will go to assist in worthy welfare work.

Upright and just to the end of his days,
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories he left behind.

The flowers we placed upon her grave,
May wither and decay,
But the love for her who sleeps beneath,
Shall never fade away.

Ever remembered by Elsie, Pete, and children.

CLAPPER—In loving memory of my beloved "Daddy" Norman Frederick Clapper, who passed away suddenly, February 25th., 1946.

Beautiful memories are all we have left
Of him we loved and will never forget,
His loving smile and happy face,
A broken link we can never replace.
Sad was the parting, no one can tell,
So sudden on earth the sorrow fell,
Memories are treasures no one can steal,
Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal.
Only those who have lost are able to tell,
The pain in our hearts of not saying farewell.

Ever remembered by daughter, Eileen, son-in-law Richard and granddaughter Judy of Black Diamond, Alberta, Canada.

Three Believed Dead in $500,000 Quebec Blaze

Quebec, Feb. 25 (CP) — Toll of life in Quebec's worst blaze in 10 years today stood at one known dead and two missing believed dead as firemen resumed search for bodies of an aged man and his niece among the blackened, fire-seared remains of a business block on Mountain Hill. Damage was expected to reach $500,000.

After preliminary probing of the ruins last night and a city-wide search by police, Fire Chief Rosaire Beaulie said authorities were convinced 92-year-old James Smith and his niece, Miss Mamie Trumble, 63, who lived above Smith's Curio shop, had perished in the blaze.

Earlier Smith was reported to have been rescued from the fire. Later reports said he had died after leaving the scene, but when no official confirmation of his death could be obtained, police combed the city.

Mrs. Patrick Mercie, 45, died at the scene after being carried from inside the doorway of a three-storey apartment house where the blaze started from a furnace explosion. She was found by firemen within a few feet of the street and safety.

Chief Beaulieu said there still was no official list of tenants of the apartment house or apartment over the burned out shops. However, there was no report of missing persons other than Smith and his niece.

Richard Rogers Arrested After Hospital Release

Richard Rogers, aged 37, of this city, just released from hospital was arrested yesterday by Provincial Police at Ottawa on a charge of possessing "instruments of safebreaking."

His arrest followed an escape from death on Sunday when an automobile in which he was passenger was struck by a fast-moving Toronto-bound C.P.R. passenger train just outside Ottawa.

His companion, Arthur P. Richardson, aged 32, also of Belleville, is in critical conditions, suffering from severe chest and facial injuries. A guard has been posted at his bed. Richardson was the driver of the car which was struck by the passenger train.

Police say Rogers and Richardson are suspects in connection with the break-in of Goodman's clothing store in Belleville last Saturday night when approximately $600 worth of clothing was stolen. Rogers is also suspected of recent safe-breaking crimes in Ottawa.

In the wrecked car, tossed by the train some 50 feet from the track, police said they found tools used by safe-blowers and a glass jar containing what may be nitroglycerine.

A CLUMSY EFFORT

Toronto, Feb. 25 — (CP)—Magistrate Tupper Bigelow said yesterday that Mrs. Mary Parks "made a clumsy effort" to evade rent control regulations. He fined her $360 and costs for charging an excessive rental for a house in 1947.

Evidence was that she charged $45 a month, although it should have been $32. Mrs. Parks contended that the tenants, Mr. and Mrs. L. Huston now of Oshawa, had agreed to buy the house and the $45 represented the monthly payment. Huston denied her contention that he had signed a purchase agreement.

Kiwanis Club Second in Achievement For January in O-Q-M District

The achievements of the Belleville Kiwanis Club during the past year, progress made so far this year and what is in the future were given to the members at the luncheon on Tuesday at the Kiwanis Centre. Sid Rose, chairman of the achievement committee, was in charge of the meeting after the business was completed. The first new member of the year, Bill Bateman, was initiated and the members were privileged to hear Mrs. Ethel Laurenson (nee Ethel Smith) and Reg Bishop in the solos they will give at the Kiwanis Music festival to be held in Toronto in the near future. Both were presented with appropriate gifts. Leo B. Riggs accompanied the artists and both are pupils of Miss Leona Riggs.

Bill Bateman was introduced to the club by Leonard Reid and the initiation was conducted by Cliff Baragar. Mr. Bateman is the baby member for the year and the first in the 25th year of inception of the Club in this city.

The application for the Kiwanis Club was made on February 6th, 1923 and approved by International on February 20th. On May 26th the Charter Night was held. It is the intention of the club to hold a three-day celebration in observing the anniversary and the arrangements are in charge of a committee under the chairmanship of Frank Domenico.

Events for Anniversary

In the achievement report given it is proposed to hold Open House at Kiwanis Centre on Monday, June 14th., the first day of the celebration and this will be followed by a Hobby Show and registration of the visitors. On Tuesday there will be the noon luncheon, a golf tournament in the afternoon and a floor show and stag for the visitors at Kiwanis Centre. On Wednesday, there will be a sports day at Roblin Lake camp and in the evening a Ladies' Night. There will be plenty of fun every minute of the three days and it is expected that many international officers will be in attendance.

Reg. Hinchey, who is chairman of the Musical committee, introduced the two fine artists to the club stating that both had given freely of their time and talents to the Kiwanis Club, especially in the presentation of the 'Pack Up Your Troubles' show annually given by the club. Mrs. Laurenson sang for her opening number "When Sweet Anne Sings" and for an encore "My Hero" from the Chocolate Soldier. Reg Bishop delighted with "Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride" and "Deep River" as an encore. The first named numbers are those that are set for the music festival in Toronto.

Past President Honored

The Lieutenant - Governor, Bruce Lattimer, presented past president Jack White with a certificate of appreciation from Kiwanis International for his work in the club last year. Jack was taken by surprise but thanked the members for the privilege of serving them and hoped for continued success of the organization. Members will serve as canvassers in the Red Cross drive for $8,000 starting on March 8th under the chairmanship of Bill Brown.

Sid Rose informed the members that the local club stood second last month in achievement in the Ontario - Quebec - Maritime district and he hoped that the club would reach the top before the year was completed. Lawrence Kells, chairman of achievement last year, complimented Everett Fairman for his work in the formation of a Key Club, Fred Symons for his work as chairman of the Sports Committee, Bill Doyle in charge of Roblin Lake camp, Leonard Reid for tree planting. He stated the club had 111 active members besides privileged and honorary at the end of the year.

Charlie Cawker gave an account of the activities of the Key Club stating they were forming a part-time employment agency and solicited help from all the members. Frank Creeggan gave an outline of work to raise money as chairman of ways and means, while Dorland Houston told of the Hobby Club and its activities.

Capt. R. Carnegie Celebrates 90th Birthday

Kingston, Feb. 25 (CP)—Member of a family noted for its longevity Capt. Robert H. Carnegie, widely known eastern Ontario retired mariner, celebrated his 90th birthday today, at the home of his son, Capt. Ross Carnegie. Capt. Carnegie spent the greater part of his life sailing ships on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River.

Born on Larue Island, he commanded many ships including the North King, the America, the Missisquoi, the Islander Wanderer, the Newsboy and the Waubic on the old Kingston-Cape Vincent N.Y. ferry run.

NAMED AFTER FATHER

Toronto, Feb. 25 (CP)—Mrs. Marjorie Margesson, widow of a Toronto taxi-driver, murdered last November 11, won a 60-mile-an-hour race against the stork today and gave birth to an eight-pound boy who will be named Ralph, after his father.

The murder of the child's father remains unsolved.

River Moira

City Engineer Mott's opinion that there is little danger of a spring freshet this year causing a flood, is cheering to citizens, especially those who live within reach of flood waters when the river overflows. The fine weather of the past week and more has helped to weaken the ice by melting and by softening the solid mass of ice. Channels are wearing, the engineer points out, in the lower part of the river and the evidences point to a mild passing out of ice in the stream if there are no heavy rains and fairly moderate weather.

The time for the annual break-up is approaching. One of the worst floods occurred on the twelfth of March, a little over two weeks later than the present time. That was in 1936 when continued heavy rains of two days broke up the river and sent the waters over a large area and flooded cellars and basements and ground floors of houses and some stores. That year, however, did not have weather such as has ruled for the past week to weaken the structure of the ice.

In fact damaging floods are rare, though even then they appear too often for the damage and the interruption of the ordinary life of the citizens in the flooded zone.

A Common Enemy

In Britain it is estimated that there are three-and-a-half colds (infections of the upper respiratory tract) annually per head of the population with the result of the loss of forty million man-days of work every year. Recently the common cold Research Institute at the Harvard Hospital, Cocmbe Road, Salisbury, Wiltshire, was inaugurated. It uses human "guinea pigs." Over eighteen hundred people offered services from all parts of the country of which to date 129 have been put through the ten-day tests made of the volunteers who are between the ages of eighteen and forty. No cure was offered and in fact no cure has been found as yet, but research workers have been able to discover some common colds are caused by a virus or a microscopic organism many times smaller than the ordinary bacterium.

The object is to isolate the virus and culture it, to enable bacteriologists to study its habits and collect enough data from which they may be able to formulate a preventive measure.

The common cold has been one of the plagues about which not too much has been known. But science is on its track and nothing can hold out its secrets from the insistence of science to get at the cause and core of such a disease.

Everyone knows what a handicap the common cold is, how it disrupts plans and business. So science with its eagerness for knowledge and in its quest for cures for maladies which distress human beings and add to the burdens of life is on the trail of those elusive diseases which have long held out against investigation. Marvels have been achieved. That the common cold will have to yield its secret in the long run seems inevitable.

Connected with this British effort against the common cold is the aid which the United States sent to Britain in 1940 in the form of a group of workers in field and laboratory to assist the control of epidemics which it was feared would break out due to the conditions of war, but did not occur. More than 100 doctors, nurses and technicians from the United States went to Britain carrying a gift from the U. S. Red Cross in the form of a complete hospital of 22 buildings which had been prefabricated in America. In July 1942 this hospital had been transferred to the American army and became the first general medical laboratory in the European theatre of operations. When war ended Harvard Hospital was devoted to Britain and the Ministry of Health is using it for the study and treatment of communicable diseases as originally planned. It is this hospital that is now put to use for the study of the ordinary cold.

It is a sign of the time's interest in such studies that eighteen hundred persons have offered their help by volunteering to undergo tests which may bring remarkable results for individual and public health.

Such a willingness proves that people have confidence in the advance of medical knowledge and wish to see greater and greater achievements and so offer themselves.

Fire Report

Occupants and owners of dwellings note from Fire Chief Lynch's report for 1947 that alarms for dwellings were more numerous than for any other type of building. That is no doubt natural because in the cooler and colder seasons fires are essential and there are also necessary fires for cooking and washing. There were 94 dwelling fires out of a total of 251 fire calls.

This once again emphasizes the need for every care especially as homes are occupied so much of the time, not like warehouses and stores and business plants which are unoccupied for a good share of the time, although in many plants there are nightwatchmen.

Fires in dwellings bring to light the source of origins. In fact last year chimneys accounted for 38 out of the 94 calls to dwellings. Pipes were the source of 14 alarms. These two facts might well be kept in mind by citizens when cleaning their heating systems. Electric wiring is named in the case of 20 fires and oil burners as the cause of 16 alarms. Eleven of the calls were to manufacturing plants.

Carelessness in smoking is listed as a cause of fire in fourteen cases. Authorities everywhere never fail to urge the danger of the present of glowing ashes, the dropping of a lighted cigarette or butt and the risk of smoking in bed.

The public have a high appreciation of firemen as fighters and rescuers. Last year there were no fewer than twelve instances in which the firemen were called to effect rescue of persons from drowning. That is a branch of service for which the firemen deserve the highest credit.

And there is also a lighter vein in which firemen serve their municipality. That is in rescue of dumb animals. This is a task the firemen go to with alacrity as there is not the sense of deep responsibility in rescuing animals from the river or bay as there is in fighting a fire in a building. But the members of the brigade go to these rescues and do not fail.

The fire protection service of the brigade is appreciated by every citizen who knows that firemen perform well a great duty in a time of great danger.

Winter Pennants

The nature writer of the New York Times has taken a look at the great outdoors in the season when the weather is not cold for the winter season and he sees a great deal that less observant folk would pass over. Here is what he says:

"A sunny, late-winter day when the temperature holds in the twenties is a good time to study pennants. If the snow is deep and sky cloudless there is beauty on the countryside as one looks across fields and meadows to distant dark-green hills. The soft purples, steel blues, deep reds and topaz shades remind one of the colors in the wind-blown sand dunes above the ocean's rim.

"The beauty in the winter pennants is another kind. Theirs is poignant, delicate and in keeping with the ice and snow that lock Earth's breast when the sun's rays are weak and slanting. The sumac's faded cones on scraggly, irregular branches are silhouetted above white-capped stone walls. On upland pastures and around old orchards scrub oaks' brittle leaves hang tenaciously to the stubby twigs. In the sloughs the pin oaks' broad acorns in shallow cups cling to gray-brown branches.

"In fence corners and around upland fieldstone piles winter-bleached goldenrod and silver-frosted milkweed bend submissively. In areas where the wind has swirled much of the snow to drift spots the twisted, fragile stems of June grass and the upright heathery hard-hack write strange hieroglyphics against the white page. At the lower end of the pasture wild-apple trees are marked with snowy dots and the ground below shows that pheasant and partridge have searched for fallen fruit. In the swamp are clans of cattails, their frowsy, wind-torn heads held high on thick, strong stems. Winter's pennants are ragged and faded. They show the wear of wind and snow, sleet and rain. Doggedly they hold to the remnants of last year's beauty until time ticks off the months and the miracle of new life comes again to a winter-weary land."

EXCELLENCE TOO LATE

Too late, when I am homeward bound,
There comes into my head
Some word or two of sense profound
Or wit I could have said.

When I am asked to make a speech,
'Tis tawdry stuff I say.
My best I never seem to reach
Till on the homeward way.

I wonder if through life 'tis so,
Do I go down the years
Missing the chance my best to show
When often it appears?

Shall I, with that last setting sun,
Review my earthly round,
Knowing that more I could have done,
Too late, when homeward bound?

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 25th., 1928

The thermometer registered 8 degrees below zero last night. It was the second coldest night of the year.

On the market today butter sold at 45 cents per pound; eggs 38 cents per dozen and chickens $1.25 each.

Mr. Charles Thompson of Madoc was a visitor in town today.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ross of Toronto were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jose, Murney Street.

Mr. James A. Moore of Queensboro, Reeve of Elzevir township, was in town today.

Mr. Thomas Ingram, Toronto, is renewing acquaintances in town.

30 YEARS AGO

Feb. 25th., 1918

The beautiful spring weather today was very encouraging to all winter-weary people, bringing as it does the promise of an early spring, the disappearance of the fuel shortage and a general let up in the heavy expense of trying to keep warm on quarter ton coal rations. Old Sol is a bully old soul — more power to him.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair left today to attend a meeting of the executive committee in connection with the Provincial Temperance Union.

Mr. John Elliott, manager of the local branch of the Standard Bank, is spending a few days in Hamilton.

The members of the congregation of St. Thomas' Church presented a purse containing the sum of $25.00 in gold to Mr. and Mrs. George Edwards, south John Street, on the occasion of the golden celebration of their wedding on Feb. 23rd. The address which accompanied the presentation was signed by the Rector, the Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, Mr. H. Freeman Ketcheson, the People's Warden and Mr. J. W. Davison, the Rector's Warden. Many friends called at the house to extend congratulations and express good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Edwards.

40 YEARS AGO

Feb. 25th., 1908

One builder in this city has declined to accept additional work for the coming season; he has all he can do from early spring to late in the fall. It looks like a busy season for the building trades.

Men driving teams engaged in drawing ice should stop and pick up the odd cakes of ice which fall from the sleigh. When left upon the roadway, as they generally are, they are a source of danger especially at night. Something should be done to stop the practice.

At a meeting of the city council Ald. Panter informed the members that when the Government engineer was here last week looking over the harbor and the flood conditions, he stated to him that under existing conditions the only relief possible would be obtained by getting an ice breaker from New York and breaking up all the ice in the harbor, thus allowing the water to flow away.

50 YEARS AGO

Feb. 25th., 1898

The Hastings branch of the Licensed Holders' Protective Association, which grew out of the Licensed Vituallers' Association, met here yesterday in the club rooms of the Forest and Stream Club. The election of officers resulted as follows:— President, William Docter, Belleville; First Vice President, E. R. Huyck, Tweed; Second Vice President, Allan Moon, Stirling; Third Vice President, S. Curry, Belleville; Secretary-treasurer, George R. Leavens, Belleville; Executive Committee. — James O'Neil, George McGuire, Charles Kyle, Daniel Coyle, John Mackie, all of Belleville; Albert Moon, Madoc; George German, Marmora; George Stewart, Deseronto.

The Royal Templars of Temperance will hold a parlor social this evening at the residence of Mr. D. J. Fairfield, North William Street. A good program will be presented and refreshments served.

Mr. Charles Henry of Thomasburg, a nephew of ex. Ald. Adam Henry of this city, has left for Manitoba where he will visit relatives for several months.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What was the "Window-Tax War"?

In July, 1798, the Federal Government, anticipating war with France, imposed a direct property tax to be apportioned among and levied and collected by the States. This Federal tax was levied on real estate and slaves.

In Pennsylvania it was called a "window tax" because the assessment on buildings was made on the basis of the number and size of windows. The tax was unpopular and was resisted particularly by many "Pennsylvania Dutch" in eastern Pennsylvania, where a series of riots and uprisings took place in 1799.

These disturbances are sometimes known as the "Hot-Water War" because some of the irate housewives took their stand inside their upper-storey windows and doused the assessors with boiling water when they came with their measuring sticks. Several assessors and collectors were forcefully ejected by mobs with little ceremony.

The authorities countered by arresting about 30 men and lodging them in jail at Bethlehem. The chief instigator of the opposition and the leader of the rioters was John Fries (1800-1818) who had been a captain of militia in the Revolution and who was a popular itinerant auctioneer noted for his wit, gift of gab and homespun philosophy. Wherever Fries went his dog "Whisky" was close at his heels.

With a mob of fifty or sixty armed men Fries pursued the marshal with the arrested men into Bethlehem and forced the release of the prisoners. Five days later President Adams proclaimed a state of insurrection and called out the militia to suppress what became known as the "Fries Rebellion."

A troupe of Federal cavalry and Pennsylvania militia under General MacPherson set out to arrest Fries. When the soldiers approached the place where the auctioneer was in the act of crying a sale, he got wind of it and slipped away and hid in a swamp, but, sad to relate, "Whisky" unwittingly betrayed his master and led the soldiers to his hiding place.

Fries and several others were taken to Philadelphia and tried for treason. After a second trial the ring-leader was sentenced to death, but later on, President Adams pardoned him and issued a general amnesty to all other participants in the uprising.

Liberal Leader Criticizes Drew Over Contracts

Guelph, Feb. 25 — (CP)—Farquhar Oliver, leader of the Liberal opposition in the Ontario legislature, predicted in an address last night that it will be 1950 or 1051 before Ontario obtains any power from the Ottawa River.

"Premier Drew says it is not the Conservatives who have caused the power shortage but the Liberals because they cancelled the Quebec power contracts," he told the South Wellington Liberal Association. "But the power contracts we cancelled carried a price ticket of $15 per horsepower and they were renewed later at $12.50.

"When we suggested the development of power on the upper Ottawa River, the Tories said the contracts were iniquitous and they would have nothing to do with them,". Mr. Oliver said. "From 1943 to 1946 the government took no step to formulate any policy that would relieve the present shortage. It will be 1950 to 1951 before we get any horsepower from the Ottawa River."

EXCHANGE BILL

Passage of the bill came shortly before adjournment and only a brief time was spent on renewed debate of a resolution preliminary to a bill giving effect to the excise taxes announced when the Exchange-Conservation Bill was brought into effect Nov. 17.

At the House opening, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he will table the written record of the royal commission inquiry into Canadian participation in the defence of Hong Kong, with some telegrams paraphrased for security reasons.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said he will place before the cabinet proposals for federal aid in dyking marshlands near the New Brunswick - Nova Scotia border.

Decreases Not Comparable

He also said that decreases in Canadian cattle prices in recent weeks were "nothing comparable" to United States reductions which amounted to as much as $7 to $8 a hundredweight.

In moving the amendment to the Exchange Bill, John Bracken Progressive Conservative leader, said his party wished to see removed from it an amount of protection which was not required.

J. M. Macdonnell (PC-Muskoka-Ontario) said what had been hailed as a step to save American dollars had been clearly shown to be an instrument of control. It gave power to Trade Minister Howe that was so broad that he could tear up orders-in-council. Everything depended on one minister.

Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre) said his party was opposed to the bill because it did not get at the root of the exchange problem.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said his party had always been opposed to such non-discriminatory features as were contained in the legislation. Such non-discrimination simply succeeded in causing discrimination against Canadians.

Wise to Retain Rate

In the farm loan debate, Robert Mayhew, parliamentary secretary said he believed the government would be wise to retain the five per cent interest rate. The three years in which the act had been operating had not been "normal" years and there was no guarantee that the good loan record would continue. He said that because loans were short term the interest barely covered handling costs.

G. Belzile, the junior of Mr. Abbott's assistants, sai dthat at last Dec. 31 some $31,500,000 had been loaned to farmers under the act. The amount repaid was some $15,500,000 — about 49.1 per cent of the total loaned.

Several C.C.F. speakers, while urging that banks be nationalized, asked that farmer credit unions be given the same privileges as chartered banks because they were closest to the farmers.

Mr. Belzile said most credit unions were operated under provincial charter. The government felt it would be wise to limit the provisions of the act to organizations over which it had some measure of jurisdiction.

HISTORY OF THE IODIN RATION

In this column or in the column I released for publication years ago, I said:

Dr. Adoniram J. Quimby of New York finds that hardening of the arteries and the associated features of cardiovascular disease are less frequent among seafaring men, notwithstanding their hard life. He thinks this may be due to their habit of eating sea food. Dr. Quimby suggests that the invigorating effect of sea air may be due to the iodin in it.

(Notice I spelled it iodin even then, when I meant nutritional or food iodin, iodine when I referred to medicinal iodine)

Dr. Quimby regards iodin, as a valueable preventive of premature aging in those who work for years with X-rays.

(Since that time X-ray apparatus has been vastly improved and neither physicians nor G-ray technicians who work with X-rays every day are likely to suffer any of the ill effects the older workers suffered from exposure to the comparatively unscreened rays.)

Dr. Quimby advocates the daily consumption of minute quantities of iodin as a preventive of arterio-sclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and high blood pressure.

He considers such use of iodin distinctly tonic and declares that it increases exuberance of spirit and ambition.

(Had the word "pep" come into use then? Whether or not, it means precisely what Dr. Quimby called exuberance of spirit and ambition.

In his article published in either the New York Medical Journal or the Medical Record probably late in 1922 or early in '23 (the two medical weeklies merged later). Dr. Quimby said he thought that:

Some athletes go stale because their ration lacks sufficient iodin. Regular use of exceedingly minute doses of iodin exert a corrective influence on the circulation, especially when the individual has cold hands and cold feet and a cold skin, be it dry or moist.

Why, it might have been Ol' Doc Brady sounding off. To tell the truth it was from this contribution of Dr. Quimby's that the arrant quack got the idea of the iodin ration. According to Dr. Quimby (and Brady concurs)

A suitable iodin ration will sometimes put the worn or exhausted business man back in condition, even when a vacation is of little value.

Worn and exhausted business man my eye. Well, let it go for the nonce, but it is only fair to give the girls a break too—running a home and a family is at least as wearing and exhausting as any legitimate business is — and you can quote me about that, girls, anywhere and at any time. If your boy friend, husband, boss, hired man, big shot, funny face or whadaka call him needs a nip of iodin you need it too. For that matter, if you ask me, Brady, about it, I always say every member of the family, including the pup, the cat and the canary, needs a daily or weekly ration the year around. That isn't all, not by a long shot. Every chicken, lamb, calf, colt or other bird or animal, domestic or wild, requires a certain amount of iodin to maintain good nutrition, vite, health, vigor. The minimum daily requirement for a human adult is minute but indispensable—one-tenth of a milligram of iodin. For children or animals or birds (I don't know about plants) the daily requirement is more or less in proportion with body weight.

N.H.L. PRESIDENT

"It does not involve Detroit players in any way and our only interest in the reported incident lies in the fact that Tamer was in Detroit when he reportedly was in contact with the players by long distance telephone."

Toy said that according to his information a call came to Tamer here from a Boston player in Chicago reporting that two Bruin players were out of the lineup for a game with Chicago and that "it was very doubtful the Bruins could win."

Used Information

Tamer used that information, Toy said, to place a phone call to a Ranger player in New York, suggesting that he place a bet on Chicago against the Bruins. There is no evidence, the police commissioner continued, that the Ranger player placed the bet.

Actually the game involved was played last Wednesday in Chicago and was won by Boston 4-2.

Toy's statement made no reference to a Detroit Times copyrighted story yesterday which asserted that the police information indicated players made "substantial" bets on games and that one had wagered $550 'against his own team.'

Frank Selke, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, said "it sounds like a lot of baloney to me. I know the Bruins certainly gave everything they had against us."

The N.H.L. constitution, amended after Babe Pratt's expulsion and reinstatement in Toronto two years ago for betting on his own team, now provides that any player found guilty of gambling on league games be expelled summarily without any right to appeal.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The Ontario Intelligencer will be pleased to receive news items regarding Belleville citizens who have guests or are visiting friends elsewhere. Kindly phone 99 or mail information to this office.

Constable J. Ernest Keays, of Niagara Falls, formerly stationed in Belleville, is visiting his wife and family in the city.

Miss Lois Galbraith, Charles St., is a patient in Belleville General Hospital following an appendectomy yesterday.

The bride wore a suit of navy blue with white accessories, and a corsage of red carnations. She carried a white Bible. Her only attendant was Mrs. Orrie Seeley, of Stirling, Ont., wearing a suit of pale blue, with black accessories, and a corsage of red carnations.

Mr. Orrie Seeley of Stirling, Ont., was the groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the restaurant of Mr. Murray Smith, following which Mr. and Mrs. Scott left for a wedding journey to Toronto, and other points in Western Ontario.

After their return they will reside in Stirling.

TAPP—DEMOREST

Madoc. — The United Church parsonage at Madoc, was the setting for a very pretty wedding at three-thirty o'clock on the afternoon of Feb. 21st., when Betty Louise Demorest, daughter of Mr. Egbert Demorest of Madoc, exchanged marriage vows with Irwin Beverley Tapp, D.V.S., son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tapp, of Toronto, with Rev. Alfred Poulter as the officiating clergyman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was becomingly frocked in a street length dress of turquoise blue crepe, with an orchid corsage. Her only attendant was Miss Louise Smale, of Ottawa, wearing a gown of black taffeta with turquoise blue trim and matching accessories. Her corsage was of red roses.

Mr. Presley Nickle, of Madoc, ably supported the groom.

For travelling to Toronto and other western cities the bride chose a navy blue suit, with matching accessories, and a topcoat of grey.

After their return Dr. and Mrs. Tapp will reside in Chesterville, Ont.

Mrs. Eric Johnston Presented With Gift By Colleagues

Much regret was expressed by the members of the Ontario Intelligencer staff recently, when it was learned that Mrs. Eric Johnston, of Rossmore, was severing her connection with the paper.

As a small token of the esteem in which Mrs. Johnston is held by her colleagues, members of the staff gathered in a body, prior to her departure, and City Editor C.D. Tice, read an address of appreciation, while Mrs. E. Lee presented Mrs. Johnston with a gift, for which she graciously voiced her thanks, saying she had always enjoyed the pleasant associations with other members of the staff.

Medieval Splendor Features Wedding Of Busch Heiress

By THOMAS A. REEDY

Starnberg, Germany, Feb. 25.—(AP)—Amid medieval splendor shined up somewhat by American dollars, beer heiress Wilhelmina Busch was married to Sam Woods, United States consul, in Munich. She is 64, he is 52.

The ceremonies—there were two—took place in the strictest privacy on the centuries-old estate Miss Busch bought years ago and stocked with treasures from all over the world.

The public was barred by eight German policemen guarding the Bernried-Hoehenried castle.

Only castle attendants witnessed the civil ceremony performed in the morning. Later in the day a double ring ceremony was conducted by Capt. Roy E. Jones, chaplain of the Second Constabulary Brigade of the United States occupation forces.

The red-haired daughter of Adolphus Busch, St. Louis brewer, was dressed simply, but wore a diamond tiara.

The "public" ceremony was held in a thousand-year-old chapel imported by Miss Busch, stone by stone.

Among the handful of guests were Murray D. Van Wagoner, military governor of Bavaria, and Brig. Gen. Edmund B. Sebree, commander of the Second Constabulary Brigade.

The guest list also included Admiral Nicholas Horthy, former regent of Hungary, who lives at nearby Weilheim, and Prince Albrecht, heir pretender to the Bavarian throne.

The couple plan to fly to Zurich, Switzerland, tomorrow, and then to the United States.

It was in Zurich that they first met. Miss Busch fled there when the Nazis harassed her and eventually turned her castle and estate into a Nazi sanatorium.

Born in the Midwest, Miss Busch came to Germany many years ago and married Edward Scharrer of Munich. After he died, she was wedded to a young doctor in Garmisch and then was divorced. She retained her American citizenship through the years. Because of this the Nazis seized much of her property. The property has been restored to her since the war.

Whether the couple will return to the treasure-laden house to live was not disclosed.

The castle is replete with Louis XVI furniture, priceless Ming vases, Baroque and other collectors' items. Paintings alone are worth a huge fortune.

PRINCE EDWARD-BELLEVILLE WOMEN'S CLUB

The annual meeting of the Prince Edward-Belleville Women's Club was held recently in parlor of the Young Men's Christian Association with President, Mrs. M. B. Weese opening the meeting and conducting the business.

Letters of appreciation were read from sick members. Mrs. Earle and Mrs. Wardner reported from the Hospital Auxiliary meeting, and officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. M. B. Weese; President, Mrs. G. F. Lent, 1st Vice President, Mrs. J. Barber; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. N. Montgomery; Secretary, Mrs. P. Parliament; Treasurer, Mrs. L. Wannamaker; Social Committee, Mrs. J. Boyd and Mrs. C. Earle; Program Committee, Mrs. W. Osborne, Mrs. C. Ackerman; Work Committee, Mrs. S. Anderson, Mrs. J. Weese; Representatives to Hospital Auxiliary, Mrs. C. Earle, Mrs. J. Wardner; Pianists, Miss C. Anderson, Mrs. M. Rorabeck; Press Sec., Mrs. G. Gorsline.

A program, in charge of Mrs. Ackerman, opened with community singing. Readings were given by Mesdames Wardner, Larue and McCoy. Mrs. Wannamaker conducted a contest, with Mrs. Montgomery receiving the prize. Mrs. Barber and Mrs. Gorsline were remembered with birthday gifts.

The highlight of the afternoon was the cutting of a birthday cake in celebration of the fifth birthday of the club organized in 1943. The cake was beautifully decorated and held five lighted candles, which were blown out by Mrs. Barber, while Mrs. Lent cut the cake, after which dainty refreshments were served by Mesdames Weese, Anderson, Cory, Lent and Gorsline.

London Styles Are Set To Bolster Overseas Trade

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, —(CP)— Heedless of austerity restrictions that tend to keep their models off the home market, London designers went all out for the "new look" in their spring shows, sloping shoulders, nipping waists and accentuating hips and stomachs.

Pleating, both pressed and unpressed, gathering and bustle effects were used liberally to create the desired silhouettes. In this respect, short-jacketed suits with full skirts and all-round box pleating, caught only by the waist-band, were very popular. The length of suits and woollen dresses ranged from 10 to 14 inches from the ground.

Boleros, capes and jackets were popular. Jaeger's "batwing jacket" in check was shorter in front than behind, starting just below the bustline and falling in a natural curve to a low waistline. The sleeve, starting from the waist narrowed to an ordinary wrist width. It was pleated at the shoulder, a design repeated in some of the full-swing swagger coats, giving a roomy jaunty look.

Many coat designers favored the "Arab tent" look but others, such as Arthur Creed, used straighter, pleated lines so that the garment could be worn loose or belted. Dressy coats were tight-bodiced with full and pleated skirts.

Digby Morton used a new flat, flounced effect in pleated skirts, by horizontal tucking before pleating. This gave the desired silhouette without unnecessary fullness. With some of his suits he used a jumper with neck cut low all round and turnover collar.

Victor Stiebel's dresses had tightly fitted bodices, buttoning to the neck or arranged in folds round a deep decollete. He introduced the washerwoman skirt, this being a double skirt with top folded in front and tucked kirtle-wise into the waist.

Artist-Inspired

Molyneux favored the "Renoir" silhouette—tight-fitting bodice, buttoned down the front, and rounded neck-line with frilled lingerie.

Hartnell stressed tent-like overcoats, bell-sleeves and pumpkin skirts. This skirt is made detachable and can be worn round the shoulders in cape effect leaving a straight, plain skirt.

Charles Creed in his tweed suits used two innovations. With straight-skirts, knife-pleated at the back only, he cut away the centre back-jacket from the waist. Another suit had a rolled collar to the waist and double-breasted buttoning from the waist to foot of jacket.

In afternoon two-pieces the long three-quarter length jacket effect was popular, either straight with hip padding or fluted in apron effect. These often had bobble triming on the yoke, neck or skirt and jacket hems.

Occasionally wide petersham or satin trimmings were used in the same way with large bows at waist, hip or back of the jacket, sometimes also on the skirt.

Notable in some of the younger styles were the white pique schoolgirl or Quaker collars. In these the pleating or fluting was often started from the hips instead of the waist and boleros were used equally with jackets.

How a Young Hostess "Seconds" Invitation to Boy She Doesn't Know

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For a party I am giving in a few weeks I would like to follow your suggestion about writing to the boys invited by some of the girls, "seconding" the girls' invitations. Will you please give me a sample form for this invitation? (I am 15 years old, and this is my first party.)

Rita

Gladly, and I'm delighted that you are following this polite procedure as to the invitations. Your note may read something like this:

Dear Phil Allen,

Joan Forbes has told me that she has invited you to come with her to my party . . . and this is to second her invitation and to tell you how happy Mother and I are that you can come. As you know, the party is on Friday, March 12th, at eight o'clock.

Mother joins me in sending you welcome.

Sincerely,
Rita Bradford.

Procedure When There are Three Bridesmaids, Maid of Honor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am in a quandary about my bridal attendants. The other day in your column I read your suggestion that it is always better to have an even number of bridesmaids so that they may walk in pairs, always in the processional and, in the well-planned wedding, in the recessional also. But I am especially anxious to have as bridesmaids, (besides my only sister as my maid of honor), the three girls who have been my dearest friends from early childhood. In other words, I want these three and no other bridesmaids. What would you advise?

Thea

By all means have only these three girls as your bridesmaids, just as you have always wanted them . . . have them dressed exactly alike and walk single file, following the ushers (in pairs) and followed by the maid of honor, alone. This processional plan can be very effective. And I suggest this procedure, too, for the recessional: first, you and your bridegroom; next, the maid of honor, either alone or with the best man; the bridesmaids, single file; and last, the ushers, in pairs.

Courteous to Thank for Wedding Telegrams of Good Wishes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When we were married several weeks ago we received several charming telegrams of congratulations and best wishes. Is it necessary now that we are back from our wedding trip, that these be acknowledged?

Helen

Yes, it is necessary . . . IF you wish to be considered courteous and appreciative, as I am sure you do. One or two sentences will be ample to show your politeness:

Dear Mary:

How delightfully like you to send us such kind and warm-hearted words of good wishes on our wedding day! We both thank you for your dear thought, which so delightfully added to our happiness.

Love from us both . . . and we hope to see you soon.

Affectionately,
Helen

Woman Guest at the Right of Her Host

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother has invited me to go with him to a large banquet to be given in the ballroom of a hotel by an organization to which he belongs . . . each man may invite one woman guest. He and I would like to know if, at the dinner, the woman guest is to sit at the right or the left of the man who is her host?

Sally.

The woman guest sits at the right of her host . . . this is the "place of honor."

Fashion Flashes

SUN TONES favored at southern resorts include a great deal of purple in various shades, yellow, pink and plenty of beige. A frock of silver-grey silk crepe, printed in an all - over scroll, ribbon and mask design in various shades of purple, is worn with a full-length coat of sand-colored linen.

VERY HIGH STYLE shortie coats are ready for Spring. Camel hair is used for a very handsome coat which is flared from sides to back. A seamed tuck across the soft shoulder continues in a slanting panel on either side and squares off into a slanting pocket. Gold buttons on either panel for double-breasted closing. Deep collar with rounded revers.

NEVER were Spring straws so pretty and feminine as they are this year. Wheat - colored peanut straw is used for an attractive, shallow Breton with the brim wide at the sides. Black velvet for brim piping and for crown band, with golden to red silk poppies and black velvet leaves massed in a big cluster at the centre-side.

THE COLOR PICTURE is bright by day and night. A beautiful gown, made with slim, corseletted bodice and full, flaring skirt, is of yellow silk net embroidered all over in a delicate scroll and flower garland design in tiny golden sequins.

NO MATTER what your suit fancy may be, you are pretty sure to approximate it when you see the new Spring merchandise. For those who would woo something different, there is a handsome suit that has a molded, bodice - type jacket in hand-loomed wool plaid in four shades of amber — from golden brown to amber yellow. The long - tabbed packet collar and pointed, turn-back cuffs are of the darkest brown shade, as is the softly pleated full skirt.

PLENTY of gray for Spring Gray woolen is used for an attractive suit. The skirt has front folds; the bolero jacket meets at a point at the bustline. Red cummerbund; white pique blouse.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Isn't Marriage Itself More Important Than a Formal Wedding?

In these days of housing shortages and high prices everywhere, young people considering marriage are faced with some serious problems. So serious, in fact, that it is no wonder many hesitate to take such a step at all.

A 20-year-old girl, engaged to a chap 21, writes to tell me that she and her fiance want to be married in June, but that they are being discouraged by her mother, who keeps telling them they haven't got enough money and no place to live, and who cites gloomy instances of marriages that have turned out badly because of such things.

"We have money in the bank," this girl writes, "but need more to start our marriage off. We don't intend to set up housekeeping, and my mother has offered us a little place until we get settled. We save every week, but it doesn't accumulate very fast.

"Tell me, is it up to the bride's family to give the reception? And just what expense does a bride have? Does she pay for the bridesmaids' flowers, the wedding cake, and so on?"

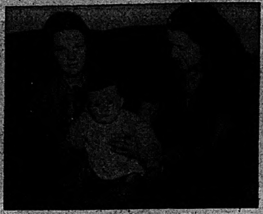
Now if this young couple has, as it appears they do, the foresight to save regularly, even though it doesn't pile up fast, it would seem to indicate that they have good sense and want to plan wisely. If this is so, then I see no reason why they should not carry out their plan for a June wedding and prove that they can swing their married life successfully.

Naturally, they would have to plan very wisely, and probably the girl should work for a while after marriage until her husband can manage to take care of things himself. If her mother is willing to provide a temporary place to live, that should give them a chance to get on their feet.

It would seem to me very foolish, however, under all the circumstances, for this girl to try to stage a formal wedding with bridesmaids and an elaborate, reception and all the rest of it. It is, of course, the bride's family that has by far the larger financial responsibility for such an affair, and all the things the girl mentions would be paid for by them.

But why should she bother to do things on such a scale if their finances are limited? Why not have a simple wedding, without bridal attendants or a fancy reception, with just the two families there and perhaps a few intimate friends? It certainly isn't going to affect the marriage one way or the other whether she has a large wedding or a small one.

What I think this girl needs to decide is, which is more important to her — getting married and starting life with the man she loves — or an elaborate wedding. And I wouldn't think this would be hard to decide.



No teen-agers are employed by Mrs. Jack Books, who has started Sault Ste. Marie's first baby-sitters service. "Older women are more reliable," says Mrs. Books, pictured showing her daughter Donna how to hold baby brother Leslie.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Toeing to the good-looks mark.

Women are usually proud of their feet. Few have reason to be. Oh, yes, the feet look pretty enough when arrayed in smart leather cases. But how about the time when shoes and stockings are removed? Feminine feet have been abused for ages, in all manner of ways. Chiropodists regretfully report that ninety per cent of the sisters have feet that are either deformed or afflicted with corns, callouses, bunions or ingrowing toes.

Well, you will insist upon stumping around on spiked heels. You pay no heed when the shoe clerk takes measurements, tells you that you need a size wider. You're stubborn, that is, if you are no longer young. The teen-agers have more sense. Big shoes don't bother them. They aren't going to make themselves miserable because their shoes are too full of feet.

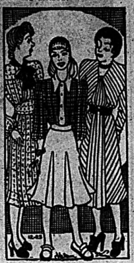
Today's lesson has to do with toes. They play a more important part in our lives than we realize. The great toe performs an important function. When you raise your foot from the ground to bring it forward when walking, you usually raise the heel and let the weight fall on the big toe. To execute this movement the shoe should be wide enough so that the toe can stretch itself directly forward. If the big toe is forced to one side, it cannot function normally. Take a look at your big toe. What have you done to it?

There are women who, because of vanity, wear shoes so small and narrow that the big toe is forced inward, crowding the second toe to such an extent that the distressing "hammer toe" results. This requires a surgical operation for relief.

As soon as the axis of the big toe is bent there is a bulging of the joint. This can cause extreme pain. The natural elasticity of this step departs, and the victim hobbles along in an ungraceful manner. The body balance is thrown out of alignment.

When these conditions exist, the little toe suffers as well. It also is pushed against its neighbor with the result that the nail becomes deformed.

When purchasing shoes, don't consider appearence only. Make an effort to find an intelligent salesman who will measure your foot carefully and, when the new shoe is on, will show you the position of your toes as revealed by the X-ray. There must be plenty of space in your shoes, and they must provide support. You must keep in mind the fact that if the motion of the foot is limited, the mechanics of the foot are altered.



Teen-agers don't wear small shoes.

It is also known that many Indians babies are smuggled into the Union for payments ranging up to £500 ($2,000).

Hundreds of Indian men and women have been returning to Africa not only with their own infants, but with those of Indian merchants who desire that their children be brought up in Africa where life offers much more than it does in India.

Immigration officials became suspicious because South African Indians have been going to India frequently for holidays and have returned with infants. An official aboard the liner Kampala, docked in Durban from India recently with 370 South African Indians returning home to the Union said: "The racket has been going on in East Africa for some time. We believe that it is also widespread among Indians returning to the Union."

Commenting on this an immigration official said: "It is difficult to stop South African-born Indians from bringing babies into South Africa so long as they claim parentage and produce the necessary birth certificates. On arrival here the thumb prints of the babies are taken and these are later checked with the birth certificates and the thumb prints in India."

The official added: "It is a fact that large numbers of Indians return to this country with babies born in India, but what are we to do unless a blood test is carried out!"

Dogs Attack Flock of Sheep, Nine Are Killed

Picton (Special)— Attacked by dogs, a flock of sheep owned by Bernard Bond of Athol township was chased over an area of one hundred acres, nine were killed; three are still missing and six others were badly bitten about the throat. The animals were kept in a field near the barn and during the day were let out to feed in other fields. When they did not return to the barn at night as was their custom, Mr. Bond investigated and discovered the damage. Some of the animals had been chased more than a mile and lay torn and exhausted. Very little of the sheep killed had been eaten, but their throats were ripped and hind quarters torn. The dogs were not seen in the act.

During the past several months many flocks of sheep in Athol have been attacked by stray dogs but this is the most serious attack to date. As a result, farmers with sheep are keeping guns handy and are on the alert for possible attacks.

London Letter:

Fur Buyers Aver Normal Time to Trade Has Returned

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 26 (CP)—On Garlick Hill, which survives on the verge of bomb-swept ruins about St. Paul's Cathedral, fur-buyers chat in half-a-dozen languages and aver that normal times have returned.

These buyers with strange accents and a liking for street-corner negotiations in the shelter of Beaver Hall, are the liaison between the trappers of Arctic Canada and the salons of fashion kings.

During the war they disappeared from this corner of London where Hudson's Bay Company furs have come for nearly 300 years. Now they are back, with news that Italians still like nothing better than Canadian lynx for a coat trim, the Belgians and French want skunk and racoon and all the world wants white fox, ermine and mink.

Then there's beaver, the foundation of the ancient fur trade that sent advance trade ships to Charlton Island, Moose Factory and Churchill in advance of the bravest explorers and naval vessels.

Still Wants Beaver

"The world still wants beaver—prices at the January sale ranged from £3 12 6d. ($14.50 to £24 15s. ($99)," a fur expert said.

"They first wanted beaver for hats. Now it's quite possible that with taxes and all other charges a beaver fur hat of modern design would cost £40—and that's too much for most people."

So beaver goes into coats.

The fur sales resumed in 1946 with prices high. Uncertainties prevailed in 1947 with many buyers still absent.

But in February this year, at the H.B.C. winter auction, the company reported an attendance larger than usual "for in addition to the visitors from the United States, Canada and South America, we welcomed the largest contingent of European buyers seen in London for many years."

Prices showed substantial advances over the October general auction with keen demand for most offerings.

Former Minister Injects New Issue Into Discussion

Ottawa, Feb. 25. (CP)—A new issue—whether Canadian troops should be commanded by non-Canadian officers—was injected into the Hong King controversy yesterday by one of the men primarily responsible for sending the Canadian regiments to help in the ill-fated defence of the British Colony in 1941.

Former Air Minister C. G. Power, whose son was taken prisoner when Hong Kong fell to the Japanese, raised the question in the Commons when Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced the government's decision on tabling documents relating to Hong Kong.

Mr. King agreed—at Mr. Power's request—to renew representations to the British government with a view to obtaining permission for publication of all relevant documents.

The Prime Minister announced that evidence taken by the Royal Commission on Hong Kong will be tabled in the House, with certain sections paraphrased to help preserve still-secret wartime codes. He added that a letter written in 1942 by Premier Drew of Ontario—taking issue with the Commission findings—will not be tabled.

The 2,017 Canadians who fought at Hong Kong were members of the Royal Rifles of Canada and the Winnipeg Grenadiers. All were killed or taken prisoner when the Island colony was conquered on Christmas Day, 1941.

Mr. Power said he is "one of those primarily responsible for the recommendation that the Hong Kong force be dispatched and for its organization". Under those circumstances, he could do nothing but ask Mr. King "to request the British government to review its decision and have it produce every available bit of evidence.

"I will be most unhappy if every dispatch, every report and every item of evidence is not laid before the people of Canada. . . ."

Mr. King's announcement was in reply to a motion by John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, that the Royal Commission evidence be tabled and to requests by Mr. Bracken that the Drew letter be made public.

Mr. Bracken said after the announcement was made that, "in connection with this whole Hong Kong affair, I do not suppose there was any other case in World War II where untrained and unarmed men were sent into battle." Canada was entitled to know who was responsible.

by leading Canadian writers

The case of the 7 strangers

by CLAIRE WALLACE

There is a man in Canada who has the blood of seven total strangers in his veins. Maybe you wince at that idea. He doesn't. Without it, he would be dead.

Two years ago he was seriously injured in a crash. He received desperate head injuries, and a delicate operation was imperative. But shock and loss of blood had so weakened him that he couldn't have survived one. If . . . seven strangers had not stepped in.

They were Canadian men and women who had each given a blood donation to the Canadian Red Cross National Blood Transfusion Service. When the doctors called for blood to save the life of the accident victim, it was the blood of those seven which pulled him through.

"Were you one of them?"

Today, he is a healthy, happy, useful citizen of Victoria, British Columbia. The only thing that marks him as different from the average man is a rather searching look that sometimes comes into his eyes as he walks along the street. For he often thinks of the seven who saved his life and wonders who they are. As he looks into a stranger's face, he silently asks: "Were you one of them? If so, I thank you from my heart."

Similarly, the mother who gave birth to twins and would have died except for blood transfusions . . . the baby so anaemic at birth he could be kept alive only by donated blood . . . the maimed . . . the sick . . . the old—all those who owe their lives to blood transfusions say: "Thanks, unknown friend."

Free blood for Canadian hospitals

The Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service plans, as soon as possible, to extend whole blood and plasma free to all patients needing it, in hospitals right across Canada. Already two provinces—British Columbia and Alberta—provide this life-saving service. Last year, Alberta and British Columbia distributed 21,044 bottles of whole blood and 2,364 bottles of plasma, resulting in the saving of many lives.

Remember this, as the Canadian Red Cross appeals to you now for funds. Your money is essential to the Blood Transfusion Service and other phases of Red Cross work. Give generously. A life may depend upon your donation.

Red Cross Services include: Blood Transfusion, Outpost Hospitals, Aid to Sick and Disabled Veterans, Treatment for Crippled Children, Disaster Relief, Nutrition Services, Home Nursing Courses, Swimming and Water Safety, etc.

Old Masters Not the Same When Cleaned

By GLENN WILLIAMS

London, —(AP)— Art experts at Britain's National Gallery, cleaning up 75 of their old masters, have discovered that "The Drunken Silenus," attributed for nearly three centuries to Peter Paul Rubens, apparently is only a "workshop" piece in which Rubens had little, if any, part.

Under the layered skins of blackened varnish they found other shocks, too.

The whole figure of kneeling visionary, for example, was painted out in the foreground of Francisco Ribalta's picture of "Christ Bearing the Cross."

Philip Hendey, gallery director, said "the whole character of the picture had been further altered by a deep-toned varnish."

Some other "improver" of the masters was found to have painted some trees into one of Ruben's famous canvases, "The Judgment of Paris." The trees were removed, revealing the sunlit far horizon Rubens painted.

Probably to meet some obscure demand for modesty, another retoucher covered the abdomen of Silenus with a flowing robe.

The experts now attribute most of the work on Silenus to Van Dyck because of the similarity in style and color with that known to be his during the early period when he worked in Rubens' studio. They said, "the sky and landscape seem to be merely workshop painting such as to be found in many kinds of pictures from Rubens' workshop."

Feared Critics

Exhibition of the change was expected to start a row with art critics, who twice previously had spoken sharply during the 10 years' time the cleaning has been in progress.

So, before the refurbished works were put on show, officials carefully built their defences. But the critics received the cleaning kindly.

The London Times even suggested more pictures be cleaned to remove "the false impression of the character of old masters which the present condition of many of the nation's pictures must encourage."

The tradition of good painting is not so secure in England that we can afford to have the main source of it contaminated by removable dirt," it added.

The learned Manchester Guardian was equally approving.

As guidance to their approval they had "before" and "after" photographs of the great paintings, views of some paintings left half-dirty and half-cleaned, plus a detailed explanation of the careful, scientific methods used in the job.

The clean and dirty squares on the partly-cleaned paintings contrasted sharply. Blues and greens particularly were brilliant when cleaned; in the dirty patches they were smoky, almost black.

The extensive job of cleaning the old masters, which has been going on for 10 years, has been confined to early purchases by the gallery—paintings that were dirty when bought. Nowdays, however, new acquisitions are cleaned as they are bought and put on view only after rehabilitation.

Merchants Midgets Defeat Peterborough Rotary 8-3 In Fourth Round "B" Playdowns

Belleville's Merchant Midgets riding high on the crest of an unbroken string of victories notched their fifth straight playoff win in Omemee last night when they defeated the Peterborough Rotary Midgets in the first game of their goals-to-count series in the fourth round of the O. M. H. A. Midget "B" playdowns. The score was 8-3.

The teams clash in the second game of the round in Memorial Arena here on Thursday night with the Merchants holding a five-goal lead over their huskier, heavier youthful opponents from the Liftlock City. If they defeat the Petes on the round they will likely meet the Collingwood team in the Ontario semi-finals, and if they get by the ship-builder kids, they will tangle with either Waterloo or Sarnia for the Ontario title.

Spotting their opponents plenty of poundage, the lighter speedier Merchants' front lines sped away to a three-goal lead in the first period, the score being 4-1 when the whistle ended the heat. They outscored the Petes two to one in the second period going into the final session with the score 6-2. They fired home two more in the final heat with the Petes scoring their lone goal of the period with seconds to go.

Full Value for Win

The Barriage - Strahan crew were full value for their win and appear to be improving with every game. They uncorked terrific bursts of speed and their passing plays worked very nicely. Pat Gilmour streamlined the Merchants' attack with three goals with Harry Brown notching a pair and getting an assist. Bill Strahan, Buck Milligan and Roy Carey got the other three Merchant markers.

Gilmour, Brown and Strahan were the best line on the ice, and they opened the eyes of the Omemee and Peterborough fans with their speed, passing and general effectiveness. Carey and Barrett also stood out, in fact the entire team played heads up hockey with Green and Milligan on the defence and Barclay in goal turning in stellar efforts.

Merchants raced to the attack at the opening whistle and two minutes of play had gone when Pat Gilmour swept in close to take Strahan's pass for the first goal. Strahan made it two 20 seconds later when he banged in a hard shot, but Robinson and Telford combined to give the Petes their first score. Brown, taking "Pee-Wee" Jones' neat pass got that one back at the 18-minute mark and that was the way the period ended.

Four Goals up

Brown put the Merchants four goals in the lead midway thru the third-period but a hard-fighting Petes team clicked with a marker two minutes later to cut the score by one goal. It was shortlived however and Milligan on a neat solo effort fired home the rubber to end the period with the score at 6-2.

The third period was only 45 seconds old when Gilmour got his "hat-trick" from Milligan's pass. The teams battled hard until the sixteen-minute mark when Carey banged home Barrett's pass to make the score 8-2.

The Petes fought back desperately in an effort to whittle down the lead and they finally clicked with a minute to go when Robinson took Goody's pass to beat Barclay.

Robinson, Telford, Goody were the pick of the Petes' kids.

The teams:—

Peterborough Rotary: goal, Pattey; defence, Bigfoed, Ferguson; centre, Jensen; wings, Jones Douglas; subs, Robinson, D. Ferguson, Gandy, Shearer, Goody, Telford.

"Y" Basketball House League Resumes Play

House league basketball is back in full swing again at the Y.M.C.A. after a month's layoff. A double header took place last night in the first game Pappas' Billiards defeated the Bullets 48-35. In the second game the "Y" Knickerbockers downed the Judeans 42-34.

The boys from the pool hall took an early lead and were never headed as they went on to win over the Bullets. The Bullets have now dropped two in a row being beaten last week by the Knickerbockers 26-17. At half time Pappas' led 20-15, then Watkin ran wild and potted six baskets for 12 points. Altogether he had 18 to lead his team, while Galbraith was next with 10. For the Bullets, Lloyd Faulkner fought a losing cause getting 15 points.

The second game was rough and tough all the way through and saw 23 fouls handed out. The Judeans, like the Bullets, have yet to win a game as the Hi-Y club beat them last week 46-32. However last night they fought hard, in fact a little too hard as they were guilty of 16 personal fouls. Half time score saw the winners ahead by 28-22. For the Knicks, Rose and Ketcheson each had nine to pace their team, while Burke with 16 points was best for the losers.

Next Tuesday night the Hi-Y take on Pappas' Billiards in the first game and in the nightcap the Judeans tangle with the Bullets. The first game should be one for the books as these two teams are rated the strongest in the league.

A special event in basketball is being held this Friday evening when a exhibition double header takes place in the "Y" gym. In the first game at 7.30, the Trenton R.C.A.F. Flyers clash with the "Y" Seniors. The Flyers are currently leading the Intermediate race in this district and it should be a must for those who like good basketball. In the feature attraction the Peterborough Towne Togs pay a return visit here as they meet the senior girls of the "Y". In their last encounter, a week ago Friday in Peterborough, the Towne Togs handed out a defeat to the locals by beating them 34-22 and the homesters will be trying hard to turn the tables on their own floor.

First Game.

Pappas Billiards: Watkin 18, Galbraith 10, Miller 7, Pappas 9, Wright 2, Garrow 2. Total 48.

Bullets: Faulkner 15, Lepore 4, Morris 4, Scrymgeour 2, Cameron, Kelly 2, Saunders 8.—Total 35.

Second Game.

Sang Hymns With Caruso in Open Air

Toronto, Feb. 24—(CP)— The occasion when her voice blended with Caruso's world-famous tenor is still a fresh memory to Mrs. Brigadier Smith, retired Salvation Army officer.

Today while the world remembers the peerless tenor and the 75th anniversary of his birth in Naples the Toronto woman recalls personal memories of "a great man."

In 1907—early days for the Salvation Army in Canada—Mrs. Smith and the late Mr. Smith, both probationary captains, marched down the main street of Cobourg, Ont., to hold a Sunday afternoon open-air meeting in front of a fashionable hotel.

Her Army bonnet, the Blood-and- Fire flag she held, and the cornet her husband carried contrasted sharply with the American tourists lounging on the hotel verandah.

After the Smiths had sung and prayed, a man stepped down from the hotel verandah and asked the Salvationists if he could join them in hymns.

A Hushed Crowd

Asked what he would like to sing, the stranger replied: "Lead Kindly Light."

They began, and as the tenor's vibrant tones filled the air, a reverent hush fell over the holiday crowd until the hymn was finished,

The listeners applauded until the singer had returned to the verandah, then urged him to rejoin the Salvation Army meeting. Captain and Mrs. Smith joined him in "Abide With me." Again the crowd strained toward the music as the unusual trio sang Henry Francis Lyte's immortal hymn.

Mrs. Smith went around with her tambourine to take up a collection which filled it to overflowing. It was the largest collection ever received by the couple—in fact few open—air meetings at that time brought any funds.

Not until after the meeting did Mrs. Smith learn from Madame Albertini, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel and herself a well-known opera singer, that the Salvationists had sung with Enrico Caruso, renowned tenor of the Metropolitan Opera.

It was this incident which enabled the Salvation Army in Cobourg to grow and enlarge its services to the community. Mrs. Smith remembers Caruso as "a perfect gentlemen—a wonderful singer sent to us by God to honor our endeavors."

Agar Collectors Make Easy Money In New Zealand

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

Hastings, N. Z. —(CP)— A new type of South Seas beachcomber is spring up along the northern coast of New Zealand. He is a far cry from the picturesque figure of romance and is equipped with a jeep and Bren gun carrier to assist in his activities.

These new beachcombers collect agar, a type of seaweed of great value in science and industry, which before the war was supplied mostly from Japan. New Zealand agar now is much in demand as a culture medium in preparing penicillin and as a base for many bacterial cultures. It is also used as a base for many cosmetics and from it is prepared the jelly used in canned meat products.

New Zealand's agar collectors receive $358 a ton for the dried seaweed. Some earn $65 a week, more than double the pay of skilled tradesmen in New Zealand.

The collectors have their own stretches of beach and limits are scruptuously observed by tacit agreement. Some of them have a 10-mile beat which they cover twice daily after the tide has receeded.

There are two types of agar, both dark wine red. When spread out in the water they are feathery and fernlike. Agar grows off the coasts only on areas where there is a lime foundation. Best yields are after a storm when banks of seaweed two feet thick are often found and a ton may be collected within a hundred yards.

Search Other Areas

The collectors wash the agar in fresh water and dry it on frames before taking it to the depots operated by the internal marketing department. It is boiled, strained, and the resulting jelly purified by freezing. This is then dried to flakes or a powder for commercial distribution. The demand still far exceeds the supply and new stretches of coast are being investigated with a view to encouraging other collectors to begin operations.

Another new industry which is drawing a rich harvest from the sea off the northern coasts of New Zealand is shark fishing. Until a few years ago sharks were the most unwelcome fish caught by fishermen. Now, many of them seek nothing else.

A local manufacturer has found overseas markets for shark liver oil, which is seven time richer in vitamin A than cod liver oil, in such quantities that he cannot meet the demand. Depots have been established in nearly every fishing centre in the country.

Rewards to the fishermen vary greatly according to the weather. At times in far north a boat can earn over $150 a day. In the season and with favorable winds, school sharks swim into the warm harbors to breed and at times a line with 150 hooks can be hauled in hour after hour with a 6-foot shark almost on every hook. On a bad day there might be only half a dozen on the line.

School sharks are sought. Only the livers which weigh from four to eight pounds and the fins are saved. There is a ready market for the fins to local Chinese who use them for shark fin soup. So far there is no market for the skins which are considered the most valuable part of the fish in the United States.

Barons Within One Point Of First Position

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland's red hot Barons drew within one point of first place in the American Hockey League's western circuit last night and at the same time stretched their unbeaten string to 14 games.

The Barons shut out the league leading Pittsburgh Hornets 6-0 in Cleveland. Barons have dropped only one game in their last 22.

Cleveland scored twice in each period with Bob Solinger the team's prize left wing rookie bagging two goals. Bob Carse, Fred Thurier, Church Russell and Johnny Holota each scored one.

Meanwhile the tail-end Washington Lions dumped the defending champion Hershey Bears 8-7 in a wild and roughly played contest in Washington.

Winfield Mousseau led the Lions with a brace of tallies while one each went to Dan Porteus, Frank Porteus, Johnnie Carr-Harris, Frank Lovett, Tom Wilson and Hayes. Armand Gaudreault paced the Hershey attack with a three-goal performance while Pentti Lund, Mark Marquess, Frank Mario and Gordie Bruce netted the puck once each.

At St. Louis Flyers, battled Springfield Indians to a 3-3 stalemate. Flyers took a 3-0 lead on goals by Ronald Wilson, Eddie Olson and Paul Gladu but Indians came back strong to knot the count. Alan Kuntz scored twice while Andy Summerhill bagged one goal.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

All is not cold that looks easy. Many a bridge contract takes hot planning to fit odd circumstances. Try one on for size. This one:

NORTH
♠Q 10 6
♥Q 7 5 4
♦10 7 3
♣Q J 5

WEST	EAST
♠8 3 2	♠9 7
♥10 6 2	♥A J 8

♣K 3	♣8 7 2

SOUTH
♠A K J 5 4
♥K 9 3
♦None
♣A 10 9 6 4

Bidding goes like this:

South	North
1 S	2 S
2 C	3 S
4 S	Pass

This is simple routine bidding that you understand. But the play may hit a lost chord. After diamond king opening lead by west, a fast south with a slow discovery could wind up in the doghouse.

One quickie at dummy makes him think the needed ten tricks are in the bag. Even if a club finesse loses he can see four clubs, five diamonds, one heart. Oh, yea? So he thinks.

When his south hand ruffs the first diamond he may pull three trump rounds. When the club finesse loses, a diamond comes back. It takes out his last trump. Now where is he?

He still needs a heart trick. Before he gets it, opponents grab heart ace and three diamonds. With their club king the contract dies a horrible death. It is the careless way of losing.

You could plan it differently. Ruff the first diamond and take only two trump rounds. The club finesse fails. Ruff a diamond return in south. Continue clubs until west ruffs with his third trump.

Ruff the third diamond in south. Flop two dummy hearts on two south clubs. Lose dummy heart queen to the east ace. Ruff a fourth diamond in dummy, sluffing a south heart. Your heart king is home.

You thus get two trump rounds, four ruffs, three clubs, and a heart. Do it by deliberately letting west make this small trump.

Take a loss that makes you boss.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 25 (AP) — It helps to play a drunk on the screen, but don't do it on the set. This advice comes from Frederic March, an expert of (movie) drinking scenes.

The actor's dissertation arose as we considered how well the Academy rewards stars who play souses. Witness such recent winners as Ray Milland ("The Lost Weekend"), James Dunn ("A Tree Grows in Brooklyn"), Anne Baxter ("The Razor's Edge.") This year Susan Hayward was nominated for her boozy role in "Smash-Up."

March, whose tippling and hangover scenes in "Best Years" helped win him an Oscar, had this explanation:

"Perhaps it is the fascination of a still puritanical nation in something that is considered evil —drinking."

March remarked that it is fun to play drunks, and not particularly difficult. "Of course, I always study other people to prepare for my drinking scenes," he smiled. I asked if it helped to act while looped.

"I don't think so. If you get too tired, you lose focus on the character. There's an old saying about liquor — it can't make you do anything better."

March's experiences of drinking while playing drunks have been none to happy. He guzzled real champagne in "A Star is Born" and Vodka in "Anna Karenina" and the realism rewarded him with a bad head each time. During "Design For Living" he and Gary Cooper killed a bottle of brandy and shooting had to be suspended while the actors slept it off.

Older and wiser, he merely spun around a few times for the "Best Years" bare scene. Same effect, he said.

Deserved Break

School teachers are going to get a deserved break in future movies. Barbara Hale is playing a school marm in "The Boy with Green Hair." M. G. M. is planning "The Saintly Miss Peters" for Greer Garson and Warners has "Miss O'Brien" for Joan Crawford and is mentioning Barbara Stanwyck for "Miss Richmond Takes Grant." All of them will touch on the need for higher pay for teachers. Also, they will show that teachers can be glamorous.

Listeners Voice Opinions of CBC Wednesday Night

By JACK McNEIL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Whatever may be said for or against the Wednesday night programs initiated by the CBC last December 3, they have at least one signal accomplishment to their credit. They have driven many an enthused or exasperated listener to the point of actually composing a letter.

These letters (not the kind, by the way, that begin "Re yours of the 17th inst.") shower both bouquets and brickbats—but mostly bouquets—on CBC's latest cultural baby.

For instance a hardworking scribe in the press gallery of the House of Commons, Ottawa, stole a few moments from a debate on margarine (or was it the price of hogs?) to scribble the following encomium:

"Last Wednesday night, CBC opened a special program series. That night I had planned to read a book — my complaint is that one cannot read books .. and listen to a Wednesday night pro- possible to do both." grom. Ordinarily it is quite

Not so enthusiastic was the reaction of a listener in St. Vital, Man., to a Canadian musical comedy presented on the opening night of the series:

"As a Westener, the plot of the musical 'Gallant Greenhorn' plus the manner in which the lines were spoken (I have never met anyone in Western Canada who speaks like that) is an insult to the listener of average intelligence. The choir was quite good, but I am surprised that the people participating in it, all of whom are clever in their respective lines, could bring themselves to present such rot and in doing so, not feel that they might be hurting their reputations."

An Opposite View

At least one easterner — in Toronto — took an opposite view of the same broadcast:

"My husband and I — were aroused to such a high pitch of enthusiasm by CBC's long succession of superior programs last night that we feel you merit a whole deluge of letters of appreciation .. in particular we admired "Gallant Greenborn" — our only concern is lest (such a grand cast) be lured away from Canada, which would be a great loss."

A dial-twiddler in Victoria, B.C., wrote:

"Recently I returned from Britain where I have been for the past year and a half. Having so greatly enjoyed the BBC Third Program, I was delighted to find that you have inaugurated a similar type of entertainment for Wednesday evenings."

But here speaks a disgruntled listener from Vancouver:

"Regret to report that I found your Wednesday evening program disappointing. From 8 till 10 — two hours—nothing I would be bothered listening to. The farmers get the lion's share of the noon-hour period. Do they have to get the best part of the evening too?"

The Wednesday night program also has devotees in the United States. This reaction came from Boalsburg, Penn.

"It ought to be reassuring to compare the series with American efforts and note that this further increase of program value is so widely un-imitated by our broadcasters. It seems to make clear the split in philosophy between the two systems. The essential thing to my mind is, however, that the CBC is trying to bring good radio to its listeners, and not sell soap."

Labor Minister Outlines Policy On Labor Code

Toronto, Feb. 25 — (CP) — Labor Minister Daley of Ontario said last night that the Ontario government planned legislation to make the proposed new Dominion labor code applicable to all industry in the province.

In a 15-minute radio address over station CJBC, the minister said that the Dominion code — which has not yet been adopted — might not be entirely satisfactory to the province but he added:

"It is therefore the decision of the Ontario government that at the coming session of the Ontario Legislature a bill will be introduced which . . . will enable the necessary administrative arrangements to be made and the Dominion code to be applied to all provincial works, undertakings or businesses strictly within the provincial field. The result will be that one code will apply to all labor relations within Ontario, without distinction between Dominion or provincial works, undertakings or businesses."

Mr. Daley recalled that when the Wartime Dominion Labor Code was in effect, the Ontario government had adopted its provisions for industry under provincial juirsdiction. When the wartime code was terminated in 1947 the Dominion introduced a new bill last June 17 but it had not yet been passed.

Many difficulties would arise if Dominion and province had different labor regulations and the Ontario government believed in uniform and simplified regulations.

The minister expressed the hope that the Dominion government would set up a board, similar to its Wartime Labor Relations Board, to which appeals from decisions of the Ontario Labor Relations Board could be directed.

AT THE CAPITOL

Clyde Beatty in "Lost Jungle"

The incomparable Clyde Beatty, star of the Mascot serial, "The Lost Jungle," which is scheduled to open at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday doesn't claim to be the only animal trainer ever to enter a cage with both lions and tigers, but he does admit that he is the first performer ever to mix the big cats in large numbers and also to have both sexes in the cage at once.

Beatty uses anywhere from thirty-two to forty lions and tigers in his circus act. Lions and tigers are natural enemies, and it necessitates much more extensive training to work them together than it does to put on an act with one species or the other. And by virtue of complicating matters still further, Beatty has brought in lionesses and tigeresses, and handling both the girls and the boys is no mean job.

Lions and tigers like men and women, have one predominant vice in their sex relations; they are terribly jealous . . . in fact that is where the expression "as jealous as a cat" originated. Beatty has had plenty serious scraps on his hands due to a flirtatious lioness or lady tiger, but he manages to keep his cats in pretty good spirits, and, due to careful manipulations, he can forstell when a battle is brewing and often acts a Beatrice Fairfax for wild animals.

Beatty is supported in "The Lost Jungle" by Cecelia Parker and a large cast of screen favorites. The entire Hagenbeck-Wallace Menagerie is also part of the show.

"Wild Beasts at Bay"

The second jungle picture on the same program brings to the screen the wildest adventures ever filmed. Fighting elephants, snarling lions, ferocious leopards, walrus, whales, monkies, grizzlies, sea elephants, seals, moose, wild buffalo, hippos, dangerous rhinos, giraffes, hyenas, weird, wild, haunting mysteries of the wastelands laid bare in a picture that took years to make and will never be forgotten. "Wild Beasts at Bay" opens on Thursday for a three day engagement from the Arctic to the jungles of Africa in one night.

AT THE BELLE—Ann Sheridan and Zachary Scott, who are co-starred with Lew Ayres in Warners' "The Unfaithful, closing at the Belle Theatre tonight, play the roles of wife and husban whose marriage is threatened by an indiscretion. "I Cover the Big Town" is the 2nd feature.

Trenton Flyers Even Series With Cobourg Squad

In a wide open free scoring game that saw twenty goals hit the twine the Trenton R.C.A.F. Flyers roared back into the Intermediate "A" group playoff picture in Memorial Arena last night when they sent the Cobourg Pavilions down to a 13-7 defeat to even the two-of-three game semi-finals series at one game each. The third game will be played here on Friday night.

Cobourg defeated Flyers in the first game of the series but could not cope with the speedy hard-checking airmen lines last night. The winners of this series will meet the Trenton Hockey Club in the group finals in a three-of-five series.

Despite the large score the game was one of the best seen in Intermediate circles here in some time. Both squads "let their hair" down and as a result the game was wide-open, fast and clean, only three penalties being handed out by referee St. Louis.

Cobourg Draws First Blood

Cobourg drew first blood at the five-minute mark in the first period and it appeared to be the spark to ignite the Flyers attack. They put on the pressure and at the end of the period led by a 3-1 count. The second period saw the best hockey of the night with both teams turning on everything they had in a fast exciting display. Both squads dented the twine for a trio of goals and they went into the third period with the Flyers on the long end of a 6-4 count.

Ten pucks hit the twine in the third period with the Flyers travelling at top speed and ramming home seven goals with Cobourg netting three, two of them coming in the dying minutes of the game. The Flyers attacks were clicking to perfection while their defence was solid and aided by stout back-checking on the part of their front lines thwarted many desperate efforts of the Pavilions to whittle down the score.

Quartet Went Well

Miller, Sergent, Ault and Brackenberry were the attacking aces for the Flyers. This quartet fairly flew all night and their passing plays were working to perfection. Ault grabbed three goals with Miller getting himself a pair and three assists. Sargent scored one goal and was credited with four helpers while Brackenberry got two and two. Middleton, tall defence player, was also a standout going both ways and scored one goal and two assists. Denny and Cowick also turned in nice efforts.

Haynes, Freeman, Bulger, Baker, Forbes, B. Cane and Edwardson were the pick of the losers. Haynes scored two of his teams goals with Baker also accounting for a pair. B. Cain, Forbes and Edwardson accounted for the other three markers.

KNOTTY PROBLEM—Officials probe hopefully for a point of leverage to best untangle this pile of puck performers, fused by white-hot tempers during a spirited playoff battle at Dunnville. The game was the third of the series between Dunnville and Port Colborne in the OHA Intermediate "B" series and wound up as a 7-5 Dunnville victory. The wrestlers, who went into action with but three minutes of play remaining, failed to declare a winner.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By GEORGE FORSTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, Feb. 25 (CP)—They haven't got around to serving tea between periods in modern hockey games, but a lot of old-time fans think they might as well.

After talking to some of them, Walt (Saskatoon Star-Phoenix) Riddell says most old-timers think the modern game is "pink tea" stuff compared to the game played a few years back.

"Oldsters," says Riddell, "have held this opinion since the streamline game came to the fore with six-man teams, forward passes and new rules designed to increase the tempo of play."

The old-timers missed the passing plays, stickhandling and rugged body checks, not so necessary since the adoption of new rules which stressed speed and more speed.

And Sweeney Schriner, former N.H.L. great now coaching Lethbridge Maple Leafs of the Western Canada Senior League, told Walt there "Canadian hockey officials have sacrificed the finesse of the game for the speed demanded by fans in American cities where gates are large."

Rumors of a gigantic new junior league—comprising top teams in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba—reach Murray (Moose Jaw Times-Herald) Brown through President Bill Quinn of the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association.

Brown quotes Quinn as saying that Northern teams no longer can compete with Moose Jaw Canucks and Regina Pats who have dominated the Saskatchewan Junior League for several seasons.

Quinn told Brown it is rumored that Regina and Moose Jaw may join an interprovincial league with Winnipeg, Brandon, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat while Saskatchewan's other clubs revert to Junior B. although the new league sounded unwieldly. "If they can keep travelling expenses down they may make a go of it."

Six-Day Bike Racing Making A Comeback

New York, Feb. 25, (AP) — Six-day bike racing, a faded memory of pre-war days, is making a comeback. When the riders start whirling around the wooden saucer Sunday night, the first New York marathon since 1939 will be under way.

Back in the gravy days, the pedal pushers packed them in. Madison Square Garden wasn't large enough for the big nights. Now the Garden can't bother to find room on its crowded schedule. The bikes have been shunted uptown to an armory at 168th Street.

Chicago and Cleveland tried to revive the grind with moderate success last year. But the New York promotion is strictly a gamble.

Bike racing names have faded from the headlines. But Torchy Peden of Victoria still will be remembered. So will Alf Letourneur, Alvaro George'Ti and Montreal's Jules Audy, all certain starters in the New York grind.

Fourteen teams will compete over the eight-lap track, the race ending at 11.00 p.m., E.S.T. Saturday, March 6.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

The ugly head of scandal is rearing itself above the hitherto blameless escutcheon of the National Hockey League. Detroit police claim they have information that two N.H.L. players bet money on a National Hockey League game through consort with an escaped-convict bookie.

Shades of the Chicago Black Sox—and American basketball and football. The sinister virus of crookedness, gambling, and under the-table methods, that slowly but surely is spelling the doom of the boxing realm in the higher-up brackets will not, it is to be sincerely hoped infiltrate the veins of Canada's great winter game.

The article published by the Detroit Times a day or so ago caused a furore in National Hockey League circles, especially in the Bruin camp and also in Detroit. President Clarence Campbell of the N.H.L. acting on the reports, flew to Toronto yesterday afternoon and conferred with Art. Ross, manager of the Bruins. Today he is in conference with Detroit police officials. He said the newspaper reports were the first he had heard of the affair.

• • •

It is hoped that the reports are without foundation. Professional hockey thus far has held its head high and has been singularly clear of scandal, while other realms of sport cannot claim the same record. Of course there was the Babe Pratt affair but that was purely a case of management and player, and no suggestion of anything other than placing a bet was hinted.

However, we feel that the hockey public can rest assured that President Clarence Campbell and officials of the National Hockey League will ferret the report to the bottom. And if the story is true, they will not spare the official horses when it comes to dealing out punishment to those involved Canadian hockey, or any hockey wants no part of American or any hoodlums, nor players who lower themselves to a gutter level by consorting with them, and falling in with their nefarious schemes.

The famous Oxford-Cambridge boat race is scheduled for the end of March over the historic Thames course. The Light and Dark Blues are now in the throes of intensive training for the rowing classic, and strange to say the training has developed into a race for caloric intake. Seems as though each crew member must take aboard 2,700 calories daily to keep up with the physical demand of rowing exercise.

As you know, food is short in Britain. So to supplement the calories the Dark Blues, the Gentlemen of H'Oxford, egad, are absorbing whale steaks daily to keep the old spirit up, likewise their poundage. The Cantabs, have purchased a cow, and are going on weekly milk binges by inhaling an extra quart every seven days. So it seems that the result of the famous rowing classic depends more or less on a much-overworked but nevertheless contended bovine, and the calory-producing steaks of Manny the Whale. So don't be surprised if you read in the after-race story that the Dark Blues spouted geysers of water near Putney while the Cantabs mooed happily with hungry eyes fixed on the green grass of the Thames banks, as they surged into the stretch.

Substantiating Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle's story the other day of the dictatorial methods of scouts of National Hockey League teams is the startling, but true incident that occurred in the Jock Harty Arena, Kingston on Monday night. The Kingston Vics had just defeated the Belleville Rockets, and the Quinte kids were leaving the dressing room when it happened.

"Your name Defelice, son?" the stranger asked.

Defelice looked up. He did not know the man. Never saw him before.

"Yes sir," he replied, curiousity gleaming in his eyes.

"Well, son, I want to tell you that you have just been placed on the negotiation list of the Montreal Canadiens."

The kid centre was stunned momentarily. "What did you say?" he blurted.

The stranger smiled and patted Angy on the back. "I said you are now on the negotiation list of the Canadiens, and you can't sign with any other team," he said.

Defelice bristled a bit. "Why can't I sign with any other team?" he asked.

"Because you are now on the Canadiens negotiation list. That's all son."

And the stranger walked away, leaving a befuddled surprised young man wondering what it was all about.

Belleville's gallant little Merchants' Midgets team came through with flying colors in Omemee last night sending the highly touted Peterborough Rotary kids down to defeat by an 8-3 score. Our youngsters thereby have a neat and nifty five-goal lead when they go into action against the Petelets here tomorrow night. The Peterborough squad are big and husky, so the Merchants say, with a hefty rearguard that stands well over six-feet in their skated feet. "But" one of the Belleville pee-wees grinned "the bigger they are, the harder they fall." And that is the way it ended.

The Merchants front line kids of Gilmour, Brown, Carey and Strahan paced the attack that sent the husky Petes reeling in the first period on the short end of a 4-1 count. In fact every member of the local team played heads-up hockey, and were full value for their win. They play the Petes here tomorrow night, and the fandom of this city should turn out and back the team that is carrying the hockey honor of Belleville alone on its youthful shoulders. The Merchants have their eyes on that Ontario championship, and at their present form it's going to take a good team to beat them.

If they get by Peterborough they will likely take on the Collingwood team which drew a bye in the playdowns. If they can exit this squad then they meet either Waterloo or Sarnia for the provincial Midget "B" championship. They are fully deserving of all the support you can give them, so go down to Memorial Arena tomorrow night and cheer for these fighting youngsters.

Sierra No Match For Willie Pep

Miami, Feb. 25 (AP) — Cuban Humberto Sierra's effort to lift the world featherweight championship from Willie Pep was just water over the dam today.

Pep, probably the busiest and best little man in the boxing business, retained his title last night when he knocked out Sierra in 22 seconds of the 10th round.

And the rain pouring down on 10,000 spectators in the Orange Bowl probably will be remembered longer than the fight.

During the semi-final between Olle Tandberg of Sweden and Walter Hafer of Washington, won by Tandberg, the first of a series of hard showers fell.

It was too late to call things off and the rains continued right through the championship bout, reaching a moist climax just as Pep finally found the range with a series of devastating wallops that left Sierra flat on the canvas while referee Jack Dempsey dispensed with the formality of a count.

Although the lanky Cuban had gone 10 rounds with Pep in a non-title bout last summer, it was obvious from the start that he was no match for Pep. Willie tested him in a strenuous first round, then virtually coasted until the ninth, jabbing dodging, catching punches on his arms and using his right only on rare occasions when there was a clear shot.

Omaha Knights, Houston Share Scoring Mark

(By The Associated Press)

Omaha Knights and the Houston Huskies share the season's high game scoring mark in the United States Hockey League today.

The Knights crashed an even dozen scores into the Dallas goal last night at Omaha for a 12-1 victory. Previously Houston held the scoring crown with a 12-5 mark achieved against the Knights, Dec. 28.

Fred Glover ran up four goals last night for the winners with seven other players sharing the scoring. Poitras scored the only Dallas goal.

At Tulsa, Minneapolis Millers bowed 3-1. Norm McAtee and Russ Brayshaw and Don Webster tallied for Tulas.

Paul Gauthier clamped the scoring gates shut against Fort Worth Rangers to help Houston to a 5-0 victory in the league's only other game.

Tonight's schedule sends Dallas to Kansas City in the only contest carded.

Mercurys to Meet Flying Dutchmen In Semi-Finals

(By The Canadian Press)

The Senior "A" Ontario Hockey Association playoff field narrowed last night as the quarter-finals ended and it was decided what teams would meet in the second semi-final series.

Owen Sound Mercurys waltzed through Hamilton Patricias with a 15-6 victory to win their quarter-finals in two straight games. Kitchener-Waterloo had a closer 3-1 win over Stratford Indians to take their series in two straight. Owen Sound now will meet Kitchener-Waterloo in a best-of-seven semi-final series with the winner taking on the Hamilton Tigers-Toronto Marlboros series victor for the title.

Only in the initial frame were the Pats able to keep anywhere on even terms with Mercurys as the period ended with Mercurys on the top end of a 3-2 score. Mercurys upped the count to 8-4 at the end of the middle frame and then scored seven more times in the final to complete the rout.

Tommy Burlington, Mercury playing-coach, again was the big gun with five goals and three assists. Jack Ingoldsby was close behind with two goals and four assists. Bruce Small scored twice and received three assists while Bun White fired three goals. Johnny Sullivan, Pat McCreavy and Fred Smith scored one goal each.

Dougie Runions scored the first three goals for the Pats and then Bryon Robinson counted twice and Frank Long once.

Nineteen Penalties

Nineteen penalties were handed out by referees Pat Patterson and Honey Kuntz as officiating continued to be strict.

That Kitchener-Stratford game was even more closely played than the score indicates, and only the stellar netminding of Keith Woodhall in the Kitchener nets and good luck gave the Dutchmen their margin of victory.

Don Bauer was credited with the first Kitchener goal in the initial frame when the rubber went past goalie Bob Bindernagel off one of his own mates. Mickey Roth tied the count for Stratford in the second frame and just five minutes later, Art Hurst banged in a rebound to put the Dutchmen one up again. The final Kitchener tally came in the third period when Johnny Blute's shot bounced off Bindernagel's shoulder into the corner of the net with less than two minutes gone.

Stratford put on terrific pressure after that but Woodall, and a strong defence kept them at bay. Here, too, officiating was firm as referees Kenny Holmshaw and Bill Morrison meted out 16 penalties, eight to each team.

Playoffs continue tonight as Toronto Marlboros hook up with Hamilton Tigers at Hamilton for the third game of the best of seven semi-finals. Windsor goes to Oshawa for the third game of their junior best of seven series and St. Catharines invades Galt for the third and deciding game of their best of three quarter-finals.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

Miami, Feb. 25 — (AP)—Trainer Jimmy Jones won't say anything, but you'd be pretty safe in betting that Armed never will run another race. Jimmy sticks to his statement that the "golden gelding" no longer can carry 130 pounds, and that's the kind of assignments he'd draw . . . Another good bet is that Clarence (Mr. Kay) Kantrowitz, the "amateur" who promoted last night's Pep-Sierra fight, has a lot more knowledge and less money than he had when he came here a month ago . . . Kantrowitz, a film distributor who is dabbling in television and maybe a few more businesses, figures he could afford to take a loss, but the boys who came down from New York all wanted to be paid for their vacations . . .

The Personal Touch

Lee Evans, youthful Miami sports writer, heard so often that Humberto Sierra didn't have a punch that he decided to find out for himself . . . He arranged to go one round against the Cuban in training and was belted out in 54 seconds . . . When Pete Morton, the Tampa scribe, heard about that one, he moaned: — "Does that mean that when I criticize a football player or a jockey I have to get in there and play tackle or ride the horses? That's making things too tough.

Sports Before Your Eyes

Danny Lamont's Widener Handicap winner, El Mono, will race in the double event at Tropical Park before going north. In two races, the colt has won $68,200 — considerably more than the whole Calumet string has collected . . . That's not bad for a horse that was entered in the McLennan only because his owner got a kick out of having a started in a big stake . . . Bill ($75,000) Goodman, the Red Sox rookie who was converted from an outfielder to a shortstop at Louisville last summer, figures the first thing he'll do when he hits training camp is to ask Joe McCarthy where he'll play. Marse Joe likely will tell him to be glad if he gets to play anywhere . . .

Fighting Boston Team Will Be Facing Toronto

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Without shouting about it, of course, the Toronto Maple Leafs had confidently figured that tonight's home game against the Boston Bruins would provide Leafs with a victory and a two-point advantage over Detroit Red Wings. With the Wings and Leafs deadlocked for the league lead, and the schedule rapidly running out, the Leafs simply can't afford to lose to the Bruins.

But that weird Detroit story yesterday about a bookie who said two players from Bruins and New York Rangers had been betting on games had more results than anyone dreamed of. While the league moguls were busy cleaning up the executive angles, the Boston Bruins hockey players were getting madder and madder.

Boston Manager Art Ross cleaned all his players after a hotel room inquisition at Toronto last night, but you can imagine how the Bruins are going to tear into the Leafs—or anyone else for that matter. From Goalie Frank Brimsek on out, the Bruins are going to be tough to handle at Maple Leaf Gardens tonight.

The only other game tonight has New York Rangers entertaining the tail-end Chicago Black Hawks.

Apart from the deadlocked first-place teams, the Rangers and Boston are the League's chief duellists at the moment. Rangers in third place are a game ahead of the Bruins. If the ever-dangerous Black Hawks can triumph over Rangers tonight, and the Bruins can trample the Leafs, then New York and Boston are going to be tied for third.

All of which would be bad news to the line which bars them from any mathematical possibility of entering the playoffs.

Canadians are seven points behind the fourth and last play-off spot with only 11 games to go. Chicago is four points behind Montreal.

Paris Papers Give Barbara Front Page

(By The Canadian Press)

Paris newspapers gave her arrival prominent play. Ce Soir carried a front-page picture showing the Ottawa girl in front of her hotel while France-Soir ran a picture on its front page showing her walking along a snow-covered boulevard.

Barbara Ann Scott's medals finally arrived at Ottawa yesterday after being entrusted to various messengers from Davos, Switzerland to Ottawa. The messengers all seemed glad to get rid of the responsibility and sighed with relief. The medals now are safely in a jewelry firm's vaults while details concerning their public display are being worked out.

Canadian Olympic speed-skater Frank Stack and Gordon Audley arrived home in Winnipeg yesterday from Switzerland and described as "terrific" the performances at the games of Barbara Ann Scott and the championship R.C.A.F. hockey team. Stack, 41-year-old skater who competed for Canada in the 1932 Olympics, confirmed that he had retired as he had announced earlier.

Rugged and ring-wise Arturo Godoy moved another notch along the comeback trail last night as he pounded out a unanimous 10-round decision over Irish Pat Richard, Ohio State pre - med student. Godoy, who went 15 rounds with champion Joe Louis in 1940, and later ran into a six-round kayo at the hands of the heavyweight king, floored hard-punching Richard for a nine-count in the opening round and for an eight-count in the fourth.

Connie Mack yesterday disclosed he had come through a serious illness without anybody knowing but the family. Mack, 85-year-old owner-manager of the Philadelphia Athletics said he had a cold in the chest upon arrival at St. Petersburg, Fla., a few months ago and his temperature went to 102 and 103 degrees. "There were a couple of days the doctor was worried about me, but I fooled him and pulled through," said Mack.

A weary R.C.A.F. Flyers team last night defeated Czechoslovakia's second best hockey team 2-1 before a crowd of 16,000 persons at Prague. Coach Frank Boucher and Ab Renaud tallied the Canadian goals. The Canadian Olympic champions will play another match at Prague Thursday before they leave Czechoslovakia.

DODGE GIVES YOU UNSURPASSED SAFETY ——AND AN EVEN SMOOTHER RIDE!

Super-Cushion tires, fitted on new, wider Dodge "Safety-Rim" wheels are now standard equipment on all Dodge Models—another Dodge "extra" feature. Dodge thus gives you greater safety and a smoother ride at no additional cost.

These unique, new Super-Cushion tires use only 24 pounds of air pressure yet they carry 26% more air volume, which greatly reduces road vibration. They cushion the car against lateral or crosswise shocks, the softer tires taking the jars when they hit ruts, stones or rough pavement.

You are assured of greater safety as these new tires run cooler which lessens the chance of a blowout. Should a blowout occur, the new Dodge "Safety-Rim" wheels hold the tire on the rim—even at high speeds—allowing safe, straight stops.

Lower air pressure and 26% greater air volume give you the smoothest ride in Dodge history.

New Dodge "Safety-Rim" wheels combine with Super-Cushion tires to set a new standard of motoring safety.

New tires have more road contact which gives better traction, reduces tire-wearing wheelspin.

CHAPTER 19.

Not that Carryville social set was vastily disimiliar, because they were imitators of smart crowds whenever they could be. Dear old Carryville! Tom? She wondered suddenly in the midst of this whirling through space what Tom was doing. She had left strict orders with Mae Forland that no one was to know where she had gone. Mae had faithfully promised to keep her secret.

Millie suggested, "Let's take Velma home for cocktails—give her a chance to dress—then go to the Club Bertrand for dinner."

"The Club Bertrand? Is that still in existence?" asked Velma, thinking of the many brilliant parties she had given and attended in that ultra—smart club.

"Why you darling!" gushed Millie, tossing her bare brown "Of course it's still here! You've been away only a few months!"

"That's so," returned Velma, "but it seems—like years."

Fanders put in, "It sounds complimentary. Could it be she's missed us?"

Virginia Dewey laughed too sharply, elevated a thinly plucked eyebrow. "Nothing personal in that remark, I trust," she said, and her companions chuckled in unison.

Velma's cheek burned. She was relieved when the car drew up before the Roberts' big town house on the Gold Coast.

A maid showed her to her suite while the others sauntered into the music room looking for cocktails and radio music.

Millie soon joined Velma upstairs. Her vivacious, darkly pretty face seemed to fill the orchid and gold room with a sudden glow. Her long black satin gown tightly fitted her small figure, the dozens of tiny cut-steel buttons decorating the long sleeves and backless blouse, vying with her sparkling blue eyes. Her brwn hair was fashioned into ntricate weves and curls, which must have taken her maid hours to arrange.

"What are you wearing, darling?" she asked, flashing Velma an affectionate glance.

Velma mumbled from beneath the wine-colored suit skirt she was slipping off over her head. "Oh, nothing much. I've a cocoa brown crepe trimmed with shirred pink chiffon—would that do?"

Millies personal maid Donna held up the exquisite imported dinner gown she had just taken from Velma's bag.

"How perfectly stunning!" exclamed the surprsed Millie.

Mae Forland had insisted that Velma bring this gown with her "to advertise the Forland Shop, m dear. "As if the Forland Shop woud ever attract Chicago clientele! Velma knew it was Mae's clever way of getting her to accept the gown at a ridiculously low price. But she was no end grateful. She hated returning to Chicago with the same wardrobe all her old friends had seen.

So if Millie had thought to waste any particular sympathy on Velma for having a sleazy assortment of clothes, she was to be dissappointed; the dresses Velma had brought with her were quite as advanced in mode as any to be found in exclusive Chicago shops. She would of course be obliged to wear all her things repeatedly if she remained too long as Millie's guest. But for two weeks, she was amply supplied, could make quite a respectable appearance, she felt. It was like being a Cinderella, who must disappear on the stroke of midnight—in her case, on the stroke of two weeks.

Only fourteen days in which to forget Tom! Days, hours, minutes when she must be hectically busy or else, on some uncontrollable impulse, call Tom up and ruin his whole life. Two weeks—which mustn't drag. She wouldn't allow them to drag. She would fill them with wild frothy nonsense. She could find it in Millie's crowd, her own old crowd, without effort, at the Club Bertrand, she would be her old giddy self.

She little knew, however how crushingly defeated this stout resolution was bound to be.

The Club Bertrand, with its mirrors in blue, gold, azure, alluringly reflecting rose-tinted lights, its every detail perfection, nearly overwhelmed Velma, who had not remembered it as so breathtakingly beautiful. Its colorful murals, painted by famous artists, the stunning blue leather chairs, the blue and silver glass tables, were all made for the most fastidious taste. The glamor of these appointments were, she knew, argumented by the art of a master cuisinier, known on both sides of the Atlantic—and no doubt in heaven, had decided many a connoiseur if delicate viands.

After all, it was a grand treat to be here once again. It had been so long since she'd had this kind of treat. It was enticing to be served such delicious dishes by a solicitous waiter. It was nice to dine amidst the subdued glittery and elegance of this club, although somewhat disconcerting with Flanders' dark eyes covertly watching her from across the table set for twelve.

He leaned toward her suddenly and asked, "Liking this party? Do they have clubs like this in Carryville?"

Virginia Dewey, beside him, poised an ear. Her small blue eyes set in her angular, muddy-complexioned face expressed secret fear of Flanders' old sweetheart.

Velma, heartily wishing that Virginia would win and keep Flanders, put all the indifference she could muster into her reply.

"They have night clubs in Carryville, of course. It's not a half bad town. I like it."

Gordon Peel on her left, said earnestly, "I wondered why you didn't strike out in business here, Velma. We all would have been glad to help."

She frowned slightly and buttered a piece of roll. It was not too easy to forget how they had seemed to desert her at a time when she most needed friends. It was so convenient not to make nice sounding statements wholly unrelated to truth.

"I—I had no idea you all loved me that much," she returned, frankly impatient.

A waiter came between them, poured champagne into Gordon's empty glass.

Why must she think of Tom now?

From across the low bowl of crimson roses centering the table, peered Joe Ramble's absurdly smirking countenance. He weaved to his feet, champagne glass precariously in hand. His thick tongue got out, "A toast! A toast—to Velma! Our—sweetheart!"

Velma smiled up at the blondly handsome six feet of him, as her friends, eagerly agreeing with this tribute, raised their glasses. Again she thought, with a tinge of bitterness, kind words mean little when they part company with kind actions. To-night, for some unknown reason, these old friends were determined to make her love them. What this fickle crowd's change of heart meant, no one knew, least of all themselves.

If they wished to honor her, it didn't matter. She was only marking time until—until Louise Clark had taken for good the only man worth caring about. It was a misplaced thought here in the Club Bertrand in gay company. Why must she think of Tom now?

If she had been thinking of the well-being of the community at large, she would have turned him over to the authorities long ago. And have an innocent man proved guilty? Tom couldn't—he couldn't be guilty!

She began an agitated, aimless conversation with Jim Grant, on her right. Jim was a young man who had come to Chicago to live since she had moved away. He at least was judging her by what she appeared to be now, instead of pitying her for what she had become. She must talk fast to get rid of the terrific fear that was determined to grip her.

But Jim Grant, also, had inbibed too well the evening's liquors and was inclined to be maudlin. His bleary eyes told her that not every day did a man run up against such an exotically lovely girl as herself.

"Say, beautiful," he said, his breath hot on her cheek, "how 'bout going to Cass Lorber's Lakeshore blowout with yours truly to-morrow night? It'll be a swell date if you have it with me."

"No doubt," She tried to laugh. "Better think it over till morning. You may already have a date for that affair. I wouldn't like to cut in on an earlier love."

Mother, 3 Children Perish in Fire As 9 Houses Burn

Camden, N. J., Feb. 25—(AP)—A mother and her three small children perished early today in a fire which swept nine of a row of 16 homes.

Eight Arrested Following Clash On Picket Line

Claimed Woman Picket Turned on Constable

Toronto, Feb. 26. (CP)—Eight persons—seven men and a woman—were arrested by Provincial Police today following a clash on the picket lines at the Rogers-Majestic plant in suburban Leaside where the United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.) are on strike for wage increases.

Although Provincial Police declined official comment, officers at the scene said that the trouble started when a woman strike picket turned on a constable who sought to prevent her from interfering with an office worker going into the plant.

Later the president of the striking Union Local charged that police manhandled pickets.

Some 75 Provincial Police were posted at the plant two days ago at the request of the town of Leaside to obtain entry into the plant for executives and office workers.

Police said that one constable was assaulted and suffered bruises in the melee.

Arrested were: William A. McKendrick, on a charge of assaulting police; Estella Dever, L. Mitchell, Sam Crawford (strike committee chairman) and Peter MacKay on charges of obstructing police; George McLaughlin and Fred Poulger for intimidation; Dernel Olson for inciting to riot.

Company officials said that for the present they would make no statement on the affair.

Aldridge said in his statement that Provincial Police used "well-organized storm trooper methods in manhandling girls and men on the picket line." He added that girls were struck in the face and men kicked and beaten while held on the ground.

HOTEL MEETING TORONTO BAKERS WILL BE PROBED

Surprise Witness Before Committee Says There Was No Price Fixing

Ottawa, Feb. 26 (CP)—A hotel-room meeting of Toronto bakers, which preceded a general three-cent-a-loaf increase in bread prices there last September, was down for renewed investigation today by the Commons Price Committee.

Though the committee had been told the meeting reached no agreement to fix higher prices, it retained for questioning a participant at the session yesterday who had been plucked as a surprise witness from the rear benches of the hearing chamber.

This witness was J. Leo Kelleher, now manager of a bakery in Hull, Que., and, in September, plant manager for General Bakeries in Toronto. He was named as a commitee at the hotel meeting by James M. MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of General Bakeries, and promptly was called to the stand to replace Mr. MacDonald.

Both these witnesses denied there had been any price-fixing at the September meeting. It had been called, they said, to discuss expected production-cost increases resulting from the impending removal of flour subsidies, and it had ended in disagreement so far as new bakers prices were concerned.

Wound Up in Disagreement

However, Mr. MacDonald said he felt there had been a 'desire among the men there to reach some mutually-agreeable decision."

But he said the bakers wound up in "complete disagreement"—the disharmony so violent there was name-calling and other "disgraceful" business.

General Bakeries had told the other bakers it needed, for itself, a four-cent increase when subsidies came off. Others held out for three, the witness said. Mr. Kelleher said no baker had tried to suggest to any other what' the price should be.

Mr. MacDonald said that some days after the meeting, General Bakeries learned other Toronto bakeries were raising their prices by three cents a loaf. Thereupon, it did the same, on Sept. 18.

The General Bakeries executive denied his company exercised "control" over the retail prices of its bread—aside from what it sold direct to the consumer—but the 14-cent-price it printed on the wrapper of its bread could be construed as such a 'very definite sugestion' he told commission counsel H. A. Dyde.

Flooded River Forces Families From Homes

Toronto, Feb. 26. (CP)—The flooded Etobicoke river, swollen by snow melted in yesterday's mild weather, spread further afield last night surrounding homes which have not been touched by high water for at least two years.

In suburban Long Branch ice floes jammed against fences causing water to pile up so that it was almost impossible to get around without hip rubber boots.

Water which has risen five feet since last Thursday has forced about 15 families to leave their homes and seek shelter with friends or relatives. Chief difficulties are obtaining sufficient drinking water, milk, bread, and coal deliveries.

7 CHILDREN PERISH

Burlington, Ia., Feb. 26 (AP)—A flash fire swept through a frame farmhouse early yesterday and burned seven children to death. A flaming stairway prevented others in the 15-member Ellsworth Waterhouse family from reaching the trapped youngsters.

10 Czechs Slip Through Border Patrols at Frontier

Neuhausen, Germany, Feb. 26—(AP)— At least 10 Czechs are known to have slipped through border patrols at the frontier this week to reach the United States zone of Germany.

The only traffic across the heavily - guarded Czechoslovak frontier since the Prague political crisis developed has been by night and by stealth. All official crossing points are closed and guarded by armed, uniformed men.

The barriers have not been lifted either at Neuhausen or at nearby Wildenau to let any traveller through in either direction since 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. Since last Sunday, issuance of Czechoslovak entry visas for tourists and news reporters has been suspended. No Czechoslovak could leave his country for any reason. Foreigners needed special permits to get out.

German police said three Czechs who crossed south of here were turned over to United States intelligence officers for questioning.

War Veteran Testifies He Was Beaten After His Arrest by Chief of Police

Englehart, Ont., Feb. 26 — (CP)—E. E. Pearlman, counsel for the people of this town 30 miles south of Kirkland Lake, said today he would present the town's case tomorrow in the judicial hearing into a demand for the dismissal of police chief Carmen Eric Hostrawser.

In the enquiry instituted by the Attorney General's Department, Judge J. B. Robinson ordered a recess today but proceedings will continue tomorrow on the question of whether Hostrawser assaulted war veteran John Kittner while arresting him last Dec. 23.

No legal charges have been laid against the police chief.

Hearings were instituted by the Attorney - General of Ontario.

Allegations of perjury were heard at the enquiry yesterday. Witnesses told the Commission that Hostrawser had given inaccurate testimony in the case of a man arrested for driving while under the influence of liquor.

Earlier, former council member James Legary said he had visited the jail the night of Kittner's arrest and seen bloodstains on the veteran's jaw and shirt, a mark under his left eye and a swollen nose.

Kittner testified he had been arrested in a restaurant, taken into a lane and slugged by Hostrawser while Provincial Police Constable Soroka held him helpless. He added that the chief had wanted to fight him upon arrival at the jail and had slapped him "a couple of times," when the challenge was refused.

Counsel for Hostrawser, Dalton Dean, suggested that townsfolk were using the allegations of assault as a means of dismissing the chief constable. He added that "certain factions" resented Hostrawser's German ancestry.

HOUSE DISCUSSES COMMUNISM AND PRICE CONTROLS

Member Expresses Need For Trans-Canada Road

Ottawa, Feb. 26 — (CP)—Communism, the need for a trans-Canada highway, and the necessity for the reimposition of price controls were all discussed in the Commons yesterday, but an unexpected division prior to resumption of the Throne Speech debate provided the highlight of the short, mid-week sitting.

In the division, the government squeezed through with its narrowest majority of this parliament when it defeated the opposition 103 to 98 on a motion of D. King Hazen (PC - St. John - Albert) for production of certain Canadian National Railways' documents pertaining to the movement of Canadian goods through Maritime ports.

The government would not have been unseated if it had lost the division, but the result of the vote would have proved embarrassing and likely would have led to concerted opposition efforts to defeat the government at the earliest opportunity.

However, divisions on Wednesdays are an exception and some members on both sides of the House were absent. It is possible that all parties will ask their members to stay close to the Commons whether or not a vote is expected. In a full House, the government has a majority of about eight seats, but it can usually count on the votes of some independents to extend that margin slightly.

Board of Inquiry To Seek Cause Of Plane Crash

Haileybury ,Feb. 26. (CP)—A Board of Enquiry under the authority of the Department of Transport met here today to seek the cause of a plane crash which yesterday killed one person and seriously injured another.

Moise Charron of Notre Dame de la Paix, near Montreal, was killed when a private two-seater plane plummetted to earth on the outskirts of this Northern Ontario town. The pilot, Russell James Gray of Kingston, was seriously injured. Hospital authorities today, however, reported his condition as "fair" and said he was expected to survive.

The Board of Enquiry consists of William Lavery of North Bay, inspector for the Civil Aviation Branch of the Department and Chairman of the Board, and two other members of the aviation branch. Inspector Lavery flew here yesterday to conduct a preliminary examination. The investigation is expected to take two days.

Eye-witnesses said the low-flying plane was "acting queerly" and suddenly dived earthward.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Feb. 26 (CP)—Synopsis: A weak disturbance over Northern Ontario is associated with overcast skies and occasional light snow. Cold air to the rear of this disturbance is pushing slowly southwards, and is expected to overrun the northern sections of the province by Friday evening. The mild and cloudy weather over Southern Ontario will continue throughout today and Friday.

Barbara Ann's Skill Perfect But Paris Public Wanted More Says Paper

Paris, Feb. 26 — (CP)—Paris newspapers today generally approved Barbara Ann Scott's skating exhibition at the Palais Des Sports last night with one exception. The Evening France Soir said the Ottawa star, Olympic and world figure-skating champion, "did not make us forget Sanja Henie."

"The Canadian skater Barbara Ann Scott surprised us," the paper said. "We expected a marvellous fairy of the ice but we saw nothing but a charming young girl, simple and gracious, gliding over the ice with perhaps more facility than her fellow-competitors but with no more talent or virtuosity. Too much has been said about her."

France Soir remarked that the capacity crowd of 20,000 "did not ration their applause" for the Ottowan but "they could not begin to compare the exhibition by the young Olympic and world champion to the talent and virtuosity displayed by the American, Dick Button (Olympic and world men's figure-skating champion), here the week previously."

Barbara Ann's execution was perfect but the Paris public wanted more.

"They wanted a spectacle and at this point Barbara Ann did not satisfy them. No, Barbara Ann Scott did not make us forget Sonja Henie."

The newspaper L'Intransigeant said the champion had attracted more persons to the Palais Des Sports than the French boxing idol, Marcel Cerdan, ever had, and this said a great deal for her box-office power. But the paper did not comment technically on the performance.

Hockey Champions Caught in Middle Communist Coup

Ottawa, Feb. 26 — (CP)—The R.C.A.F. Flyers, Canada's Olympic hockey champions, are not expected to have any difficulty leaving Czechoslovakia despite the political upheaval in that country, Czech Embassy officials said today.

The Flyers, caught in the middle of the communist coup while playing exhibition hockey games in that country from Feb. 16 to Feb. 26, were scheduled to play their last game there today, leaving in time arrivein ot ing in time to arrive in Paris Feb. 28 for further exhibition contests.

While the Czech border has been closed to Czech Nationals wishing to leave the country, it was understood here this restriction did not apply to such groups as the Flyers, who are merely passing through the state and whose passports are believed in order.

36 Homeless In $100,000 Hull Blaze

Hull, Que., Feb. 26. (CP)—A $100,000 fire today left 36 persons homeless, destroyed 11 apartments and four stores, and threatened for a time a major portion of the Bridge Street business section leading from the Chaudiere Bridge, which spans the Ottawa River between Hull and Ottawa.

Laureat Savard, a night shift worker who lived in one of the apartments, raised the alarm and headed off a possible loss of life.

Clad only in night attire, the residents raced down the stairway to the street and the building had been cleared only a few minutes when flames shot up through the second and third storeys of the brick and frame structure.

Hull firemen had the blaze under control after a three-hour battle, but were still pouring water on theblackened premises until nearly noon.

A grocery store, a drug store, a beauty parlor and a ladies wear shop were destroyed in the blaze, of unknown origin.

In addition to the 11 apartments in the McLean building, apartments in the adjacent block sustained smoke and water damage.

Press Reports Denied

London, Feb. 26. (Reuters)—Press reports of Anglo-Argentine discussions on a compromise solution of the Antarctic dispute were firmly denied today by a foreign office spokesman.

According to these reports, Ian Wilson Young of the British Embassy in Buenos Aires proposed to Dr. Juan Bramuglia, Argentine foreign minister, the basis of a deal by which Argentina should acquire certain areas of the Falkland Island dependencies in the Antarctic in return for an indemnity, while Britain would keep two bases.

The Foreign Office spokesman said Young recently had a conversation with Dr. Bramuglia about the Antarctic dispute, but this dealt mainly with the movement of warships of the two countries in Antarctic waters.

Embryo Bandit Nipped by Arrest Say Detroit Police

Detroit, Feb. 26 — (CP) — A 38-year-old father of four children from Erieau, Ont., is held here today after Detroit police nipped what they said was his embryo career as a bandit who rode to the scene of robberies in taxi cabs.

Charles McGuire, who said he entered Detroit from Windsor last week, was arrested last night after a cab driver tipped police off that McGuire was going to attempt a holdup.

McGuire admitted hiring a cab to take him to a drug store where he robbed the clerk, Mrs. Gladys Dearnely, of $100.

Cab driver Baldessari Gusmona went to police with a story that McGuire had tipped him $20 and had asked to be picked up Wednesday night for "another ride."

Police asked Gusmona to return to his taxi stand in front of the hotel and wait until McGuire showed up. McGuire arrived on schedule. Police found a gun in his pocket.

Four Members Of 12-Man Crew Killed in Crash

Meridian, Tex., Feb. 26 —(AP)—Four members of a 12-man crew were killed in the crash of a United States air force B-29 bomber near here last night.

The eight other crew members, including Col. Alan D. Clark, 7th Bombardment wing commander, parachuted through the rain and fog to safety.

One of a flight of 20 B-29s bound for the West Coast, the bomber crashed in flames shortly after taking off from Carswell air base at Fort Worth, Tex. Clark was commander of the flight.

The four victims were found in or near the scene of the wreckage.

"We were flying on instruments at 10,000 feet in a heavy rain and fog," Clark said.

He said the plane was burning as it fell.

560.634 M.P.H. Record is Set By Jet Plane

London, Feb. 26 —(AP)—The Vickers Armstrong Aircraft Company said a jet-propelled supermarine military plane set a new speed record of 560.634 miles an hour for the 100-kilometre closed circuit course at Winchester today.

The plane, called the Attacker was piloted by M. J. Lithgow.

The previous record for such a course, 542.90 miles an hour, was claimed by a Gloster Meteor IV Feb. 6, flown by Sqdn. Ldr. Bill Waterton, formerly of Edmonton.

The Attacker carried full military equipment in circling the course.

Officially, the record is still held by Group Capt. John Cunningham, who last August beat the United States record for the closed circuit with a speed of just over 496 miles an hour. Both Waterton's and Lithgow's record have yet to be confirmed.

FATE OF BATTERED ANTI-COMMUNIST FORCES UNKNOWN

Communists Next Goal To Win Election

Prague, Feb. 26 — (AP) — The fate of Czechoslovakia's battered and beaten anti-communist forces was the big question mark today in this central European country, which fell under complete Communist dominion last night.

The communist party, largest but still a minority in parliament, controlled a new government made up of its members and sympathizers. The semblance of the old coalition was presented.

Communist Premier Klement Gottwald induced independent President Eduard Benes to approve this government last night. The president accepted resignations of 14 anti-Communist ministers, 12 of whom quit last week to protest Communist moves to control the police.

In six days of bloodless revolution, the communist party had pressed its demands and won. It controlled the cabinet. It gave orders through the police and "action committees" to the whole country. It had crushed, for the time being at least, all effective opposition.

The change was a step toward turning this little republic, modelled at birth after the United States, into a copy of its new idol, Soviet Russia.

The Communists' next goal is to win the coming election and a majority in parliament where they now have 38 per cent of the seats by themselves and 52 per cent with their allies, the social democrats. Strategy in the meantime was to tighten their grip on the country by putting down opposition.

Gottwald gave the cue when, in public rallies he spoke of the dozen resigning ministers as

Says Consumption Of Pork Cut 50 PC

Chatham, Feb. 26 (CP) —Clayton Frye of Sarnia, District Representative of the Ontario Hog Producers Association, asserted here yesterday that current pork consumption in Canada is less than 50 per cent of what it was last fall.

Addressing the Kent County Association, he declared that in the week ending Feb. 14, the total of hogs processed was 114,000 as compared to a figure of 74,000 for the corresponding period last year but said that most of the pork was moving into storage rather than to dinner tables.

He claimed that recent price increases were the cause for the drop in consumption and described the situation as a complete reversal of that prevailing in the war years when some Canadians would pay over-the-ceiling prices for pork when it was scarce.

CHILD RECOVERING

Chatham, Feb. 26 —(CP)—Six-year-old Margaret Kennedy is recovering in hospital today from a bullet wound suffered when a .38 calibre revolver, found by school children yesterday afternoon, accidentally discharged.

Police said they believed a nine-year-old boy picked up the revolver and began to play with it causing a bullet to hit a nearby tree and bounce back hitting the little girl in the leg.

Under-Rating of Jap Air Power Proved Expensive to Allied Plans

London, Feb. 26 —(AP)— The high cost of under-rating Japanese air power in southwest Pacific fighting was added up by Air Vice-Marshal Sir Paul Maltby in a report made public today.

Sir Paul, captured by the Japanese in the fall of Java, told of the disheartening early days of the Second World War in the Pacific in a report on air fighting released by the War Office.

The report told a story of an enemy bill presented against poor intelligence, misunderstanding, a lack of preparedness, and perhaps the most costly item: failure to recognize Japan as a dangerous air power.

Sir Paul said one expensive bobble in the Malaya-Sumatra-Java fighting was ignorance of the fact that the Japanese army air force was highly efficient.

In addition, the Allies did not realize that the prime Japanese fighter plane early in the war was the Zero, an aircraft which "proved superior to our own fighters."

This lack of technical knowledge of Japanese airplanes, which continued "up to the outbreak of the war," was destined to have air far reaching consequences in Malaya.

At the outset the Japanese had not only superior equipment but struck in overwhelming numbers. He estimated that in the Malaya fighting the Japanese used about 700 first-line aircraft against 158 Allied planes of obsolete and obsolescent types."

Sir Paul was assistant air officer commanding the R.A.F. Far East Command up to the fall of Singapore in February, then escaping with what he could, he went to Java where he was top R.A.F. officer to March 12. At his capture he was the highest British officer to be taken captive.

Britain, France And U.S. Condemn Disguised Grab

Declare Reds Seize Power Through Artificial Crisis

Washington, Feb. 26. (AP)—Britain, the United States and France today jointly condemned as a "disguised dictatorship" of Communists the new government set up in Czechoslovakia.

In a declaration issued at the State Department here the three governments, also said the Communists seized power through "a crisis artificially and deliberately instigated."

Used Tested Methods

With an apparent reference to earlier Communist power grabs, such as in Hungary, the three Western powers charged that the crisis served as a cover for "the use of certain methods already tested in other places."

As a result, the statement said, Czechoslovakia has suffered "the suspension of the free exercise of parliamentary institutions and the establishment of a disguised dictatorship of a single party."

The joint declaration said:

"The governments of the United States, France and Great Britain. . .can but condemn a development the consequences of which can only be disastrous for the Czechaslovak people, who had proved once more in the midst of the sufferings of the Second World War their attachment to the cause of liberty."

Finland May be Next

London, Feb. 26 —(AP)— Diplomatic sources here say Finland may be the next small country to feel the squeeze of Communist power. Others think Austria, France and Italy may be clamped in the Communist vise. There seems to be general agreement that the coup in Czechoslovakia has forged perhaps the most vital link in a Russian chain intended to block the Marshall plan.

The foreign office spokesman told a press conference that information from the British embassy in Prague indicates the

Careless Smokers Blamed in Most Forest Fires

Toronto, Feb. 26 —(CP) — Careless smokers were the cause of most of the forest fires in Ontario last year, when 84,032 acres were burned over, Lands Minister Scott said today.

Other starters of fires were lightning, campers, railways settlers, logging operators, road construction, mining operations and prospectors.

August turned out the worst month, when 466 fires were reported. Late autumn fires damaged an estimated 2,500,000 feet of salable lumber.

Fire-fighting equipment of the department now is listed as 28 aircraft, 2,000,000 feet of hose, 700 gasoline driven fire pumps and 3,556 hand pumps.

The department also operates 50 motorboats and 250 outboard motors as well as 50 railway "motor" cars. Nearly 180 of the approximate 300 range towers strategically located in northern Ontario are radio equipped.

GOV. KIM SIGLER ASKS NHL PREXY FOR CONFERENCE

Detroit Police to Fully Probe Reported Link Between Gamblers, N.H.L. Players

Detroit, Feb. 26 (AP) — Gov. Kim Sigler today asked Detroit Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy to make a "full investigation" of a reported link between gamblers and National Hockey League players.

He said he wanted a state-wide inquiry to follow what he called Toy's "partial investigation of what has taken place in Wayne County (Detroit.)"

At the same time the governor invited N.H.L. President Clarence Campbell to confer with him on reports of player betting. Campbell came here yesterday from Montreal to investigate the reported gambling.

Toy was asked by Sigler not to discuss the situation publicly "until he and I know what it's all about."

The governor, in a Lansing press conference, told reporters there had been "rumors and reports" that the hockey betting probe ties in with the 1945 murder of State Senator Warren G. Hooper "and other things."

Nothing But Rumors

"There is nothing but rumor yet and I want to know what it's all about," he said.

Referring to a reported wire recording of telephone calls alleged to have been made to two National Hockey players by a paroled bank robber and gambler, Sigler said he doesn't know "who has it or that there is one."

He said the public "is entitled to know whether anyone has been participating in crooked deals."

Sigler said Campbell has not yet asked him for permission to talk with the ex-convict, James (Rocco) Tamer, but indicated he might do so at a conference this afternoon.

Earlier the main hope of clarifying the clouded N.H.L. picture apparently rested on the possibility of Campbell obtaining permission to see Tamer whose arrest brought out the possibility that two eastern members of the league had been betting on the outcome of the N.H.L. games.

Last night Campbell referred to the purported recordings of tapped telephone conversations and said "if the evidence exists in fact then that's strong circumstantial evidence that the hockey players were involved in betting and it must be investigated to the limit."

Stakes Hockey Future

Toronto, Feb. 26 — (CP)—Art Ross, general manager of Boston Bruins, has staked his hockey future on his faith in members of his team who have all denied any connection with gambling on National Hockey League games.

If investigation proves that any Boston player bet on games, as suggested in Detroit reports, "I will get out of hockey for life," Ross said yesterday.

WALLET FOUND AFTER THREE YEARS

Lost about three years ago this coming summer, a purse or wallet containing a card, with name and address of the owner, and a small sum of money, was found recently between the seat covers of one of the Rawson buses. A few days ago Miss Jean Anderson of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, who with her parents and other members of the family spends a part of each summer's vacation in Belleville with relatives was surprised to receive the long lost wallet with its contents from the Rawson Bus Lines. At the time of the loss she made no report as she had not thought that it was lost in the bus but rather thought it had been mislaid or dropped on the street. Naturally she is very grateful to the Rawson Lines for their courtesy and thoughtfulness in looking after the interest of one of their passengers.

The two game rooms off the main lobby are now in the final stages of renovation. It looks as if the 'Y' intends to meet the spring with a shining interior.

The schedule for members has also undergone some changes, to meet the requirements. Members were informed recently through the mails as to the seasonal changes.

WOMAN REMANDED ON ARSON CHARGE

Appearing today in county police court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills on a charge of arson in connection with a fire at her home in Thurlow township, just outside the city, Mrs. Ellen Murray, Hillcrest, was remanded for one week. Mrs. Murray was granted bail of $500.

The fire at the Murray home occurred approximately 3 weeks ago, and was discovered by neighbors shortly after Mrs. Murray and her two children had left the house to take the train for Toronto. Firemen extinguished the blaze limiting the loss to the interior of the home and to contents.

19 SIDNEY RESIDENTS HAD NO LICENCES

Nineteen residents of Sidney township, residing on the Trent Road between Belleville and Trenton paid fines in local police court this morning for operating their radios without the necessary licence. Charges were preferred by radio licence investigators from the Department of Transport, A. G. E. Argue and E. N. Murray. Delinquents in each instance were assessed $5 for their failure to purchase their radio licence.

Students Learn By New Method

A new twist in education is being tried by the commercial department of the Belleville Collegiate Vocational School. This is a 'learning by looking' approach being tested by the senior commercial students.

For the past week or so, the students have been attending designated offices of all types, for the purpose of observing the various operational methods. The businessmen of the city have graciously allowed these future stenographers and bookkeepers the free hand to inspect their factories, offices, equipment, and have given freely of their time to explain points which were not quite clear.

The final test for the students will be a 2,500 word thesis of their own composition. This will entail the main points that they have observed and benefits that they have derived from this opportunity of gaining first-hand what a text-book could convey with only fractional clarity.

Dinner Party Held For Sam J. Kelly On 88th Birthday

A birthday cake with 88 candles formed the centrepiece at a dinner held in honor of Mr. Samuel J. Kelly, Halloway, last Monday.

The dinner was held at the home of Mr. Kelly's sister, Mrs. E. Lowery, Halloway. Seated at the dinner table were his son and daughter-in-law, brother and two sisters, and Rev. F. C. Beazer and Mrs. Beazer of Roslin.

An after-dinner address was delivered by Mr. Beazer in which he strongly emphasized the sterling worth of the guest of honor. Mr. Kelly spoke a few words of acknowledgment.

Mr. Kelly, the eldest son of the late Thomas Kelly and Rebecca McMurray, was born on February 23, 1860, at his home on the first concession of Tyendinaga township. On his twelfth birthday, he and his parents moved to the ninth concession of Thurlow where Mr. Kelly has resided ever since. Mr. Kelly enjoys fairly good health and the highest esteem of all his acquaintances.

LOSS NEARLY $30,000 ON 95 YEAR-OLD MILL

Allenford, Ont., Feb. 26 (CP)—Loss in Wednesday's fire that destroyed a 90-year-old grist mill in this Bruce County village was estimated today at close to $30,000 by members of the McCullough family which had operated it for 17 years.

Large quantities of seed grain and a truck also were lost with the three storey wooden building reinforced with metal siding. A spark from machinery was believed the cause.

British Cruiser, Sheffield, Sails For Honduras

London, Feb. 26 (AP) — The Admiralty announced today the British cruiser Sheffield has sailed from Colombia for British Honduras.

An authoritative source said the ship was dispatched "because of possible incidents staged by irresponsible elements in neighboring Guatemala." The informant refused to elaborate.

A Foreign Office spokesman said there recently had been a "virulent campaign" against Britain in the Guatemalan press.

"No doubt," the spokesman said, "it has its origin in recent events in the Antarctic."

The Guatemalan press and government have supported the claims of Argentina and Chile to the British-claimed Falkland Islands off the southeast coast of Argentina.

"At the same time," the spokesman said, "the Guatemalan press has resurrected a long-standing dispute between this country and Guatemala on the question of the British Honduras.

"At one time or another, Guatemala laid claims to part of all of the British Honduras. Since 1945 the British government has asked them to take the claim to an international court of justice."

(British Honduras is in Central America on the Caribbean, south of Yucatan, Mexico. Its area is 8,867 square miles and its estimated population in 1945 was 63,390.)

Britain also has suggested that Chile and Argentina submit the Falkland dispute to the international court.

Czechs' Chances Of Getting Loan Much Darker

Washington, Feb. 26 — (AP)—Czechoslovakia's already - dim chances of getting the $350,000,000 loan she has long sought from the world bank darkened today.

The Communist coup, at the least, will hold up the dispatch of a mission to check into the loan, bank officials said privately.

Poland and Yugoslavia, the other two Russian-dominated countries which are members of the bank and the world monetary fund, have asked for loans of $600,000,000 and $300,000,000 respectively.

Neither has had any luck, although the bank sent a mission to Warsaw last June and showed some interest in helping Poland boost her output of coal.

President John J. McCloy holds that the bank's lending policy is not determined by political considerations. But he also says that political matters are considered when they have economic effects which might jeopardize repayment.

Seven Killed In Korean Riots

Seoul, Feb. 26 —(AP)— The United States army reported today five or six Korean civilians and a policeman were killed in a renewal of Communist-inspired agitation against the United Nations. Thirteen Koreans were injured seriously.

Saboteurs also destroyed a bridge, cut telephone wires and placed ties across railroad tracks.

The report said groups of from 50 to 1,000 attacked police boxes last night at widely scattered points in southern Korea.

The incidents were similar to those of Feb. 7 in which 47 persons were killed. Rioters at that time carried placards demanding the withdrawal of the U. N. commission for Korea. The commission was thwarted by the Russians in its attempt to plan elections leading to Korean self-government.

Completion of Moira River Watershed Survey Likely This Year Says Minister

The Hon. Dana Porter, Minister of Planning and Development, told a Hastings County delegation this week that prospects for the completion of the survey of the Moira River Watershed this year "were very encouraging."

The Minister after hearing the delegation, said that he had "every reason to believe that this work would be completed in 1948."

The delegation consisted of the Moira River Conservation Authority Chairman, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Mayor D. L. Storey, Belleville, City Chairman of Public Works, Charles L. Hyde, Reeve Harry Harrison, Thurlow, Reeve John Morrison, Rawdon, and County Clerk Erle Denyes.

At a recent meeting of the Conservation Authority, Col. Vanderwater was re-elected chairman with Reeve Charles Buskard, Deloro, named vice-chairman. Thirteen of the seventeen municipalities, three of which are in Lennox and Addington, represented on the Authority, were present.

Maturing War Savings Certificates Must be Sent to Ottawa for Cashing

Ottawa, Feb. 26. (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott, today in the Commons, ruled out the possibility of the government allowing the holders of maturing war savings certificates to cash them at banks or local postoffices and said they still must be sent to the Registrar of War Savings Certificates at Ottawa.

He said the government had given this question "serious" consideration during the last year but had come to the conclusion it would be "impossible to justify" such a procedure because of the "very large number" of duplicate certificates still outstanding.

These duplicates were issued by the government over the last few years to replace certificates reported lost or stolen.

Checking Needed

"The number of certificates reported lost or stolen is much too great—it is of the order of 60,000—to permit bank tellers or postmasters to check through a list before making settlement, nor could such a list possibly be kept up to date."

The only way to prevent overpayment is to have the certificates sent to Ottawa, as now is being done, and have them checked against a central registry maintained here before payment is made.

Mr. Abbott said he wanted to emphasize "how simple and inexpensive the present procedure really is."

All the holder of a maturing certificate has to do is endorse it on the back as required, insert it in an envelope addressed to the Registrar, War Savings Certificates, Ottawa, and drop the envelope into a mail box. There is no need for a covering letter, registration of the certificate or even a postage stamp on the envelope. Any change of address can be noted on the certificate.

No Charge

Cheques issued in redemption of certificates may be negotiated free of charge at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada upon satisfactory identification.

Mr. Abbott noted that the banks have offered to provide a collection service for a modest charge through which they will forward the certificate to Ottawa for collection and credit the proceeds to the account of the certificate owner.

Dealing with complaints of delay in the instance of cheques, he acknowledged that there had been some delay when the banks first began sending in certificates for redemption but said a test examination made recently showed that cheques now are being mailed not later than the fourth day after certificates are received.

When certificates are received in advance for their maturity date, they are either returned to the sender with an explanatory note or, if the time is short, are held until the month in which they mature and a cheque then mailed.

Part of Preserve May be Thrown Open to Hunters

Following recent reports that deer by the hundreds were dying of starvation in the Peterborough Crown Game Preserve, the Hon. Harold Scott, Minister of Lands and Forests, hinted that the area might be thrown open to hunters unless the Department can find some way of reducing the mortality rate in the preserve.

The minister said that his department has watched developments at the preserve with considerable alarm and has had its best biologists studying the situation. "'We may find it necessary to throw open a portion of the preserve or the entire area so that hunters could reduce the deer population to a point where the food available would sustain the balance of the animals."

In a recent report, it was stated that the bodies of large numbers of deer, emaciated through starvation, had been found by hydro workers and others, in the preserve.

TAKES ARAB CREDIT

Swashbuckling Abdul Kadir Huseini, Arab military commander of Jerusalem, is reported to have claimed Arab responsibility for the bombing of Ben Yehuda St. in the centre of the Jewish section of the Holy City. Abdul Kadir, who is a cousin of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, is quoted by Arab newspapers as saying that a "unit of Arab fighters" carried out the bombing that killed more than 50 persons in retaliation for last week's Jewish bombing of the market place in Arab Ramleh, where seven Arabs were killed.

The seven were brought here after their arrest and held in immigration detention quarters until their cases were reviewed. After their deportation was ordered they were freed on bond pending arrangements for their return to Europe.

The remaining five were said to be still in Toronto.

All seven said they had paid large sums for the false papers which enabled them to enter Canada.

Single Student Veterans May Get $10 Month Extra

Ottawa, Feb. 26 — (CP) — Increases in the allowances of single student veterans with dependent mothers are under "active consideration" and an announcement granting them an additional $10 monthly is expected to be made shortly, it was learned today.

This would bring their allowances into line with increases being granted to married student veterans, announced Feb. 26 in the Commons by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. At that time married veterans were granted an increase from $80 to $90 a month, with increases to $18, $14, $12 and $10 for the first, second, third, fourth and subsequent children. Previously the allowance for children was $12 for the first two, $10 for the third and $8 for each additional child.

No increase was announced for single veterans, who received $60 a month, and Veterans Minister Gregg, in response to a question from T. A. Kidd (PC-Kingston), said he would take under advisement a suggestion that student veterans with dependent mothers be granted the $10 increase.

All the increases concerning students will be made by order-in-council, retroactive to last Jan. 1, although the increase is not expected to be reflected in cheques until April.

RED SPARKPLUG

The man behind the series of raids on headquarters of Czech anti-Communists is Vaclay Nosek (above), Czech minister of the interior, believed to be the sparkplug of the Communist drive to take over complete power in Czechoslovakia. Oil Estimated at Billions of Barrels Contributes to Saudi Arabia Wealth

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, Feb. 26 (AP)—A vast reservoir of oil worth billions of dollars lies scattered under 450,000 square miles of sun-baked rock and sand, in Saudi Arabia.

That is the area for oil exploitation under the concession granted to the Arabian-American Oil Company.

Geologists on the basis of American exploration of 3 per cent of this vast desert area estimate as much as 100,000,000,000 barrels of oil may ultimately be tapped by Aramco Wells.

That would mean upwards of $100,000,000,000 worth on the future world market. It would also mean $23,000,000,000 in royalties for King Ibn Saud's once half-forgotten kingdom.

From the small-scale exploration to date cautious executives of Aramco admit reserves of at leats least 25,000,000,000 barrels have been indicated.

Cordial Relationship

While current bitterness of Mid-East Arabs over alleged pro-Zionist actions of the United States Government clouds the horizin here, intimate relations of Aramco with the sagacious Ibn Saud continue to be extremely cordial.

Ibn Saud is a rare king in the modern world. He rules—with an iron hand—as well as reigns.

Because of his discipline over some 5,000,000 Arab subjects Saudi Arabia is one of the few Mid-East states where Americans are safe as guests of the country, regardless of Arab anger over Palestine.

What Soviet propaganda may call capitalistic window dressing, but Aramco officials describe as enlightened self-interest, is in a great measure responsible for Saudi Arabia's confidence in these troubled times.

Since obtaining exclusive oil rights from Ibn Saud in 1933 for a term of 60 years Aramco's fundamental policy has been to maintain his trust.

His royalty is said to be at least the second highest in the world. Only in Venezuela are American oil developers reported paying more per barrel to the government than here, and Venezuela is a scene of heavy international competition.

But royalties are not Aramco's only contribution to Saud. Arabia's progress.

Higher Wage Scale

Before Aramco's advent the Saudi Arabian daily wage scale averaged less than one rial—30 cents. Now 13,500 Arab employees of the American concern average $1.35, and 90 cents is the minimum.

Aramco is erecting a modern Arab town of brick dormitories with the latest conveniences next to the American air-conditioned settlement at Dhahran.

Its $350,000 Arab hospital is half completed.

It maintains a model farm of 3,000 irrigated acres of gardens where the future of Saudi Arabia's agriculture is being shaped.

In transforming his nomadic people into citizens of the machine age Ibn Saud has found many projects into which to plow back his oil income.

A railway with Diesel locomotives is being constructed from Damman near Dhahran to connect Riyahd, Ibn Saud's capital, with the Persian Gulf. It will cost more than $32,000,000.

A decade ago Saudi Arabia consisted of two classes—chieftains and peasants. Thanks to Armaco's efforts and Ibn Saud's interest a middle class of businessmen and technicians is springing up.

$22,000,000 Dividend

Aramco's first dividend—$22,000,000—was declared last year the same time as nearly $24,000,000 in royalties was paid to Ibn Saud.

It is estimated that Aramco's total investment in Saudi Arabia will exceed $1,000,000 eventually. The investment budget for the next five years is $500,000,000.

The great bugbear to Americans in Saudi Arabia is that somehow American troops may get involved in a shooting war against the Arabs in Palestine.

That possibility, they aver, would be liable to destroy the United States position not only in Saudi Arabia but in all Moslem lands from the Dardanelles to the Himalayas.

BRITAIN, FRANCE

change of government was not brought about by democratic means.

Non-Communist newspapers in many parts of Europe called the coup another step toward totalitarianism in Central Europe. Communists hailed it as a victory for democracy. The Moscow radio said:

"The Czechoslovak people have resolutely taken the road of freedom and democracy.

Elections Coming Soon

In Finland and Italy, as in Czechoslovakia, elections are coming up soon and the Communists want to win them. Finland's coalition government has acknowledged that the country must remain on the best of terms with Russia.

Italy and France have barred Communists from their cabinets and the best efforts of the Leftists thus far by hard-hitting, paralyzing strikes, have failed to budge Premier Robert Schuman in France and Premier Alride de Gasperi in Italy. But the pressure never has been relaxed.

In Vienna, Austria's interior minister, Oskar Helmer, announced that an increased guard had been seen along the Czechoslovak side of the Czech-Austrian frontier. Helmer added there was no evidence that political refugees were fleeing into Austria.

Informed sources in London diplomatic circles predicted that Czechoslovakia now will be drawn more tightly into the interlocking network of mutual defence, friendship and trade pacts woven since Russia first denounced the Marshal aid-Europe program.

The Czechs had resisted joining this spreading web.

Since the first sharp reaction to the Marshal Plan, in which it seemed for a time at the beginning that Czechoslovakia would like to take part, this is what has happened in Soviet neighbor states:

Romania—King Michael abdicated and new elections were ordered. Communists took control of all key cabinet posts and treaties were signed with Russia Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Hungary.

Bulgaria—formed into a virtual one-party state under Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov. Opposition leader Nikola Petkov was executed for treason.

Poland—opposition leader Stanislaw Mikolajczyk fled to escape arrest. Communist leaders have been urging a formal merger with Socialists, who share the government. A new treaty was signed with Russia.

Hungary—so many "converts" have been trying to join the Communist party that a party ban was ordered on new members, beginning next month.

Yugoslavia—the nine-country cominform (organization known as the Communist information bureau) headquarters was placed at Belgrade.

And now Czechoslovakia has been pulled into line.

FATE OF BATTERED

"agents of foreign reaction." Justice Minister Alexej Cepicka, newly promoted from Minister of Internal Trade said: "The forces of reaction will now try to make their come-back."

Date Not Decided

The election date has not been decided. When it comes, the likelihood seems to be that voters will be given a choice of several tickets but that candidates on those other than the Communist will have to be — in the Communist phrase— "democratic progressive" members.

Meanwhile, the pattern for the other parties was to purge their ranks of men and women fallen into disfavor because of anti-communist views.

Many of the big names in the three parties whose ministers resigned to initiate the cabinet crisis are parliamentary deputies. Pending an election, no one could say whether some other way might be found to oust them or have a parliamentary committee strip them of immunity.

The ministry of the interior, long communist - controlled, has been building up its charges against many of the ministers for months. Accusations have been made that spies for the western powers have been using Czechoslovakia as a base to work against Russia.

The communists had a propaganda campaign under way against "foreign and domestic reaction." In it, they had the use of Communist-controlled radio systems, their own press, a former opposition press now purged of foes and critics, and public meetings from works councils up to party rallies.

No Censorship

Up until this morning there has been no censorship of the Associated Press. Other foreign correspondents also appeared to be working without restrictions on what they wrote. However information was hard to get.

Before the government change, opposition newspapers often carried accounts that opened up paths to information. Since Monday night, outspoken criticism on communist party action has disappeared.

In preparation for the election, the communists have two main tasks:

One is to write a new constitution. This would replace the constitution of the first republic, born out of the First World War and guided to world respect by Thomas G. Masaryk and later Benes.

Work on the constitution has lagged in arguments over incorporating communist ideas into it. There is no reason now why the work should not move quickly.

The second task is to advance as quickly as possible the aims of labor as set forth by the unions.

Their chief demand is for nationalization of every industry employing more than 50 persons.

BOOKED HOCKEY BETS?

James Tamer, ex-bank robber who was returned to Detroit for parole violation, and who, according to the Detroit Times, had booked bets for two members of the Boston Bruins hockey team and one member of the New York Rangers' squad. One player is reputed to have bet $550 against his own team. Names of the three players involved in the investigation have not been divulged.

British Defence Program

British Minister of Defence Alexander in his White Paper on Defence which has been presented to the British Parliament, states that "the supreme object of British policy must continue to be the prevention of war. In the present situation where the United Nations Organization is not yet able to enforce peace, the best deterrent to war is tangible evidence of our intention and ability to withstand attack. Whether it is a question of self-defence or the support of the United Nations, it is necessary to maintain British forces in peacetime to deter aggression which might lead to war."

He has pointed out that new developments in science which increase the possibilities of suprise mean that the acceptable standards of defence are bound to be raised, including the question of the system of defence for the civilian population on whose productive efforts the successful conduct of military operations so largely depend.

The British defence is the production of "a co-ordinated long-term defence plan within a general but flexible policy on the shape and size of the forces." Accordingly balanced forces are to be maintain, "adequate to fulfil their responsibilities in peace and to serve as a nucleus of expansion in war." It will be necessary to maintain the principal of universal military service in the United Kingdom, he stated. The intake of national servicemen for 1949 and 1950 at least should be limited to a maximum of 150,000, the Minister of Defence said.

Britain's obligations as a great power are seen in the objectives of the defence policy. He remarked, "it remains the firm intention of His Majesty's Government to assure the security of the United Kingdom, to maintain its interests throughout the world, and to enable it to play its full part in the preservation of world peace. The forces we maintain in peace must be sufficient to provide an ample nucleus for expansion in war, to meet the need for garrisons overseas, including those engaged on occupational duties, and to furnish our contribution, when needed, to the United Nations armed forces. All these duties are inescapable responsibilities of a great power intent on preserving peace. The moral and economic strength of the country conditions the extent to which these duties can be fulfilled. The diligence, work and purpose of the nation have a direct bearing on her ability to keep the peace."

"New Deal"

A new era is seen in the outlook for and treatment of 3,500 prisoners in Canadian penitentiaries as twenty-five prison officers, who have been in the penitentiary service, have begun their study of the recovery or redemption of prisoners to lives of value to themselves and the community in which they will live at the close of their terms. The Penitentiaries Commission has begun a policy of education looking toward rehabilitation rather than punishment to bring the people who are prisoners to the stage when they can begin a new life as lawabiding citizens.

Naturally the prison officials will have much to do with the inculcation of the ideals which it is hoped will leave an effect upon those who have been committed to the seven institutions, so that they may be led to see that there is a better way of life than that which has brought men to the state of being prisoners.

Increased interest in modern psychology and psychiatry is the impulse which is at work. There is a sincere desire to redeem the lives of men and. women who have committed on conviction of offences against others and the laws of the land to spend terms in prisons.

As an article in Wednesday's press stated, the impulse and trend are not that prison officials are becoming soft but that the redemptive principle will be stressed in the treatment of prisoners.

Modern science has delved deeply into human personality and has succeeded in many ways in getting at the cause of social attitudes and conditions and outlook on life by prisoners and it comes with a hope that the best that is in those who are held in long or short detention may come under influence that will wean them away from the attitudes which prisoners do possess and which are the reason why these inmates are where they are. Punishment for crime is necessary and the question of redeeming a person to a life of usefulness is also involved.

Falklands

British Foreign Secretary Bevin declared in the Commons on Wednesday that if the governments of Chile and Argentina would consent to an agreement with Britain to submit to the International World Court at the Hague the question of title to the Falkland Islands in which Chile and Argentina have shown interest of late, in regard to the Falkland Islands in Antarctica. At the same time he rejected a suggestion of the dispute being referred to the U.N. Security Council.

Then too he spoke firmly these words, "people cannot go on interfering with British territory and then as a result of kicking up a row expect us to go to the Security Council."

Manchester Guardian recently commented "Unfortunately, fishing and weather reporting are not the only things today in Antarctica; these lands have strategic importance and mineral potentialities . . . The Foreign Office has quite rightly proposed that the question of sovereignty should be referred to the International Court at the Hague, but that is not good enough for President Peron, who has made a counter-proposal for a conference at Buenos Aires."

In Britain

Easter which is a little over four weeks away will miss for Britishers some of the charm of the season since there is no likelihood of the petrol or gasoline ration being restored for the happy season. However railroads in the Old Land are to have 250,000 tons' increase of ration for the season's traffic. Britons as a people enjoy the Easter holiday season to a marked degree. Present restrictions are a part of the austerity program arising out of the economic stringency.

This winter has not been so severe on the people of the British Isles as was last winter with its intense cold, its heavy snowfalls and weather disturbances and floods. The winter of 1946-47 in the United Kingdom was one of the worst on record and left its mark on British problems which were naturally all too pressing at such a time, so soon after the Second World War's end.

Every fire and every automobile accident causes a loss to the community, whether or not insurance is carried. Citizens of Canada are paying for last year's $50,000,000 in fire losses and $25,000,000 in insured automobile losses. For this total, together with burglary, plate glass and general liability losses, is reflected in the prices everyone pays for goods. — Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Of all the countries in the world, the United States and Canada are in an enviable position. We do not always realize our good fortune, until it is impressed upon us, remarks Charlottetown Patriot. Out of our abundance we are helping to feed the world. We are proving that we are our brothers' keepers.

We would especially like to see representation in the National Air Races of countries whose air men fought in the sky alongside our own. If the present scrambled state of international affairs persists, we'll keep wondering if they'll all be represented, even if invited. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

This will be a safer country when all those skid-more, traction-less tires wear out, Cleveland Plain Dealer notes.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 26th., 1928.

Two accidents occurred in last night's city hockey league games, both resulting in a broken nose. Paul Hibbard, goal tender for the Quinte Electricians and playing against the Intelligencer Blackhawks, was hit by a hard shot square on the nose and Russell Gerow, playing for the "Y" Men against the Imperial Oil also received a broken nose when hit in a wild melee on the ice. Both players are reported as doing well today. Both games resulted in a tie, the score being 3 to 3. John Canning, Punch Derry and Johnny Canning did the scoring for the Quintes and Henry Canning, Brown and Cook were the marksmen for the Hawks. In the game between the "Y" Men and the Imperial Oil, Armstrong and Gerow did the scoring for the "Y" Men and Jeffery and Arnott scored for the Imperial team. Derby Jeffery was the man who stood between the "Y" Men and victory and the junior goaler was certainly in good form. Ken Colling handled both games in his usual capable manner.

30 YEARS AGO

Feb. 26th., 1918.

The mild weather of yesterday followed by a downpour of rain during the greater part of the night, was responsible for many Belleville citizens suffering inconvenience and damage owing to the flooding of their properties. This was especially the case on the west side of Coleman Street, the north end of Everett Street and a part of Moira Street which is on the Coleman Flats. At an early hour water from the flats developed into a torrent which raged down Boswell Street, crossed Moira Street and then flooded houses on Coleman and Everett Streets. There was no warning and the water rushed into houses and in several places the lower floors were covered with water to a depth of one foot or more. Fires were put out and much inconvenience experienced. By noon the water had subsided to a large extent owing to the weather turning colder. On Jane Street, just south of Catherine Street, the road and yards were flooded. As soon as possible civic employees were sent to assist marooned citizens. By means of planks placed from doorways to the street many persons were able to emerge from their homes. The situation will not become more serious if the cold weather continues for a few days, but should mild weather follow immediately there will be a renewal of flood conditions.

40 YEARS AGO

Feb. 26th., 1908.

The Belleville water works department according to the auditor's statement, shows a net balance for the year 1907 of $2,874.41 after paying all expenses, providing for interest and sinking fund. The showing is creditable to the department and its chairman, Ald. Vermilyea, who has spared neither time nor trouble to advance its interests.

The snow fall last night which was accompanied by a strong southeast wind, had the effect of demoralizing traffic to a large extent in this district.

A branch of the Traders' Bank was opened in Tweed yesterday in the premises formerly occupied by the Sovereign Bank.

Two rinks of Belleville curlers played at Cobourg last night and won by eight shots. Frank Dolan and Judge Forin were the Belleville skips.

Mr. James Warham, Grand Master of the 'Prentice Boys and Mr. O. C. Brickman, Grand Secretary, went to Kingston today to attend a grand social function to be given by the 'Prentice Boys of that city this evening.

50 YEARS AGO

Mr. O. Dunning is now engaged in the carpet department at T. P. Brown's store.

Mr. W. Sheriff of the Picton Gazette was in town today.

Mr. Harrison Ross of Thurlow township, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Louis Benmore, formerly of this city, now of Mentone, California, returned home last evening.

Mr. L. Yeomand and Mr. Euguene Richardson will leave shortly for the Pacific Coast.

Miss Morris and Miss Madden of Sinclair's millinery department are attending the spring openings in Toronto.

Mr. J. W. Parks, formerly of this city, now manager of C. B. Scantlebury's store in Kingston, will leave shortly to open a branch wall paper store for Mr. Scantlebury in Winnipeg.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who made the longest speech in Congress?

It is hard to say who has made the longest speech in Congress. In the days of Clay, Webster and Calhoun it was not unusual for a Senator to keep the floor for several successive days. Often these long speeches had little or no relation to the pending bill. They were made to show off the oratorical ability of the speaker, to publicize a cause, to electioneer or to delay proceedings.

Under the Senate rules a Senator, after obtaining recognition, can hold the floor as long as he makes a pretense of speaking.

The longest continuous speech ever made in Congress was delivered in the Senate in October, 1893, by William Vincent Allen, a Populist Senator from Nebraska, or both opponents will prefer to hours against a bill proposing to repeal the silver purchase clause of the Sherman act of 1890.

The elder Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin holds the recrod for continuous occupancy of the Senate floor. In 1908, while fillibustering against an emergency currency bill, he held the floor for 18 hours and 20 minutes, but did not speak continuously. He was frequently interrupted by other Senators and took advantage of many othe ways of resting, such as stalling, pausing, looking at references and suggesting the absence of a quorum, which requires a roll call. A roll call in the Senate usually takes about ten minutes.

A remarkable fillibuster occurred in 1915 when a group of Senators succeeded in talking the Ship Purchase Bill to death. Senator Reed Smoot of Utah spoke for 11 hours and 23 minutes virtually without interruption and without leaving his desk in the Senate chamber.

Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington occupied the floor for 13 hours, but had a rest of an hour and three minutes. During this same debate Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire, then almost 80 years old, spoke for seven hours, 20 minutes and then did not leave the chamber for a rest. Only two days later he spoke again for four hours and five minutes.

This fillibuster caused the longest continuous sitting of the Senate — from noon, February 8, to 6 p.m. February 10.

In June, 1935, Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana conducted a one-man fillibuster against a bill extending the National Recovery Act and held the floor for 15 hours and 35 minutes.

HOUSE DISCUSSES

Speak in Debate

In the Throne Speech debate, J. M. Dechene (L—Athabaska) said he wished to urge writers and others not to "lend an ear" to Communists and others who were ready to destroy the institutions and type of government Canada now had.

C. H. Fraser (PC—Peterborough West) called for construction of a Trans-Canada highway and for a full investigation into the Crown - owned National Film Board.

E. L. Bowerman (CCF—Prince Albert) called for reimposition of price controls, while John Sinnott (L—Springfield) called for the improvement of tourist facilities in his constituency.

In opening proceedings, Finance Minister Abbott said the government could not allow holders of maturing war savings certificates to cash the mat banks or local post offices. A large number of certificates had been last and duplicates could only be checked against a central registry list held by the registrar of War Savings.

Revenue Minister McCann said five employees of the income tax office at Saskatoon, Sask., were dismissed when investigation showed that returns of more than 100 taxpayers were manipulated to avoid penalties for late filing of returns.

Postmaster General Bertrand said no action has been taken to ban from the mails the Montreal weekly, Le Combat, whose offices were padlocked by the Quebec government last week on the grounds that the publication was communistic.

Works Minister Fournier said his department is calling for new tenders for the construction of a new dredge for the east coast

No objection was taken to adoption of a Progressive Conservative motion for production of a "paraphrased" copy of evidence taken by the Royal Commission on Canadian participation in the defence of Hong Kong. Defence Minister Claxton said it would take considerable time to prepare the evidence in proper form

In the Throne Speech debate, Mr. Dechene quoted Gratton O'Leary, associate director of the Ottawa Journal, as expressing surprise at the decline in the quality and authority of parliament. Mr. O'Leary had stated that because business and professional men were refusing to join a political party and to go to nominating conventions, the people were getting a weak executive and a strong bureaucracy.

Mr. Dechene said the present parliament was as strong as any in history and he was surprised at attempts of the press to belittle either its character or its strength. Such attempts simply aided those who would introduce

"I do not know about now, Communism to Canada.

but a few weeks ago meetings of Communists, fellow travellers and believers in the Communistic policy of Russia, some of them members of the civil service were being held in the city of Ottawa preparing to sabotage the service in case a call should come from overseas if th eoccasion arose," he said. "That is not far fetched."

Mr. Sinnott took issue with J. M. Macdonnell (PC-Muskoka Ontario)for suggesting earlier in the debate that the interest rate be increased to stop inflation.

"High interest rates are the cancer of civilization," said Mr. Sinnott. "As long as rates are high, the powerful and wealthy are bound to swallow the weak."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

WHO CARES WHICH METHOD THE DOCTOR USES?

Now comes an osteopathic physician who begins by expressing the hope that I will have the "guts to print" his letter. Then he proceeds to chide me for my unfairness toward osteopathy, and he incloses a booklet which tells among other things that "Physicians and surgeons, D.O., prescribe medicine for internal and external use, and their prescriptions can be filled by any licensed pharmacist" in the state. He says my answer to Miss C. F. M. irked him —it appears I referred Miss C. F. M. to Webster, probably for Webster's definition of the word osteopath or osteopathy and so adroitly left her believing that the D O. (Doctor of Osteopathy) is not a physician and surgeon.

If it isn't the dentists, the optometrists, the homeopaths, the brass specialists or the yes-men of the A M A. (or rather the Pooh-Bah who tells the yes-men what to think) it is the big dairy interests, the cheat-food makers or the wine and beer people— somebody is always after my scalp.

In view of my respect for osteopaths, at least for the majority of osteopaths I have known, I am saddened by this one's letter.

More than once I have told in this column how, long ago, another young physician and I procured the application of a young osteopathic physician for membership in the regular county medical society of which we were members and also members of the board of censors — the committee of the organization that considered the applicant's qualifications and reported favorably or unfavorably to the society.

Well, of course we reported favorably on the osteopathic physician's application. The physician was a good character, and had passed the same state licensing board examinations, in all subjects, as had one or two M. D.'s then practising in the city. But the old timers in the county medical society indignantly rejected the application and some of them wanted to expel certain members of the board of censors for recommending the osteopathic physician.

In my opinion all persons who purpose to practise any form or branch of the healing art should be required to have the same schooling or training — call it medical or whatever you like. This includes regulars ("allopaths" to you, stupid), homeopaths, osteopaths, any and all "drugless," "natural" or eclectic methods or systems, dentists, optometrists, and other branches of medicine and/or surgery — of course practitioners of special branches should be required to have whatever post-graduate technical training their chosen field, but whether it be dentistry, optometry, physical therapy, or whatnot, may require, but in any case the basic education leading to the doctorate degree, M. D , should be the minimum standard for every one who seeks a license to practise any form of healing.

WEDDINGS

YORK—PATRICK

A quiet, but very pretty wedding took place at nine o'clock on the morning of Feb. 21st., in Christ Church, Belleville, when Edna Jean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Patrick, of Glen Miller, became the bride of Calvin Leonard York, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. York, of Belleville, with Rev. J. Grant Sparling as the officiating clergyman.

The bride made a charming appearance in a street length dress of poudre blue crepe, with matching hat and brown accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses. Her only attendant was Mrs. H. Carter, sister of the groom, and Mr. Carter acted as groomsman. After a short wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. York will take up residence in Belleville.

Women's Activities

YORK ROAD W.I.

Brighton and Murray — The February meeting of the York Road Women's Institute took the form of a supper served in the basement of Smithfield United Church, when the members' husbands were invited. Covers were laid for seventy guests. Judge C. Anderson, of Belleville, the guest speaker, gave an interesting and helpful address on the Institute motto, "For Home and Country". Community singing was enjoyed. Mesdames H. Coulter, F. Denyes, A. Hayes and Meiklejohn were called upon to render an impromptu quartet.

Instead of the roll call the members husbands were asked to give the maiden name of their wife and the date of their marriage.

Judge Anderson was accompanied by Mrs. Anderson and their young son, also by his sister, Mrs. Hudgins, Mr. Hudgins and their daughter.

Many were pleased to renew acquaintance with the Judge and his sister and to meet their families. When of teen age they lived in Smithfield for several years, while their father the late Rev. T. H. P. Anderson was the pastor of Smithfield circuit.

Weekend Players Score Triumph, 'Dear Ruth', First Presentation, Happily Performed by Young Actors

A warmly appreciative audience of more than eight hundred was present Wednesday evening in the Collegiate Auditorium to welcome the first presentation of Belleville's own "Little Theatre" Group, the Weekend Players. Formed largely of B.C.I.V.S. alumni, the ambitious young cast chose for their initial offering Norman Krasna's war-time Broadway hit, "Dear Ruth". This play, at first sight a formidable undertaking, proved, in practice, a most fortunate choice.

The happy, cheerful dialogue, skilful dramatic construction, and simplicity of scene, all lent themselves generously to amateur performance. Those in attendance who obviously remembered the recent visit of an excellent movie version to a local theatre, greeted each familiar situation with genuine appreciation and generous applause.

Philip Flagler, familiar "Voice of CJBQ ,portrayed "Judge Harry Wilkins". His greater maturity and experience, combined with undoubted talent and a fine stage presence, appeared to inspire his fellows, and his version of the jovial father set the pace for a light-hearted, witty, comedy-romance.

The part of "Mrs. Edith Wilkins", smartly sophisticated but motherly wife, was charmingly performed by Alice Matthews.

Ruth Blatherwick was happily cast as "Miss Ruth Wilkins", "mythical" light-o'-love of Bill Bankier nostalgic young pilot officer. Their romantic scenes, carefully and tenderly acted, formed the theme of the drama.

The dreamy, adolescent part of "Miriam Wilkins", enfant terrible of the piece, gave fresh scope to the delightful talents of petite Jeanne White.

Bud Cavanaugh, as the hapless "Albert Kummer", was given a hilarious welcome by an audience who perhaps recalled his sterling performances in the annual Kiwanis Shows.

'Martha Seawright" and "Sgt. Chuck Vincent", portraying young love in travail and in triumph, were prettily and convincingly enacted by Vera Flindall and Stuart Woods, who formed the centrepiece of an attractive wedding tableau.

Shirley Thomas, as the trim little maid, "Dora", added much to the continuity and pace of the show, while Ed. Waterhouse's characterization of "Harold Klobbermeyer" brought the play to its laugh-loaded climax.

A smartly designed and richly furnished stage setting, rendered the more effective by "a host of golden daffodils", provided a fitting background for a very satisfactory production.

London Displays Striking Models in Spring Shows

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 26 —(CP)— London's spring show revealed that designers favor the new look in formal as well as every-day wear.

Taffeta, tie-silk, slipper satin, grosgrain, petersham, satin-backed bengaline chiffon, net, faille and damask all played their part in cocktail, dinner and evening gowns but brocades provided the most striking models.

Most of these had off-the-shoulder or strapless necklines, sometimes with crinoline skirts or gathered hipline, bustle and train effect.

Startlingly brilliant was a flame colored brocade by Angele Delanghe with tight bodice and full bustle. Another Delanghe creation was a red lace evening gown moulded to the figure with full flare from calf length.

In cocktail suits Delanghe favored stiff materials with full skirts and enormous bustles. In a black moire suit with straight front skirt and low back bustle draping she used a white moire blouse.

Many designers used blouse, lapel and cuff contrasts in the same materials in their ensembles. Embroidery also was popular, in black bugle, china bead, cut steel, black jet and broderie anglaise.

These were used occasionally in panel effect on an undershirt showing through a corresponding net panel in the skirt of the dress or ensemble. A cocktail suit created in corded petersham, with oyster satin lapels, cuffs and decollete blouse, embroidered in black jet.

The "Renoir" Look

Molyneux favored the "Renoir" look with its tight-fitting bodice, buttoned down the front, wide full skirt and frilled lingerie. He used also the padded basque with full skirts over stiffened taffeta petticoats.

Jaeger's evening gowns were also partial to the "Renoir" neckline, simple and full-skirted, the only decoration being the very wide, check or tartan sash tied in an immense bow in front.

Dresses for Royal garden parties, Ascot and Goodwood were printed crepes, check taffetas, crisp piques and printed cotton created in the straighter lines with ruching, hip and bustle accentuation.

A Hartnell creation in black satin under black net decorated with black and blue stars merited its name, "Witchcraft." Other Hartnell models included a white satin crinoline-skirted gown painted like Sevres china.

He also showed a satin, made in Scotland, tinted to a beautiful lichen green, a dress embossed with hand embroidered white lilac, having a little bolero of embroidered lilac tied under the chin with a large pierrot bow, and a cream brule satin with applique band of cream guipure lace.

A very decollete model was shown by Alma Foster. Full-skirted, in black satin — ballet length in front falling to train length behind — it had a very low-necked bodice in black lace relieved only by the red satin used for the under brassiere and narrowing to thin band at the back waistline.

4th Belleville Scouts and Cubs Hold Banquet

The 4th Belleville Boy Scouts and Cubs held a Father and Son banquet at the Kiwanis Centre Tuesday evening. Over 125 watched the impressive investitures of Assistant Cub Master Miss Verna Miller by Cub Master, Miss Lois Kellaway, and Assistant Scout Master Don Langman by Scout Master Fred Churchill.

Field Commissioner A. Jackson from Provincial Boy Scout headquarters at Toronto spoke to the meeting about the fundamental forces in the Boy Scout Movement which resulted in the movement being so large, so important, and so worthwhile. The first force was the teaching of respect for the rights of others. The second force was the teaching of international good fellowship which overcomes racial and religious barriers.

Commissioner Jackson pointed out that the Scout Movement deals with the development of youth, a country's most valuable asset. For the proper development of this asset the movement requires the finest leaders and the co-operation and support of the parents.

Cooked With Candle

In a lighter vein, Commissioner Jackson showed the boys how, in camp, after "lights-out", he used to cook bacon and eggs with a candle. The speaker left no doubt with the audience by his demonstration and other remarks that scouting should be lived out doors and was anything but "sissys" play."

District Commissioner R. L. Brown was chairman for the banquet. The speaker was introduced by W. Warner and thanked by W. J. Doyle. The 4th Belleville Women's Auxiliary was thanked by Wm. Page for the wonderful supper which they provided. The dining room was attractively decorated with Boy Scout and Cub flags of the 4th Belleville Troop, along with the Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes, the colorful red and green plaid neckerchiefs o fthe troop, and Easter Lilies.

Film Showing Enjoyed

Special extra features which the boys enjoyed were the movies of the Kiwanis Junior Baseball team playing at the Swaco field, and the Sea Scouts training in England. Of course, for the jungle living cubs there was an animal cartoon which the "Dads" enjoyed. The movies were shown through the courtesy of the Belleville District Film Council. The boys also sang lustily in true scout fashion for song leader H. Wilmot and pianist John Philpot.

An election of members for the parents committee was held and Mr. R. G. Coulter and Mr. H. A. Bovay were added to the committee.

Why Do Women Like Perfume?

A touch of sophisticated French perfume lends the final touch when you're set for a big evening

By HELEN FOLLETT

NOW THAT French perfumes are coming back, many women will rejoice to find some of their old favorites, and many new ones, on cosmetic counters. You know how women are! They seize upon a scene that delights their nostrils and their souls, and no substitute will do. Not that American chemists are not providing the charm clientelle with luscious aromas. They are. But it is fun finding an old friend, isn't it? It is like hanging onto a tradition.

Women love perfumes because they have a romantic appeal. A touch of fragrance back of your ears, a bit on the back of your hands, or maybe a drop or two on the hem of your formal and you feel as if you were floating on a breath of glamor toward an evening that promises pleasant excitement and gaiety. If you are a career girl, have a job, you forget it. If you are a home body and have left the dinner dishes in the sink to sally forth for a grand social spree, you'll never think of them.

Lovely Containers

Perfumers not only lure our money away with their intriguing products, but they put them in such lovely containers that all thought of thrift is gone with the wind.

Along with the return of other old fashioned scents is lily-of-the-valley, the perfect selection for the bride if your best friend is to be given a shower. This aroma is delicate, never heady, nor is it a so-called "mood" perfume.

You will find violet among the offerings, though most perfumes are blends or bouquets. When making a selection, don't sniff too many. Your nose will go back on you, refuse to make a decision.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Abbreviating is Unnecessary, Untidy, Unattractive

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister says that when I write a letter I should not abbreviate the name of the month in the heading of the letter. Is she right about this?

Dorothy H.

Yes! As a matter of fact, you are at the age (as I judge from your handwriting) when it would be an excellent idea for you to make a resolution never to abbreviate in the heading of your letters ... spell in full the name of the month, the city, state, and the words "Street," "Avenue," "Road" "East" and so forth. And also, as you address an envelope use only really necessary abbreviations ("Mrs." and "Mr." ... spell in full the name of the street, city, state. This habit of abbreviating is an unnecessary one to have, and never attractive because it indicates untidiness of mind, and haste. Why not discard it today?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day in your column you mentioned that "the bride's family sit in the first pew on the left of the aisle, and the groom's family sit in the first pew on the right of the aisle." Why is this? It is confusing to me, because I should think that the seating arrangement would be just the reverse; that the bride's parents, since they give the wedding, should sit in the first pew on the right of the aisle. My daughter is to be married soon, and we would like to be clear on this point.

Father of Bride-to-be

The groom's mother and father are the guests of honor at the wedding ... therefore they are given the places of honor at the right of the Bride's mother and father, who are the hosts of the wedding. This seating-arrangement abides by the tradition that guests of honor are always seated at the right of the host and-or hostess.

This also is the reason why, at the parents' table at the wedding reception, the groom's mother (the woman guest of honor) is seated at the right of the bride's father (the host of the wedding) and the groom's father (man guest of honor) is seated at the right of the bride's mother (the hostess of the wedding.)

Proxy Godfather has no Further Responsibilities

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Just before I went overseas during the war I was "proxy" godfather in the place of a friend of mine, the baby's uncle, who was then overseas. The baby's parents are not relatives or friends of mine, and I have not seen them since the christening. My friend, the real godfather, is now in this country, and, he quite often and frequently gives him presents, at Christmas time on birthdays, and such. As he was speaking about this the other evening, I suddenly wondered if I have any responsibility to send the child gifts or any other responsibilities that belong to the "proxy godfather." Will you set me straight about this, please?

Hal

Your courteous responsibility ended when you served as proxy godfather at the christening in place of your friend. From then on, the position of godfather is your friend's responsibility. I imagine that he mentions the child so frequently to you because he feels that naturally you would be interested and also wants you to know that he has properly and enthusiastically assumed the godfatherly responsibilities which you sponsored for him!

Introduction—Honor to Your Mother

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A "Tangled Web"

A quotation that everyone has probably heard a great many times, but which has lost none of its force for that reason, is the couplet which says:

"O what a tangled web we weave
When first we practice to deceive!"

Taken out of its poetic phrasing, this verse simply means, obviously, that one step in the wrong direction can only lead to another, until the person taking these steps finds himself in such a maze of his own devising that it is practically impossible for him to find his way out.

Here is a girl who has done just that. She writes me:

"My brother-in-law and I are desperately in love. He and my sister do not get along well at all, and he would like to get a divorce and marry me.

"They have a son whom I love dearly. My sister goes out nights and leaves her husband to watch the baby. On one such evening, I had an affair with him and am now going to have his child. I haven't told him as yet.

"Should I go away to a Home to have the baby, and let them try to work out their problem, or should I wait until he get his divorce to marry me? My sister knows nothing about this yet. Do you think we should tell her now?"

So here this girl is, completely entangled in the web of deception which she has been weaving and from which she now will never be able fully to extricate herself.

No matter what decision she makes about the course she follows from now on, the chain reaction of tragedy which set in motion that first moment when she allowed her thoughts to begin playing with her sister's husband, must inevitably continue throughout her life. Always she will have to wonder if her sister and her husband might not have adjusted their difficulties if she had not come between them. And always she will carry a weight of fear that the child she is to bear may some day find out the circumstances surrounding its birth.

The immediate problem, however, of course, is what to do about her present situation, and she has two alternatives.

The first is to tell the sister what has been going on and what has happened, and ask her to divorce her husband so that he can marry her and give the child a name. The writer of the quoted letter talks about her brother-in-law getting a divorce. Unfortunately for her, he would not be able to get one just by deciding he would like to do so. He must persuade his wife to divorce him for his infidelity, since, so far as I gather from the letter, her conduct gives him no legal grounds for divorce. It might be that his wife would take this action, but there is also the possibility that, out of revenge, she would refuse.

The second alternative is for this girl to go away quietly, saying nothing about her condition to anyone, have the baby, and then wait to see whether her brother-in-law and his wife adjust their difficulties when left to themselves, or decide to call it a day and separate.

Personally, I think the latter, with all its difficulties, would be the best course for her. In the first place, she would then avoid the risk of her sister's vengeful refusal to divorce her husband, and, in the second place, she would gain back a little of the self-respect she must have lost through this affair, by giving the two the opportunity to work things out unhampered by her presence.

It would take a great deal of courage and determination to carry this through. But I think she has more to gain and less to lose by it than by choosing the first alternative.

Fashion Flashes

Completing The Picture, so far as fabrics are concerned, is plain and printed silk chiffon, so nice for summer clothes. Brown chiffon is posed over brown, yellow and blue plaided taffeta for a pretty, ankle-length dance frock. Folds of brown chiffon outline the deep, strapless decolletage above a basque bodice that contrasts with the full skirt.

Flowers bloom on hats this year, which means real spring millinery for a change. Milan straw in toast brown makes a charming bonnet with peaked brim. The deep crown is trimmed with a cluster of silk and velvet flowers in orange tones with green velvet leaves.

A Big Feature this year will be the dress and suit in foulard or tie silk, so nice with its neat little geometric patterns. Navy and gold rayon tie silk makes a charming bolero suit, the short bolero dipping to a side-tie sash. Jacket is lined in navy crepe to match the short-sleeved little bodice. Tie silk skirt has side fullness.

The Rustle of Spring this year typified by the rustling taffeta petticoat. Plain and striped taffeta, cut slim over the hips and flaring to a ruffled or pleated hemband is worn under the new frocks.

Marlene Dietrich Looks for Roles Of "Gutty" Brand

By HOWARD C. HEYN

Hollywood, —(CP)— Marlene Dietrich is going back to Paris. The roles Hollywood has to offer simply aren't lusty enough.

"It's the censorship," she sighed. "For my type, most of the stories here are impossible. I need gutty roles. Insipid glamor bores me. Abroad, pictures are made for adults."

The soldier's favorite actress is past 40 and soon to become a grandmother. For three years she plowed through the mud and wreckage of war to entertain the troops. She got sick several times. But she always went back to her GIs.

Miss D is still as provocative as any woman on the screen.

"I hate vulgarity as much as any person," she declared. "But life isn't vulgar; only the manner in which it is sometimes portrayed.

The war didn't exactly make a philosopher of Miss D, but she's more thoughtful these days. And a simpler person. Ten years ago it took six stewards to get her 40 pieces of luggage aboard ship. Now she has things stored over half the world. She owns no house anywhere. In Hollywood she lives in a furnished apartment and keeps her personal possessions to a minimum.

When Miss Dietrich isn't working in Hollywood she gets out of town-fast.

"I'm chiefly interested in people who don't have everything," she said. "In Hollywood too many people have too much. When you have too much your brain gets fat."

Hollywood's Influence

Nothing visible about Miss Dietrich appears fat. When she reached Hollywood in 1931 with Joe Stern (Joseph Von Sternburg) she was a round-faced, slightly pudgy German girl. But by the time Stern had spread the word that she was intelligent as well as beautiful, Miss D had become sleek sophisticated, hauntingly gaunt. She stayed that way.

Early sources place her birthday in 1902; later references give 1904. But 43 or 45—what's the difference when you look 37?

In her current assignment, "A Foreign Affair," she plays what amounts to the second lead: a Nazi cafe singer in post-war Berlin.

"If the story is unreal or the players unsuited, not even Hollywood's best techniques can save a picture," she asserted. "In France, with very little equipment they make good pictures. They make pictures for adults.

"In Hollywood it is almost impossible to avoid censorship because the American cinema is based on family appeal."

Is that bad? Well, no, says Miss D.

"I'm not in favor of changing this system entirely. I only say such fare is not best for me. That is why I prefer to work in France or England."

But she's perfectly willing to return to Hollywood when appropriate scripts are available. Hollywood salaries, too, are a widely recognized lure. French films made with little equipment, are also made with little money.

Arab States May Cancel All Oil ConcessionstoU.S.

Cairo, Feb. 26 (AP)—The Arab League has warned that "all Arab States" will cancel their oil concessions to the United States if the United States keeps pushing Palestine partition, a League source said today.

The informant said the warning was given in a note sent to Washington yesterday. It threatened cancellation of the concessions if the United States "continues to use its influence in the (United Nations) Security Council to partition Palestine."

The note, the source added, was sent in accordance with a decision reached by the seven-member league in its recent Cairo session.

The League includes Saudi Arabia, where the Arabian-American Oil Company is developing vast oil deposits. The Saudi Arabian field is the largest single oil supplier of the United States navy.

Lebanese Premier Riyad El Solh was quoted in a dispatch from Beyrouth, Lebanon, yesterday as saying the Arab League in the same meeting decided to forbid the Trans-Arabian pipeline to operate through Arab countries.

The Arabian-American Oil Company has begun building the $175,000,000 pipeline from Saudi Arabia to the Mediterranean.

Trial Adjourned At Request Of Defence Counsel

London, Ont., Feb. 26. (CP)—Trial of George Ralph Laird, 50, of Peterborough, and Toronto, on a charge of fraud in connection with the publication of a "Masonic directory" was adjourned late yesterday at the request of Defence Counsel H. C. Olch, of Toronto. Mr. Olch explained he wanted to catch a train to attend last night's N.H.L. hockey game between the Maple Leafs and the Boston Bruins.

Laird is charged specifically with obtaining $15 by false pretences from Simon Gelech, local painting contractor.

Detective Oliver Sonley read his notes on questions put to Laird after his arrest and the answers given. Laird did not give a signed statement to police.

Mr. Olch argued that the answers given to Detective Sonley was inadmissible as evidence since the question and answers were not filled out until 14 minutes after Laird was returned to a police cell.

Magistrate Donald Menzies admitted the statements when Detective Sonley said he took notes at the time and he read the questions and answers from the notes. The magistrate ruled the accused had been properly warned and there was no inducement offered him to make any statement.

Union Printers Call Walkout

Philadelphia, Feb. 26 —(AP)—A strike of 900 union printers was called against 28 major commercial firms today in what the union described as a fight for higher pay.

Sinclair Muir, president of Local 2 of the International Typographical Union, (A.F.L.), said the printers' work stoppage, first here in 27 years, was decided upon last night by a vote of 1,110 to 58.

Printers at Philadelphia newspaper plants are not involved in the dispute.

The strike action overshadowed another development yesterday in which the I.T.U. called a National Labor Relations Board hearing here "a court of persecution" and, in effect, walked out of the hearing.

Benjamin R. Simon, counsel for the Philadelphia local, as well as Local 6 of the Union in New York, asked the N.L.R.B. to postpone the hearing 48 hours so that he could get instructions from officers of the two locals.

But Howard Myers, board trial examiner, refused and ordered the hearing resumed at 2 p.m. EST today. He also consolidated seven complaints by employers against locals of the I.T.U. on charges of unfair labor practices.

A union spokesman said the printers are seeking an $85 a week scale as contrasted with a current weekly scale of $69.

34 PERSONS KILLED

Manila, Feb. 26 — (AP)—Manila newspapers report 34 persons were killed in Central Luzon villages last night in clashes between constabulary and the Hukbalahaps, anti-administration peasants. Three other persons were killed and 15 wounded when unidentified persons threw a hand grenade into a crowded dance hall.

Woman Convicted Of Manslaughter In Abortion Death

Montreal, Feb. 26 —(CP) Convicted of manslaughter in the abortion death of a 32-year-old widow, 70-year-old Mrs. Marie Montpetit was in a prison cell here today waiting for sentence which might not come for another month.

The woman, charged with murder of Mrs. Laurette Favreau of Sorel, Que., was convicted of the lesser charge of manslaughter by a Court of King's Bench Jury late yesterday afternoon. The jury asked that clemency be given the aged woman.

Date of sentence has not been fixed, but will likely follow the present court session which ends next month.

The woman, who was convicted mostly on the strength of a confession she made to police after her arrest, took the verdict without any sign of emotion. Her counsel, Alexandre Chevalier, K.C., said the question of an appeal was being studied.

This was her second trial since proceedings began last October, when her first trial was declared void by Mr. Justice Wilfred Lazure, after an illegal part of the statement she gave police was inadvertently placed before the jury.

In her statement, Mrs. Montpetit admitted she had performed the illegal operation on Mrs. Favreau for a fee of $15. Evidence given during the trial disclosed that Mrs. Montpetit could not write and had to be instructed by detectives how to spell her name to sign the confession.

Mr. Justice Lazure instructed the 12 jurymen on matters of law before informing them that they must give the accused any benefit of the doubt before returning a guilty verdict.

The jury deliberated for slightly less than an hour before returning to the courtroom with the guilty verdict.

Picton

Canadian Legion May Change Plan

Picton. (Special.)—In order to reduce the consumption of hydro power, the town has decided to cut off street lighting at two o'clock each morning. This is now in effect. Public Utilities Commission H. B. Tully stated today that users are co-operating in a splendid manner and if this co-operation is continued it will not be necessary to cut off power.

In reply to an invitation from Picton Post Canadian Legion to Field Marshal Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, to visit Picton on the occasion of the opening of the new Legion Hall, was received yesterday. It was stated that the suggested date in June or July was impossible due to the fact that the Governor-General has a full schedule for several months. It was intimated that such a visit might be possible late in September. If such is possible, the Post plans to delay th eofficial opening of their new home.

Gain Noted in Mental Treatment

There is no magic in the treatment and cure of mental illness. It is a medical problem and when it calls for hospitals it can be met only in medical hospitals, not in custodial or domiciliary institutions, says a writer in The Kansas City Times.

Doctors today know that more than half of all the patients in state hospitals as well as those who may be on the way to them have physical illnesses of varying degrees of severity that go hand in hand with or are at the root of the mental disorders. They know that a patient who is so ill as to require hospitalization usually is in need of immediate medical or surgical services as well as psychiatric treatment.

Receiving Ward

With that in mind the Kansas Legislature two years ago took a short step towards providing medical care. At the same time it was a short step toward eliminating the stigma and legal formalities of commitment to state hospitals. It authorized the University of Kansas Medical Centre to establish a small psychiatric receiving ward.

It was an experiment. The maximum capacity was 25 beds. Patients could be admitted on their own application or at the request of relatives. Probate judges were authorized, in their discretion, to send mental patients to it for 30 days of examination, observation, diagnosis and treatment. At the end of 30 days, patients not cured or improved were to be referred back to the probate judge with the recommendations of the director and the staff as to future treatment.

In its first year the ward received 256 patients. These men and women had at their service all the facilities of the medical centre; its medical, surgical and psychiatric staffs and consultants, psychologists, nurses, social workers, technicians, attendants, laboratories, medical and surgical wards, and other facilities.

Had Own Doctors

A few of them engaged their own psychiatrists and nurses, as is done in any general hospital in physical illnesses. Their own family doctors saw them as often as the families or the patients wished it. They received the same standards of treatment and care that the average man demands for himself when he is physically sick.

Of the 256 patients treated in 1946, there were 181 who were returned to their homes and 33 sent to homes of relatives, all restored or improved in mental health to the point that they could resume activities. Twenty-one were so far advanced in mental illness that 30 days of treatment proved insufficient, and these were sent to state hospitals. Three died and 18 were in the hospital at the end of the year.

The following year, 1947, the Legislature authorized the probate courts to grant two extensions of time of 30 days each, on recommendation of the ward director, to patients who could be reasonably expected to improve further or to get well.

Number Reduced

Lengthening the period of treatment reduced the number who could be admitted to 204. Among these nine were readmissions, leaving a total of 195 persons treated. Of these, 156 returned to ther homes and 11 went to homes of relatives, all restored. Nine were sent to other hospitals, two died, and 17 were sent to state hospitals.

On the basis of experience, if these patients had been sent to state institutions, 40 per cent, or 102 patients, in 1946, and 78 in 1947, would have stayed there!

Dr. William F. Roth, Jr., is director. He also is chief of the department of psychiatry and neurology of the University of Kansas school of medicine. He believes that now, after two years, the experiment has been proved and is ready for expansion. He has wide support among doctors who have watched the experiment and among organizations which are interested in mental hygiene.

His view, and theirs, is that the ward could be expanded in the next year or two so as to become the receiving ward for all the mental hospitals in Kansas. All mental patients first would go there for treatment. He thinks that only those patients whose disorders were in an advanced stage and would require long periods of treatment, would need go to state hospitals.

Such a ward could be established by the construction of a single building to house from 150 to 200 patients, with space for necessary psychiatric aids, such as hydrotherapy, occupational therapy, training school for nurses and attendants and facilities for psychologists, social workers and technicians.

Such a ward would be equipped to receive and treat about 1,200 patients a year, which is about the total the state hospitals receive now.

'Paraphrased' Copy of Evidence Will be Produced

Ottawa, Feb. 26 — (CP)—The Commons yesterday adopted a motion for production of a "paraphrased" copy of the evidence taken by the Royal Commission on Canadian participation in the defence of Hong Kong, but Defence Minister Claxton said it would take considerable time before the evidence could be tabled.

Mr. Claxton said there were more than 200 exhibits and 2,300 pages of evidence which frequently referred to the exhibits. About 90 of the exhibits were service communications between the Canadian and British armies and would have to be paraphrased before the evidence was tabled.

Mr. Claxton made his statement when a motion placed on the order paper by John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, was called for adoption. The minister said the government had no objection to adoption of the motion for production of the evidence, subject to the conditions laid down Tuesday by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Mr. King said the United Kingdom government had stated it would not object to the tabling of the evidence if code messages were paraphrased and if certain others were shown only to opposition leaders.

Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel) recalled that Mr. King had agreed to make new representations to the U. K. government after such action had been urged by Hon. C. G. Power, former air minister.

Mr. Claxton said he understood Mr. Power's request for production of all the evidence had been forwarded to the U. K. government.

M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, asked if it would not be wiser to await a reply before a start was made on paraphrasing the evidence.

Mr. Claxton repeated the government had no objection to adoption of the motion, and Mr. Bracken asked that it be carried.

Beneficent Barrels

(By Miriam E. Oatman in Christian Science Monitor)

"The sugar barrel is almost empty," said my mother. "We'll need another before Christmas." I stood by her side, looking at the row of barrels in the pantry. The sugar barrel might be empty, but the flour barrel, the vinegar barrel, the lard barrel, the apple barrel, the potato barrel, and the barrel of russet pears, were all plentifully filled.

I knew that in the cellar were barrels of salt pork, corned beef, hard winter apples, crisp sauerkraut, turnips, and beets. Crocks like lesser barrels, held cucumber pickles, watermelon pickles, sweet red and green peppers stuffed with chopped cabbage and celery seed, and my mother's rich mincemeat. With another barrel of sugar, we should be ready for the holidays.

In the attic were several barrels, turned to other purposes than the guardianship of foodstuffs. One was nearly filled with balls of carpet-rags. (By the next year we should have a new rag carpet in the dining-room.) Another barrel in the attic held "pieces" which would be made up into quilts in the course of time. One was heaped with clothes that might be made over, or perhaps given to the poor.

Still another held rags too badly worn for other uses, dedicated to the "rag-man," who paid for them in bright tin dishpans, bread and cake pans, and once even a shining colander. A couple of super-barrels with well-fitted heads supplemented the chests that held our winter clothes and bedding in summer and our summer dresses in winter.

In every bedroom, there was a chair made from a barrel, well padded and flounced. Two of these chairs stood in the sewing corner of the kitchen. My father had done the necessary carpentry, and my mother had worked the miracles of upholstery that made these barrel-chairs luxurious. In the kitchen also was a barrel covered with chintz inside and outside, bearing a padded chintz pin-and-needle cushion on its wooden cover. This contained mother's sewing—sheets and towels, shirts for father, dresses for herself and me. Just before Christmas there was always a doll hidden under everything, to be dressed in scraps of former "best dresses," but I was not supposed to know this.

Outside the house, barrels stood at every corner, with rain-pipes leading into them. We had the luxury of a good well and a pump actually in the kitchen; but mother liked to use rain-water for bathing and washing hair.

On each side of the front door stood a half-barrel filled with earth, and planted in summer with red and white geraniums. The geraniums were now in pots on a table by the east kitchen window; but I was planning to use the half-barrels as bases for small Christmas trees holding suet and crumbs for the birds.

In summer, two hammocks of rope and barrel-staves hung under the trees in the back yard. Although I had heard that barrel-staves were sometimes used to chastise naughty boys, I looked on this story as a magnificent fiction; for all the barrels of which I had any knowledge were useful and friendly.

No, there was one shocking exception. Sometimes a great van drove by our house, conspicuously marked "Brown's Better Barrelled Beer." In that van were barrels which my mother, who had once shaken hands with Frances Willard and who wore a white ribbon bow at all times, called "liquid sin." It was sad to think that barrels could be so misused.

But, on the other hand, consider the barrels sent out by the missionary societies! Our church had two of these organizations, and my mother belonged to both. In the spring, the Foreign Missionary Society sent out barrels to heathen lands; in the winter, the Home Missionary Society sent them to obscure little struggling churches and schools in remote parts of the United States. My mother always saw to it that a jar or two of hard candy and some frivolous reading matter found its way into every barrel, as a counter-balance to the somewhat depressing donations of the more sober-minded sisters.

There seemed no end to the uses we made of barrels; and other people, I knew, found still more employment for them. The storekeeper had a barrel filled with butter, and a wooden paddle for dipping it out. My mother looked on this butter with scorn. On the one occasion when I tasted it from an exploring finger, I learned the reason.

But the storekeeper also had a barrel of laundry starch in white, shining lumps, and a barrel of black molasses, and a barrel of golden syrup, and a barrel of graham flour, and a barrel of navy beans, all of which commodities we purchased occasionally.

The blacksmith and wheelwright used half-barrels of water to cool the red-hot horseshoes and iron wagon-wheel tires that he had pounded into shape on his anvil. Many people employed half-barrels as bathtubs or laundry tubs; but my mother said that they were too heavy to be handled, and she had bright galvanized tubs, instead. Half-barrels were sunk in springs to collect water, or used in farmyards as drinking troughs for stock.

Sometimes I visited the shop where Mr. Phillips, the cooper, was at work. He made barrels and hogsheads that lasted indefinitely; and people in the village and from the farms near by who needed such containers for brine or vinegar or cider or other liquids never thought of purchasing them elsewhere. Mr. Phillips was a prosperous man, and a kind man. He was never too busy "dickering" with my father to whittle me a rough but adequate wooden doll. Barrels stood in tiers all around his shop. . . . But there is no cooper's shop in town today.

The barrel had its social values, too. How often I have seen it used at a "pound party" for the benefit of the underpaid, struggling minister! Everyone who came to the party was expected to drop in the barrel a pound of something useful.

A barrel of apples, a barrel of oranges, and a barrel of candy were the staples of the Christmas entertainment at the church. Sometimes we had a barrel of apples to serve after an elaborate school program. And no church "social" was complete without a barrel of bran in which were hidden many small packages, sold at five or ten cents each, to be fished out of the bran at random. Once my nickel brought me a pair of cuff-links which made a useful gift to my father on his birthday; and once I had the joyful excitement of drawing from the barrel a small bottle of "Jockey Club" perfume.

But this was a long time ago.

Last summer we decided to buy some rain barrels for our log cabin on the coast. We went to town and inquired for them. The grocery had none; goods came today in packages or tins or boxes, but not in barrels. The hardware and "stone, sand, and cement" people had none; their goods come in crates or in sacks. The filling station men had none; their gasoline and oil are delivered in tank cars. Even the saloons had none, since they must return to the brewers such few barrels as they still use, now that tins and bottles are so much in demand.

We were advised to buy a metal tank. "But I want barrels," I said. "We always used barrels when I was a child. And a tank doesn't suit a log cabin." Finally, we left with the grocer an order for two stout barrels, to be delivered next summer. He was not encouraging; but we hope that within the year he may find us the barrels.

Lack Of Air, Naval Support Caused Loss Of Singapore

Gen. Percival Cites Reasons Naval Base Fell Quickly

Inexperienced Troops Also Contributed to Debacle

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 26 (CP)—Lt.-Gen. Arthur Ernest Percival, commander in Malaya when the Japanese took Singapore in 1942, in a report says that lack of air and naval support for his outnumbered ground forces was the main cause of defeat.

His 100,000-word dispatch to the War Office blamed "traditional British unpreparedness" for the enemy's capture, in 10 weeks, of an area nearly as big as England and Wales, including the main Far East naval base, once considered impregnable.

But he forecast that the Malayan defeat, sometimes termed "the most impressive disaster ever to befall the British Empire," may yet be assessed as a worth-while delaying action that saved more important parts of the Commonwealth.

Percival's day-by-day account of the first Allied campaign fought with modern weapons in jungle warfare conditions was written after his release from Japanese prison camp and published just six years after Singapore fell Feb. 15, 1942.

Recital of Defeats

It is a recital of hopeless, bloody battles ending invariably in retreat as British, Australian, Indian and Malayan forces were pushed 400 miles from the Thailand frontier to Singapore Island.

These are statements Percival makes to explain his much-criticized failure to protect Singapore—a failure which contributed directly to a reorganization of Winston Churchill's war cabinet:-

1. In 1937, defence policy was based on the assumption that the British home fleet would arrive at Singapore within 70 days of the outbreak of war with Japan. When war began in Europe, this assumption fell apart and policy was changed to include the holding of all Malaya.

2. Budget cuts in Whitehall delayed preparation of additional defences, including protection for Singapore against land attack.

3. In the autumn of 1940, London decided that Malayan defence must depend primarily on air power but this policy was "in fact never implemented." Compared with a requested 566 first-line aircraft and an authorized 336 aircraft, the Malayan defenders had only 141 operational planes, few of them modern and a number of them "obsolescent." The Japanese launched their campaign with probably 300 modern planes and at the end had more than 520 in south Thailand, Malaya and Indo-China.

Enemy in Control

4. Malaya had "nothing in the nature of a balanced fleet" and when the Prince of Wales and Repulse were sunk Dec. 10, 1941—the third day of the Pacific war—the Japanese had undisputed control of sea communications "and the whole of the east coast became exposed to attack."

5. "I estimate that the Japanese employed a minimum of 150,000 men and 300 tanks in the Malayan campaign...the total number of officers and men who took part in the campaign on the British side was a little over 125,000." The defenders had only one squadron of "obsolescent light tanks," and some troops were "unarmed owing to shortage of personal weapons."

6. "The troops generally were inexperienced and far too large a proportion of them were only partially trained. There was a shortage of experienced leaders, especially in the Indian and Australian units. Instead of the 48 infantry battalions and supporting arms asked for, we had 32."

7. "An atmoshere of unreality hung over Malaya...It cannot be said that the people were fully prepared for the part they were to play in a total war."

8. "There is no doubt whatever that the Japanese obtained considerable assistance at times from the local inhabitants."

9. "There was a lack of the team spirit between the service departments on the one side and the civil government on the other in tackling problems of common interest."

Defence Lacks Strength

"That our strategy was not successful was due primarily to a lack of strength in all three services, but particularly in the navy and air force," wrote Percival, now 60 years old and living in retirement in Hertfordshire.

Percival said his report was "more detailed than would otherwise have been the case" because of statements about the Malayan campaign which were "based on false or incomplete information."

"The retreat from Mons and the retreat to Dunkerque have been hailed as epics," he said. "Each of these retreats lasted approximately three weeks.

"The retreat in Malaya lasted 10 weeks in far more trying conditions. There was no strong ally to help us and no navy to evacuate the force, even had it been desirable to do so.

"It has been hailed as a disaster but perhaps the judgment of history will be that all effort and money expended on the defence of Malaya and the sacrifice and subsequent suffering of many of those who fought in the Malaya campaign were not in vain.

Many of the causes of the Malayan defeat can be attributed to a failure to prepare for war in time said the General.

"Even if this involves increased financial expenditure, the money will be well spent if it acts as an insurance against war or at least against a repetition of the disasters which befell us in the early stages of this war.

"If the Malayan campaign ... has done anything to bring this fact home to the people of our Empire, it will not have been without merit."

Japan Acted Quickly

Early Dec. 8 only a few hours bour, the first Japanese troops landed near Kota Bharu, on the northeast Malay coast. Within 24 hours they had knocked out their first objective — Kota Bahru airdrome. From then on their progress was consistent.

By Feb. 15 all the mainland and most of Singapore Island had been overrun. The Island's water supply was in Japanese hands and military food stocks were down to only a few days' rations. Percival called a meeting of senior commanders at Fort Canning.

"The danger of the water situation, particularly as it affected the Indian troops and the vast civil population, was stressed," he wrote in his dispatch. "There was also the danger of a breakthrough into the crowded Singapore town area if the Japanese delivered another determined attack.

"It was clearly no good remaining on the defensive as we were. As I viewed the situation the alternatives were either (A) to counter-attack immediately to regain control of the reservoirs and of the military food depots and to drive the enemy's artillery with a view of reducing the danger to the water supply system, or (B) capitulate immediately.

"Formation commanders were unanimously of the opinion that in the existing circumstances a counter attack was impracticable.

Decided to Surrender

"I could see no immediate solution for the critical water situation and decided to capitulate. The other members of the conference concurred unanimously with this decision."

The same afternoon, Percival was received by Lt.-Gen. Yamashita, the Japanese commander, in a factory north of the city and signed unconditional surrender.

At several places in his report Percival was critical of the quality of troops under his command.

The 45th Indian infantry brigade, cut off at Muar and virtually wiped out, had "never been fit for employment in a theatre of war," he said, though "it was not that there was anything wrong with the raw material but simply that it was raw."

The 11th Indian Division, he said, was composed of "young and inexperienced troops" who sometimes found Malayan conditions "too trying."

Australian reinforcements which arrived in January had only had a few weeks' training, he reported; "they had not been in the army long enough to learn true discipline."

But although the inexperienced troops became "more and more exhausted and were bewildered and often disheartened their morale was never broken.

"...it stands to the credit of all ranks that in the many critical situations which developed in the course of the long withdrawal down the peninsula, the enemy in spite of the great advantages which he enjoyed, was nexer able to effect a complete breakthrough — an occurrence which, in view of our lack of reserves with which to meet such a situation, would have spelt immediate and irreparable disaster."

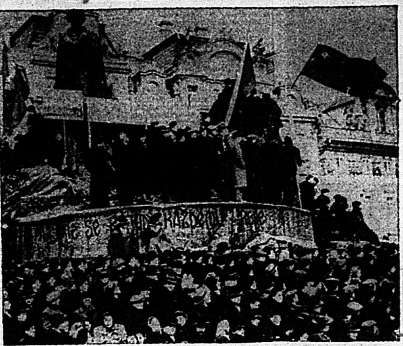
AS RED TIDE STARTED ITS RISE IN PRAGUE



Here is a section of the crowd gathered to listen to Czech Communist Premier Klement Gottwald fire the opening gun of his campaign to lower the iron curtain on Czechoslovakia. The anti-Communist members of the government had just resigned. But their resignation was not accepted by President Eduard Benes. Gottwald, backed by trade unions, demanded a new government and asked for the people's confidence. The first refugees from Czechoslovakia arriving in Vienna reported "terrorist" atrocities by Premier Gottwald and said that the situation resembled worst days of Nazis invasion 10 years ago.

Cancer Sufferers Requested To "Bide Their Time"

Sydney, Australia, Feb. 26 — (CP) — Simultaneous with the arrival of two Vancouver women said to be suffering from cancer, Dr. E. S. Morris, director-general of public health for New South Wales, today advised cancer sufferers in other countries "to bide their time" pending investigation into the "Braund method" of treatment.

"I strongly advise that all persons overseas await the outcome of our investigation before making plans to come to Australia," he said.

John Braund, 78-year-old Sydney layman, won wide publicity with claims of a "cancer cure" now being studied by a New South Wales government committee.

The two women, Mrs. Jack Northam, 36, and Mrs. Ruth McIntyre, 33, arrived by plane from Vancouver today. Officials of the Australian Legion of Former Service Men and Women took the women to an undisclosed address in Sydney's eastern suburbs and officials advised them to use assumed names to avoid further publicity.

W. R. Nicholas, State Secretary of the Legion, said "Our only concern is to make the ladies as comfortable as possible during their stay in Australia." He said they now were in a "comfortable private home."

"We advised them to rest today after their long journey," he added, "and we would look after little formalities such as customs and bank drafts for them."

The Legion is arranging a sightseeing tour for them tomorrow and later will introduce them to Braund.

TOO HIGH TO CLEAR

Peterborough, Feb. 26 —(CP)— It isn't an easy trick to transport an 11-ton street-car from Toronto. H. L. Johnston bought the old wooden tram for conversion into three sleeping cabins and found it too high to clear low bridges and wires.

Ex-Naval Officer Found Strangled In His Bedroom

New York, Feb. 26 — (AP) — An ex-naval officer, travelling under orders from the United States Navy Department, was found strangled in his ramshackle West 57th Street hotel room yesterday. The 35-year-old victim was bound hand and foot and strips of a bed sheet were knotted around his neck.

The man was identified as Harvey Haeberle, a civilian employee of the navy's photographic division at Washington. The navy said Haeberle served as its contact man with commercial studios filming training movies.

The victim was bound in a version of the old Chinese strangle knot, police said.

Haeberle's hands and feet were lashed behind him with strips of sheeting. His belt and another piece of the torn sheet were twisted about his neck. A chain strip running down his back linked the knots so that any movement to break free would tighten the noose around his neck until he choked.

The disordered hotel room indicated that Haeberle had put up a fierce struggle for his life before being overpowered. His suitcase had been opened and its contents scattered. Haeberle's wallet was missing and the pockets of his suit had been turned inside out.

Police Commissioner Arthur Wallander said robbery apparently was the motive for the slaying.

Ross Munro To Leave CP

Ottawa, Feb. 26 —(CP)— Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent and writer on international affairs, will join Ottawa bureau of the Southam newspapers in April, it was announced today by John Bird of the Southam News Service.

Munro, a member of CP's parliamentary reporting staff, served from 1940 to 1945 as war correspondent with the Canadian army in Britain, Italy and northwest Europe, and remained overseas until mid-1947 covering the war's aftermath. He joined The Canadian Press at Toronto in 1936 after graduating from the University of Toronto in political science and economics.

ROBBER SOON CAPTURED

Troonto, Feb. 26 —(CP)— Edward Phelan, 32, was charged with robbery following the hold-up early this morning of a downtown cigar store. Police said Phelan, by holding one hand in his pocket, tricked store manager Harry Pustel into believing he was armed and forced him to lie on the floor while about $55 was removed from the cash register. Police captured the suspect as he ran from a nearby lane.

Leftist Forces Still Shattered In Franco Spain

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Madrid, Feb. 25. (CP)—Republican Spain, over thrown by General Francisco Franco after three years' bitter civil fighting, went down with such a crash that it's still hard to find the pieces.

Some of the leaders, who ended the war amid division and squabbling, fled to exile and a precarious life in which their hopes depend largely on the political attitudes of other nations. Their prospects of regaining power have seldom looked more bleak than now.

A few of the lesser opponents of Franco have taken advantage of his offer of a political amnesty and returned to Spain. They seem for the most part to have been able to resume normal lives—minus any political activity.

Thousands of other left-wing fighters who didn't get out of Spain are still in jails. The Communists claim there are 150,000 political prisoners, but it is generally agreed that this figure is too high. The nearest official approximation is about 27,000.

Undoubtedly there are remnants of left-wing groups still loyal to their old beliefs and working underground as best they can. Their greatest weakness is that they are just that—remnants still unable to agree and still working toward different objectives. It is impossible to assay their real strength because the clever ones cloak their activities so thoroughly that they are unsuspected. The less clever fell easy prey to the vigilant state police.

They disappear into prison. Months may pass before they are brought to trial—not before a judge and jury, but at a courts-martial. Officers are provided to conduct their defence but the court generally imposes the penalty asked by the prosecution. The trials are conducted with little publicity at out-of-the-way towns, difficult of access, to prevent the possibility of demonstrations.

No Opposition

In private conversation many persons appear vaguely anti-Franco but there is no open, organized opposition to him. If anything, public opinion shudders away from left-wing sentiments because of clever propaganda linking all such feelings with Communism. From the government viewpoint there are no pinks in Spain—only reds who must be crushed ruthlessly.

Even soldiers who fought in the Republican ranks now accept the anti-Communist view as a matter of course. Often their service was a matter of geographical chance—if they had lived a few miles farther south they would have been conscripted by France.

Sometimes they are haunted by excesses which were committed by both sides. They may have a horror of civil strife, which the government tells them must result if left-wing forces obtain power.

In a dingy Madrid cafe, two men who professed to have strong links with the leftist underground, muttered over their coffee cups about the strength of their organization. They didn't agree in detail, but both said the first step if they and their friends ever achieved power would be to "remove completely all traces of Franco."

Their manner and appearance were less impressive than the reaction of a high army officer to whom I repeated a cabinet minister's statement that "Spain has no Communist fifth column."

He gave a mirthless laugh.

Want to Know What Russia Took Out of Austria

London, Feb. 25. (AP)—Responsible diplomatic officials said today the Western Powers intend to ask Russia for a detailed accounting of what the Soviet government has taken out of Austria since the war.

These informants said such a list is essential as a basis for discussion by Big Four Deputy Foreign Ministers now trying to reach some agreement on terms for an Austrian peace treaty.

The attempt to get an accounting may be made today. The day's schedule includes several specific conditions asked by Russia to safeguard settlement of her claims upon what she calls former German property in Austria.

Yesterday the United States tried to halt removals of such properts pending agreement on the treaty terms.

The conditions Russia asks include:

1. Stringent prohibition against future foreign control of all former German property except with the consent of Russia. Presumably, this would include such assets as oil refineries in which the western powers had a stake before the war.

2. A clause preventing Austria from raising "any difficulties" against Russian export of profits from enterprises which it would receive under a settlement. Russia wants two-thirds of Austria's oil production, plus control of the Danube Shipping Company.

3. A blanket condition freeing Russia from all obligations during her custodianship of German assets prior to the settlement.

4. An agreement among the big powers for bilateral settlement between interested parties on all future disputes involving former German property.

American and British official observers say the meetings thus far have been devoted largely to efforts to clarify the Russian demands. There has been little elaboration on the part of the Soviet delegate, N. P. Koktomov.

The delegates decided yesterday to bar public disclosures of their discussions except for an occasional communique. The Benelux countries—Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg—will join the talks later this week.

Slaying of Gandhi To Help End Strife

Brantford, Feb. 25 — (CP) — The assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi, spiritual leader of India's Hindus, will help bring an end to the present strife between Moslems and Hindus, Sadi Dyl Chand, program secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at Lamore, Pakistan, said last night.

The assassin was a Hindu but a member of the fanatac Rasptia Sevak Sungh which together with the Hindu Mahasabha, radical political group, is seeking the subjugation of the Moslems and the annexation of Pakistan, he said.

The incident, therefore, afforded an opportunity to clean out fanatics which are causing turmoil, he added.

Supply Line Needed To Mukden, Report

Peiping, Feb. 25 —(AP)— Unless government troops can open a supply line to Mukden, hunger may force them to abandon that important Manchurian city in three months.

Mukden's 1,000,000 people have enough food to last until the end of May. Lacking ground supply lines, Mukden's defenders then might have to fight their way out to Chinhsien, 130 miles southwest.

Should government troops reconquer sections of the Peiping-Mukden railway now in Red hands, repairs would take weeks or months, making highway transport necessary.

NEW ATOM SMASHER DEVELOPED

A pilot model of their new atom smasher, "the Yale linear accelerator," is displayed at New Haven, Conn., by two of its builders: Howard L. Schultz (left), assistant professor of physics and Carol Montgomery, an associate professor. They expect by next June to be developing energies of from 15 to 20,000,000 volts. It may prove a great aid to nuclear physics since, thanks to the "accelerator", the product has less energy loss than the cylotron or betraton.

Judge Swygert Rules Against Union Printers

Indianapolis, Feb. 25 (AP) — United States District Judge Luther M. Swygert today ruled against the International Typographical Union (A.F.L.) in its effort to block a Taft-Hartley injunction filed against it.

Swygert denied the Union's motion to dismiss the petition for an injunction filed by the office of Robert N. Denham, General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

The Judge announced he would hold a hearing March 3 on the injunction petition.

Radio Set Catches Fire on Army Hospital Plane

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 26. (CP)—A terrifying 15 minutes was experienced by six crew members of an army hospital plane when a radio set caught fire as the plane approached Kellogg Field here yesterday.

The plane was bringing seven patients from Westover Field, Mass., to Percy Jones Hospital. It landed safely after Staff Sgt. H. W. Marple, crew engineer, tore the smouldering set from the cubicle between the cockpit and the cabin where the patients were lying on litters.

Several pieces of fire apparatus were speeding to the field when the pilot reported the fire under control.

Woman Farm Official Has Notable Record

Winnipeg (CP) — Edna McConnell, of Dauphin, Man., only non-male agricultural representative in the province, frowns on the idea of women following her lead even though she has created an impression record in her field.

"I don't think women can do the work of an agricultural representative," said Miss McConnell. "I got into it only because of the war."

But Dauphin districts residents will have no part of Miss McConnell's modest contention. They think of the comely, 34-year-old miss as responsible for making their area "tops" in the province where boys and girls' farm clubs are concerned.

Miss McConnell became the first and only female agricultural representative in Manitoba in 1941 when John Conner, who held the Dauphin post, joined the air force. Previously she had been at Dauphin with the extension service of the department of agriculture.

Miss McConnell, who "grew up in agriculture" from her birth at her parents' home at Petersfield, took normal school training at Saskatoon, then her degree of bachelor of science in agriculture.

Returning to Manitoba, she joined the Dominion-Provincial youth training scheme as itinerant instructor until she went to Dauphin in 1939 for the extension service. When she succeeded Connet she was first appointed acting representative but the province gave her the full title in May, 1946.

De Marigny Fights Suit of Annulment

New York, Feb. 24 — (CP) — Count Alfred De Marigny Monday petitioned the New York Supreme Court to dismiss a suit for annulment started by his wife, Nancy Oakes De Marigny.

De Marigny claimed in the petition, filed by his lawyers, that both he and his wife, daughter of the late Sir Harry Oakes, Canadian millionaire mining magnate, are British subjects. Therefore, he contended the New York courts have no jurisdiction.

Mrs. De Marigny's suit claims that De Marigny's 1937 Florida divorce from his first wife was invalid and that their own marriage therefore was illegal.

De Marigny at present is fighting a legal battle to prevent deportation from Canada to his native Mauritius. The case is before the Supreme Court of Canada.

New York, Feb. 26 — (AP) — The Cunard White Star liner Queen Elizabeth steamed into New York harbor Tuesday, completing its fastest February crossing from Southampton since she put to sea in 1941. Despite strong winds and heavy seas, the voyage was made in four days, 15 hours and 57 minutes.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair ond ma was walking around the living room pushing crooked things strate and strate things crooked, and I said, Hay, ma, do you beleeve some people are mind reeders and can reed other peoples thawts?

No I dont, and what's more I'm glad they cant, because there's little enough privacy in the werld even as things are, ma said, and pop said, I wouldn't be too sure that thawts cant be read, my dear. After all, what is a thawt? Modern scientists beleeve it's some kind of an electrical discharge, and that it's even capable of being wayed or at least fotographed. At any rate, a thawt requires some kind of mental energy, although you wouldn't think so when you consider some of the public utterances you reed and listen to these days. So, if a thawt has a fizzical manifestation, like a sound wave, why cant it be picked up by another mind? he said.

Because that's nonsense, ma said, and I said, Will you give me 5 cents if I can reed your thawts rite now, ma?

I certainly will, ma said, and I said, Are you thinking?

Yes, ma said, and I said, Okay, I bet you're thinking I wont win the 5 cents.

Well of all things, ma said, and pop said, By gollies I beleeve he hit it, you owe him 5 cents.

Nothing of the kind, it was a mere guess, ma said, and pop said, Then he won on a tecknicality, and if it was not for tecknicalities our courts of law would cease to be all clogged up and the poor would have an equal chance with the rich. It would amount to a legal revilution, he said.

And he payed me the 5 cents himself, making me feel lucky.

Salazar's Restrictive Rule Makes Portuguese Restive

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Lisbon, Feb. 26—(CP)—Storm signals are flying in Portugal for Dr. Oliveira Salazar, whose austere hand has been firmly on the tiller of the ship of state for 20 years.

Even his enemies admire the grimly efficient manner in which he has restored the Portuguese economy, but the semi-dictatorship he imposed to achieve his end is becoming intolerable to an increasing number of people.

"A deterioration has set in during the last two years," said one observer. "People are fatigued by these restrictions. They realize that they were necessary in 1928, when Salazar took over. But why should they be necessary now?"

The more cynical say the spirit of revolt exists among Salazar's political followers, hungry for the plums of office which the former university professor has denied them. Apparently indifferent, to material benefits himself, he expects his colleagues to serve with the same disinterest.

Weaknesses Cited

Some say his grasp is weakening due to ill health; others that his intense concentration of foreign policy during the war caused him to neglect domestic affairs, with the result that civic administration has become corrupt.

A showdown may be speeded this year by the impending resignation of aging President Carmona, beloved holder of an influential office. Salazar, now finance minister and chief of government, has said he will never try to kick himself upstairs to this honorary position. But Carmona's retirement will create a political vacuum that may touch off a wide series of changes. The post is filled by a free nationwide vote.

The 59-year-old Salazar must be embittered by growing muttering against him. When he took office in 1928, at the request of military authorities who had seized power, the country had been disunited and impoverished by a succession of bloody revolutions.

He insisted on a carte blanche, pruned expenses, balanced the budget and began a program of industrial and social improvements. Standards or living in Portugal are low, but his goal has been to raise them gradually, in step with a slowly-strengthening economy.

In family's Interests

Salazar's politicial objective has been to establish the interests of the family. The state, he has said should "create the largest possible number of small proprietors who, far from assisting Communism or Socialism, will become a solid conservative foundation."

His views were embodied in the constitution of 1933, calling for a corporative state in which representatives of various industries and classes of society would have a voice in government. His critics admire many of his principles, but say too few have been put into practice and that government in Portugal is still too much a one-man affair.

Opposition to him is strongest among the professional and intellectual classes, but of late has spread among the working classes, largely because of increased costs of living. Some Communist agitators are said to be at work, winning sympathy—if not support—because they identify themselves with the workers' interests.

Police Powerful

Police keep a tight rein on civil affairs and have checked more than one conspiracy, the latest alleged to involve high-ranking army officers, now under arrest. Newspaper censorship excludes reports of domestic or foreign events which might have a disquieting effect on the people—in other words, give them ideas.

But the grumbling bubbles up as Lisbonese chatter in their cafes or sun themselves on the waterfront. It emerges in cruel little stories, Like the one which has Salazar flying in an aircraft over a poor section of Lisbon

"Those people down there need help—I'll drop down a 1,000—escudo ($40) note and benefit some poor family," he says.

"Why not drop two 500—escudo notes, and benefit two families?" asks a companion.

After an argument they consult the pilot, who says: "Why not throw yourself down, and benefit thousands?"

St. Laurent Says World Must Support U.N.

Toronto, Feb. 26 — (CP)—Failure of freedom-loving states to support the United Nations and its ideal would help precipitate "collective insecurity and irresponsibilities among nations," Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Minister for External Affairs, told the Ontario Good Roads Association in a speech prepared for delivery yesterday.

"It is not pleasant to start thinking in terms of the armed force which can be mustered for the support of the United Nations or to maintain the position of free nations," Mr. St. Laurent said, "but these past decades have taught us hard lessons."

The minister said wavering support of U. N. could bring on among nations the same type of panic which seized banks and commercial enterprises "a few years ago."

"Some might be able to salvage partial security for themselves in that event, but none would have a free and orderly world for their traders, their statesmen and their missionaries to move in. Our own potential prosperity would definitely be restricted and we would be put on the defensive in many parts of the world."

Mr. St. Laurent said, "Peace is so important to all of us that we must still regard the United Nations, either in its present form or in such modified form as circumstances may make inevitable, as an indispensable medium, and channel, and forum through which the peoples of the world can work out the institutions and arrangements which peace, security and even survival appear to require."

The Unbeatable Old "Model-T"

(From. "Farewell. My. Lovely,"
By E. B. White and Lee Strout)

In its palmy days the model T Ford could take off faster than anything on the road. The reason was simple. To get under way you simply hooked the third finger of the right hand around a lever on the steering column, pulled down hard, and shoved your left foot forcibly against the low speed pedal. These were simple, positive motions; the car responded by lunging forward with a roar. After a few seconds of this turmoil, you took your toe off the pedal, eased up a mite on the throttle, and the car, possesssed of only two forward speeds, catapulted directly into high with a series of ugly jerks and was off on its glorious errand. The abruptness of this departure was never equalled in other cars of the period.

The human leg was (and still is) incapable of letting in a clutch with anything like the forthright abandon that used to send model T on its way. Letting in a clutch is a negative, hesitant motion, depending on delicate nervous control; pushing down the Ford pedal was a simple, country motion—an expansive act which came as natural as kicking an old door to make it budge.

During my associatioin with model Ts, self-starters were not a prevalent accessory. They were expensive and under suspicion.

Your car came equipped with a serviceable crank, and the first thing you learned was how to get results. It was a special trick, and until you learned it (usually from another Ford owner, but sometimes by a period of appalling experimentation), you might as well have been winding up an awning. The trick was to leave the ignition switch off, proceed to the animal's head, pull out the choke (which was a little wire protruding through the radiator), and give the crank two or three nonchalant upward lifts. Then, whistling as though thinking about something else you would saunter back to the driver's cabin, turn the ignition on, return to the crank, and this time, catching it on the down stroke, give it a quick spin wih plenty of That.

If this procedure was followed, the engine almost always responded—first with a few scattered explosions, then with a tumultuous gunfire, which you checked by racing around to the driver's seat and retarding the trottle. Often, if the emergency brake hadn't been pulled all the way back, the car advanced on you the instant the first explosion occurred, and you would hold it back by leaning your weight against it. I can still feel my old Ford nuzzling me at the curb, as though looking for an apple in my pocket.

Finest Wine of 20th Century

(The Calgary Herald)

The finest wine of the Twentieth Century has been produced in the Anjou district of France. So say the experts who sampled it, and who are we to disagree with them?

It seems that last year's weather produced wonderful grapes in the Anjou vineyards, and the grapes produced wonderful wine, excelling even the famous vintage of 1893 and 1921. Furthermore, there's plenty of it: dispatches from Paris quote the price at 200 francs, or $2.00 Canadian.

Now if there's one thing France would particularly like to have, it's Canadian dollars: so we are on safe ground in suggesting that France should sell some of this marvellous Anjou wine to thirsty Canadians. There's no doubt in the world that France would be glad to do just that.

But here we run into snags. The moment the French wine arrives, the federal government slaps a stiff tax on it. It is true this tax has been reduced under the new trade agreements, but the reduction is very slight: in the case of champagne, for instance, the Canadian tariff has been cut from about $1.05 per quart to about 83 cents per quart.

Next, the French wine goes into the hands of the various provincial governments, whose policy is to charge all he traffic will bear, and then some. In Quebec and Ontario, where wine may be sold by the glass in restaurants and hotels, there is a third impost—the profit collected by the hotelkeeper or restaurateur. The end result is that a glass of French wine, served in a Toronto hotel, may cost four or five times as much as a glass of the same wine served in France.

All this is good news for Canadian vintners of course: it is also good news for Canadian brewers and distillers, since any kind of liquor imported from abroad competes with the whole domestic industry. But it is bad news for France, because that country would like to buy a good many products from Canada.

At present, owing to her shortage of Canadian dollars, France is buying very little from us outside of bread grains, and we may wonder whether these purchases will long continue, since the French government is planning to return to its pre-war policy of self-sufficiency in wheat—even though it costs far more to grow wheat in France than in Canada.

If Canada wishes to sell her products to France, she must obviously be prepared to let French products come into Canada and—what is equally important—to see that they reach the Canadian consumer at a price he is willing to pay. That is certainly not the case with French wines and brandies: by the time they get to the shelves of the provincial liquor stores, they are selling at a price which discourages all but the well-to-do. So the average Canadian has to do without French wine, and France has to do without Canadian dollars.

Some of the blame for this, no doubt, rests with the federal government, which could and should allow Frenchwines in on easier terms. But the major part of it rests with the provincial liquor commissions, which may be described without hesitation as the greediest and most ruthless monopolies ever known in the chequered history of our nation.

Earl of Rosebury Has Had Notable Career in British Sporting Life

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 26 (CP)—House of Lords reform is in the air but Britons, irrespective of political opinion, find it hard to imagine parliament without hereditary peers like Albert Edward Harry Meyer Archibald Primrose, sixth Earl of Rosebery, 66.

As soldier, administrator and politician Lord Rosebery has influenced his times. But to the ordinary man he is known chiefly as a sportsman—twice winner of the Derby with Blue Peter in 1939 and Ocean Swell in 1944; Senior Steward of the Jockey Club, ruling body of British racing; former captain of cricket for Surrey and a member of the English team playing United States at polo in 1923.

Has Great Wealth

A man of great wealth and possessions—his mother was the only daughter and heiress of Baron Meyer Rothschild, member of a family of financiers—Lord Rosebery once refused to pose in shirt sleeves for a photograph because "my braces are gone and my trousers are held up by string." He removed his coat to prove the point and revealed that, like many another Briton, he was a victim of wartime elastic shortages.

Stoutish, square-faced, slow in speech, Lord Rosebery is without the gifts of oratory and political understanding that made his father Foreign Secretary in 1886 and Prime Minister in 1894. He is president of the Liberal National Party, closely allied with the Conservatives.

Carefully reading his speeches, Lord Rosebery growls that the Labor Government has made Britain into "a vast new kingdom of paper and ink with no right of protest for the ordinary citizen." And then he'll talk racing with a Labor backbencher with good will on both sides.

No "Backwoodsman"

The Labor critics of the Lords complain that the Conservative and Liberal majority in the House is composed largely of "backwoodsmen" who make no contribution to public affairs but by right of birth can take their seats and delay legislation sent from the Commons.

Lord Rosebery is no "backwoodsman" although he is remembered for no sparkling speeches. He was an officer in the Grenadier Guards in the First World War and came home with a wound and the D.S.O. and M.C.

In the Second World War he was appointed regional commissioner for Scotland and if the Germans had captured England he would have been left with dictatorial powers to continue the battle in the north.

Student Designs Would Streamline Campus Buildings

By MARILYN LAMBORN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 26 —(CP)— "Romantic imitations," is the verdict of the budding architect as he casts a critical eye over the buildings of traditional medieval design on the University of Toronto campus.

In preparing a recent exhibit, students of the architectural college didn't hope for any calamity which would level their alma mater to the ground, but they did dream of a chance to rebuild from blueprints. If such an opportunity presented itself, they were all prepared.

Inspired by practical need, they made plans for university buildings which would convert the campus into a self-conscious pile of glass and rounded corners. Then they presented the cream of the plans in an exhibit and invited the campus at large to inspect what the future could hold. The students weren't sure.

"What? Do away with the fine Gothic atmosphere?" protested an arts student. "The architects can't have any reverence for the past."

"Will it produce the greatest happiness?" asked a fourth-year philosophy students. "These modern monstrosities are emblematic of the age of efficiency, which, when carried to the extreme, result in goose-stepping."

A science student wholeheartedly approved of the modern architecture school. He liked introduction of space and light into the classrooms.

I'll admit the buildings are equipped with everything but a moat, but their construction is an engineering feat,, said an engineer. "And I'll bet modern architects couldn't build anything like them now."

The architects admit they couldn't. Nor would they "prostitute" themselves in such a way if they could.

"The exhibit represents the pent-up feelings of the students after 50 years of frustration," said Prof. E. R. Arthur of the architecture department. "It is frank propaganda for the modern style with no holds barred."

Many of the university buildings owe their inspiration to designs dating back to 500 B.C., while others are as modern as 1700 A.D.

One student said Grecian architecture was all right for the Greeks, but they explained that now things are different. Better construction materials are available and the present pattern of life has changed. Use of improved building techniques to suit modern needs was his theory.

"Science has advanced past public tastes," said another architecture student.

To show what they thought of the type of buildings that resembles a medieval castle, the students constructed a suit of mail armor as a guard in front of a picture of a college building. Even schooltie enthusiasts admit it looks more appropriate there than a pretty blonde co-ed.

GARAGE NOT SOLD

Shortage of Coal Cars Puts 3,000 Miners on Shelf

Sydney, N.S., Feb. 26 (CP) — Three thousand miners in the Cape Breton coal belt—about one third of the entire colliery force—were idle today because of a shortage of coal cars.

Not working were two at Glace Bay, one at Dominion, and Florence. The first three employ more than 2,300 miners. Florence some 600.

There has been a sporadic car shortage since the strike settlement last June which has tended to offset climbing production figure in all Nova Scotia pits.

Unable to move some coal brought to the surface, Dominion Coal Company has been building one of its biggest banks in history. A company official said little coal would be available for banking if cars could be supplied.

The bank probably would start to disappear when Sydney harbor was free of ice and the coal started moving by collier.

Though lack of cars has been the main obstacle blocking return to the high November production level, the weather has created problems, too.

High winds yesterday prevented operation of the towering coal bridge at the steel plant here and a large number of company cars were not spilled. This meant a further delay today.

Clogged roads and delayed buses also have cut down the working force.

(Transport Minister Chevrier said in the Commons Tuesday that improved weather and a faster turn-around of cars was expected to bring almost immediate improvement.)

World's Biggest Uncut Diamond Will be Shown at Industries Fair

(From the United Kingdom Information Office.)

A "fountain of diamonds" cascading over two tiers of gold and platinum may sound like a magic treasure pile of Aladdin. But it's no fairy tale. The display will sparkle under the eyes of thousands of visitors from all parts of the world this Spring at the 1948 British Industries Fair. Which will run simultaneously in London and Birmingham from May 3 to May 14.

Central attraction in the diamond section of the fair will be the 770-carat Woyie River Diamond—the largest uncut diamond in the world today—which was found in Sierra Leone. It will be on public view for the first time.

This famous stone, discovered in 1945, is the third largest diamond ever found. Forty-four carats heavier than the Jonker, it has been surpassed in size only by the 3,106-carat Cullinan found in 1905 and the Excelsior, of 995.7 carats found in 1893.

Stranger than any circus side-show will be the exhibit of freak diamonds—the only collection of its kind in the world. The most remarkable item in this group is a gold nugget with two diamonds, one white and one green, actually imbedded in it.

By some quirk of nature the two gems were already "set" in this museum-piece rarity when it was found. Other freak diamonds include stones in odd "artificial" shapes and a fantastic range of colors.

A selection of Princess Elizabeth's own personal gems will also be on show. Highlight of the Princess' collection to be loaned for the Fair, is a diamond necklace made up from choice stones presented to her by the government of South Africa during the Royal Tour last year. The necklace is considered by experts to be probably the most perfectly-matched collection of large brilliant-cut diamonds ever put together. The 21 gems (to celebrate the Princess' 21st. birthday) are graduated from a centre stone of 9.55 carats to a pair weighing 1.59 and 1.60 respectively.

Diamonds are today big dollar-earners for Britain. The United States, in turn, is the world's biggest buyer of high-class gem stones, both rough and polished.

Diamond dealers in London — the world's diamond selling centre—estimated that world sales of rough stones in 1948, by the biggest group, De Beers, will top £25,000,000 this year. One-fifth of this total will be a block sale of $20,000,000 of industrial diamonds to the United States government, according to the dealers. Diamond sales for 1947 were £24,500,000.

From African mines, the rough diamonds travel to the head office of the Diamond Trading Company in London, the selling organization for five big producers. Here, at No. 32 Holborn Viaduct—one of the most blitzed sections of London—30 girls sort and grade the uncut stones into little parcels worth $40,000, $80,000 or $120,000 each. The smallest, most valuable pile is "sizes" — uncut stones one carat. The biggest pile is "cleavage" — large stones with faults. The rest is "sand" — diamonds below one carat, but not as heavy as "melee" which is also under one carat.

JUDGE CRITICIZES CONDUCT OF WAR-CRIMES TRIALS

Judge Charles F. Wennerstrum, left, shown as he presided at the trials of German generals for war crimes at Nuremberg, has stirred controversy with his blunt criticism of proceedings of the Nuremberg war-crimes tribunals. Brigadier-General Telford Taylor, chief American prosecutor of war crimes in Germany, on learning of the judge's criticism contained in an interview granted an American newsman, promptly charged the judge with "grave misconduct" and "baseless slanders."

Old-Timers Had No Stockings

History tells us that ancients wore no stockings, Grace Luckhart writes in The Vancouver Province. In fact, people didn't start to cover their legs until the Middle Ages, when cloth leggings came into use. At a later period the art of knitting was invented.

There are two schools of thought as to who started it. Some say it was the Spaniards but the weight of opinion leans toward the Scots, and naturally I lean with it. All the Scottish women I ever knew, young or old, were always knitting. Of course, it wasn't in the Middle Ages, or was it?

Machine Invented

Along in 1589, a smart lad, one William Lee of Nottinghamshire got to wondering why all this knitting couldn't be done on a machine, so he ups and invents one, the stocking frame for weaving stockings. He met with little encouragement in his attempts to set up a factory in England, so he went to France, where Henry IV fell for it. Unfortunately Henry was assassinated shortly after, which wrecked Lee's plans and he died in Paris in great poverty.

A knowledge of his machine was carried back to England by some of his workmen who managed to establish themselves in Nottingham, which has since remained the principal seat of the hosiery manufacture in England.

But for two whole centuries, the machine was used just as Lee had invented it, thus carrying out an English characteristic to leave a good thing alone.

The authority from which I gathered this information ends up patronizingly: "Hand knitting .. still forms an agreeable domestic occupation."

Pioneering in West.

In Canadian pioneer days, especially on a Saskatchewan homestead, it was than an agreeable domestic occupation. It was a "must". I used to stay a lot with my Aunt Grace when I was in my early teens, and I can remember sitting around the old kitchen stove with its high oven while underneath was a veritable carpet of cats and drying socks.

Ranged around the room, especially in bad weather, were Uncle Bob and his five husky sons, while we two women carried on with the knitting. "Boughten" socks were no use to wear with heavy farm shoes, and when we had to knit all the socks for six men, it kept us hustling. Aunt Grace was the fastest knitter I ever saw. She could knit with her eyes closed, and no wonder when one thinks of the hundreds of socks she made.

Aunt Grace's family was a silent one. We could sit around for hours, without a sound except the occasional scuffling of the two youngest boys, while outside the frost deepened (or whatever frost does) and the big old log house would groan and crack under the impact of the bitter cold.

Then, as though by a given signal, the two eldest boys would don their coats and caps, light the lantern and go out to give the stock the once-over before going to bed.

Preparing for Night

They would come in as silently as they went out, with only an occasional observation such as "northern lights" or "getting colder." Aunt Grace would put down her knitting, take the bowl of yeast from the top of the oven and set the bread. It would eventually be snuggled in a rocking chair, wrapped in a quilt. The fire would be banked with mountain wood, and coal, if they had managed to get to Estevan to the mines, all cats that were going out were put out and the rest stayed right where they were.

Then we'd all go to bed.

I slept in the newest addition to the house, the spare bedroom built off the kitchen, just below the North Pole. Because if there is any place in the world colder than a spare bedroom, I haven't met up with it. There were no hot water bottles, no heating pads, not even stone pigs. But a stick of prairie maple, piping hot from the oven and wrapped in a flannel petticoat wasn't bad.

I used to drop off to sleep under a ton of quilts, while the cracking and creaking of the house sounded like an earthquake.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

All but fangs and claws are used in fast bridge company. Easy contracts are seldom reached. Each deal is bid right up to the hilt or beyond. The opposition does not let you buy anything cheap.

If there seems a chance of coming to a safe contract, either or both opponents will prefer to take a sacrifice. They carefully weigh their possible losses against your probable gains.

Under such circumstances came the deal you see here:

NORTH
♥J 9 8 7 6
♦A
♣J 7 6 4 3 2

WEST
♠A K Q 9 8 6

♦K 8 5 4
♣Q 9 8 5

SOUTH
♥A K Q 10 5 3
♦Q J 10 9 3
♣None

You may well believe there was plenty of fireworks. And what finally happened was dynamite. South made a redoubled contract of six hearts. The bidding went like this:

South	West	North	East
1 H	Dbl	4 H	Pass
Pass	4 S	Pass	Pass
5 H	Pass	Pass	5 S
6 H	Dbl	Pass	Pass
Redbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

If west and east had it to do over again they would have gone to six spades. Such a contract could have been defeated two tricks. Not nearly as much of a loss as playing for six hearts redoubled.

But they did not have it to do over again. Nor could the west player be blamed for thinking he could defeat six hearts. At almost any time a player expects to take two tricks with such cards.

It just goes to show you how interesting a good bridge game can be. Even the most expert players cannot be sure of themselves.

If you are a beginner, some of these bids are going to worry you a little. You need not curl up and say they are confusing. I am about to explain some of them in detail.

Come back and see what they mean.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 26. (AP)—This story gets familiar. Now it's Ava Gardner who is seeking her release from M.G.M.

She joins Robert Walker, Red Skelton and others who want to end their contracts with the studio. But, like the others, it's doubtful if she will get her wish. Ava, now playing a convincing goddess in "One touch of Venus" at U-I, is a cinch for top stardom.

Ava is slated to return to Metro for "House Along the River", written by Dalton Trumbo, one of ten "unfriendly witnesses" at the Congressional movie hearings. The story was Trumbo's last stand at M.G.M.

Nine to Five

Claudette Colbert is still sticking to her demand for a working day that ends at five p.m. (that's the reason she was replaced by Katharine Hepburn in "State of the Union".) But most producers feel they need the long working day to pare costs.

The Canadian-born Mack Sennett, who is suing the "High Button Shoes" Company over the use of his bathing beauties and Keystone cops in its 'Mack Sennett" ballet, told me something which may prove maddening to the Broadway show's owners. Said he: "If they had asked me if they could use my properties, I would have said 'go ahead, no charge.' " But they didn't ask, so he is suing for $250,000 damages. . .

Religious Question

"The Gauntlet", the small-town minister yarn which Paramount has been preparing, has been shelved. It's the same old reason—the Protestants can't agree on how the story should be treated. That's why you see more pictures about the Roman Catholic Church, which has a regular system for approving screen stories. . .

Abbott and Costello have located a story which they may film in England this summer. It's called "Horse Heaven" and Lou relates it hilariously. The comedy team will probably do another picture after "Brain of Frankenstein' and before their English trip. In it, Lou will play three brothers!. . . .

Bancroft Rovers Oust Apsley Team In Hockey Playoff

Bancroft — Apsley Aces were edged from the N.H.L. play-off race last evening by the Bancroft Rovers by a narrow 3-2 verdict that was in doubt all the way. The Rovers went into the game with a two goal margin having won the first game in Apsley by virtue of a 4-2 score. Maxwell sank the first goal for the Rovers at the 19.40 mark of the first period with Fox setting up the play. G. Tucker for Apsley tied it up in the second unassisted. In the third session Fox tied the score when he picked the upper right hand corner from the blue line shot but G. Tucker gained the equalizer (his second of the night) minutes later. Watson potted the winning counter near the end of the period on a long shot from centre ice. Rovers now meet the Bancroft Trappers in a best of three final series to determine the right to the N.H.L. championship. The Trappers were conceded their series when Coe Hill defaulted.

Lineups:

Apsley: Goal, Spenceley; defence, J. Tucker, R. Tucker; forwards, Dunford, Howden, K. Watson; subs, G. Watson, G. Tucker, Tanner, Lockman, Thompson, Smith, Jeff.

Rovers: Goal, T. O'Shaughnessy; defence, Watson, Severn; forwards, Maxwell, Fox, Moxam; subs, Stringer, Vance, McAlpine, J. O'Shaughnessy, Delyea, Bruce.

Referee: Fetterley. Linesman E. Carpenter.

The company's average output of nearly 1,000 cars a day will be lowered "appreciably," a company spokesman said.

Barbara Charms 18,000 Fans In Paris Rink

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada's Barbara Ann Scott, European, Olympic and world figure-skating champion, last night charmed 18,000 spectators in a skating exhibition during the intermissions at a hockey game at Paris in which the Racing Club De Paris defeated a Canadian-Scottish club 7-2.

Maj.-Gen. Georges P. Vanier, Canadian Ambassador, was among the audience which saw Barbara Ann "bring the house down" with her performance.

In the hockey game, the Racing Club led 1-0 at the end of the first period and scored three times in each of the next two frames. The Canadian team tallied twice in the middle session.

Four cars of a railway train were needed as the curling party going to the Dominion finals at Calgary started to move across the Dominion from Montreal yesterday. Rinks from every province in the Dominion and several quarters from some provinces will meet in the curling championships held March 1-4.

President Peter Campbell of the International Baseball League Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday announced the outright release of Goody Rosen. Rosen, an out-fielder product of the Toronto sandlots, was bought outright at the start of last season for $10,000 from Jersey City Giants and played in the major leagues with New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers. Campbell also announced the release of Len Kensecke, first baseman.

Puerto Rico and Syria have been invited to compete in the Olympic games at London, July 29 - Aug. 14, the British organizing committee announced yesterday. If they accept, the total number of countries expected to participate will be 55. Salvador, which had previously accepted an invitation, now has withdrawn, the committee said.

The race was won by the topweighted Cool Customer, who carried 175 pounds in the gallop of three miles and forty yards. Cool Customer is not a candidate for the Grand National, scheduled at Aintree, Liverpool, March 20.

Vic Obeck, coach of McGill University's football Redmen yesterday announced the team will turn out for spring clinic sessions May 3-8 at Molson Stadium, weather permitting. A top-flight American coach, unnamed as yet, will lend aid in coaching. The coach may possibly be "Buffy" Donelli, now head coach of Boston College.

President C. J. Warner of the Eastern Interprovincial Football League said yesterday that bonds have been posted in behalf of all league teams except the proposed Vancouver entry which had not put up its $2,500 guarantee and "it looks as if Vancouver won't be in the league.

Hornets Maintain One-Point Edge Over Cleveland

By The Canadian Press

Pittsburgh Hornets maintained their one-point edge over Cleveland Barons in the race for first place in the American Hockey League's western circuit last night by edging the lowly Springfield Indians 4-3.

Meanwhile the red-hot Barons thumped Hershey Bears 5-1, Washington Lions dropped Philadelphia 7-4 and Buffalo stopped New Haven 7-3.

Barons marksmen were Johnny Holota, Hy Buller, Ab Demarco, Church Russell and Roger Gagne, one goal each. Herb Cain scored Hershey's counter.

Johnnie Carr-Harriss and Dan Porteus led Washington with a two-goal effort each. Jack Riley, Jack Portland and George Hayes got the others, George Defelice and Phil Hergesheimer had two apiece for Rockets.

At Buffalo, a near-riot marred Bisons convincing victory over New Haven. Bison winger, Jerry Brown, who scored three goals, and New Haven coach Lynn Patrick started arguing and soon players and fans joined in the free-for-all. Patrick was ejected from the game. Les Douglas, Les Hickey, Hal Laycoe and Doug Lewis were the other Buffalo marksmen while Dunc Fisher, Nick Mischoski and Chick Webster tallied for Ramblers.

Leafs Take N.H.L. Lead After Walloping Boston 4-2; Tail-End Hawks Take Rangers

Individual scoring feats stood out in last night's two National Hockey League games, with Don Raleigh, New York Rangers starry rookie, showing the way by netting all four of his team's goals in a losing cause.

More than offsetting Raleigh's four-star performance, however, was the work of a couple of opponents. Between them, Gaye Stewart and Bud Poile rapped home five goals to pace Chicago Black Hawks to a 7-4 victory over the New Yorkers.

Ted (Teeter) Kennedy, Toronto Maple Leafs driving centre, also turned in a smart scoring effort. His two goals were the margin of Leafs 4-2 victory over Bruins, which gave Toronto a two-point lead over the idle Detroit Red Wings at the top of the standings.

While the Leafs were breaking the leadership tie, and also drawing level with Wings in total games played — each now has just ten games left in the drive to the league title — the tail-end Chicago Black Hawks were beating the third-place New York Rangers 7-4 at Madison Square Garden.

The New York result put the Hawks within a game of the 5th place Montreal Canadiens. But Hawks and Canadiens still are faced with the task of producing miracles if they are to break into the Stanley Cup play-off circle.

At Toronto, with 13,454 fans jamming Maple Leaf Gardens, Woody Dumart scored for Boston in 33 seconds of the opener. Bill Ezinicki helped Kennedy tie up the count. Ed Sandford scored Boston's second. Then Kennedy produced some stick-handling wizardry to tie it up once more. It was in the last minute of the second period when Kennedy fired the winning goal, and Gus Mortson added one for good measure in the third period.

The Toronto ice saw a free-for-all in the second frame. Boston's great goalie Frankie Brimsek had suffered a facial gash from a flying puck and returned to his nets with three stitches in the wound. He promptly caught a hard shot from Ezinicki and was holding the puck when Wild Bill took a swipe at the hand with his stick. Murray Henderson of Boston was brawling with Ezinicki when Clare Martin of Boston elected to tackle Gus Mortson of Toronto. Mortson knocked Martin down and at that moment all four were chased to the cooler for roughness.

Before the period was over, three more had joined that quartet to jam the penalty box. Ed Harrison was sent there for slashing and for roughing, Jim Thomson of the Leafs going off, with Harrison, in the roughing penalty, and Bill Barilko went there for slashing.

At New York, rookie Don Raleigh from Winnipeg scored all four Ranger goals. But Gaye Stewart scored three goals for the Hawks, and Bud Poile, another former Leaf, scored two. Doug Bentley and Ernie Dickens got the other two counters.

Grey-haired Neil Colville, Rangers' captain and master of defence, was hit in the mouth with a flying puck and required three stitches.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

A stout - hearted crew of youthful hockey players, wearing the colors of Belleville are pointed for a provincial hockey championship in the first year of their organized existence. Lone standard bearers of the Belleville hockey banner in provincial playdowns, the youngsters have been and are, giving all they have in order to bring home a title to their native city.

And barring accidents, they should do just that thing. We are not being overly - confident, but from reports from neutral observers, this crew of beardless puck - chasers, the Belleville Merchants Midget "B's", indicate that it will take a mighty stout team to place under them the skids of playdown defeat.

The other night they did something that the Senior "B" squad of this village has been trying to do for years. That is tack a defeat on a Peterborough squad in that city's adopted arena up Omemee way. The kidlets turned on their power and sent the Petes' younkers home on the short end of an 8-3 score, and grabbed for themselves a neat and nifty five goal lead to take into the second game of the two-games-goals-to-count series being played in Memorial Arena tonight.

• • •

The Merchants, 'tis said, were full value for their victory up there in the Omemee jungles, especially in view of the fact that they stacked up against a squad that was pounds heavier. But what the Moira kids lacked in avordupois they made up for in speed and general hockey ability. They scored the most goals — and that, after all, is generally conceded to be the main chore a team has to perform in order to win games.

• • •

Tonight they again clash with the Peterborough team. The game starts in Memorial Arena at 8:30 and the fandom of this city should go all out with moral and financial support to give these gallant young pucksters the encouragement they deserve. They have come through five straight games in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association playdowns without a defeat being tacked on them, and they will be gunning for their sixth consecutive victory tonight. And they should do just that thing.

• • •

They're only youngsters, the age for midget teams being 16 and under. The roar of a hometown crowd rooting them on to victory will be much sweeter music in their youthful ears than those of the more experienced and more game-hardened veterans of the junior and senior "B" squads.

• • •

And equally as important, in fact more so, at the present time, is the much-needed financial support that comes with a large attendance. It takes money to operate any kind of a hockey team. And travelling expenses, when a team gets into the playdowns, eats large chunks out of any surplus funds the team management may have. In this particular case, and taking it for granted that the Merchants defeat the Petes tonight and earn the right to meet Collingwood in the Ontario semi-finals, whether the squad will advance to the titular series, depends largely on the support given it by the public.

It is understood that the Merchants management is not any too flush with funds, and with the long trip to Collingwood which involves an overnight stay, staring them in the face, not to mention a second long jaunt to Sarnia or Waterloo, if the team eliminates the Collingwood squad, the matter of finances is a serious one.

• • •

And there is the bare possibility that if sufficient support is not forthcoming, Merchants Midgets may have to drop out of the titular playdowns. If this ultimately proves to be the case, it should record a dull mark on the escutcheon of sportsmanship in this city. These youngsters with the all-out support and effort of three or four business men, who have already dug deeply into their personal purses to finance the squad, have come through thus far with flying colors in their first year as an organized hockey club. It isn't many centres which can boast a brand new team which has gone through as far as these Midgets, namely the fourth round of the playdowns. If they go on and win a provincial championship, it will establish some sort of a hockey record in this district.

It will be a heart-breaking blow to these youngsters if they are forced to relinquish hockey activities when a title is within their grasp. The least they can do, at present is reach the Ontario Midget "B" semi-finals, unless an alarming upset takes place tonight, and with the goal of the provincial title in sight, it would be nothing short of a crime to deprive these clean youngsters of their hockey goal.

And so in the interests of the sport, and for the encouragement of these fine kids, the sports fraternity of this city should turn out tonight en masse to root them on to victory. If you can't go then you can assist by buying a ticket. The management of the team is doing and will do all it can, but a few public-spirited men cannot be expected to shoulder the entire financial burden. And if the worst come to the worst the city should see to it that the team is supplied with sufficient financial resources to cover any expenses involved in the Midget's first quest for an Ontario championship.

Friday night should see a neat piece of hockey tiffing in the Memorial Arena when the Trenton RCAF Flyers meet the Cobourg Pavilions in third and final game of the Intermediate "A" semi-finals series of the district group. Flyers dusted off the Cobourgs here Tuesday night in a thrilling battle despite the fact that 20 pucks found refuge in the nets. Cobourg defeated the air laddies in the first game in Port Hope, so tomorrow night tells the tale.

• • •

And it should be a dilly of a battle. The teams are fast, don't spare the horses, and you can bet your last nickel that Friday night's joust will see both ..squads .. TH AR OD IL I squads with their hair down in a real battle for victory. The winner meets Trenton Hockey Club in a best three-of-five series for the group title.

Basketball fans will get a real taste of their favorite sports fare on Friday night as well, with two outstanding exhibition games slated for the "Y" gymnasium. Trenton Flyers will meet the Belleville "Y" seniors in what should be a thriller with the "Y" senior girls team entertaining the Peterborough Towne Togs in a night-cap tilt. The Petes lassies defeated our gals last Friday night up in the Liftlock City and the Belleville colleens are out to avenge the set - back. First game gets under way at 7:30.

Vancouver, Feb. 26 — (CP) — Professional basketball has folded in Toronto and it shows signs of a similar exit in Vancouver unless there is some fast schedule-changing by the moguls of the Pacific Coast Professional Basketball League.

League play is called the most "spectacular basketball west of Chicago," but it has little crowd appeal and Clem McDonald, who angels the Vancouver Hornets, seems headed for another loss this season. In a baptism of fire last year — the first as an owner-McDonald finished in the red by $15,000.

Fans here are served top-grade play, says Don (Vancouver Sun) Carlson, but the game is not drawing peanuts. He nails the reason: lack of an appropriate schedule.

"The fault is not with the game, but with the league directors. The facts show that during January, Portland did not play once in Vancouver, Astoria was here once, as was Tacoma. Seattle appeared twice and Bellingham four times."

Duke (Vancouver Sun) McLeod says one of the greatest sports extravaganzas of modern times will be on tap for Vancouverites March 10.

Highlight of the two-hour production will be the settling of an old dispute. Who is the faster, a lacrosse star or a puck chaser?

An elaborate runway will be set up for the boxla artist, in full strip and carrying a ball in his webbed stick, while the hockeyist will push his puck down the ice alongside.

Another gala feature, with proceeds going to the British Olympic food parcel fund, will be a hockey game between stars of yesteryear, with Fred (Cyclone) Taylor as their star, and the youngsters of today.

Hamilton Tigers Win in Overtime From Marlboros

(By The Canadian Press)

It appears that home ice means a lot to hockey teams as three Ontario Hockey Association squads defeated their visitors in playoff games last night.

In the lone senior A tilt, Hamilton Tigers entertained Toronto Marlboros and waited until 16.48 of overtime before taking a 6-5 decision. The win put Hamilton into a 2-1 lead in their best of seven semi-final series. Galt Rockets also had to play over regulation time to trip St. Catharines Teepees 6-5 and win the best of three quarter-final series. The greatest about-face was at Oshawa where the Generals took complete control of the game and handed Windsor Spitfires a 6-0 blanking. The victory cut Windsors' two-game lead to one in their best of seven semi-finals.

Scored on Fluke

The Hamilton victory was a heartbreaker to the Marlies but wonderful for the Tigers as the pay-off goal was scored on a fluke shot. Bill Dinning shot the puck towards the goal where it went off a stray leg and into the Marlboro nets.

Earlier, play was on much more even terms as Tigers had a 3-2 lead at the end of the initial frame and Marlies tied the score at 4-4 at the end of the second. Both teams scored in the third to force overtime play as the ice became sloppy and passing plays refused to work on the wet rink.

Oshawa completely dominated the game from start to finish as they blanked Windsor. The Generals started in all out fashion and scored twice before the three-minute mark. They added another to end the initial frame with a 3-0 lead. The Generals added two more tallies in the middle stanza and then scored the last marker in the final frame.

Lafrance Top Man

Joe Lafrance was top man as he rapped in two goals. Ray Ceresino, Ross Lowe, Sandy Air and Gerry Scott with the clincher, were one-goal snipers. Pete Piquette had to work for his shutout in the first period but thereafter the pace eased off. Spitfires had few stars, with Marcel Pronovost and the Wilson brothers being the best.

Each period of the St. Catharines-Galt tilt ended in a stalemate as the first period ended at 2-2, the second at 5-5, the third at 5-5. Blonde Wiggie Wylie was the local hero as he potted the winning marker just 25 seconds after the start of overtime play. Incidentally, that goal put Galt in front for the first time in the game as they came from behind in all three frames to tie the count.

Harry Pidhirny was again the Galt scoring star as he connected for four goals. Hal Burcham and Wiggie Wylie each had singles for the Rockets. Teepee marksmen were Gib Service with a pair, Bill McIntyre, Red Sullivan and Topper Toppazzini with one each. Toppazzini was the pick of the Teepee team.

No games are scheduled for tonight, but tomorrow six teams again swing into action. In the senior loop Hamilton Tigers move to Toronto for their fourth series game and Owen Sound Mercurys open their semi-final round at Kitchener-Waterloo in a best of five series. In the junior league, Barrie invades Galt for the start of the second semi-final round.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Toronto, Feb. 26 — (CP) — Charged with armed robbery in a $4,000 dice game holdup, Robert Weir, 30, of Toronto, and James Liscombe, 28, of Hamilton, were committed for trial. The men were arrested here Feb. 12, a few days after two thieves raided a dice game in a greenhouse office in suburban Etobicoke township.

N.H.L. President Seeks Permission To See Convict

Detroit, Feb. 26 (CP) —Main hope of clarifying the beclouded National Hockey League picture rested today on possibility of President Clarence Campbell obtaining permission to see a former convict whose arrest brought out the possibility that two eastern members of the league had been betting on the outcome of N.H.L. games.

Last night, Campbell said that investigation into the alleged player-betting will continue "to the limit" and that if certain evidence exists "then that's strong circumstantial evidence that the hockey players were involved in betting and it must be investigated to the limit."

Campbell, working with Detroit police and state authorities said that the reported incident involved only an individual attempt to bet and not even "a hint of an attempt to fix a game." It proved however, that there is "a big field for investigation."

Detroit police commissioner, Harry S. Toy, said that one of the players was a member of Boston Bruins and the other of New York Rangers but no names were mentioned.

Toy identified the "middleman" as James (Rocco) Tamer, picked up as a parole violator last week for association with "known hoodlums" and whisked away to prison at Jackson, in southern Michigan.

Campbell said that "Tamer would be the man who could give us the information we need."

Another possibility of clearing up the situation would be to find wire recordings reported to have been made of Tamer's telephone conversations with the 2 players. But Toy and parole officers said that they did not even know if such recordings had been made.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

Miami, Feb. 26. (AP)— The sport that really seems to be coming along in this town which showed remarkable lack of interest in a world championship fight appears to be polo. . .The difference, of course, is in the promotion. . .all the things that happened in running the Willie Pep-Humberto Sierra bout probably never will be told, but we can guarantee that they should not happen to a northerner in one of the Miami Beach booptraps. . . on the other hand, the guys who stage the indoor-outdoor polo matches in the Orange Bowl seem genuinely interested in promoting interest in the game. They put out elaborate programs, bring in the best players and run the thing in big league style. . . . As a result they've averaged around 4,800 attendance over two years, hit close to 10,000 sometimes and hope to win the intercollegiate championship with the Texas-reared U. of Miami team.

Count-off

Clarence (Kay) Kantrowitz, promoter of the recent title fight here, claims its true. . .When he walked into the Orange Bowl for the big affair, a gateman refused to let him throukh . . . . "But I'm Kantrowitz, the promoter," Kay insisted. . . "Nothing doing." growled the guardian of the portal. "You're the tenth Kantrowitz who has tried to get in here tonight.' . . . P.S.: He probably was the only gate crasher who didn't make it.

One-minute Sports Page

Tommy de Tardo, Sierra's manager, probably pulled the smartest deal in local fight circles when he "sold" the Cuban's 15-percent cut in the pep gate to Promoter Kantrowitz for $12,000 a week before the scrap. . . Ted Williams, getting in his last few days of fishing before spring training begins, says he thinks he'll hold out next year to escape the drudgery. Anybody want to bet he won't be the first one out there with a bat, hollering for his chance to hit?

FORESTS RAZED

During the German occupation of Greece in the Second World War, 3,000,000 acres of trees were cut for lumber to build winter quarters for the Germans on the Russian front.

Montreal, 26th January, 1948.

P. S. ROSS & SONS, Chartered Accountants.

To the Shareholders:

Your Directors submit herewith the Nineteenth Annual Report of your Company covering its operations during the fiscal year ended December 31st, 1947.

During the past year, the major improvements and extensions commenced two years ago were completed. The new steam plant is the most modern and up-to-date of its kind and some manufacturers that supplied equipment have been using it for demonstration purposes. It is operating most satisfactorily and is effecting a considerable saving of labour. We now have not only sufficient steam for present requirements but ample to take care of expansion for many years to come. The new whisky barrel maturing warehouse has been completed and is being filled from past and present productions. Various major repairs, alterations and enlargements were also undertaken and have been completed. The major portion of the capital expenditures were necessitated by the relentless forcing of our old equipment for the maximum production of war commodities. These improvements will enable your Company to increase its production and maturing capacities.

Automatic machinery is being installed in the bottling departments which will save a considerable amount of labour and provide for greatly increased output. Part of this equipment has already been received and the balance is expected within the next three or four months.

All these undertakings necessitated a large outlay of cash, amounting to over $600,000.00 during the last two years, approximately half of which was financed out of working capital and the balance by a bank loan which the Company intends to repay as rapidly as possible.

The Balance Sheet reflects a satisfactory financial condition, Current Assets of $1,635,432.16 exceeding Current Liabilities of $634,770.29 by over $1,000,000.00.

The Net Profit for the year, after deducting Depreciation and making provision for Income and Excess Profits Taxes, was $163,153.05. Payment of the 6% cumulative preferential dividends required $75,000.00, and there remains a balance of $88,153.05 to be added to Earned Surplus Account.

Sales are returning to a more normal basis although rationing of whiskies still continues in order to tide over the non-productive gap of the war years.

Due to further increases in whisky values and in the replacement values of buildings, machinery and equipment, the amount of fire insurance carried has again been increased in order to give full protection in this respect.

Labour relations between the Company and its employees are amicable and the working agreement with the Union was renewed effective November 1st, 1947 for the period of one (1) year.

Shareholders are reminded that it is in their own interest to encourage the purchase of their Company's leading brands:

OLD KEG Canadian Rye Whisky
THREE CASTLES Extra Special Liqueur Whiskey
LONDON CLUB London Dry Gin
GOLD CROSS Finest Canadian Geneva Gin

Your Directors wish to take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation for the faithful work of the officials and employees of the Company during the year just closed.

Respectfully submitted,
On behalf of the Board of Directors,
V. MARCHAND,
President.

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 20

She turned from him, her troubled eyes held hypnotically to Virginia Dewey's awkward manipulation of an ice cream fork in a frozen pink doll. Her table manners should drive the fastidious Flanders wild. Undoubtedly though, the lack of ready cash could drive him more so.

At that moment, as though he read her thoughts, Flanders unexpectedly rose and came around to Velma's chair. He leaned down and whispered, "I'll dare you a dance."

It wasn't highly important to her now if poor Virginia were ill with jealous rage. She must leave this table. She must get into motion. She must become too exhausted to think.

She flashed Flanders an enchanting smile of acceptance, and jumped to her feet. Without a backward glance, he linked an arm through her tight-fitting long brown sleeve, and led her across the room.

If significant or caustic remarks followed them, they did not appear to care. So far as Velma was concerned, she was unmindful of the crowd's opinions. Flanders' invitation had come at a most opportune moment. Otherwise, she might now be telling some of the tipsy members of that crowd what she thought of them, and she wasn't too narrow-minded, either. But when one had seen a little of the other side of living—the wrong side, would declare this crowd—it made one think.

They entered a perfectly balanced, gorgeously appointed small ballroom. Velma knew its color scheme of blue, white, and gold by heart. She loved its white satin-padded side walls. It was in this rarified atmosphere that Flanders had proposed to her innumerable times, not so long ago.

Now she felt that the danger of another proposal from this man was quite negligible. She could give herself over to the soothing motion of the dance without dreading to hear him speak.

Flanders was the one man in their crowd to-night clothed in his right mind. He was peculiar that way. For some apparent reason, he never allowed himself to be made fuzzy by alcohol. In any other man, it might be labeled good habits, but in Flanders' case, Velma had always attributed it to an inner fear of discovery. Discovery of what, she never knew. His very secrecy had often repelled her. It had seemed at times like a dire warning that she would do better to heed. She realized now that her darling father had sensed it, also.

Flanders' arm encircled her quite properly as they began foxtrotting across the floor to the swinging rythm of Hal Harper's Grenadiers, an internationally renowned orchestra. His cheek abruptly came to rest on the top of her blonde head, which scarcely reached his shoulder.

"Seems like old times, doesn't it, dear?"

His hand on her bare back, suddenly drew her closer.

Her lower lip curled a little scornfully. "You aren't forgetting are you, Flanders—that I'm not the Velma Wilkins any more?"

He treated her to one of his devastating dark glances from beneath lowered lips—the kind of glance which formerly had been dangerous for her to meet. Now, it left her cold. Did he think he could go on from where he had left off, after disillusioning a woman?

'Oh, I know what you believe," Flanders said petulantly. "You think I was attracted by your position, your fortune—you had so much of that kind of thing. But really, Velma, you should know me better than that."

She smiled wanly. 'Can it, be that the Dewey financial throne is already tottering?" she flung out, slightly sarcastic.

He started as if she had slapped him. "Why, no—that is—hang it, Velma, have you heard something?"

"No. But I'm mean enough—vindictive enough—to long to hear about the finish of Merry Dewey."

"You mean—mean because then you and I—"

Decidedly not!'"

"Well—I hoped you might—care a little."

She stopped dancing.

"I dislike to tell you how conceited you are, Flanders."

"See here, darling—isn't it about time you and I adjusted our differences?"

She walked across the room, thinking. "Now, I'm absolutely positive Dewey is slipping. I must see dear old Ruggles Capp—he'll know. I'd like nothing better than to assist in the Dewey tobogganing."

Flanders took her elbow and led her into the cocktail lounge.

She said innocently," I wasn't aware we had differences, Flanders."

He pulled her down beside him on her leather divan. He turned to her, his black eyes filled with passion. "Darling, we must go on from where we left off! I love you—I've always loved you!"

Her disinterested gaze suddenly became alive. It was fastened in blank dismay upon some one across the room—some one she never had expected to see here. She began to tremble visibly. She jumped to her feet crying, "No, no! It— can't be!"

She seemed not to have heard Flanders Smith's fervent declaration. She was only seeing with glazed frightened eyes a man who had just staggered into the room. He was of medium height, he had flaming red hair. Could this be the man with whom she had thought herself in love? Too intoxicated to move without support, he was being towed around on the arm of a dissipated looking, overdressed platinum blonde.

"If You Want Real Relief From Gas, Indigestion Try Syntona" She Says

Suffers Stomach Disorders Two Years, Got Dizzy Spells, Headaches; Nervous, Could Not Sleep. Tells of Relief.

"Any person wanting real relief from stomach disorders should certainly try Syntona Herbal Compound," said Mrs. Agnes Steele, Hyde Park, Ontario, in a recent interview.

"I speak from experience, because for two years I could hardly eat a meal without suffering with gas, indigestion and sour acidity afterwards. I would get terrible gassy cramps in my stomach, belch up hot, sour liquids, and could get nothing to relieve the bloated, distressed feeling. I became subject to throbbing headaches and dizzy spells and often could not get to sleep for hours after going to bed at night.

"Since nothing else was helping me, I finally decided to try Syntona and actually I was amazed how soon my food began to digest better. As I kept on taking it, the gas, sourness and other distress all cleared away and now I eat well and have no trouble at all. For the first time in two years I am free of headaches and dizziness and my nerves are relaxed. I sleep fine and feel far more rested and energetic in the mornings."

The above experience related

by Mrs. Steele is a typical story told by thousands of men and women who have successfully used Syntona to overcome common disorders of the stomach, kidneys, liver or bowels. If you make up your mind to try Syntona, the chances are it will give you the very same good results.

Miscegenation, S. African Problem

A review of a novel "The Path of Thunder" by Peter Abrahams (Harpers), by John Barkham in the Saturday Review of Literature.

In South Africa, that fair and pleasant land, the word "miscegenation" has a particularly ugly ring. It denotes the unspeakable crime. So unspeakable indeed that the country's Calvinist legislators have written a color bar into the law of the land. They have made the mingling of white and black blood an offence punishable with a mandatory prison term.

Nevertheless, in a population of some 11,000,000, a little over 2,000,000 are white and close on a million are "colored," the euphemism for half-breeds. And the number of God's step-children" grows year by year.

It is bad enough to be a Negro in South Africa; he exists in a feudal world straight out of the Middle Ages. But socially the colored man is in even worse plight. Despised by the whites, scorned by the blacks, the colored pepole live precariously in a kind of twi-light half-world of their own.

"The Path of Thunder," the Harper Find of 1948, is a deeply felt novel about this depressed class by a man who belongs to it. To the best of my knowledge, Mr. Abrahams is the first of his race to win a world audience. More power to him.

This book, his first to appear in America but actually his fourth, marks his coming-of-age as a novelist. On a visit to South Africa last year I came across some of his earlier work. It impressed me then as powerful and sincere, but deficient in style and discipline. In "The Path of Thunder" Abrahams has matured his approach and refined his utterance.

It is obvious that in his book Abrahams meant to state his people's case in the clearest terms. His Lanny Swartz is a colored youth who, like the novelist himself, received enough education in Cape Town to become a school teacher. Turning his back on the bright lights of the city, he returns to his parched Karroo birthplace to bring learning to the colored folk there. The white men who run the village don't like the idea, or the colored upstart who thought of it. Here we have a basic conflict: the white man's resentment for the colored man who tries to better himself.

Lanny is young, good-looking, well-spoken. Up in the big house on the hill lives Sarie Villier, the white man's pretty, fair-haired sister. They fall in love. For a colored man in South Africa this is about the ultimate in aspiration, and Mr. Abrahams is apparently sublimating a whole peoples frustration in posing this relationship. He makes his Lanny the white woman's equal in character, learning, and bearing. She returns his love. In present-day South Africa the mere existence of such a relationship bespeaks its own doom. Mr. Abrahams is realist enough to concede that, and brings his story to a tragic climax.

But the fate of his romance is not the gravemen of his charge. This appears in the scorching passages where embittered, addlepated Afrikaaners (Boers) abuse and beat the colored man who has the effrontery to set himself up as their equal. Here the author's own rancor finds burning expression.

He looks at the problem from every side. In one of his finest chapters Lanny argues it out with a Negro and a Jew. All are of the dispossessed, but the Negro has an anchor in his tribe and the Jew in his age-old past. The half-caste is a rootless creature with neither a past nor a future.

All this Mr. Abrahams brings to life with an earthly, elemental simplicity that lends an inner dignity to his tale. He writes with tenderness and passion. If the dialogue sounds awkward and gawky at times, this is probably because he is writing in English but thinking in Afrikaans.

This moving story about South Africa's submerged segment is no pasteboard Technicolor romance, but a perceptive book about one of the country's staggering social problems. It deserves the accolades it will doubtless win. How South Africans will receive it is something else again. Some years ago the South African government banned Stuart Cloete's "Turning Wheels" for suggesting that the Voortrekkers had done just the kind of thing that brought Mr. Abrahams' colored people into being.

Now his open evocation of the supreme taboo may earn him the same kind of distinction. But I doubt whether a little thing like that will hold back a naturally gifted novelist who has come so hard so far.

Tweed

Twp. Hall Renovations Are Nearly Completed

Tweed — Work is nearly completed in the Township Hall which will be the home of teen-agers in the very near future. The ceiling and walls have been freshly painted and a new hardwood floor has been laid, which greatly adds to the appearance of the place. A lot of this work has been done by the boys of the teen-agers and a number of men have donated some of their time.

Already over $400 has been subscribed and donations are still being received. Mr. Len Taylor deserves a lot of credit for the time and energy which he has freely given to this undertaking for the young people of the village of Tweed.

Rush Work On Dairy

Work is being rushed as fast as possible on the new buildings which will house the Foster's Dairy destroyed by fire a little over a year ago.

The new premises will be of cement block construction and will be considerably larger than the old dairy. Mr. Foster plans to install modern equipment to give his customers the best possible milk service. Since the fire he has been carrying on in the adjoining brick building which houses two lockers.

Drew Announces 60-Cycle Power For Southern Ont.

Gross Cost of Project Will be $191,000,000

Toronto, Feb. 27 — (CP)—Central and Southwestern Ontario today had a promise of an end to flickering lights— to be achieved, among other things, at a gross cost of $191,000,000 in a frequency standardization program recommended by Premier Drew's government.

In a radio broadcast last night the Premier promised the elimination of the flicker as one of the benefits which would result if the Ontario Legislature and Municipal Hydro Commissions approve his government's proposal to change the frequency of the Southern Ontario system of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario from 25 to 60 cycles.

The conversion program, coupled with present and future power-generating projects, would increase the capital investment in the "greatest publicly - owned power development in the world" to around $1,000,000,000 and its generating capacity to more than 2,500,000 horsepower.

The premier did not set any time limit for the conversion program nor did he give details of financing, beyond saying that the gross cost would be reduced to a net of $163,000,000 because of a saving of about $28,000,000 which would result from extension of life of equipment and other capital improvements to publicly-owned properties and that Provincial Treasurer Frost and his department experts had said that it could be done.

Will Inform Convention

However, he said that full details would be given to a meeting of representatives of municipal Hydro commissions in Toronto next Tuesday and Wednesday, March 2 and 3. The legislature—in which his Progressive Conservative government holds 66 of the 90 seats — convenes next Wednesday.

Mentioning charges that his government had abandoned plans for development of power projects —on the Ottawa River when he first took office in 1943, the Premier said that "no work on the Ottawa River was abandoned for the very simple reason that none had been undertaken while the previous government was in power."

He mentioned eight developments now completed or in construction which will produce an additional 1,250,000 horsepower, and spoke of future plans which call for at least two steam units to produce 120,000 horsepower and construction of 10 units of the St. Lawrence "either as part of the combined power and seaway plan now before the Congress of the United States, or simply as a power development to be carried out jointly by the governments of the State of New York and the Province of Ontario, under alternative plans now prepared."

"The commission is planning for the construction during the next four years of new generating plants, transmission lines and other facilities involving an expenditure of more than $300,000,000, in addition to the money spent on frequency conversion during those years."

The frequency decision was the most important "made by any government in regard to the production and supply of electricity since the legislature passed the Act of 1906" which brought the provincial Hydro commission into being.

Toronto, Feb. 27 (CP) —Premier Drew last night described his government's decision to recommend standardization of the province's power frequency as the most important affecting the publicly owned electrical system since the Ontario legislature in 1906 established the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

It affects the most thickly-populated and most-highly industrialized area in the Dominion. The present 25-cycle power area — to be converted to 60-cycle at an estimated gross cost of $191,000,000 if the legislature and municipalities approve — stretches from Pickering, 20 miles east of Toronto, to Windsor. Its southern boundary is formed by Lakes Erie and Ontario; its northern is an irregular line stretching from Lake Simcoe some 40 miles north of Toronto, to Lake Huron just north of the town of Goderich.

The premier's proposal, based on reports of experts, calls for conversion of domestic and commercial equipment for 60-cycle power at no cost to the consumer. Some home equipment—such as toasters, radios, lighting —operates on either 25 or 60 cycles. But most motor-driven appliances, such as washing machines and refrigerators, are geared to one cycle or the other. The plan provides for conversion of such equipment without interruption of service.

Industrial users would be charged one-third of the cost of conversion.

No Details Given

The premier did not announce detailed plans for financing the changeover, beyond saying that Finance Minister Frost and experts of his department have decided that the project can be financed. He did say that the gross cost of $191,000,000 would be reduced by improvements worth $28,000,000 to equipment owned by the provincial and municipal commissions — the latter act as distributing agents for power.

The Niagara power system, the pioneer development in the Ontario hydro change, is the main 25-cycle producer. In a report more than a year ago, the Ontario Commission said that initial power developments at Niagara Falls, Ont., were of 25-cycle frequency because it was hoped then to export power to 25-cycle areas in New York State and because the lower frequency at that time was considered better for long distance transmission.

The report continued that when Ontario hydro took over the Niagara projects in 1910 it continued the 25-cycle plan. When it built its gigantic Queenston generating plant during the First World war, it decided to hold the 25 cycles. Another decision to remain with 25 cycles was taken in 1928 when power was obtained from Gatineau and Beauharnois.

The problem drew renewed attention in 1946 and requests for information from the Ontario government, the Ontario Municipal Electric Association and the Toronto Hydro-Electric system led the Commission to issue its interim report.

DOMESTIC TOPICS, PALESTINE, HONG KONG DISCUSSED

David Croll, Liberal, In Favor of Partition

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP)—The current situation in Palestine, Canadian participation in the defence of Hong Kong and a wide variety of domestic topics were discussed in the Commons yesterday as 11 members carried on the debate on the Throne Speech.

David Croll (L—Toronto Spadina) introduced the Palestine issue, and said Canada could serve as the "conscience" of the United Nations in helping the international organization to implement its decision to partition the Holy Land.

Mr. Croll, son of Russian-Jewish immigrants, said the partition issue involved the larger question of the United Nations to solve major problems as well as the immediate matter of the welfare of Palestine itself.

He declared the partition decision must be implemented and warned that failure to do so would lead to civil war in Palestine — and on Soviet Russia's doorstep. Palestine must thus become another war-torn position."

Failure of the U.N. on this issue would put the world in an "unthinkable position."

Other speakers in the debate included George R. Webb (PC—Leeds); Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East); L. O. Briethaupt (L—Waterloo North); H. O. White (PC—Middlesex East) and Lionel Bertrand (L—Terrebonne).

The House opening was marked only by a statement by External Affairs Minister St. Laurent to the effect that no international agreement signed by Canada can repeal the Dominion's ban on the import of oleomargarine, the butter substitute.

Britain Sending Second Cruiser to Honduras In Show of Strength

London, Feb. 27 — (AP)—Britain is sending a second cruiser to British Honduras in a show of strength.

The Admiralty announced today the cruiser Devonshire, with troops aboard, will join the cruiser Sheffield at Belize, the capital. The Devonshire is going from Jamaica, the Sheffield from Colombia.

The Central American colony is claimed by Guatemala, whose officials said dispatch of the first cruiser, announced yesterday, is a hostile act.

The Guatemalan Foreign Ministry announced last night the country is willing to submit her claims to mediation.

The Admiralty said the cruisers were dispatched "because of possible incidents staged by irresponsible elements in neighboring Guatemala." The Guatemalan foreign ministry called this a pretext.

Willing to Mediate

Guatemala, Guatemala, Feb. 27 (AP)—Guatemala said last night she is willing to have her claim to Belize (British Honduras) mediated, but probably will protest the ordering of a British cruiser into "Guatemalan territorial waters."

Foreign Minister Enrique Munoz Meany said this Central American republic is ready to have the disputed claim with Britain submitted to mediation, and added:

"Guatemala has faith in her rights and the justice of her cause."

Earlier, a government spokesman said Guatemala regards the ordering of the British cruiser Sheffield from Colombia to British Honduras as a hostile act. He said unofficially a protest probably will be made.

(A dispatch from Kingston, Jamaica, today said the British sloop Sparrow had left port for an undisclosed destination. A sloop is a war vessel smaller than a gunboat. In London an Admiralty spokesman said the Sparrow is on a routine cruise not connected with developments in Honduras, or in the Antarctic region.)

The Foreign Office said in London yesterday the Sheffield had been ordered to make the 1,800-mile trip to British Honduras to prevent "irresponsible elements" in Guatemala from causing trouble in the British crown colony. The spokesman said the sending of the Sheffield was not aimed at the Guatemalan government.

Guatemalan newspapers said the whole incident may have stemmed from British misunderstanding of remarks made during a hot debate in Guatemala's congress over press freedom.

On Feb. 24 a presidential decree suspended freedom of the press in Guatemala for 30 days. The following day the decree was voided by a unanimous vote of Congress. The suspension decree followed a newspaper suggestion that the Guatemalan army, instead of parading, do something useful, such as taking over British Honduras.

GOTTWALD TELLS BENES GOVT. WILL BE DEMOCRATIC

Radio Gives Report Of Cabinet Meeting

By A. I. GOLDBERG

Prague, Feb. 27 (AP)—Premier Kement Gottwad promised President Eduard Benes today that the new Communist-controlled government of Czechoslovakia will be "constitutional, democratic and parliamentary," the government radio reported.

The Communist official was responding to an address by the non-party President in Benes' first meeting with the Communist-dominated cabinet he approved Wednesday at Gottwald's urging.

The meeting took place at Hradcany Palace, where the President lives.

A secretary said the President has not resigned, as unconfirmed reports last night indicated he might.

Thanks The President

Gottwald, the radio said, thanked the President "for your confidence" and told him:

"The attempt to split the government was a wilful act against the interests of the people. The people waited to throw out the traitors and wanted an assurance of a people's democracy. You, Mr. President, helped dissolve the crisis."

The cabinet crisis arose when 12 anti-Communist ministers submitted their resignations last Friday to protest an order of the Communist Interior Ministry affecting the state security police.

Gottwald, the radio reported, told Benes, "I am sure that parliament will acknowledge this government, too."

A close friend of Benes said last night the little president told Gottwald his new government "could have only evil results" and that he yielded only because he feared civil war. Just before giving in, he related, Benes told the Premier, "You're talking to me like Hitler."

He was quoted as saying he rejected the criticism "of the foreign countries which were responsible for Munich."

"We have demonstrated to the whole world the principles of democracy," the broadcast said the premier told the president.

The radio said President Benes told the cabinet he wished "that your way will be successful and happy."

Tension Mounts In Finland Over Russian Overtures

Reported Letter From Stalin Asks for Pact

By AKE MALMSTROM

Helsinki, Feb. 27 (AP) —Tension suggesting an atmosphere of government crisis pervaded Finland, today with announcement that Moscow has sent Helsinki a proposal for a new treaty.

The Foreign Ministry announced Russia has sent a letter direct to President Juho E. Paasikivi. The ministry did not say what kind of pact was intended.

A semi-official source said the letter was signed by Prime Minister Stalin.

It is well-known that Finnish leaders for some time have been studying closely the agreements the Soviet Union has made one after another with the Balkan countries, a network of pacts linking those countries closely to Russia.

An authoritative source said Karl August Fagerholm, speaker of parliament would go to Stockholm, perhaps to inform the Swedish government of the Russian proposal.

Diplomatic quarters said the Russian letter was a "Soviet program declaration." Reports persisted that high-level discussions were under way in the Finnish government concerning a "new development in Russian-Finnish relations."

The cabinet met with the president this morning. Its discussions were kept strictly secret. The president had met for hours yesterday with his Foreign Relations Committee and members of his government.

Ever since the Communist success in Czechoslovakia, rumors have spread swiftly in this country concerning relations with Russia.

As in many of Finland political crises, the news of this development reached the outside world before it reached the Finns. The country learned of it only in this afternoon's newspapers.

Informed sources said they believe the Soviet letter asks for some kind of friendship or mutual defence pact, or both, from the Finns. Such a pact has been discussed previously many times the Finns themselves taking the initiative shortly after the armistice in September, 1944.

Under the peace treaty Finland ceded the Petsamo (Pechanga) area to Russia and gave the Russians a 50-year lease for a naval base on the southwest coast overlooking sea routes to Helsinki. Finland ceded the strategic Karelian Isthmus and agreed to pay reparations of $300,000,000 in six years.

Ottawa Plans Big Reception For Barbara Ann

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP)—Civic officials and officers of the Minto Skating club said that plans are just about ready for a "monster" reception March 9 for Barbara Ann Scott, Olympic figure-skating champion.

Present plans call for the young skater's reception at the Union Station by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa, and various other dignitaries. She will participate in an open-car parade, accompanied by three bands, and at a specially erected reviewing stand in Confederation Sq. she will be accorded a public reception.

So far there is no indication of what form the city's presentation to Miss Scott will take. It is not known whether she will be able to accept the canary-colored phaeton she was given last year and which she was forced to give up in order to keep her amateur status.

Meanwhile, a huge pile of mail was accumulating at Miss Scott's home. Letters, parcels and postcards from all parts of the world have been streaming in, and some of the addresses are unique.

Items from various parts of Europe have been addressed to her in localized forms of her Christian name with which she was dubbed overseas. A number of others are addressed "O Canada," instead of just "Canada."

Pointing up romance, many of the letters are marked "Personal" with the word heavily underlined.

$50,000 Cocktail Bar in Hull, Que. Swept by Fire

Hull, Que., Feb. 27 —(CP)— The new $50,000 cocktail bar of the Chez Henri Hotel in downtown Hull was swept by fire early today. No was injured but guests were forced to seek refuge in a neighboring hotel.

The blaze was largely confined to the walls of the cocktail lounge on the second floor and damage was estimated at $35,000.

It was Hull's second serious fire in less than two days. Yesterday 36 apartment dwellers in the McLean Building barely escaped when fire swept the building. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Republicans Willing to Help Chiang Kai-Shek

Washington, Feb. 27. (AP)—Two top Republicans proposed today that the United States Congress lump military help for China with the $275,000,000 State Secretary Marshall asked for Greece and Turkey.

Senators Robert Taft (Ohio) and Styles Bridges (N.H.) told reporters they will suggest that some funds be found to help Chiang Kai-Shek's government fight Communists with bullets when the Greek-Turkish proposal comes before the Senate.

Taft heads the Senate's Republican Policy Committee. Bridges is chairman of its appropriations committee which helps decide how wide to open the government's purse.

In letters to both Houses, Marshall yesterday said it will be necessary to make an additional $275,000,000 available to keep the pipe-lines to Greece and Turkey full of military supplies after April 1.

The Cabinet officer coupled with his appeal this warning: that the leaders of Russian expansion are counting on American weariness in helping "far-off Mediterranean countries" to let the Communists take over "by default."

Marshall's request for the new aid program was his first major action in the "cold war" with Russia since the Communists seized power in Czechoslovakia.

Actually, it had been decided to ask additional military help for Greece and Turkey before the Czech crisis developed.

Technicians Formulate Plans To Explore Moon Face With Radar

Washington, Feb. 27 (AP) — American Radar experimenters don't want just the moon. They now are aiming at more distant goals.

Signal corps technicians said today early plans to explore the face on the moon with radar are but a step toward an eventual attempt to bounce a radar signal off some neighboring planet like Mars.

With equipment improved since the original 1946 experiment in which radar recorded signals reflected by the moon, the signal corps men at Belmar, N.J., will seek, to "map" the moon's surface some time next month.

Some radar technicians here think that even further refinement in transmitters the range may be extended from the mere 238,000 miles to the moon to the millions of miles needed to make contact with another planet.

They suggest such an experiment will provide a further check on the theory that light is reflected by proximity to a large mass If they can draw bead on a planet by sighting close to the edge of intervening moon the scientists think they will have material for computing the accuracy of the light deflection theory.

But the army experimenters also have a military problem in mind. They want to know just how fast radar signals can be sent.

The answer will determine how much control can be exerted over forthcoming super rockets and other guided missiles. A missile is guided by a series of radar impulses which tell where the missile is and then tell it what to do by changing controls.

BANK OF CANADA REDUCES SUPPORT OF GOVT. BONDS

Move Interpreted as Setting Higher Interest Rate for Money

Toronto, Feb. 27 —(CP)— The Bank of Canada today further reduced the support it has been giving to Dominion of Canada bonds in a move which is interpreted as setting higher interest rate for money.

The bank last Jan. 5 removed the firm bids it had been making daily and quotations on long-term issues fell from around $104 to $102. However, since then, it has been known that the bank would buy bonds at $102.

Today dealers were informed that the bank was not buying at that price. There were unconfirmed reports that it would deal at $100.50.

In the meantime bond dealings are in an uncertain state, and dealers stated it might require two or three days to establish their real values.

There has been a good recent public trade in government bonds, with relatively few going to the Bank of Canada, but the fact that the bank has been willing to deal at $102 was a support to the market.

When the bank withdrew its bids in January the effect was to raise the interest yield on government bonds from 2.60 to 2.80 per cent. This compared with a rate of three per cent in the United Kingdom and 2.44 in the United States, where steps also had been taken to raise the money rate.

Raising the money rate is an anti-inflation step, making it more expensive for people and business to borrow, and thus discouraging expenditures on expansion.

In the annual report of the Bank of Canada Feb. 11, Graham Towers, governor, commented

"'It is clear that the present rate of capital development is straining Canada's manpower and material resources and is pushing up prices. At the same time business, which in general entered the post-war period with unusually large liquid reserves, has been looking increasingly to banks for financing."

Mr. Towers, in a subsequent press conference, said he did not believe in drastic anti-inflation actions which might be a case of "burning down the house to cook the pig."

The early January drop in bond prices was allowed to go only so far until the bank stepped in. It is assumed today's move is a further testing of the market value of bonds without bank support, and that the bank will re-enter bids at what it considers a proper level.

LOCAL HANDBOOKS IN WINDSOR CLOSE DUE TO 'HEAT'

Vice Charges Levelled at City by Detroit Police Cause of Action

Windsor, Feb. 27 (CP) — A Windsor gambling operator said most local handbooks would be closed up today as result of the heat generated by vice charges levied at the city from the office of Police Commissioner Harry Toy in Detroit.

He added there is resentment at Toy's allegations that Windsor is a "nest of iniquity" in which gambling, dope peddling and prostitution flourishes.

It's not the truth or untruth of the statements they resent. They object because they feel it might mean even closer surveillance by Windsor police than they are accustomed to.

The operator said the bookies are inclined to blame the "complaints" of Detroiters who were run out of Windsor last Fall for providing the basis of Toy's charges.

He said a Detroit newspaper dealer had bought a place in Windsor and started to operate last October. Soon the Detroiters were trying to move in on Windsor places and set up a syndicate. Then there was a shuffle and police cracked down in Windsor with the result that local spots closed down completely for a while. When they reopened the Detroiters had abandoned their venture, the gambler said.

Little Violence

The operator declared that Windsor has had litte violence. One gambler was shot several months ago but police insisted it was an attempted holdup and not a gang war.

He added that bookie operators make every effort to control their clientele, most of whom come from Detroit.

"One woman came and complained her husband had lost his entire pay of $100 and left her destitute. The boss gave her back $150 and posted the husband's picture. After that he was blacklisted all over Windsor. At one time we had a whole row of such pictures."

Hoodlums are kept out, he said. "There are about 640 men employed in Windsor betting places and at least 620 of them are married with families. The lowest anyone gets is $10 a day. You won't find any hoodlum element here."

Too Much Oil —In Wrong Place

Detroit, Feb. 27 (AP) — Mrs. Beatrice Douville was not too concerned about the fuel oil shortage, because she had the foresight to convert her oil burner to gas seven years ago.

Yesterday she returned home to find a fuel truck in front of her home.

The driver was cheerfully pouring fuel oil into her cellar through an old pipe line.

Before Mrs. Douville could halt the proceedings, 150 gallons of oil was dumped on her basement floor.

Hong Kong Evidence To be Tabled in Two Or Three Weeks

Ottawa, Feb. 27. (CP)—The 2,300-page evidence of the Royal Commission on Hong Kong—plus 300 exhibits—totals more than 1,000,000 words and will not be ready for tabling in the commons before two or three weeks ,it was learned last night.

Certain coded messages and parts of the evidence relating to the unsuccessful defence of the British Colony in 1941 will be paraphrased, and other still-secret portions will be shown only to opposition leaders.

A source said it probably will take two or three weeks to decode and paraphrase the data.

Witnesses Say Mother Left Four Children in 'Filthy, Nauseating' Trailer

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP) — Mrs. Edna Emery, with her four children in the care of the Children's Aid Society, today is expected to mount the witness stand in defence of a charge that she had abandoned and neglected to provide for two sons and two daughters. She also faces an additional charge of neglect with resultant injury to health.

Yesterday, some 300 spectators packed county court to hear testimony by crown witnesses that the 29-year-old woman had left her four children alone in a "filthy, nauseating" trailer on a night when the temperature dropped to 19 below zero and that she had left them at least three times previously this winter.

One witness, Dr. Henry Loeb, said he had examined the 11-months-old boy, George Emery, when the children were placed in custody of the Children's Aid Feb. 10.

The infant was underweight, dehydrated, suffering from "diaper rash" and showing signs of rickets.

He had also examined June Emery, 18-months-old, but had found her "fairly well nourished."

Earlier, the defence suggested Mrs. Emery had been ordered to leave by her husband, Leo Emery, whose trial on similar charges will be heard later. The defence stated Mrs. Emery had gone to an Ottawa lodging house with a black eye and bloody legs, after her husband had beaten her four days before police found the children alone early Feb. 10.

Jack Finan, Toronto salesman, testified he had visited the trailer with Provincial Police Constable Hugh Robertson and found four children, ranging from five months to six years, alone amidst "a nauseating odor and very unsanitary conditions."

The baby was "blue with cold", soaking wet and scantily clad in a basket beside a "very draughty window." The others were sleeping on abutments or shelves, covered with coats or a blanket that bore human excrement.

The neighbor who called police, Jack Morris, said he considered the Emerys an unhappy, fighting couple. The husband "gets drunk quite often" and Morris had seen Mrs. Emery with a black eye and scars.

Disabled Veterans Want Higher Rate

Toronto, Feb. 27 (CP)— Expressing dissatisfaction at the federal government's proposed increase in the basic rate of war disability pensions, the Toronto branch of the War Amputations of Canada has asked that in case of 100 per cent disability, the rates be raised to $100. The government proposal in this category is to boost the pension from $75 to $87.

J. C. Ramsden, President, told a meeting of the branch last night that Canada's disabled servicemen had received no increase in pensions since 1921, while living standards of Canadian workers had increased greatly in the intervening 27 years.

A resolution forwarded to Prime Minister Mackenzie King asked that war disability compensation should be fixed "with the recognition of the economic conditions under which they must suffer lifelong disabilities which will provide $100 a month for 100 per cent disability."

Traffic Light Arrow Removed

Arrow, arrow, who's got the arrow, seems to be a question in the minds of motorists who have occasion to frequent the Front Street, Upper Bridge, and Station Street intersection. The arrow in question is the green one which was part of the traffic-light equipment installed at the intersection. The purpose of this arrow was to indicate to motorists that those wishing to proceed along Station Street from Front Street had the right-of-way to do so, regardless of the red light which forbade traffic to cross over the Upper Bridge.

The removal of this arrow is an illustration of the lack of understanding which the majority of motorists have of the "rules of the road." So many drivers were being confused by this arrow that it was considered more expedient to have it removed.

Perhaps, if the motorists do a little homework in their driving instructions so as to understand its purpose, the green arrow may be returned.

Several Meetings Will be Held On School Question

Death During Tonsilectomy Due to Heart Failure Under Anaesthetic Verdict of Jury

Death of Alphonse Clemens, 34-year-old bread wagon driver, in the Belleville General Hospital last November 12 during a tonsilectomy was due to heart failure while under anaesthetic, a coroner's jury decided here yesterday at the adjourned inquest looking into the death of the young man.

The jury added a rider to their verdict stating that in view of a previous medical examination which had shown an anaemic condition "greater care might have been exercised by the doctor in preparing the patient for the operation."

The inquest was held before Coroner Dr. R. W. Tennent with Harry Deyman, Cobourg, Crown Attorney for Northumberland county, acting for the Crown. Jury members empanelled by Inspector J. C. Hayes included S. Gilmore, Mark Vanner, Fred Chamberlain, Len Fozard and Clare B. Morgan.

12 Witnesses Called

Twelve witnesses were called, including hospital nurses who testified as to the patient being prepared for the operation, of his being given anaesthetic by Dr. Lily B. Mathieson. The operation was performed by Dr. A. C. Locke, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Nurses stated that at the end of the operation the patient's breathing had been very weak and oxygen had been administered with artificial respiration being applied by Dr. Locke.

Dr. W. L. Robinson, pathologist at the Toronto General Hospital stated that examination had shown that the heart muscle tissue of the patient had not been normal and that it showed evidence of bacterial poisoning. "The heart would have been okay for ordinary purposes but its weakness showed up under stress," he stated.

Over-dose Seldom Brings Death

Dr. H. J. Shields, Toronto, anaesthetist, stated that seldom did death occur as result of an overdose of ether. Effects of an overdose of ether were to paralyze the heart muscles, the patient no longer being able to breathe. Ether was considered one of the safest anaesthetics as after breathing stopped because of an overdose there was a considerable time lapse before the heart stopped. The patient could thus be resuscitated through artificial respiration.

"It was unfortunate in this case that the patient was an extremely nervous type and in the excitement stage of the anaesthesia was unusually violent. The strain on his heart was just as great as if he had been conscious."

He doubted if the patient's diseased heart condition could have been determined through examination by listening with a stethoscope. He stated there always was a certain risk in giving a patient anaesthetic and that this was true even with local anaesthetic.

Throat Seemed to Clear

Dr. Mathieson stated that on October 27th she had been called to the Clemens' home and had advised that Mr. Clemens' tonsils be removed. He had gone to the hospital but after four days' treatment his throat had seemod to clear and he was discharged.

On November 11th she had again been called to the Clemens' home when Mr. Clemens' throat condition had worsened and the operation was agreed upon. She had noted the patient's pulse and respiration and also chest condition, including the heart. "Other than being a trifle rapid the heart had seemed normal," she said.

Immediately prior to the operation no sedative had been given the patient. "I used a bit of psychology and told the patient his safety would be assisted by normal breathing and by relaxation."

Struggled Violently

The doctor stated that sufficient ethyl chloride had been given to quiet the patient's nerves and then ether had been given. During the excitement stage of the anaesthesia the patient had struggled violently, taking four nurses to hold him. "He was the most violent patient I had ever seen," stated the doctor.

Following the excitement stage the patient had quieted and with the exception of color had been thought normal. However the cyanosis condition had continued throughout the operation. At the end of the operation which took about three minutes it was noted the patient was acting "peculiarly"; the breathing had stopped and the cyanosis condition had worsened.

"I tried to get his pulse but was unsuccessful. The stethoscope showed the heart had stopped," the witness stated. She had called for oxygen and Dr. Locke had immediately started artificial respiration which had been continued without results for ten minutes.

Felt No Apprehension

In answer to a question from the Crown, Dr. Mathieson stated that at the beginning of the operation she had felt no apprehension as to the success of the operation.

Dr. Locke testified that prior to the operation the patient had seemed composed. During the operation there had been a cyanosis condition.

Just at the termination of the operation the cyanosis condition had increased and the witness stated he had noted respiration had become "very shallow". He had called for oxygen and had immediately commenced artificial respiration.

Pathologist at the Belleville hospital, Dr. J. B. McKay told the jury that the immediate cause of death had been myocardiosis or a gradual degeneration of the heart muscular tissue.

Examination of the heart had shown this organ to be dilated and considerably larger than the normal heart. There were no abnormalities in the windpipe or bronchial tubes.

Rapid Breakdown

The pathologist stated there seemed to have been a rapid breakdown of the blood cells caused by bacteria. "This could have been a condition resulting from the infected tonsils," he said. The doctor exhibited hospital records which showed that at the time of the patient's first visit to the hospital the blood test had been low and "moderately severe anaemia" was present.

Other witnesses testifying at the inquest included Laura Johnston, nurse supervisor, who told of the patient's admission to hospital, and nurses Jean Chatterson, Joyce Vardy, Grace Donnelly and Dorothy West. Dr. Richard Potter stated he had stopped in at the operating room and as he entered had seen a patient on the operating table. The patient was "obviously dead" he said. He had assisted in giving oxygen with no results.

The Lady Was Annoyed When Parking Meter Did Not Yield Chocolate Bar

City parking meters have been the butt of jokes; tie-rails for horses attached to milk and bread wagons; supporting units for post midnight inebriates, comfort stations for pups, and other sundry purposes, but the latest function which they are supposed to fill takes the proverbial cake.

Here's the story, and a well-known Front Street druggist can vouch for it.

A lady entered his store yesterday morning and demanded a chocolate bar.

"Yes, madam," replied the druggist in his best meeting-the-public manner, "What kind do you prefer?"

"Well, what kind do people usually get?" the customer countered.

"Why almost any kind. We have them in stock," replied the somewhat puzzled druggist.

The lady looked at him. "Listen, mister, I just put a nickel in that machine on the pavement outside your door, and I didn't get any chocolate bar. Where do I get it?"

The druggist nearly passed out when the lady motioned toward parking meter installed just outside his shop door.

Another humorous incident occurred recently when Jimmy Matthews, meter maestro, who periodically inspects the innards of the meters and extracts whatever coin of the realm a parking public has donated, was repairing the mechanical clockwork "insides" of a meter.

Suddenly he heard a voice, thick with too much "Dutch courage."

"Okay, buddy," it said, "I'm all ready.

Matthews turned. Smiling at him was a good-natured gent slightly the worse for his cups, and striking a dramatic pose. Thumbs tucked in vest, legs astride, the lush smiled at Jimmy and said, "Go ahead, bud, s'long time sinsh had picture taken."

He thought the mechanical contraption was a camera.

Harvesting of Ice Nearly at End

Winter seems to be a bug-bear with most people. Few of the older people have much to say in favor of the season of snow, ice, extremely cold temperatures, furnaces and the rest of it. However, there is one thing in winter's favor that a lot of people are thankful for when the summer heat-waves come and that is ice.

Natural ice harvesting is a large business with concerns whose customers depend on them to have a ready supply in the hot summer months. A great deal of time and effort is spent in getting this ice into those 25 or 50 pound blocks that so conveniently fit in the icebox where easily spoiled commodities are stored.

The business depends largely on favorable weather conditions, but on the average it begins about the middle of January. A large section of ice is cleared of snow. In most cases a power saw, with rotor-blade, is employed in cutting the ice into blocks of a desired size. A large hand saw then is used to cut a section of blocks free, this section is guided by a long pole to a nearby loader. The section is then broken up into individual blocks. Each block is separately loaded on a truck by means of a cage raised by an engine to the height of the truck platform and then slid onto the truck. The truck carts the ice to the icehouse where it is stored in saw-dust until such time as it is required.

Operations have been in progress on the Bay of Quinte since the middle of January and are expected to last about another week. The M. J. Callaghan Ice and Fuel and Smith Ice and Fuel Companies are the main concerns in operation this year. The ice is reported to average 22" in thickness and grade A in quality. The cutters rate this year's harvest as one of the best in some time.

2 Christian Poles Are Found Slain In Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Feb. 27 —(AP)— Two Christian Poles were found slain in Jerusalem today and police said they believed the men were "executed" by Jews convinced they had aided Arabs.

Private sources identified the two Poles as Witold Hulanitzkyn pre-war Polish consul general in Jerusalem, and Stefan Arnold, director of the Palestine branch of the Polish Telegraphic Agency, which was the official news agency of the former London Polish government-in-exile.

The deaths raised the death total in communal fighting since the partition of Palestine was voted by the United Nations last Nov. 29 to 1,431.

The Jewish agency's independent investigation of the Ben Uehuda Street bombing Sunday, in which 54 persons were known dead, opened today before a three-man board.

Two Jews who manned a road block through which the persons believed to have done the bombing entered the area, told the board

"We are convinced the men were British personnel."

They said they are veterans of the British army and could recognize a Briton easily by "his accent, appearance and profanity."

HORNET'S STING CAUSED DEATH

Bloemfontein, South Africa, —(CP) — "Death as the result of a hornet sting" was the verdict after an inquest here on Gerhardus Laurentius Van Es of Glen, formerly of Holland. The evidence was that he had been stung on the back of the neck by a hornet.

Mrs. Johnanna G. L. Van Es, the widow said that she had tried to treat the sting, which looked like a blister the size of a pin's head, with ammonia. An hour and a half later his face began to swell and he died suddeney.

Artificial Insemination Units Explained to District Farmers

Well over 200 district farmers were in attendance at Stirling and at Cannifton on Tuesday to discuss the formation of artificial insemination units for dairy cattle. Assistant Director R. H. Graham, Ontario Live Stock Branch, was the speaker for the meetings.

Mr. Graham stressed that better than average bulls would be used and as an example stated that the average records of bulls being used in the Kemptville Unit was over 20,00 lbs. of milk and 750 lbs. of butter fat. In units which have been organized in the province, the results have proven the value of this type of breeding.

At the two meetings there were 71 farmers who definitely joined the Association, stating the minimum number of cows they wished to include in the Unit this year, giving a total of over 1,100 head of cattle.

At the Stirling meeting Mr. Dave Hollinger was elected president, while George Sutherland was named vice-president. For the Belleville district Seldon Homan, who is also president of the Federation of Agriculture, was named president with Emile Masse as vice president.

Plans are being made to hold meetings in the Tweed and Madoc districts in the near future. Approximately 100 additional farmers are needed in Hastings to assure sufficient finances to begin the unit. Meetings are being held throughout the entire Quinte district this week.

Application forms for joining the unit are available from the above named officers, or from A. O. Dalrymple, department of agriculture office, Stirling. These should be secured within the next week as a minimum number of farmers must be assured before the Units will be formed. Membership has been set at $25 and is good for the life of the applicant.

If sufficient members are obtained it is expected the Unit will begin operations about the middle of May.

Prof. Kirkconnell, Author, Lecturer, Will Address Annual C. of C. Dinner

Chamber of Commerce directors at their weekly luncheon at the Chez Henri yesterday laid final plans for what is expected to be the best annual meeting of the chamber in years. The function will be held in the main dining room of the Hotel Quinte on Friday, March 5, at which Professor Watson Kirkconnell, noted author, lecturer and after-dinner speaker will deliver the main address. His topic will be "The Red Fifth Column in Canada."

Professor Kirkconnell is at present on the faculty of McMaster University, Hamilton, and is the president-elect of Acadia University, Kentville, Nova Scotia.

The directorate's special committee will inspect the new offices of the Chamber of Commerce recently allotted them in the city hall with a view to redecorative activities. The Chamber will finance any changes to be made in the general office set-up.

Director Arthur Bateman, recently named chairman of the Belleville campaign for the Canadian Appeal European Children, told the directors that his campaign would get under way at the first of the week. A special-names list has been compiled, and those on the list will be contacted personally by members of campaign committee. The remainder of the allotted quota, which is yet not definite, will be raised by public subscription. In the meantime, Director Bateman said, those wishing to contribute to this worthy cause may leave their donations at any bank branch in the city.

Strength of Royal Navy Shows Heavy Cuts in Ships

London, Feb. 27. (Reuters)— The government disclosed today the strength of the Royal Navy, showing heavy cuts in the numbers of battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

The operational strength of the navy disclosed for the first time since 1939 is: two battleships, four light fleet carriers, 16 cruisers, 34 destroyers, 25 frigates, 26 submarines and 12 minesweepers.

In 1939 Britain had nine battleships, two battlecruisers, four aircraft carriers, 26 cruisers, 70 destroyers and 39 submarines, the official "Return of Fleets", said.

Viscount Hall, First Lord of the Admiralty, said in the government statement that a substantial proportion of the vessels now counted as operational will not be available until later this year.

The battleships Duke of York and Vanguard are due to come into operation by August or September. At present both are immobilized. Two other battleships, Anson and Howe, are being used for training and experimental work and the King George V is being made available to relieve the Howe in April.

There are no new battleships under construction.

Two fleet carriers and ten light fleet carriers are being built but only two of the four light carriers listed as operational already are available.

Of 16 operational cruisers, four will not be ready until the Autumn and another not until the end of the year. Three new cruisers are under construction.

Sixteen of the 30 operational destroyers will not be in operation until later in the year. Ten new destroyers are being built.

No new submarines are under construction.

Lord Hall said the navy is giving highest priority to research and development work.

"There can be no doubt that the outcome of this work will be vital in the task of keeping our fleet in the forefront of the navies of the world."

Today's statement elaborated the navy estimates for 1948-49 published last Tuesday which showed that naval expenditure was to be cut by nearly £44,000,000 ($176,000,000) to a total of £153,000,000.

The First Lord's statement added, "it is hoped in the course of the current year to effect the steady build-up of the fleets to appreciate peacetime strength.

Reputed Russian Count Convicted On Nine Charges

Toronto, Feb. 27 (CP)—Constantine Michael Nakashidze, former financier reputed to be a Russian Count or Prince, was convicted today of the first nine of 15 charges involving theft of money and bonds, and sentence was reserved until trial is completed on a total of 35 charges, all similar in nature.

Judge James Parker dismissed six charges in county criminal court today. The counts on which he was found guilty involved $47,000.

Nakashidze had testified that the men accusing him of dipping into the funds of a "trading pool" he organized had made no demand for return of the money they contributed, prior to his bankruptcy last June.

Among the investors who later laid the charges, and claiming they were mulcted of sums ranging up to $24,000, were Seelite Plastic Enterprises Company, B. S. Sheldon, Dr. W. J. Chafe and V. I. Boake, all of Toronto, and T. H. R. Brock of Hamilton.

GOTTWALD TELLS

"The decision to accept you was difficult personally for me," the official report quoted him as saying. "I came to the opinion that the crisis must be dissolved. I saw that the crisis would sharpen. Will you lead the state into the new paths of democracy?"

The meeting was scheduled to allow the little 64-year-old Benes to perform his constitutional function of accepting the cabinet.

The new cabinet is made up of communists and communist - approved ministers of other parties in the old national front coalition. Gottwalk forced it upon President Benes Wednesday to turn Czechoslovakia into a communist country.

(The United States, Great Britain and France yesterday termed the new government a "disguised dictatorship." Their public declaration, as issued by the State Department in Washington, protested that the communists "artificially and deliberately instigated" a cabinet crisis to seize power.)

(The London Daily Graphic said today Benes in under house arrest in the palace. It did not say where it got its information.)

Five to Appear In Bow Street Police Court

London, Feb. 27 —(CP)— Scotland Yard today announced that five persons would appear in Bow Street police court next Friday in connection with passport offences.

Yard officials declined to give any further details but it was believed some, if not all, of the offences were concerned with the illegal entry of aliens into Canada.

All of the persons charged are employees at British passport offices, police said. It is understood that two of the five were attached to the London office.

Scotland Yard also confirmed the arrival in the United Kingdom by air of two aliens believed to have entered Canada with illegal papers. They are to appear as witnesses in the hearing.

Newspapers here said the charges followed air journeys to Canada by displaced persons from Germany. They added that the two witnesses were Morduch Szulc and Maniek Kuper, the only English-speaking immigrants in a group of seven Polish Jews who entered Canada recently.

Szulc and Kuper were arrested with the other five illegal immigrants in Toronto last month. They were flown back to Britain Wednesday night.

When they were originally arrested, members of the group of seven told Royal Canadian Mounted Police they had obtained their forged entry papers from a man known only as "George" and that they had paid their last cent for them.

Czechoslovakia

Czechoslovakia's domination by a Communist minority which forced a "crisis artificially and deliberately instigated" has been the news of world prominence in the past few days. The Washington declaration on Thursday in which the British and French governments joined points to "the use of certain methods already used in other places."

The three powers' statement refers to the loss which the people of Czechoslovakia have sustained in "the suspension of the free exercise of parliamentary institutions and the establishment of a disguised dictatorship of a single party."

Czechoslovakia which has risen to prominence in Europe since its creation at the close of the World War I and which during World War II was made the victim of German aggression, has had the good will of the democratic world which has seen in her one of the most hopeful signs on the world horizon and a bulwark of freedom and democracy. The leadership of Eduard Benes has been a tower of strength to his country but through the coup of the Reds he has been forced to yield to the demands of the Communists for the establishment of a government which does not represent the people of Czechoslovakia.

The future may see other nations being faced with demands of the minority Communists, and the names of Finland, Austria, Italy and France have been mentioned as nations which the Communists may make every effort to dominate against the will of these peoples and force within Communist ranks.

Dr. Gregg

John R. Gregg, inventor of a system of shorthand which goes by his name, died this week at the age of eighty years. His life, like the lives of all persons who arrive at prominence and the lives of persons to whom one is known is interesting for the fact that he became famous in spite of a handicap which might have marred his life but for his indomitable spirit.

In his childhood he suffered the puncture of the drum of one of his ears, which had the effect of putting the boy at the foot of his classes. But it also had the result of inspiring him on the way to fame and fortune. Usually an inferiority complex is very undesirable, and the boy was led to hold aloof from his fellow scholars but at the same time he found solace in the study of means of shortening the labor of writing —in fact, of a system of shorthand writing, which he took up at the age of ten years. He decided to make a study of the condensation of the spoken word his lifework. He composed an alphabet of his own which he published in 1888. For the first edition he had to borrow fifty dollars from his brother to pay expenses. The shorthand he developed was subsequently turned to thirteen languages. His handicap did not prevent his development and later on his prominence in the educational world. He had long ago become named along with great leaders in the use of shorthand as Pitman and others.

Incidentally the study to which he gave himself is an art dating back at least to the time of Cicero, the Roman statesman and orator. It is even said that it may go back to the hieroglyphic stage in the history of the world. The great Roman orator's speeches in the ancient Roman tongue, Latin, were taken down by his freedman and amanuensis, Tiro. Plutarch, the biographer, says that Cicero distributed shorthand reporters in various parts of the Roman Senate House on the occasion of the vote on the fate of Catiline, the conspirator, the purpose being to record the speeches of Julius Caesar and Cato. It is said that the Emperor Augusus taught the shorthand art to his grandchildren and that the Emperor Titus of Rome was an accomplished stenographer. Early Christians are said to have used shorthand very frequently and it is supposed that St. Paul dictated to amanuenses several of his Epistles, including Colossians.

Today in this busy world the use of shorthand is one of the necessities.

New Record

Not long ago a speed record was set of 542.9 miles an hour. Now a little over two weeks later this record has fallen by the board to a new speed record of 560.634 miles an hour for a 1-kilometre closed circuit course. There is in this scientific age no speed which is secure from competition. The holder of the new mark is a jet-propelled supermarine military plane, with M. J. Lithgow as pilot.

62,000 Apply

The amendment to Ontario's Public Health Act whereby expectant mothers in the province may obtain one prenatal medical examination at the expense of the Provincial Government has resulted in approximately 62,000 women applying for and receiving such an examination from October 1, 1946, when the legislation was proclaimed, to the end of January, 1948.

Patients may be examined by physicians of their own choice. The government pays doctors a prescribed fee for each such examination.

Officials of the Ontario Department of Public Health are of the opinion that by promoting better medical supervision, these examinations may possibly contribute to a lowering of the province's infant and maternal mortality rates. It is interesting to note that in 1947 there were an estimated 110,000 live births against 97,000 in 1946.

In 1947, more than 40 per cent of Ontario's expectant mothers took advantage of these examinations, it is stated by department officials. It might therefore be deduced that to a great extent expectant mothers in Ontario have realized the wisdom of placing themselves under medical supervision in the prenatal period. In the main, the plan has been well received by practising physicians.

It is emphasized that one prenatal examination should not be construed as sufficient prenatal medical care. However, it is hoped that having taken this step, the expectant mother may decide to continue under the supervision of the physician throughout the remainder of her pregnancy.

Outside Influences

Not long ago Russian composers came under the criticism of the Russian Communist Party for the imitation of what was called "decadent" foreign music and now Russian painters, says the Magazine Moscow Bolshevik, have found a spirit of decadence in their midst. The ground is that they have been departing from the tradition of Russian painting. A few days ago a letter writer complained in a Russian paper of the invasion of foreign words into Russian. These are all evidences of the effort of Communism to shut out the outside world and keep Russian thought under control.

Hand Signals

The Safety Director of the State of Illinois lately urged the use of hand signals by motor car drivers. This brought the following rejoinder from a contributor to the Chicago Daily News:

"Chicago drivers stick their hands out of windows, but they might mean any of the following:

"1. Yes, it's raining.

"2. That's the house over there where Joe lives.

"3. Shaking off cigar ashes.

"4. Waving hello to a friend.

"5. Emphasizing points in conversation to passenger.

"6. Drying finger nail polish."

A new hotel to be built in Moscow is to be faced with marble and gold. This, it seems, does not come under the heading of bourgeois exhibitionism. Still, it's encouraging — the Moscovites may be able to turn over a new gold leaf. — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

JUST FOLKS

SCHOOL FOR FATHERS

There are schools for fathers now,
Teaching what to do and how;
How to bathe the little one;
How to pin the garment on;
How to learn upon the spot
Is the formula cold or hot;
Six weeks' course by which they show
What the father ought to know.

Years ago I learned the trade;
Was a first-class mother's aid.
By my Nellie I was trained
And from her the "know-how" gained.
I could dress them, and could mix
Feedings two a.m. and six;
Argue with the grandfolks, too,
Over what they used to do.

Nellie trusted me and knew
What was needful I could do.
Six weeks' course for fumbling men!
I got home instruction then.
Temper cries, and cries of pain
Nellie knew and could explain.
Mind a baby! I know how.
I'll bet I could do it now.

Tables were set for 350 persons and fully that number was present. The chair was occupied by the rector, the Rev. R. C. Blagrave. Speeches were made by the Rev. Canon D. F. Bogart, rector of St. John's Church, corner of Isobel and West Bridge Streets; the Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, rector of St. Thomas' Church, the Rev. R. Fraser and the Rev. A. L. Geen. Mr. R. Greatrix, who is about the oldest parishioner, was given the honor of touching the match to the mortgage. As the mortgage was consumed the gathering sang the Doxology. Messrs. Walter Alford, John Newton, and Thomas Rainbird spoke briefly and the wardens were toasted by Mr. Frank Thompson and Dr. Ackerill. A program followed in which the following took part: Messrs. INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What did Gladstone say about the Constitution?

The North American Review, in its issue of September-October, 1878, printed an article entitled "Kin Beyond the Sea" by William E. Gladstone, who had been Prime Minister of England once and who later occupied that position again three times. In that article the British statesman made a widely quoted and misquoted statement about the American Constitution. The passage reads:

"The two constitutions of the two countries express indeed rather the differences than the resemblances of the nations. The one is a thing grown, the other a thing made; the one a praxis, the other a poiesis; the one the offspring of tendency and indeterminate time, the other of choice and of an epoch. But, as the British Constitution is the most subtile organism which has proceeded from the womb and the long gestation of progressive history, so the American Constitution, so far as I can see, is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man. It has had a century of trial, under pressure of exigencies caused by an expansion unexampled in point of rapidity and range; and its exemption from formal change, though not entire, has certainly proved the sagacity of the constructors, and the stubborn strength of the fabric."

In a letter dated July 20, 1887, and addressed to the committee in charge of the celebration of the centennial of the Federal Constitution, Gladstone wrote: "I have always regarded that Constitution as the most remarkable work known to me in modern times to have been produced by the human intellect, at a single stroke, in its application to political affairs.' '

Horatio Seymour, who was thrice Governor of New York and who ran for President against Grant in 1868, replied to Gladstone in an article in the North American Review that the American Constitution was not and could not have been "stuck off," that it had grown slowly in America since 1607 and that "the compact of 1787 was the written record of political experience up to the time when it was made."

In a speech at Boston September 17, 1861, Wendell Phillips, the famous orator, said: "All that is valuable in the Constitution is one thousand years old."

In a narrow sense the Federal Constitution was the work of the delegates to the Philadelphia convention of 1787; in a broader sense, the document was largely the product of political evolution.

Great Britain does not have a written constitution in the sense of a single document like the American Constitution. The British Constitution is composed of a series of basic enactments stretching back over the centuries and can be amended at any time by an ordinary act of Parliament. The Magna Charta, as amended in A.D. 1225, is regarded as the first permanent British statute and the sheet-anchor of the British constitution.

The Federal Constitution of 1787 was not the first written Constitution of the United States. Its predecessor, the Articles of Confederation, was also in the form of a single document. All the 13 original States had written constitutions before the adoption of the Federal Constitution. These State constitutions in turn were an outgrowth of the Colonial charters.

DOMESTIC TOPICS.

Both Mr. Bertrand and Mr. Webb called for the appointment of a Federal Minister of Tourist Trade and Publicity. They said the tourist business was one of this country's most profitable and could be made even more so under proper direction.

Mr. Webb, whose riding covers part of the 1,000-Island's area on the St. Lawrence River, said if a full-time Minister could not be appointed there should be at least a Dominion commission established. The Canadian Travel Bureau was no longer able to handle the growing trade.

Mr. Webb said he wished to stress the need for a properly developed national park in his constituency and for vastly-improved tourist accommodation generally throughout the country.

The growing tourist trade should mean more than money. The more Canadians met people from other countries, the better international understanding would be.

Efforts should be made to see that tourists carried away at least friendship and understanding. If this was done, the financial side would take care of itself.

Not Long Enough

Mr. Webb said Canadians generally felt the tourist season was confined to two or three months. Not enough was being done to attract tourists to the fairyland which was Canada in the winter time.

L. O. Breithaupt (L-Waterloo North) said he was anxious to see the European recovery plan in operation. He was pleased to note that the Hyde Park agreement apparently still is in effect.

Mr. Breithaupt said Canada's exchange problem could be solved through greater exports to dollar countries. He believed more agricultural products, including cattle, could be shipped to the U.S. when they were not needed in Canada or to the United Kingdom.

He said that before the war Britain supplied more than 50 per cent of Canada's imports. Now she supplied little more than seven per cent. While Canada had turned to the U.S. for her needs, the U.S. had not reciprocated by taking more of Canada's exports.

Doing Good Job

Surely the U. S. should be prepared to give more patronage to her best customer — Canada.

The government was doing a better job in meeting trade problems than most people gave it credit for.

It would be good news for the shirt factories in his constituency when more textiles were available from the United Kingdom.

He said he wished to urge Finance Minister Abbott to make another over-all reduction in personal income taxes.

He asked Trade Minister Howe and Defence Minister Claxton to provide financial assistance to civilian flying clubs.

H. O. White, (PC — Middlesex East) said it was often heard that Canada was a poor country. Many people were calling for subsidized foods.

Last year Canadians spent $400,000,000 on liquor, $275,000,000 on tobacco and $120,000,000 on movies and cosmetics. It appeared to him that people wanted cheap food so they could enjoy luxuries.

Praises University

Turning to his own constituency, Mr. White praised the work being done by Western University of London, Ont. The university needed building and he hoped that when assistance was asked for it would be forthcoming.

He said each university library should have forwarded to it copies of all government documents not of a secret nature. Many of the documents were missing from Western's library. He asked that State Secretary Gibson see to it that the missing copies were made available.

He said if a national library is established, universities should be able to borrow books from it.

Mr. MacInnis, dealing with world trade, said he believed that people have failed since the end of hostilities to realize the full physical, emotional and other damage caused to Europe. The first step toward prosperity and peace was economic reconstruction for Europe. He hoped the European recovery program soon would be approved by the United States Congress.

DR. FOSTER WENT TO GLOCESTER

Reader writes:

I have been reading your articles for years and have been greatly helped many times. I have two large scrapbooks filled with your articles.

My two boys (twins) 20 years old, brought up the Dr. Brady way, are big and strong. In the navy one was first, the other third in their col in physical fitness. Thanks to Dr. Brady.

They go in for weight lifting and stretch cables. They use one 60 pound weight and press it with one arm 16 times. I tell them it will strain their heart, but they want your advice about it.

(S. K. C.)

The reader's signature affords no clue, but I take it S. K. C. is the boys' mom—not one dad in a million wuold show that much interest in his sons. Show it, I say — many might feel it but somehow they haven't the — what it takes to show it.

"What has Dr. Foster's visit to Glocester to do with this query? Well, what the midwestern reader says about the bringing up of boys gives me a kind of foster father feeling — and that, of course, reminds one of Dr. Foster, and you will remember he went to Glocester in a shower of rain. But do you remember what happen- to him? I can't, nor can I find the rhyme anywhere—maybe the psychologists can explain by amnesia. Whatever befell I'd rather not know if it was his death o 'cold or anything like that.

The boys want my advice about weight lifting. My advice is don't. The weight lifting stunts may not strain the heart, as mom fears, but just the same, extreme effort is not desirable in any kind of physical training, nor is it good for the heart.

My advice to these boys and any other boys who have not yet attained full physical growth and development — few boys, no matter how healthy, strong or athletic, do attain full development before they are 20 years old. This is the sound physiological reasons why I say — and I invite physicians, physical education authorities, coaches to controvert this if they can—I say that boys of high school age should not play football, at least not "big games" before spectators. Football is a game for fully developed men, men of university age, not for growing boys. Stop me if I'm wrong.

Freakish or phenomenal strength is not the object or purpose of physical training or physical culture, if you prefer the fancier term. The object or purpose is rather the development of skill, speed and agility. Not extreme development of muscles, but superior skill, speed and agility in the use of one's muscles. These are the qualities or powers that win races, contests, fights.

So I advise the boys to go in for boxing, swimming, running, jumping, fencing, or other athletic activities, under the tutelage or direction of a qualified instructor or coach or at least following general rules or standards recognized by acknowledged authorities.

(Mrs. C. J.)

Answer — Send 25 cents and stamped envelope bearing your address, for booklet "Unbidden Guests" — it deals with bedbugs (pages 7 and 8), cooties, worms, fleas, ants, mosquitoes, chiggers, flies, cockroaches, silverfish, black widows, itch mites, foot itch.

Inept

Army dentist told my son his teeth are "decalcifying" and have extracted several seemingly good teeth. If they know any more about it they do not offer any advice and they promptly silence him if he dares to inquire.

(Mrs. F. K. W.)

Answer — Put a uniform and a symbol of rank on some little men and they reveal their small souls. It will at least do your son no harm to supplement his diet with a good daily ration of calcium and vitamin D. Send twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing his address or your own, for booklet "Save Your Teeth."

DREW ANNOUNCES

Considered Many Times

It had been considered many times during the last 30 years. Each time, the cost involved was greater and "perhaps for that very reason, no decision was ever reached." But now "if plans are carried out for the doubling of our generating capacity without changing the 25-cycle to 60-cycle production, then the cost will become so great that it will be practically impossible to standardize frequency at any time in the future."

The decision was recommended by engineering and other experts as well as by the Hydro Commission. Consumers would benefit because they would pay less for 60-cycle than 25-cycle equipment and during the conversion period would save $20,000,000 in the purchase of domestic equipment and another $37,000,000 in extended life of present equipment when converted.

The Premier listed some other benefits: Making it possible to draw in an emergency on power from 60-cycle systems in Michigan, New York State and Quebec; A wider range of consumer equipment would be available; Many important machine tools were available only for 60-cycle frequency; As well as eliminating flickering lights, it would be more economical; In the event of war, it would be important to have the same frequency in adjoining industrial areas in the event power plants were destroyed or damaged.

Under the plan, there would be no charge of $1.50 a horsepower on electricity delivered to municipal commissions as proposed in an earlier recommendation. Equipment of domestic and commercial consumers would be converted without charge and without interruption to use; Industrial users would pay one-third of the cost of converting their equipment because its life would be increased by more than that amount.

Strong Financial Condition

"The importance of the conversion of domestic, commercial and industrial equipment cannot be over-emphasized, as it represents over two-thirds of the gross and four-fifths of the net conversion costs."

Ontario and municipal commissions are in a strong financial position and "the financial experts agree they are well able to finance their respective shares of this decisive advance in the production and distribution of electric power throughout the Province."

The Premier said that because of the importance of connections at the same frequency level with power systems outside the Province he had discussed the subject in the last week with Premier Duplessis of Quebec and members of his government.

"Premier Duplessis has authorized me to say that we are in agreement as to the advantages of interconnection between the two Provinces at the same frequency and the Quebec Commission will co-operate whole-heartedly with the Ontario Commission in developing an interchangeability of supply which will be of mutual advantage to both Provinces."

In speaking of plans for steam generating units, he remarked this was a "radical departure" from the practice of developing electricity solely from waterpower. Additional steam power would be obtained from Polymer Corporation at Sarnia from which 30,000 horsepower already was under contract and further steam units would be added if required.

Aussies Prospect for Raw Materials to Make A-Bomb

By LESLIE BRODIE
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia (CP) — A nation-wide hunt for raw materials of the atomic bomb is gathering momentum in Australia.

Prospectors are seeking uranium, plutonium, thorium, and the other radio-active minerals that go into the bomb, in all parts of the country. Scientists sailed on the exploration ship Wyatt Earp to the Antarctic to study cosmic rays close to the south pole, where the cosmic ray is understood to be stronger than it is in other parts.

Financial help is given by the federal government and substantial rewards are offered for the discovery of new fields containing the radio-active minerals.

The Council for Scientific and Industrial Research is devoting much of its time to research into the minerals but it has been hinted at Canberra that the government will set up an atomic Energy Commission to supervise and develop resources in the states.

It is almost certain that any information or materials gained by the Australian government will be pooled with the British, United States, and Dominion governments, regardless of any decisions the United Nations may make on the subject.

Thorium in East

The search for thorium in the sands of eastern Australia has taken prospectors to the fashionable seaside resort of Southport in southern Queensland. Thorium-bearing sands exist there and are believed to extend south almost to Sydney.

In the search for uranium, government authorities regard Mount Painter and Radium Hills of South Australia as the areas likely to yield large payable deposits of uranium.

But prospects of finding large deposits of uranium-bearing ores in Australia are not good, said R. O. Chambers, mineralogist at the Australian Museum. He told reporters that nowhere in Australia had anyone found pitchblende, the most common and import source of uranium. He described the Mount Painter and Radium Hills deposits as "insignificant."

The federal government has been seeking the services of Prof. M. L. Oliphant, Australian-born leader of nuclear physics research in Britain to direct atomic research in Australia. The professor refused a government offer last year to take charge of a proposed physics research institute at Canberra.

Boys Start Blasts Setting Fire To Crude Oil in Sewers

Oklahoma City, Feb. 27 —(AP) —Oklahoma City, where oil wells are thicker than service stations, got a real scare yesterday.

An eight-inch pipeline from a storage tank broke and leaked crude oil into the sewer system.

Some high school boys saw the oil bubbling out of manhole cover vents.

They thought it was a good idea to set it on fire—and did.

Moments later, a string of sewer explosions started flipping the massive iron covers 10 feet into the air and scaring citizens who were all too conscious of the nearby oil tanks.

Opposition Presses For Information On Ill-Fated Defence of HongKong

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP)— The Progressive Conservative opposition, pressing for details of the ill-fated defence of Hong Kong in 1941, tossed another demand for information into the government's lap yesterday.

Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel) asked in the Commons whether Prime Minister Mackenzie King was aware, three days before Canada's Hong Kong force of 2,017 sailed for the Far East, that war in the Pacific was imminent.

The Hong Kong controversy, subject of full-dress debate earlier this week, was injected by Mr. Graydon into the throne speech debate. He also demanded that the government make public the complete evidence of the Royal Commission which in 1942 investigated the organization and dispatch of two Canadian regiments—the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Royal Rifles of Canada—to the British colony which capitulated to the Japanese on Christmas Day, 1941.

Prime Minister King, absent from the Commons yesterday because of a cold, announced Tuesday that the commission evidence will be tabled, with certain coded messages "paraphrased." He said a letter written in 1942 by Premier Drew of Ontario, criticizing the commission findings, wil not be tabled.

Quotes From Editorial

Mr. Graydon quoted an editorial in yesterday's edition of the Toronto Globe and Mail which said, in part:

"Could it be that Mr. King's reluctance (to table the Drew letter), which is going to fantastic lengths, is due to the fact that Mr. Drew referred to a communication from a high British diplomat, dated Oct. 24, 1941, telling Mr. King that 'altered circumstances' obtained in the Pacific?

"Is this the document he is afraid to put before the public because it shows that Mr. King knew, three days before the sailing of the Hong Kong expedition, that these untrained, unarmed men would not be facing a period of ordinary garrison duty, but the virtual certainty of brutal war?"

Mr. Graydon continued:

"What I want to know . . and what Canadians generally want to know is, did the Prime Minister receive, see or have any knowledge of the communication referred to in this editorial?"

He wondered how the Prime Minister—if he did know of the communication—could condone that part of the Commission report which said "best-informed opinion" available at the time of the sailing was that "hostilities would not arise in the near future."

Defence Minister Claxton said the government had promised the British government that "most secret" documents used in the inquiry evidence would not be made public. The Canadian government now could not go back on that undertaking without British consent.

Benes Accuses Premier of Talking Like Hitler

Prague, Feb. 27 — (AP)—President Eduard Benes accused Premier Klement Gottwald of "talking to me like Hitler," one of Benes' closest friends said last night.

This is the friend's story of how Benes finally bowed to communist pressure Wednesday and allowed Gottwald to form a cabinet which gave the communists full control of Czechoslovakia.

Gottwald came to Benes' office and told him that if he gave presidential approval to the premier's proposed cabinet he would "win the workers and have the faith of the whole people."

Benes replied that "this new government codld have only evil results.

Gottwald was accompanied by Interior Minister Vaclav Nosek and Antonio Zapotocky, now a vice-premier.

The office was tense. Benes looked from his window. He saw thousands of communists streaming through the central square below. Soldiers and police, controlled by the Communists, patrolled with rifles and machine guns.

Gotwald talked on.

Benes suddenly interrupted.

"You're talking to me like Hitler," he said.

Then he yielded.

The friend emphasized that Benes bowed only because he was convinced blood would flow in a civil war if he refused.

WEDDINGS

CANNON—CREEPER

At eleven o'clock a.m., Feb. 14, a quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the parsonage of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, when Marjorie Jocelyn Creeper, only daughter of Mrs. M. Creeper, of Plainfield, and the late Mr. F. Creeper, exchanged marriage vows with Eugene Joseph Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cannon of Woodbridge, Rev. D .C. Amos, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride was attractive in a street length frock of blue crepe, with grey accessories, and wearing a corsage of red roses. Miss Elaine McTaggert was her cousin's only attendant, attired in grey gabardine with black accessories, and wearing a corsage of red roses.

Mr. R. Pound of Corbyville, was the groomsman.

Following the ceremony a noon hour dinner was enjoyed by the bridal party at the Quinte Hotel, after which Mr. and Mrs. Cannon left for a wedding journey to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N.Y., when the bride wore a suit of mulberry colored wool, with beige top coat and grey accessories.

After their return Mr. and Mrs. Cannon will reside in Plainfield. The bride's gift to her attendant was a gold compact, and the groomsman received a leather wallet.

MANLOW—DUNLOP

Picton,— On Wednesday, Feb. 25th., in St. Mary Magdalene Church, Rev. W. G. H. Swayne officiated for the marriage of Addie Rosamond, daughter of Mrs. William Dunlop, Picton, with Walter Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Manlow, also of Picton. Wedding music was played by Mr. Frank Bronskill.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in the traditional white satin, the neckline decorated with seed pearls, the bodice pleated at the waistline. She wore a wreathed halo from which fell a full-length veil, and she carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Kay Dunlop was her sister's maid-of-honor, wearing a gown of pink satin, and carrying a bouquet of red carnations. Miss Ivy Miller, the bridesmaid, chose a gown of blue satin and carried pink carnations.

The duties of groomsman were ably performed by Sgt. Major Browne, R.C.A., Picton.

ST. ANDREW'S LADIES' AID

Stirling.—The February meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church was held in the home of Mrs. Norman Ray, on Thursday afternoon, when the early hours were spent in quilting.

Following a short devotional period Mrs. W. H. V. Walker conducted election of officers, with the following results—President, Mrs. A. Hammond; 1st Vice President, Mrs. Cameron Montgomery; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Lewis Rodgers; Secretary, Mrs. Norman Ray; Treasurer, Miss Gena Spry; Press Reporter, Mrs. R. Hermiston; Committee for Special Events, Mrs. Munro, Mrs. Third and Mrs. S. McIntosh; Pianists, Mrs. W. H. V. Walker and Mrs. R. H. Williams.

In accepting her office Mrs. Hammond asked for the co-operation of all the ladies; unity of purpose and a willingness to work in harmony was the keynote of success.

Mrs. Ray and her assistants served dainty refreshments.

ST. ANDREW'S WOMEN'S GUILD

The newly elected president, Mrs. Barlow conducted the regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Guild on Tuesday evening with all groups well represented.

Business under discussion related to the serving of several suppers in the near future, reports from the Memorial Committee, and Red Cross conveners.

The Red Cross unit had fifteen workers at the first meeting and an appeal was made for the loan of more sewing machines. Mrs Cunningham reported that more knitters were needed.

Mrs. Argue asked for volunteer canvassers for the coming Red Cross drive and several responded.

Mrs. I. L. Moore representative on the Hospital Auxiliary Board, reported on the activities during the past year and asked that the usual donation of $10.00 be given to the fund for indigent patients. This was unanimously accepted.

Mrs. Mantle and Mrs. Wilson were added to the committee to consider re-decorating the manse.

Mrs. Hornsby introduced Miss McGeary, Victorian Order nurse, who gave a very interesting and informative talk on the origin and activities of that association.

She said the Order had originated about fifty years ago, when a group of women, under the leadership of Lady Aberdeen, saw the need for an organization of visiting nurses, who could go to the homes and under the doctor's orders would care for those who, for various reasons, could not go to hospital.

It was named the "Victorian Order" because in that year Queen Victoria celebrated her Diamond Jubilee from that small beginning the Order has grown to 105 units. She said all money raised locally was spent in the local community.

Mrs. Beavis thanked Miss McGeary on behalf of those present.

A musical number by the choir sextet was much enjoyed and brought the meeting to a close.

The Young Matrons' Group under the leadership of Mrs. Michaud, served delicious refreshments.

WEST HUNTINGDON W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church, West Huntingdon, held the February meeting jointly with the Ladies' Aid, at the home of Mrs. Don Haggerty. There was a splendid attendance for the noon-hour dinner.

Quiet music by Mrs. Walker opened the meeting proper, and Mrs. Milton Shaw, president, read a poem, "Father Where Will I Work Today?" The Scripture lesson from the 11th chapter of St. Luke's Gospel was read by Mrs. J. S. Wilson, and Mrs. J. Sharpe offered prayer. Testimonies on answered prayer were given by Mrs. Lainson, Mrs. M. Donnan, Mrs. J. S. Wilson and Mrs. J. Sharpe. "He Whistled His Prayer" was the subject of a reading by Mrs. J. H. Haggerty.

A story of the work of Miss Stringer in India was told by Mrs. Walker, and silent prayer was offered in behalf of this missionary. Other readings were given by Mrs. Morley Haggerty and Mrs. M. Donnan.

The highlight of the afternoon was an address read by Mrs. John McInroy to Mrs. Haggerty, while Mrs. Alec Fleming made the presentation of a certificate of Life Membership in the W.M.S. Mrs. Haggerty graciously expressed her gratitude.

A short business period was conducted. Mrs. John McInroy thanked Mrs. Haggerty for her kind hospitality, and Mrs Milton Shaw closed the meeting with prayer

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Interesting Activities Keep a Woman Young

To kill time is to kill the spirit of youth and to invite premature beauty ills. When a woman has no ambitions, no aims, no interesting work to do, she is likely to carry an expression of discontent and world-weariness that is depicted not only in her countenance, but also in her figure. Useful employment keeps the mind, the body and the spirit active. If you are a career girl and get mad at your job, pause and ask yourself, "What if I had nothing to do? Would I be any happier?"

The soft and easy life doesn't seem to cook up any fresh enthusiasm. It is nice to dream about, if you have been carrying the hod up and down he ladder for many years. But many formerly busy women, who have arrived at the time they thought would be filled with the delight of loafing, find it pretty much of a disappointment. They feel useless. Sometimes they are lonely. There aren't any rainbows to chase. They have found the pot of gold, and find the coin is counterfeit.

The home - body, lugging home her groceries, may envy the grand lady who steps forth from the portals of a hotel. She has no dishes to wash, no babies to bathe no stockings to mend. Mrs. Homebody doesn't know that some of the most miserable of women live lonely lives in a state of luxury. They are bored to death. They are bored with books and with movies. They are tired of bridge games played with other lonely women.

Those old girls who are lively and alert, whose faces are free of wrinkles, are the ones who have carried on gallantly all their lives They have had varied interests. No mildew has settled on their spirits. When they had troubles, they worked all the harder knowing that was the only way to forget, to overcome the ravages of grief.

Too many women wear a "What's the use?" face.

Women who keep house take pride in their homes, and women who fare forth and bring home the bacon stay younger and peppier than the supposedly - lucky ones who have no interests, who pursue no projects, whose occupation is to kill time and good-looks.

Some women of wealth, realizing the dangers of prolonged idleness and self-indulgence, interest themselves in charities. They work like nailers. They find wonderful satisfaction in knowing that they are of use in the world.

Activity is a law of life; you cannot get around that fact. To have responsibilities strengthens the mind and builds character; to sidestep duties makes one weak and selfish. These qualities stamp themselves upon the face.

Too many women wear a "What is the use?" face. Considering all the misery there is in the world, they should be ashamed to be idle.

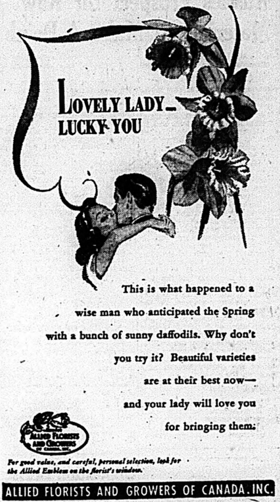
IT'S ABOUT TIME to bring spring into the dining room. Make a table cloth by sewing together two lengths of green-and-white checked or striped cotton. Have a row of geraniums in white pot, for centrepiece. Use indoors now and on the terrace later.



This is what happened to a wise man who anticipated the Spring with a bunch of sunny daffodils. Why don't you try it? Beautiful varieties are at their best now—and your lady will love you for bringing them.

BEAUTY

Pouches Under The Eyes

No imaginary good-looks grief are those horrid little hammocks that sometimes appear under the eyes. One has to be an angel to accept them with patience and fortitude.

Candid friends, who have a way of saying unpleasant things, suggest that she should see her doctor, that possibly she is in the early stages of Bright's disease. While it is true that swollen tissues under the eyes are present during curtain physical disturbances, they may signify nothing more terrible than fatigue or loss of sleep. Sometimes they are a family inheritance—certainly not a pretty one to be handed down from one generation to another.

If the little pouches under the eyes come and go, one should be able to determine their cause. It may be found in some mild digestive trouble or in a lazy colon. A change of diet may cause them to vanish. It is advisable to avoid rich foods for a while, to eat freely of fruits and vegetables and, most especially, to drink six glasses of water a day. In certain conditions, bulky foods cause distress, as when symptoms of colitis are present.

Over-fatigue is a common cause of this good-looks blemish. Women who haven't sense enough to crawl into bed at a reasonable hour are likely to have them. Eight hours of restful sleep night after night will eradicate the little pouches. The drive-yourself woman is another victim. No matter how tired she is, she keeps right on galloping. She fills herself full of fatigue bugs that are poisonous enemies. They irritate the central nervous system, slow up circulation, and out pop those ugly bumps under her eyes. When women learn that many beauty sorrows are the direct result of unwise living habits, the cosmetic business will take a terrible wallop.

Local treatment is of benefit. Once or twice a day, dip a heavy washcloth in fairly hot water, place over the eyes. A large compress is more effective than the gauze pads that women usually use. Hold the cloth close to the flesh. Repeat half a dozen times.

Dip the cloth in ice-cold water and repeat. The change of temperature will reduce the swellings. Dry gently, then get out the massage cream.

Anoint well. Place the first finger on the eyelid close to the nose, sweep out to the temple, do several small circles there, come back to starting point under the eye.

Helena Stevens

If eye-pouches come and go one should be able to determine their cause.

Fashion Flashes

ELEGANCE is the theme of formal evening clothes. White nylon net is used for a gown that billows in diaphonous folds. The strapless bodice, curved in front, diminishes to the waistline in back. A garland of pastel tinted flowers falls from a tucked, green-gold satin girdle. The flowers, massed in back, taper gradually to single blossoms.

ENCHANTING are the clothes readied for tiny little girls, come Spring, clothes that are smart yet very youthful in their styling and appeal. Available in sizes 3 to 6 is a three - piece ensemble, the suit in neat navy and white check, with matching full-length cape lined in navy. The collar and notched revers are worn outside the collarless cape.

NO HALTING the popularity of the bonnet, regardless of the season and the current hat shape being promoted. Fine felt in burnt coffee color is used for a double brim, peaked, off-the-face bonnet, trimmed in front with two tiny Kelly green ostrich tips and tied under the chin with Capucine velvet ribbon.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When a "Purty" Boy is a Rude Character

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help me out in a discussion I am having with my brother? We're great pals, not much difference in our ages, and we go to many of the same dances and other parties. But because several girls have told him he looks like a certain movie star he's getting awfully stuck on himself, and he thinks he can go to any dance and not even ask the hostess to dance with him unless she's the "dreamy" type. Mother and Dad agree with me that he's very rude . . . but we'l like to read him your answer, too.

Rosetta

In boy or man, this discourtesy of your brother's is a grim and exasperating one, and I hope your mother and father take steps quickly to save him from being listed as a caddish character. One of the many excellent advantages of well - managed dancing classes for young people is that the boys aren't ever allowed to throw their weight around, even if they are veritable Adonises; they are drilled in the first dance-courtesy, always a dance with their hostess, and always to thank her, as they leave, for the good time they've had. Sometime . . . I've seen it happen . . . some "forgotten hostess," who isn't a particularly dreamy number but who has a brain and a well-directed tongue, will say something mighty penetrating to Mr. Brother about his manners. And, clever girl, she'll wait for the dramatic moment when his so-called adorers are within hearing distance! The echo of this will haunt him so he won't think he's so "purty" or smart.

Appropriate Gifts for Bride's and Groom's Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to have a small wedding, no bridesmaids, no ushers . . . just best man and maid of honor. Would it be correct to present gifts to best man and maid of honor? If so, who usually does the presenting? Also, what would be approprite gifts?

W. M.

It is not only correct, but customary, for the bride to give a gift to her attendant and for the groom to give the best man a gift. Each presents this gift to the attendant at any convenient time before the wedding. You may give your maid of honor: a piece of jewelry, real or costume, for example, a clip or pair of clips or a clip-brooch combination, ear rings, bracelet, ring, necklace, vanity-case or compact; day-time purse; evening bag; comb-in-case, perhaps with small ornament on top of case; cigarette case or lighter; wrist watch; locket; charm for a charm bracelet; corsage ornament; jeweled comb or other hair ornament; pair of buckles; traveling-clock; jewel box; purse - pencil; gold or silver key-chain with tag initialled; gold or silver bill-clip (initialled or monogrammed); pen and pencil set; fitted dressing - case; plain or fitted over-night bag; photograph frame.

The groom may give his best man: cuff links; silver or gold pencil; gold or silver key ring; silver key chain; cigarette case or lighter; collar pin; tie clip; pen and pencil set; silver or gold knife, or combination knife-and-pencil; belt buckle; pocket or wrist watch; wallet.

The Mixing Bowl

Hello Homemakers! Take a few simple ingredients, combine with a peck of ingenuity and a bit of patience and you have the requisites for an appetizing meal at low cost. Lacking the "peck of ingenuity", you might find help in The Mixing Bowl columns, which are designed to eliminate some of your worry in planning economical dinners.

The current price of meat limits our suggestions for the main course. Many cuts of beef and pork have gone sky high in price—hence the emphasis on economical meat dishes.

In today's budget dinner we present a Southern Beef Roll—as delicious as it sounds. It is a flexible recipe, suitable for both fresh ground meat or leftover meat such as the odds and ends of a pot roast. Ordinarily the beef roll would be served with gravy but it is especially good with tomato sauce. We also suggest you try scalloped tomato-and-cabbage instead of gravy. The scallop can be placed right on the dinner plate between the slice of beef roll and the mound of creamy mashed potatoes. The juiciness will blend with both the meat and potatoes cutting down the need for butter and meat sauce.

Spanish Cream is one of those delicate wholesome desserts each members of the family from junior to granddad can enjoy. Some folks like it as well as ice cream, which is plenty!

SOUTHERN BEEF ROLL

2 tbsps. beef dripping, 1 pound minced chuck or beef steak, 2 tbsps. flour, 2 tbsps. minced onion, 2 tbsps. chili sauce, 1 1-2 cups water, 1 tsp. salt, 1-4 tsp. chili powder, 1-4 tsp pepper.

Brown meat, flour and onions in melted dripping. Add chili sauce and water, and simmer 10 minutes. Add seasonings and cool partially.

Prepare Biscuit Dough—Sift 2 cups bread flour, 3 tsps. baking powder, 1-2 tsp. salt into a mixing bowl. Measure 4 tbsps. shortening and add to dry ingredients. Blend together until mixture is mealy, add 3-4 cup milk and stir only until soft dough is formed. Turn out on floured board and pat into rectangle about 1-3 inch thick. Spread with beef filling and roll like jelly roll. Place on baking sheet. Bake 30 minutes in electric oven at 350 degrees.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES AND CABBAGES

1 can tomatoes, 2 cups shredded cabbage, 1 tsp. sugar, 1-4 tsp salt, 2 tbsps. flour, 1-2 cup fine bread crumbs.

Drain off 1-4 cup juice from tomatoes. Heat the remainder to boiling point. Add cabbage, sugar and salt; simmer ten minutes. Blend flour with 1-4 cup cold tomato juice and add gradually to hot mixture. Stir until thickened, then pour into greased casserole and top with crumbs. Bake at 400 degrees for ten minutes. Six servings.

SPANISH CREAM

1. Sprinkle 1 tbsps. (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine over 1-4 cup milk.
2. Scald 1 1-2 cups milk, add 2 tbsps. sugar and 1-4 cup raspberry juice; pour the hot liquid over 2 slightly beaten egg yolks.
3. One-third cup of raisins may be added. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly until custard coats spoon.

a7. ((ffabb 2(aoe s

4. Add gelatine, remove from electric element and add 1-4 tsp. salt.

Chill in electric refrigerator until mixture begins to thicken.

Fold in 2 egg whites beaten stiff but not dry. Pour into mould rinsed with cold water. Chill until firm, unmould and serve with top milk. Serves 6.

MOLASSES COOKIES

1-2 cup shortening, 1-2 cup brown sugar, 1-2 cup molasses, 1 egg, 1-2 cup sour cream, 1 1-2 tsps. soda, 1-2 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. ginger, 1-2 tsp. cinnamon, flour.

Cream shortening and sugar together. Add the molasses, well-beaten egg, and the sour cream into which the soda has been stirred. Add the salt and spices and enough flour to make a very soft dough. Chill the dough so that it can be handled more easily. Roll to one-fourth inch in thickness, and cut with a cooky cutter. Bake in a moderate oven for about 10 minutes.

THE SUGGESTION BOX

Mrs. J. A. C. says: Soap lasts longer if it is well dried out. When you bring home a new supply of soap, unwrap and pile loosely in a dry place.

Mrs. M. D. says: Odds and ends of wood from a lumber mill, sand-papered and painted or pasted with "decals" make delightful blocks for children.

Mrs. S. R. says: Never put meringue on hot pie filling. It will form syrup between filling and meringue and "skid". Spread meringue on pie from edge to middle —anchoring to crust on edge.

Do not grease, a pie pan. Pie will slip out more readily if you dust with flour. A good pie crust always greases its own pan.

Mrs. D. Mc. says: This is the time of year to get a few things fixed in the house. I have just had a drop-leaf shelf put in my small kitchen. It can be let down when not needed.

Mrs. J. D. says: I keep a rubber covered draining rack hung on a cupboard door to use for storing lids, cookie sheets and jelly roll pan.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Too Much Caution Equals Too Little Love

If anyone could draw up and sell at a small price a set of standards by which to measure one's feeling for another person, and determine whether or not that feeling is love, he could retire and live in luxury on his income for the rest of his life.

Unfortunately, while many people have attempted to devise such a set of rules, none of them has been successful. For the trouble is that, even when a girl's feeling for a man, say, is mere infatuation, she is usually so convinced it is the real thing that it is impossible for her to answer accurately any of the questions usually found in such a set of standards.

A 19-year-old girl, whose boy friend is urging her to get married this year, brings up the $64-question once more:

"How do you know if you are in love?" she asks. "Is there any real test for love?"

"Then she goes on to say that while she, her parents, and her friends all think highly of the young man in question, she wants to be sure "this is the real thing and that it will last" before she says yes.

This young women has a canny head on her shoulders. She says she has a good job, and that before she gets married she wants to work long enough to compensate for the time, effort and money that she put into her preparation for that job. Besides this, she likes the job too much to be ready to give it up, as she would have to do if she married and went to live on the young man's farm. She is not sure, either, that she would like the role of farmer's wife. Again, she thinks they should save a reasonable sum of money before getting married.

"I am trying to look at everything from a sensible point of view," she says.

Now it would be far easier, and probably equally helpful to this girl, to tell her why I think she is not in love than to offer her any suggestions for measuring her feelings.

Primarily, I think she is not in love because I doubt very much if, at 19, a girl in love would be thinking as much about the reasons for not getting married as she would about the arguments for it. A mature woman, or even a younger woman who has been married before, might be expected to hesitate in this way, since she knows something about the hazards of life. But at 19, such caution is not the natural thing.

A reasonable amount of sound thinking is a fine preliminary to committing oneself on the subject of matrimony at any time. But the amount exhibited by "Nineteen", as my correspondent signs herself, is something else again.

My opinion is that she is not in love at this time, and that, if her young man is not willing to give her quite a bit more time for her feelings to jell one way or the other, she had better say "No" instead of "Yes".

Portugal Fixes Price of Basic Foods

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Lisbon, (CP)—Portugal today is one of these rare countries where the cost of living has gone down rather than up.

Official figures claim a decline of five per cent over the last few months. Unofficial statistics, compiled by independent business interests go farther and say it is 16 per cent.

The man behind the price-lowering program is dark-eyed, humorous Economics Minister Barbosa, who "moved in" on a dozen or more commodities, and stayed there until he was satisfied that prices were at a proper level.

Wheat, meat, potatoes and many other basic foodstuffs have been dealt with. The system is to fix what is considered a reasonable price level and then make supplies available in such quantities that prices go even lower.

When importation is necessary, as it often is, private merchants handle the transaction. The government makes up the loss by a subsidy to the importers. Barbosa estimates the cost works out at about seven centavos (just over 1-4 cent) a month for each of Portugal's 8,000,000 inhabitants.

Portuguese still grumble about high prices, but when pressed, they admit decreases in a wide range of commodities since this time last year.

Barbosa has also tightened up on import licences, restricting the flow of some American goods. It is interesting to note that many Portuguese importers are voluntarily switching to Canadian products and applying to Consul-General Lester Glass for information on goods of every kind.

Trade With Canada

Canada sold nearly $3,000,000 worth of goods to Portugal in the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1947, including heavy equipment, like harbor cranes. In return it took goods worth about $900,000 mostly in cork and wine.

In 1946 Portuguese trade figures showed exports of $175,000,000 and imports of $241,720,000. They do not reflect the true balance, however, as many of the imports were from the Portuguese colonies.

Under the rigid control of Chief of Government Salazar, who is also finance minister, the country has had a balanced budget for the last 20 years. Salazar keeps a sharp eye on government departments and limits their expenditures to 90 per cent of their allocations.

At the same time he hs been able to modernize transport, extend social services and build new schools. Good roads run to most parts of the country and the Lisbon airport is one of the busiest and most up-to-date in the world.

Salazar's plans anticipate a slow, co-ordinated development of Portuguese industry. Two big hydro-electric schemes are in progress which should be completed in 1950 or 1951.

Existing industry is backward—a factory often consists of a small group of men working in a shed. In anticipation of the day when more power is available, experts are working out a survey which will assist plants which are considered efficient, help reorganize those which are not, and establish new factories where this is considered necessary.

Cheese for Full Flavor

Cheese, the most ancient of manufactured foods was, in its beginning, one of nature's simple miracles. An Arab herdsman, several thousand years before Christ, carried the milk for his lunch in a bottle made from the stomach of a calf. When he stopped to eat, the milk had formed into a semi-solid mass with a thin watery liquid. He enjoyed the curd and drank the whey.

The cheese we know today is a triumph of experiment. Twentieth century methods enable the cheese maker to produce a uniformly good product. There are also many varieties of cheese differing widely in texture, flavor and color.

The commonest type of cheese is known as Cheddar which gets its name from the English village of Cheddar, where it was first produced a hundred years ago. Cheddar cheese adds rich and more satisfying flavor to many plain foods such as cereals and vegetables.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture have recommended these three recipes for supper dishes made with cheese.

MACARONI MOULD

1 cup milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg
1 1-2 cups cooked macaroni
1 cup cheese, diced
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 tablespoon finely chopped pimiento
1 teaspoon chopped onion
3 tablespoons fat, melted
1-2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper.

Scald milk, add to bread: add well beaten egg and remaining ingredients. Turn into a greased ring mould, set in a pan of hot water and oven-poach in a moderate oven, 350°F, until set, about 50 minutes. Unmould on a hot platter and fill centre of ring with cooked vegetables; peas, green beans, or carrots are good. Six servings.

CHEESE SCRAMBLE

1 tablespoon fat
1 cup grated cheese
1-2 cup condensed tomato soup
1 egg, slightly beaten
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon paprika
1 cup canned peas, beans or corn
1-4 cup chopped sweet pickle

Melt fat in top of double boiler. Combine cheese, soup, egg, salt and paprika. Add to melted fat and cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until cheese is melted and mixture is smooth and thick. Add drained vegetables and chopped pickle. Heat thoroughly. Serve on toast triangles and garnish with chopped parsley. Six servings.

SPANISH FONDUE

3 tablespoons fat
1-2 cup coarsely chopped onion
1 cup whole kernel corn
1 cup drained canned tomatoes
1 1-2 cups milk
2 cups soft bread crumbs (packed)
1 1-2 cups grated cheese
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
Dash of paprika
1 tablespoon melted fat
3 eggs

Melt fat, add onion, corn and tomatoes. Heat well and place in bottom of greased baking dish. Add milk to bread crumbs. When milk has been absorbed, add grated cheese, seasonings and melted fat. Add beaten eggs and mix well. Pour over hot vegetables in baking dish. Oven-poach in a moderate oven 350°F, for 55-60 minutes or until set. Turn out on serving plate. This recipe is very attractive when prepared in individual moulds. Oven-poach the small moulds in a moderate oven 350°F, for 40 minutes. Six servings.

The Experts Say . . .

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, (CP)—Housewives in Canada's powershort areas might try turning out more oven-cooked meals as one means of economizing on electricity.

And if they started out on a day of cake and cookie baking, it is much easier to cook dinner in the directly-heated oven—and it does save on electricity.

For the main courses:

Liver Loaf— Ingredients: one pound beer or pork liver; two cups bread crumbs; one medium onion; one quarter-cup tomato juice or vegetable juice; one teaspoon salt.

Method: Put liver through meat grinder: add bread crumbs, onion, tomato juice and salt; put in greased baking dish and place in pan containing warm water; bake slowly 30 or 40 minutes.

As an alternative:

Liver with Vegetables—Ingredients: 1 1-2 pounds beef or pork liver; two tablespons fat; one tablespoon salt; one cup celery; one or two tsps. dried celery leaves; two small onions; six carrots; one-half cup tomatoes; one-quarter cup vegetable water; two tablespoons flour.

Method—Prepare celery, cut in pieces and put in bottom of greased baking dish, sprinkle with salt. Cut liver in pieces for serving, place on top of celery, and dot with fat. Chop onion and dice carrots. Put these with the tomato and vegetable water. Add to liver. Bake in moderate oven 45 minutes, keeping dish covered during first half hour of cooking. Thicken gravy with flour and serve hot.

For dessert:

Indian Pudding— Ingredients: One-third cup cornmeal; four cups milk; one-half teaspoon ginger; one-half teaspoon cinnamon; three-quarters teaspoon salt; one-half cup light molasses.

Heat milk in double boiler, whisk in cornmeal with a fork and cook for 20 minutes, stirring until mixture thickens; add molasses, salt, spices; pour into buttered baking dish; place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven about one hour, or until set.

Bread and Butter pudding — Ingredients: Raisins, two cups bread crumbs; four cups milk; one-third cup brown sugar; one-half teaspoon salt, flavoring; two tablespoons butter; one or two eggs.

Mix raisins and bread crumbs, put into buttered baking dish. Pour on two cups hot milk to which have been added sugar, salt, flavoring and butter; allow to stand one half hour; beat eggs, add rest of the milk and pour over the crumb mixture; bake in a moderate oven until brown.

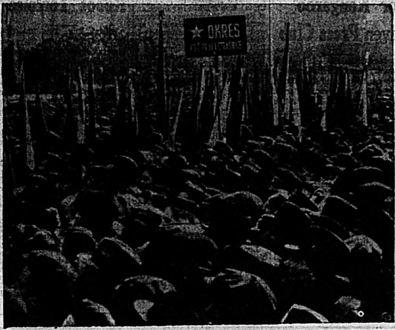
How Long Czech President Will Continue to Function is Matter of Conjecture

Vaclav Majer (right), Social Democratic leader and minister of food, is shown here with President Eduard Benes. Majer, the last important right-wing holdout against the Communists who took over Czechoslovakia, was reported to have been attacked by Communist strong-arm men armed with knives. The reported attack came after Majer refused to go along with party left-wingers in siding with the Communists of Premier Klement Gottwald, who announced a new cabinet composed of Communists and pro-Communists. Fears are expressed that Benes is being held a "'virtual" prisoner in the presidential castle in Prague.



Here is a section of the great mass meeting held in Prague, Czechoslovakia, at which Communist Premier Klement Gottwald showed his hand and made plain his intention of putting the Communists in complete control of Czechoslovakia. Today that control is all but complete with all government offices with the exception of the presidency in the hands of Communists or pro-Communists.

Committee Probes Financial Affairs General Bakeries

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP) — After learning of a prices board "get tough" policy in trying to hold down the decontrolled consumer cost of bread, the Commons Price Committee turned its attention today to financial affairs of General Bakeries, Ltd.

James M. MacDonald of Toronto, sec.-treas. of General Bakeries, will submit financial reports of the firm which operates bread plants in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Brandon Man., and Vancouver.

The information had been requested by the committee to substantiate the company claim that it needed a four-cents-a-loaf increase in its selling price of bread last September — when subsidies were removed from flour and bread prices decontrolled.

At the time, the increase had been held to three cents, and yesterday prices board chairman Kenneth Taylor told the committee the baking industry had been threatened with "serious trouble" if it raised bread prices any higher than that.

The threat had been that of a general investigation into the industry if at that time an increase of more than three cents was undertaken on the standard 24-ounce loaf, then selling for 10 cents.

Despite lack of ceiling control such an inquiry could have been launched under a still-existing prices board regulation barring "unreasonable or unjust" prices.

Later, a one-cent increase was put on top of the three-cent jump in Montreal and Toronto. That was in January, and Mr. Taylor testified that by this time he could not say it was unjustified. Bakers' costs had gone up since September. Some were showing "substantial losses."

The Prices Board head declined to express an opinion under questioning, as to whether he thought a combine existed in the baking industry. Any evidence the board had in that direction, he said had been turned over to the Combines Investigation Commission.

The iron curtain has rung down on Czechoslovakia. With the exception of the presidency, held by Eduard Benes at the moment, every office is believed to be in the hands of Communists or pro-Communists. A hint of things to come came from National Defence Minister Ludvik Svoboda (above) in an order of the day to the Czech army, in which he said that the army must rally around President Benes —but, "we must remain true to the Soviet Union and our Allies . . . be on guard against foreign spies, their domestic helpers and people who speak against the Soviet Union."

'D.P.' Dances Jig, Shouts 'Canada Here I Come'

Bremerhaven, Germany, Feb. 27 (CP)—A little man in a black beret and patched khaki trousers today walked up the gangplank of the United States army transport Gen. S. D. Sturgis, went to the rail and spat over the side.

"That's for Europe. Canada here I come," he cried.

Then he did a little impromptu jig while his grinning companions rhythmically clapped hands.

His uninhibited joy was typical of the spirit of 860 Baltic and Polish displaced persons who sailed to start a new life in Canada.

Canada's Leading Aerialist Retires

Ottawa, Feb. 27 — (CP) — Dr. Leonard H. Newman, for 25 years a power behind the throne of wheat kings, will retire tomorrow from the post of Dominion cerealist.

He was appointed in 1923 to succeed the late Sir Charles Edward Saunders, developer of the world-famous Marquis wheat.

Under Dr. Newman's direction as head of the cereal division of the Agriculture Department's Experimental Farms Service, have been evolved important new varieties, notably the rust-resistant Renown, Regent and Saunders wheats used in Western Canada.

These and other varieties—Coronation and Cascade wheat, Vanguard and Beaver oats and Garnet and Reward wheats — have brought wheat-king titles to many growers.

Dr. Newman, 66, was born at Merrickville, Ont. He graduated from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph in 1903 and did post-graduate work at Iowa State College, Cambridge University and at Svalof, Sweden.

From 1905 until his appointment as cerealist, he was secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association. In 1936 the University of New Brunswick conferred on him an Honorary Degree of Doctor of Science.

Communist Premier Klement Gottwald (seated, foreground) listens intently to an address by trade union boss Zapotocky during a Prague conference. The Communist premier, aided by the police and labor unions, has taken over almost all phases of national life in Czechoslovakia.

U.S. Senate Voting On St. Lawrence Seaway Project

Washington, Feb. 27. (AP)— The United States Senate arranged to vote today (4 p.m. E.S.T.) on the multi-million dollar St. Lawrence Seaway project.

If authorized by Congress, the seaway would be constructed jointly by the United States and Canada. Designed to provide a shipping link between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic it also would furnish hydro-electric power for the northeastern United States and parts of Ontario and Quebec. Estimates of the cost range from $720,000,000 to more than $1,000,000,000.

The measure's chances are regarded as slim. Senator H. Cabot Lodge (Rep.,-Mass.), leader of the opposition, claims enough votes to defeat the proposal. Some proponents have conceded privately that he has them.

Before the final vote, the Senate may be asked to send the measure back to the Foreign Relations Committee for more study.

Senator Harry Byrd (Dem.-Va.) told the Senate yesterday the project would involve at least $1,000,000,000 and could not be justified at this time. He questioned, too, that the project would be self-liquidating, as proponents have claimed.

Wallace's Chief Lieutenant Used Road Show Methods to Get Elected

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 27 — (CP) — A former road show trouper and one-time munitions worker will preside over the United States Senate and stand next in line for the presidency if Henry Wallace gets himself elected next November.

Senator Glen H. Taylor (Dem. Ida.), who fixed his eyes on Congress when he was leading his family band of entertainers through small communities of the northwest, has become Wallace's running-mate in the third party ticket.

Taylor, 44 next April, won his place in the Senate in 1944 after two unsuccessful tries for election to Congress.

He did it with little financial or other backing except the support of a mass of disgruntled electors whom he canvassed with music, personal appearances in all the back concessions, and thousands of letters laboriously written by hand.

Handsome, enthusiastic

When Taylor came to Washington for the session in January, 1945, he was bursting with enthusiasm, handsome and relaxed. He has made the grade and he was anxious to get in and fight for efficient government.

He brought his pretty wife and three smart young boys, all of them able to sing and play instruments, and put on a show at the drop of a 10-gallon hat.

So, his introduction to Washington and to the front pages of the whole country, as a senator, was a posed picture on the Capitol steps singing a parody of a cowboy lament having to do with his need for "a home near the capitol dome" in crowded Washington.

Now, after three years of frustration that comes to eager young men who reach Congress with ideals of service, he has lost a little of his matinee idol appearance. He is still straight and dapper, but his face is pale and a little drawn and his curly hair is thinning.

Staunch Wallace Man

Taylor immediately revealed himself as a staunch supporter of Henry Wallace. Post - war problems found him a bitter critic of the administration's foreign policy.

He has seldom, if ever, found anything publicly to criticize in the attitude or operations of the Russian government.

"Crooning Cowboy"

He was dubbed "the crooning cowboy" when he first came here and the name, in variations, has clung to him. He worked in munition factories on the west coast early in the war.

Last fall he gained considerable notoriety when he started a horseback ride from the west coast to Washington to draw attention to his criticisms of the administration's foreign policy which he, like Wallace, says leads to war, presumably with Russia.

Taylor rode only about 275 miles, then loaded his horses in a van and drove to within a few miles of Washington when he again mounted and rode to the capital.

Now he says the Democratic party has "left" him to go over to "Wall Street and the Militarists." He will run for vice-president with Wallace but can hold his seat in the Senate.

Evidence Heard Of Sanction For 3-Cent Increase

Ottawa, Feb. 27 (CP)—Evidence that the Dominion bakery administrator had given sanction to a three-cent increase in the price of bread in Toronto last September was presented Thursday to the Commons Price Committee.

J. Leo Kelleher, at the time a Toronto bakery executive, testifiedj administrator Charles Ruttan had attended a September meeting of bakers and had told them a three-cent increase consequent on the removal of bread controls and flour subsidies would be justified.

Mr. Kelleher, Toronto plant manager of General Bakeries, had not recalled in previous testimony the presence of the bakery administrator at the Toronto meeting. He had thought it was attended only by bakers.

Today, he said the administrator advised the meeting the removal of subsidies on flour probably would add two cents to the costs of a loaf, and other increased costs would account for another cent.

Shortly after the sessicn, Toronto bread prices went up by three cents generally.

Later Health Minister Martin, committee chairman, announced arrangements were being made to bring Col. Ruttan before the inquiry for evidence on the Toronto meeting. Also, K. J. Taylor, Prices Board chairman and Ruttan's superior, was to be asked to stand by for testimony.

Garden of Gethsemane Scene of Arab-Jew Battle of Mortars

By CARTER L. DAVIDSON

Jersualem, Feb. 27 (AP) — A fierce mortar battle between Jews and Arabs raged Thursday near the Garden of Gethsemane outside Jerusalem, with Arabs reported firing from behind tombstones in a Jewish Cemetery.

British police said two Arabs were killed and four wounded severely. Arabs reported one Arab woman died and one child and seven men were hurt. The police said two house were demolished.

Police also told of a battle in the border area between Arab Jaffa and Jewish Tel Aviv. They said a Jewish mortar and grenade attack on an Arab bastion killed three Arabs and wounded four others.

The Jerusalem fight was between Jews on Mount Scopus, site of Hadassan hospital and the Hebrew University, and Arabs of Wadi Joz nearby it began at 5 a.m. and went on full tilt for two hours. Three hours later firing started again.

Suitable Bride For Kangaroo Given Press Club

Sydney, Feb. 27. (CP)—After a country-wide search, a suitable bride has been found fqor Bluey, the kangaroo that flew the Pacific Ocean to represent Australian journalists at the Toronto Byline ball last June.

The future Madame Bluey is Amana, an eight-months-old grey kangaroo pet of Mrs. C. Merideth of Cairns in North Queensland, who telegraphed an offer to present Amana ,who will be sent as a joint gift from the International Correspondents' Association and the Sydney Journalists Club.

Amana will be given free passage by the Australian National Airways from Cairns, about 1,500 miles north of here, first to Sydney and then to Vancouver, the Airways' British Columbia terminal.

Mrs. Merideth said she decided to donate Amana after reading a story in the Innisfail Sunday Australian telling of the correspondents' search for a mate for Bluey who also would qualify as belle of the Byline Ball, to be held in Toronto, April 10.

The part of the story that swayed Mrs. Merideth read: "(The Kangaroo selected as Miss Australia) would leave her homeland at Sydney, touch down at several ports crossing the Pacific and wed her beloved husband-to-be when this year's Toronto Press Ball maintains its reputation of being one of the most colorful and notable functions in Canada. Then after a honeymoon she would set up housekeeping in the Toronto zoo."

Amana will leave for Sydney this week where her travel permits, health cretificates, landing papers and all other such documents will be put in order. On March 31 Miss Amana will hop aboard the plane that will put her down in Vancouver, April 3.

With tongue in cheek, Canberra government sources today denied reports that the kangaroo wedding ceremony would be performed by Francis Forde, Australian High Commissioner to Canada.

BRITAIN'S BIRTHRATE UP

London — (CP) — Britain's birthrate for 1947 was 20.5 for every 1,000 population, highest figure recorded since 1921 and 1.4 above 1946. Almost 887,000 live births were registered in England and Wales during 1947.

Denies Building Robot Tortoise

Bristol, Eng., Feb. 27—(CP)—Dr. W. Grey Walter, 38-year-old director of the Burden Neurological Institute here, said Thurs. that it should be possible to build a robot tortoise which would react to light and sound, but he has not yet made one.

"The most I can say is that theoretically such a thing should be possible and that I am planning to make one if I have the time," he added.

Earlier a London newspaper had reported that the brain scientist had built a robot tortoise that was so human that it liked company, recognized voices and avoided cold or damp weather, great heat or bright lights.

"It can be temperamental and will be neurotic and sulky for days if teased or given too many contradictory instructions," the paper added. The paper said that Dr. Walter had built the tortoise with ordinary radio tubes, switch relays, miniature microphones for registering sound and photo-electric cells for recognizing color and shape.

Intoxicated Man Has $8,000 in Belt When Arrested

Hamilton, Feb. 27. (CP)—Police were slightly bug-eyed here Wednesday as they searched a man helplessly drunk and found he had $8,000, most of it in $10 bills, in a belt around his middle. His wife, also charged, yielded only $17.00.

Remorseful this morning, he explained the money sepresented his life earnings and he carried it with him because of his distrust of banks.

He and his wife planned to leave the city last night but instead, decided to find out what cocktail bars were like as they had never been in one.

They found out. The fines were $10 each.

FACES MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

Hamilton, Feb. 27 (CP) — George Wilson of Hamilton faced a charge of manslaughter here Thurs. following the early morning death of Henry Urquhart, 78, after he was struck and killed by an automobile driven by Wilson.

He was arrested on a charge of drunken driving but this was changed to the more serious charge.

Bail was fixed at $500 and the preliminary hearing scheduled for March 4 before Magistrate Beamer W. Hopkins.

Jury Awards $12,000 Damages

Toronto, Feb. 27 (CP)—An assize court jury yesterday awarded $12,000 damages and costs to William Francis Higgins, 63, and $84 expenses to his step-son, Ernest W. Northcote, for injuries sustained July 12 when struck by an automobile driven by Harold J. Ricketts of Whitby.

Higgins and his step-son testified they were struck on Highland Creek bridge near here while attending to an accident which had happened 20 minutes earlier.

Ricketts denied seeing a flashlight which Police Constable George Mattison said he waved to warn the approaching car.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Never be in doubt about your opening bid in a suit. It starts with either one or two or three or four or five. Each has its own minimum requirements. Simply choose the one that fits.

An opening of one shows five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks, a biddable suit. It may have more in any one or more of these four items. It should not have less in either.

An opening of two in a suit shows nine tricks. Worry not as to how many of them are high cards. A trick is a high card (ace or king or queen) and a short card. With nine tricks you have enough highs.

An opening of three in a minor suit shows an absolutely solid seven carder and nothing else. Not even as high as a queen in some other suit. If it did have it would be a one bid.

An opening of three in a major (or four in a minor) shows eight tricks. The suit must be a practically solid seven carder or longer. There must be at least one sure trick in an outside suit.

An opening of four in a major (or five in a minor) shows only a long suit. The suit may not be strong. It denies the qualities of an opening one bid. It expects to be defeated.

Apply these basics to the hand you see here:

♠ 10 4
♥ A-K Q 10 5 3
♦ Q J 10 9 3
♣ None

This hand contains eight tricks. They are the four high, three shorts in clubs, one short in spades. It contains all four of the items (more in some) expected of an opening one heart bid.

With less than nine tricks it is not a two bid. Without a sure trick outside of trump it is not a three heart bid. With enough for an opening of one it could not be three diamonds or four hearts.

Its values in excess of the one bid are not enough to enter into some other. But you may get into an argument over opening it with one. If you do, the other fellow is wrong. As usual.

KILLED IN CRASH

London, Feb. 27 —(CP)— A chartered passenger airliner crashed today into a house near Croydon airport, killing one person and injuring three.

The four persons involved were believed to be the only ones aboard the plane, owned by St. Christopher's Air Travel Service.

First reports indicated no one in the house was hurt.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 27 — (AP) — After marking time as heroine in the "Oklahoma!" road company, Mary Hatcher is due for a big boost in her career.

Mary, who made her film debut in "Variety Girl," is currently making "Isn't It Romantic?" and is about set to be loaned out for "Babes in Toyland" with Dennis Day.

All this activity is heartening to Mary, who suffered a setback when she lost out on the "Conn. Yankee" lead. Bing Crosby said she was too young to play opposite him.

New Contract

Robert Ryan was given a new contract the day after his Academy nomination for "Crossfire." His former salary was doubled and there are no options until the third year.

Bob works only three days (10 minutes' screen time) in "The Boy with Green Hair," but he's not complaining. "My first big break was a hit in a B picture," he says. "After that, I figured on how important a role is, not how long." Note Gloria Grahame is up for an Oscar for her three-day stint in "Crossfire." . . .

Grapevine Dept.

Ginger Rogers' asking price is reported down to $175,000, from a high of $300,000. Another sign of the times . . . M. G. M. is reported nearing a deal for "Oklahoma" rights, now that the show is closing in New York . . .

William Powell was surprised when I told him on the "Peabody" set that M. G. M. is planning a comedy for him. "They'd better—if they expect to get their money's worth out of me," he said. "They're scheduled to pay me for the next five years" . . .

Notes to You

Barbara Stanwyck spends one-third of "Sorry, Wrong Number" on the telephone . . . Did you know those two great character actors, Edmund Gwenn and Cecil Kellaway are cousins? Kellaway is playing a Gwenn-like role of a peprechaun in "For Fear of Little Men" . . . Harry Sherman says he has given up the California gold country as a location site for "Tennessee's Partner." Too many telephone wires and other newfangled things for a 49'er film.

Providence Reds In First Place Of East Division

Providence Reds have clinched first place in the American Hockey League's eastern circuit.

While most fans watched Cleveland and Pittsburgh fight it out for leadership in the west, the Reds gradually pulled away from the eastern pack and their 8-5 conquest of Buffalo last night added the finishing touches.

In the only other game played last night, Washington Lions edged Indianapolis 5-4.

Carl Liscombe and Harry Taylor paced the Providence attack with a pair of goals each while Chuck Scherza, Pete Kaputsa, Harvey Fraser and Roger Bedard accounted for the others. Freddie Hunt led the Buffalo scoring with a pair of timely goals. Les Hickey and Hal Laycoe netted one apiece for Bisons.

At Washington, Lions grabbed a 3-0 lead and held on to edge Caps. Bob Walton and Roger Wilson led the Washington goal-getters with two each while Frank Porteus scored the other one. Barry Sullivan picked up two tallies for Indianapolis while Murdo McKay and Stan Podolsky picked up one each.

Football's Import Rule Likely To Be Extended

Toronto, Feb. 27 (CP) —Football's import rule, its two-year trial period run out, comes up for renewal by the game's policy-makers here Saturday amid every indication the regulation will be extended at least in its present restricted form.

That means in effect that there's scant chance of gridiron's Grey Cup division departing from its post-war mode of unprofessed professionalism before next season.

The rule permitting any team to buy up to five United States imports was voted into effect at the Canadian Rugby Union's 1946 annual meeting. It brought the U.S. stars back to the game, and thus the big money brigade, following a noble experiment in near-amateurism.

The highwater mark of simon-purism was reached in 1941 when Balmy Beach's Robert Porter was temporarily barred because, as a former pro baseballer, he didn't have an A.A.U. amateur card.

It seems unlikely any of this spirit of '41 will crop up at the C.R.U.'s annual conclave tomorrow, however—at least among the three senior leagues that challenge for the Grey Cup.

The only team raising its voice for a change in the import rule was Montreal Alouettes, and the Als want the rule liberalized. Leo Dandurand, Alouettes president, pumped for wiping out the clauses that classify all Americans not resident in Canada before Jan. 1, 1946, as imports. That would make homebrews of a couple of Alouettes holdovers from last season and permit them to start afresh with five more imports this fall.

But this proposal was voted down at the annual meeting of the Big Four so isn't likely to reach the C.R.U. floor.

Just what other matters will come before football's governing body tomorrow can only be guessed at. Secretary Percy Robinson refused any advance hint of the agenda.

It's certain that the rules committee will have several suggestions for at least minor changes to deal with. The various leagues gave notice of their proposals following recent annual meetings.

One of the most controversial of these may be a proposed change in the blocked-kick rule, which has been amended almost yearly. Both the Eastern Intercollegiate and the Ontario Unions want the ball awarded to the opposite side when a team has its kick blocked on third down and recovers without making yards. At present, the down is granted over again with a 10-yard penalty.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Miami, Feb. 27 (AP)— The folks hereabouts who tell you that Citation will be the winner of racing's "triple crown" as well as tomorrow's Flamingo also will tell you that Warren Wright's Calumet colors may finish 1-2-3 in the Kentucky Derby—Calumet has entered seven horses in the derby and they figure that Coaltown and Free America or Whirlblast could chase Citation home at Churchill Downs.... Coaltown, which wasn't raced as a two-year-old because trainer Jimmy Jones said he was "windbroken," really was something to see yesterday....He won by 12 lengths under 122 pounds and equalled the track record for seven furlongs.

In The Coal, Coal Ground—

In case you're wondering about the name "Coaltown," here's the story behind his name....Leslie Combs, a close friend of Wright, is constantly joking about being "the boy from Coaltown," a tiny hamlet near Lexington, Ky..... So when this colt came along, Wright decided: "Let's call him Coaltown," instead of letting Mrs. Wright pick the name.

The Golf Stream—

The Miami "International" four ball golf matches really will be international this year....Bobby Locke of South Africa and Norman Vonnida of Australia will be in the field and two South Americans Roberto Di Vincenzo, Martin Pose and Henry Bertolino are available for the spots....Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret will be shooting for their third straight four-ball title.

Herb Pennock, 'Pie' Traynor In Hall of Fame

New York, Feb. 27 (AP)— The late Herb Pennock and Harold (Pie) Traynor were voted into baseball's Hall of Fame today by the United States Baseball Writers Association. Their names will be enrolled in the Cooperstown (N.Y.) shrine alongside 46 others who were so honored in previous years.

Pennock, the great left-handed pitcher who died Jan. 30 en route to a National League meeting in New York, led the candidates with 94 votes. Traynor, Pittsburgh third baseman for 17 years, polled 93 votes. According to the rules, 75 per cent of the votes cast—or 91 votes—were required for election. More than 300 writers were eligible to vote. A total of 121 votes were cast.

A total of 136 players received votes but many of them were ineligible. Either they were still active in 1947 or they already had been named.

Al Simmons, Philadelphia Athletics coach who hit .334 in a major league career dating from 1924 to 1944, followed Pennock and Traynor with 60 votes, 31 short of election.

Canadiens, Hawks Face Last Fight To Gain Ground

Dick Irvin, the celebrated pigeon fancier from Regina, and Charles Conacher, former Toronto Maple Leaf hockey star, are brothers under the skin right now. They'd like it better if they could get under the skins of some of the other National Hockey League coaches.

For Irvin and his Montreal Canadiens, and for Conacher and his Chicago Black Hawks, this coming weekend might well rub out any lingering hopes they have of pulling their teams into the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The two bottom clubs are seeing their chances of surviving diminishing with mathematical precision. And they both essay the role of giant - killer on Saturday night. The Canadiens entertain the second - place Detroit Red Wings, and the Hawks play at the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs.

As it stands now, Canadiens are seven points behind Boston Bruins who hold the fourth and last play-off spot, and the Hawks are nine points behind. The Canadiens have only 11 games left, the Hawks 10, before the wind - up March 21.

Double Win Would Help

The Toronto and Montreal games are the only ones down for decision Saturday night. On Sunday the tail-enders have another go, with the Canadiens at New York Rangers and the Hawks entertain the Boston Bruins.

It probably won't happen, but a double victory for the Canadiens and for the Hawks would throw consternation into the ranks of Boston and New York supporters.

The tail-enders can't hurt Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings. Those two clubs, with Toronto holding a two -point advantage, promise to duel all the way to the final for the league championship.

At Toronto today three of the six clubs will be using the same ice at Maple Leaf Gardens, but not of course at the same time.

Leafs will work out for their game against Chicago, and the Hawks will do likewise. Charlie Conacher, who has revitalized the Hawks since he replaced Johnny Gottselig as coach at the start of the year, would love nothing better than a victory over the Leafs on their own ground.

The third club working out at Toronto is Boston, polishing up for the Sunday night game at Chicago after losing to Leafs 4-2 Wednesday night.

Winter Olympics May be Discarded Says Walter Brown

By The Canadian Press

Walter Brown, Vice-President of the Amatuer Hockey Association, whose team represented the United States in the Olympic games, said on his arrival at New York from Europe yesterday that "I doubt very much whether there will be any more winter olympics."

"The whole thing is too commercial," he said. "The International Olympic Committee is a self-appointed and self-perpetuated organization. There is nothing democratic about it...."

He said, however, that the United States team "got everything that anyone else got." And added:

"Avery Bundage said if the Amateur Hockey Association played he would withdraw all American competitors from the game. I hated that, because I didn't want to be a dog in the manger. Well, we played, and they didn't withdraw."

Lord Chief Justice Goddard in High Court at London yesterday dismissed with costs an action brought against the jockey club which controls flat racing in Britain. Trainer James Russel had claimed damages for alleged breach of contract and for alleged libel in the racing calendar.

Heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis and his wife moved out of their $360-a-week apartment in London yesterday because it was too cold, said promoter Jack Solomons. The apartment, heated only by fireplaces, is one of the swankiest in London.

Mike Spinelli, manager of the late Sam Baroudi who died after a Chicago fight with Ezzard Charles last Friday, has been suspended by the New York State Athletic Commission because he no longer manages any fighter.

Hamilton's 27th annual bonspiel starts next Monday with the Spectator Trophy as premier event. Sixty-four rinks will compete.

Windfields, owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto, upset the favored Bogle and Going With Me to win the $10,000 San Marino Handicap at Santa Anita yesterday.

Flyers, Olympic champions, now visiting Prague, are encountering no difficulties as a result of the troubled political situation. Manager Sandy Watson said last night "the Czechs are very nice to us."

The team received gifts of glass vases, trophy cups and flowers after playing to a 3-3 tie with a Bohemian regional team last night. The Flyers are expected to leave the country tonight.

Frank Shea came to terms with New York Yankees yesterday for a reported $16,000 salary as the club prepared to leave for spring training. Shea won 14 and lost five in the regular series and added two world series victories.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Wellington, Ont. — Hockey cunning of the past, emanating from balding pates, and grey-thatched domes rode triumphant over youth's speed and ability here on Wednesday night, when the "Oldtimers" some of them stars of two decades ago defeated the sprightly youngsters wearing colors of the high school in a charity game in the local arena. The score was 6-4.

A large crowd that netted a handsome sum to Frank Brimley's humanitarian "Aid for European Children" cause, saw the creaking stars of yesteryear draw from their store of hockey memory, all of the tricks of the "trade," reserve their fading strength hobble over the ice on weary limbs, but strike when the opportunity presented itself.

• • •

The "Oldtimers" most of whom should have been wearing beards and carrying scythes insted of hockey shillalaghs and skates, was a representative team of the warriors that carried the famous red and black of Wellington to many a hockey victory, years ago.

• • •

There was the same old fire, a reasonable facsimile of their former stickhandling wizardry, and the shots that, while they lacked the old velocity, found the net six-times behind a be-hatted corpulent "sergeant-major" who master-minded the knowledge knibblers from the edifice across the way.

• • •

But they couldn't cope with the speed of the beardless ones. The youthful "David's" cavorted about and 'around their grandpappy "Goliaths" like a fox terrier playing tag with an elephant. But they didn't reckon with the canny brains of the wobbling ancients, although as the weary-footed oldsters started to fade in the third period, they fired home two quick goals to come within striking distance while the bobby-sox brigade in the balcony shrieked encouragement.

The ice was in a "slow" condition due to mild weather, and the gent that controls the atmospheric conditions should be credited with an assist by the "greybeards." The heavy ice conditions slowed up the youthful speedsters of the opposition, while "Dutch" (Granpappy) Ainsworth, never a speed skater, "Flathead" Gibson, Danny Greenfield, and the rest of the "nearly fifty" club found the wet track and muddy going to their liking.

• • •

Ralph (Beef) MacDonald, huge in natural equatorial circumference, belly-pads, four sweatshirts, eight sweaters, a woollen blanket, all topped by the official sweater, was the hockey Horatius who guarded the netted bridge for the veterans. "Dutch" Ainsworth, was well upholstered in three suits of heavy flannel underwear, red, white and blue, a golfing cap, three pairs of well-worn dungarees, stovepipes for shinguards, and three life insurance policies.

Gerald (Flathead) Gibson, grey streaks in his hitherto ebony locks, had an outboard motor secreted in his hip pocket, two paddles tucked away inside a metal vest in case he was submerged in a water puddle, and below-knee length pantaloons that were the last word in hockey's "New Look." He left the store teeth in the canteen and after the game, was charged for two hot dogs which the voracious molars had had commandered while their owner waged toothless ice battle.

George Noble, and Danny Greenfield, who must live right, with Tommy Steen and Hughie East were only players with any streamlined characteristics. Later it was discovered that the quartet was tightly encased in girdles, vintage, 1927, which up to Wed. night had been doing a two-way stretch.

• • •

Mike Finnegan, high-priced Picton import, plus shining pate and tooth-paste smile, added the creaking music of his aging joints to the cacophony of outraged bones and stagnant muscles.

Hugh East, former Bloomfield "rocket" parked his more or less wisened hockey carcase on the centre line stripe, bit off several chews of tobacco, and when the puck came his way, roared down ice at the terific speed of one mile a week. To his credit, it must be said that he poked home three of the veterans' goals, despite the fact that he closed his eyes and prayed whenever he let a shot go.

• • •

On the sidelines screaming encouragement to his former proteges, was Ed. (Gore Gobbler) Gibson resplendant in checkered shirt mud-splattered overalls, hip rubber boots minus spurs, a case of coke, and his membership card in the Royal Antedeluvian Order of Gobblers, Unlimited, Local No. 456378564342. Ed unfortunately in his tonsilar activities, jetted his store teeth. The bicuspids were found after the game on the opposite side of the rink, holding a death grip on the south side of the lap of one of the local gendarmerie.

To the credit of the W.C.S. youngsters, it must be narrated that they were not the least afraid of the reputation of their ancient foemen. The studes skated miles in an effort to hang defeat on the venerable greybeards, but they lacked the experience and finish of their older opponents. Had the ice been in perfect condition, the story may have had a different ending.

The Monarchs Midgets brushed aside another barrier along the championship trail to the Ontario Minor Hockey Association Midget "B" title here last night when they dusted off the Peterborough Rotary Club kidlets by a 6-2 score winning the round by a 14-5 count. Their win over the Petes team in Omemee last Tuesday night by an 8-3 count was the first time the Liftlock City laddies had met defeat in four rounds of playdown hockey.

The lone bearers of Belleville hockey playdown banners well deserved their victory last night. They were superior to the Petes in all phases of the game with the exception of the goal-keeping chore, and Barclay didn't get the chance to prove his mettle as did Batley in the Petes' nets, although the Merchants' goalie kicked out not a few that were well placed.

• • •

They're a battling bunch of buckaroos, these Midgets, and they go all out when they're on the ice. They never let up the fast tempo that they set at the opening whistle, were all over their checks, and one of their best features was their back - checking, and their checking as a whole.

• • •

Now, it is expected, they will meet the Collingwood team in the Ontario semi-finals. And by the way, the elimination of the Petes placed the laurel wreath of the Eastern Ontario Midget "B" championship on the sweating brows of the youthful puck-

• • •

The Merchants' management was loud in its appreciation of the generous gestures of Sammy Goodman, and Johnny Grindrod, manager of the Belleville Branch of the Lipson Stores. Mr. Goodman donated prizes for outstanding players on the Belleville team, while Mr. Grindrod "stood" the boys for two after-game meals, and a dozen hockey sticks.

• • •

And don't forget that "battle-to-the-death" hockey fiesta tonight in Memorial Arena when the Trenton RCAF Flyers clash with the Cobourg Pavilions in their third and final game of the Intermediate "A" semi-finals series. Both teams have won a victory, and tonight gentlemen, the barriers will be down, the chips will be up and down and it should be a joust well worth seeing. It's do-or- die for one of these clubs — and the fans should not miss what should be one of the best intermediate games of the season.

What's the Good of UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE?

$87,500,000 was paid from the Unemployment Insurance fund to unemployed Canadians from September 1, 1945, to October 31, 1947.

$31,000,000 was contributed to this fund by the Government of Canada.

500,000 individual unemployed workers and their dependants benefitted from these payments.

In many cases had payments not been available the unemployed would have suffered want!

What's the good of Unemployment Insurance?—Can there be any doubt!

Unemployment Insurance helps the employer by providing unemployed with purchasing power; and helps the worker by providing maintenance allowances during unemployment. Employer and Employee and the Government all have an interest—Unemployment Insurance is a large factor in a healthy National Economy.

Merchants Midgets Are 1948 Eastern Ont. "B" Champions, Defeat Peterborough 6-2

(By G.H.C.)

The Belleville Merchants Midgets swept the Peterborough Rotary team aside in their march to the Ontario Minor Hockey Association Midget "B" title here last night, defeating the Liftlock City lads by a 6-2 score and winning the two-game goals-to-count round by 14-5. The Merchants defeated the Rotary kids in Omemee on Tuesday night by an 8-3 count.

And with last night's victory came the OMHA Midget "B" Eastern Ontario championship, and the right to meet Collingwood in the Ontario semi-finals series. The winners of the this two-game affair will clash with either Waterloo or Sarnia for the Ontario Midget "B" championship.

The Merchants thoroughly deserved their win last night. They maintained a consistent tempo of speed both on the attack and the defence; their backchecking held the speedy Petes front lines from getting in scoring position and their ganging attacks at times had the Peterborough defence disorganized.

Best Trio of Attackers

The game was fast, and productive of some fine hockey. The Merchants front line of Harry Brown, Bill Strahan and Pat Gilmour carried the brunt of the attack, and was the best trio of attackers on the ice. Brown got two goals and two assists. Gilmour also fired home a brace of markers with one helper while Strahan was credited with a pair of tallies.

The rest of the team were not far behind their starry first front line. Pat Barrett, Charlie Doran and Ray Carey didn't weaken the attack any although they failed to get in the scoring column. Pete Green played one of the best games of his young career on the defence with Bruce Milligan also turning in a stellar effort.

Rather Soft Goal

Barclay in goal thwarted several Petes attempts to score and the only goal that got past him was one that slid along the ice to the goalmouth. Barclay took a swing at it, fanned, and the puck rolled over the goal-line. Gary Schreider took over the goal-keeping chore in the third period and played his usual heady game. He kicked out quite a bit of rubber and the only one that got past him came at the five minute mark in the period when Ferguson took Robinson's pass to fire the pellet from close in.

The Petes kids, who outweigh the Merchants squad by a considerable margin, did not have the finish of the local youngsters. They were fast, clever stickhandlers and at times were dangerous inside the opposing bluelines. But the speedy Merchants forwards raced back with them on every foray while Green and Milligan proved a strong stumbling block behind the blueline.

The first period saw hard checking, with play surging up and down the ice until the Merchants got under way. They threw all their offensive strength behind the Petes blueline, and Batley in the Petes goal, who was the busiest and best man on the ice was forced to kick out plenty of rubber. Bill Strahan finally weaved his way down right wing with Milligan and taking the defenceman's pass fired a high hard shot past Batley that was labelled all the way.

Locals hemmed in

Pat Gilmour with Brown made it 2-0 after a minute of play in the second period but the Petes got that one back when Barclay fanned on Douglas' easy roller to the goal-line. The Petes put on a ganging attack and hemmed the blue-shirts behind their own blueline with no scoring luck until Brown broke away in the clear. He sped down centre ice and let a hard shot go from ten feet out that had the goalie beaten all the way to make the score 3-1.

Strahan and Bigford went off for shoving each other around and the Merchants raced in with a four-man attack. Green fed Gilmour a neat pass and the tricky left-winger made no mistake from about six feet out.

With the count 4-1 against them the Petes kids strove desperately to cut down the lead and pressed hard in the opening minutes of the third period. Finally Ferguson got a goalmouth pass and beat Schreider with a hard drive.

Had Margin of Play

Play tempo did not let up and the youthful teams battled tooth and nail as if the Stanley Cup depended on the outcome of the period. The Merchants had the greater margin of play and were kept off a scoring spree by the clever work of Batley. Brown slashed home the fifth Belleville marker at the five-minute mark and Strahan laced in the sixth and final tally after a rink-length rush with Gilmour and Brown.

Bob Hurst, Davy Jones and O'Brien turned in fine efforts with their teammates of the Merchants while Douglas, Robinson, Jensen and erguson starred for the Petes, with Batley being outstanding.

The game was cleanly played although eight penalties were dished out by Referee B. Leggitt of Peterborough, some of them on the border line.

Mother Rescues Twins And Saves House

Port Stanley, Ont., Feb. 27 — (CP) — Prompt action on the part of Mrs. Stanley Dobbs was credited Friday with saving the lives of her four-months-old twins, Elaine and Eric, and her home from destruction by fire last night. A clothes line full of clothes strung across the babies' bedroom caught fire from a small heater, broke and fell over Elaine's crib.

Mrs. Dobbs grabbed the burning clothes and threw them out of the house but not before the little girl was badly burned on the face and arms.

Walcott Agrees To Meet Louis In Return Bout

Camden, N.J., Feb. 27. (AP) — The return heavyweight title bout between champion Joe Louis and challenger Jersey Joe Walcott is scheduled to become official today.

Jersey Joe, beaten in a split decision fight last December, announced last night he had agreed to meet the Brown Bomber at the Yankee Stadium, June 23 and would place his name on the contract in the offices of the Twentieth Century Sport Club in New York.

Louis in England for a series of exhibition bouts, previously had affirmed a return engagement against the 34-year-old Camden man who twice floored him in their previous engagement.

Under the terms announced, Jersey Joe will receive 20 per cent of the net receipts and 22 1-2 per cent of the movie rights. Walcott's advisory board, headed by Felix Bocchichio, who has first call on his services, and Manager Joe Webster, had been holding out for 30 per cent. Louis will receive 40 per cent of the gate and 30 per cent of the movie income.

Walcott also consented to give Louis a return bout in the event he wins the title. If a third fight is necessary, they will split the purse on a 30-30 basis.

"This is one fight we couldn't let go," said Bocchicchio. "We held out as long as possible for a better break but finally agreed to accept the terms of the twentieth Century.

Acceptance by Walcott came at the presentation of the heavyweight "championship" belt to Jersey Joe by the Police Gazette before some 5,000 of his admirers at Convention Hall. The Police Gazette said it believed Walcott beat Louis in December and was rating him the champion.

"I have waited 17 years for this," said Walcott on receiving the belt. "I honestly believe I am champ. If ever I won a fight I won that one. I am willing and able to prove that this belt is not just for show. I believe I can lick Louis any place, any time and welcome another chance—even at terms dictated by Louis and Sol Strauss (promoter of the Twentieth Century).

"You can be sure that this time I will make my victory so decisive that we'll need no judges."

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By JACK GRAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 27. —(CP)— There's a national significance in the way citizens around tiny Paisley, Ont., (population 700) have rallied to help rebuild that Bruce County Community's $35,000 war memorial centre, destroyed by fire last week, less than a week after it was built.

It's the same spirit of good-neighborliness present at many a barn and house-raising throughout rural Canada—but it's also more than that.

Bill (Owen Sound Daily Sun-Times) Dane, who initiated the appeal to rebuild in a sports page letter "to the people of Paisley," put it very well:

"Three years of your best efforts were culminated in the official opening. . . . . A fitting tribute to your gallant young men and women. . . . We feel that you and the entire district have lost a friend, not a structure of inanimate materials."

To offset that sense of loss Bill suggested that sporting organizations throughout the area, 30 miles southwest of Owen Sound, held out. He announced the Owen Sound Mercurys of the Ontario Hockey Association were ready to play any number of exhibition games to aid the cause.

Immediate Aid

Response was immediate. The Paisley Community Centre building committee had $20,000 insurance on the building and offers of aid began to pour in. The widely-expressed desire to help was a factor in deciding to rebuild.

Expressing gratitude, W. Thesker, chairman of the committee, said hundreds had volunteered help and 'nearly every arena has offered to stage an attraction and turn the proceeds over to us."

Such whole-hearted and widespread sympathy and enthusiasm is contagious. . . . Within a week Paisley's citizens have, as Bill Dane suggested, put the past behind them and once again are planning their memorial centre. Its rebuilding will be a tribute to their own pluck and to the neighborly spirit of rural Canada—well epitomized in this incident.

CONTRACT TURNED DOWN

Corbeil, Ont., Feb. 27 (CP) — The Dionne quintuplets will not accept a $500-an-hour contract offered them as models by a New York film, theih father, Olivia Dionne, announced Thursday. He did not identify the firm.

"The offer has been rejected," said Mr. Dionne. "They are far too young for that kind of thing. Such a contract would undoubtedly interfere with their schooling, which is the prime consideration."

Meet Tuesday To Air Charges About Gambling

Detroit, Feb. 27. (AP)—The National Hockey League's probe of reported gambling within its ranks waited today while Michigan authorities attempted to tie together the numerous angles of an underworld inquiry it started.

Governor Kim Sigler asked N.H.L. President Clarence Campbell to attend a meeting in Lansing next Tuesday, when reports that two players placed bets on league games will be aired further.

Present also at the session will be Detroit Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy, whose investigation into the activities of James Tamer, paroled convict, touched off the hockey flurry.

Toy said he had received reports two unnamed N.H.L. players—one a member of Boston Bruins and the other of New York Rangers—placed bets through Tamer, who now is back is prison and held incommunicado. All members of both teams have denied making bets.

Toy told Sigler that by Tuesday he would try to pick up "all the loose ends" in the picture and give his report to the governor, Campbell and other State officials.

Reports of a hockey scandal have led within the last few days to a broad underworld inquiry taking in renewed probing of the still unsolved murder of State Senator Warren G. Hooper, a State grand jury "informer", three years ago.

A new lease on life ...

At one time the Prong-horned Antelope ranged from Alberta to Mexico in numbers comparable with those of the Bison. But over-hunting threatened the survival of the "Prong Horns" until vast sanctuaries were established for their protection in Alberta and Manitoba. In these refuges their numbers increased and they have since spread into Saskatchewan—a tribute to far-sighted conservation authorities, showing how effective conservational measures can be in preserving a species from extinction. To promote public understanding of the need for conservation, interesting authoritative literature and full-colour reprints of our wildlife pictures, without advertising, are available free by writing to The Carling Conservation Club, Waterloo, Ontario.

On the other hand, protection was not established in time to save the Cuban Tricolour Macaw from fading into oblivion. It was hunted mainly for food and became extinct around 1864.

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 20

Velma's exclamation must have somehow touched his hazy senses because his attention was momentarily arrested. He paused uncertainly and stared across the room at her, as if trying desperately to recognize her.

Suddenly, his face lighted, he grinned drunkenly, waved an unsteady hand at her, then weaved with his companion toward the black marble bar.

Velma swayed dizzily, then fell in a dead faint in Flanders' arms.

Velma came to herself on a lounge in the ladies' dressing room. She could not see clearly the pink velvet carpet, the deep rose draperies hugging the long wide windows, the lavishly furnished cluster of rooms designated for women of fashion, of culture, perhaps. But she felt bathed in the tranquil atmosphere simulated by the amber-shaded electroliers. In the old days, she had often rested here between dances.

Millie was leaning over her now, crying prettily into an ornate yellow chiffon handerchief, effective against the dull black of her gown. Marion Sharp, whose father was in oil, and noble about her allowance, was stroking Velma's forehead with diamond-loaded fingers. "You poor precious," she drawled. "Evidently, Flanders muffed it."

Virginia Dewey, on the fringe of the group of girls, winced perceptibly. She looked more awkward than ever now, standing erect in her green taffeta dinner gown, so unbecoming to her coloring. Suddenly, she swung tautly around and disappeared from the room.

Margery Mallord, daughter of a famous banker, exchanged swift glances with Agnes Sonnington, heiress of her grandfather's enormous real estate holdings. Mary Unger, who since the depression couldn't have remained in this crowd if Virginia hadn't taken her up, stood poised uncertainly, then dashed after her benefactress.

Agnes looked after her and laughed lightly. "The factions seem to be splitting," she said in an aside to Margery. "It may be interesting to watch."

"Hardly," answered Margery. "What could come between Flanders and the Dewey millions?"

"Calloused old thing! Ever hear about—love?"

Margery lighted a fresh cigarette from the one she had been smoking, inhaled, blew out a cloud of smoke. "Oh—that," she said, languidly.

Velma's collapse had had a subduing effect upon Millie's merry party. Their interest in the gay Club Bertrand had suddenly waned, and, one by one, couples had drifted away, until there were only Joe Ramble and Gordon Peel left to escort Velma and Millie to the Roberts home. Flanders and Virginia not being visible again that night, supposedly were driving toward the Dewey mansion absorbed in each other, as any perfectly engaged couple should be.

Gordon Pell, with Millie, Velma and Joe Ramble in Gordon's car, drove swiftly along the city's slippery streets. Velma realized in a vague way that he was ignoring all the traffic laws, but she was too numb with hopelessness to worry about life or limb. Her first thought upon coming to her senses in the club dressing room, had been that she had now seen Tom Orville at his worst. She wished the sight might have been spared her, yet it was fortunate to discover in time what sort of man she had allowed herself to love. But how cleverly he had fooled her, fooled every one in Carryville, including that fine employer of his, Mr. Milligen!

Seeing Tom weaving about with that sorry looking blonde had something to her. Something within her seemed to have opened and shut irrevokably. It had been an effort to lift her brown satin sandals into Gordon's low-slung sedan. She sat in the front seat beside him, her pale strained face gazing vacantly from out the collar of her ermine evening cape at the strange placidity of the downtown section.

It was three o'clock in the morning and the roaring of the big city had settled into a brief slumber, seemingly to gather strength to roar the more during daylight hours. For the time being, it was more like a small town, with its cars, mostly taxis, rushing heedlessly through the cold misty air and its sidewalks deserted, for the most part, by any but inebriated pedestrians.

The quartette in the sedan was a sleepy one. Frequently, one of them openly yawned. Now and then some one asked Velma a question, trying to draw her into their frankly wilted attempts at repartee.

They received only monosyllabic replies from her. Three o'clock in the morning was no hour to except brilliance from this herence from any one. It positively was not forthcoming from this remnant of the early evening's high-strung, self-sufficient members of the city's smart younger set.

Millie and Donna assisted Velma to get between the soft silk sheets of her bed, tucked her in, switched off the light, and tiptoed away. Velma fell into a long restless sleep, dreaming over and over again that she and Tom were climbing a steep mountainside and could never reach the top. It was perilous, it was hopeless; there were terrifying seconds when she could not find her breath.

For the next few days, Velma was surrounded by enough social excitement to mitigate any ordinary grief. She sat in opera boxes, attended premieres of plays and musical shows, dined and danced in all the important night clubs and country clubs in or adjacent to Chicago. Every day she went dutifully to art exhibits with older women, she sailed, with Millie and her crowd, in and out of several teas and cocktail parties during the same afternoon, dropped into a breakfast or luncheon some one was giving for some one. Practically, the only time she and Millie spent in the Roberts home was when they were in a shower, or dressing, or sleeping.

Picton

Year Successful For Golf And Country Club

Picton (Special)—Picton Golf and Country Club annual meeting yesterday heard reports that revealed a very successful season in 1947. There was increased membership as well as increased finances. Paid members totalled 140 with many social members and guests. President Dr. C. S. Slack referred to the generosity of H. J. McFarland who had paved the road leading to the club house, without charge, and in recognition of this support he had been made a life member of the club. The president stated that some 200 cadets attending the Royal Canadian School of Artillery, A. A., here would be using the course this year.

A brief memorial service was held for Dr. S. H. Roblin and George Wallace who had died during the year. Reports of various committees were presented by Ernest Wright, William Brown E. L. Bronskill and William Brown.

The Dr. Gerald Allison Trophy, won by Wilfred Minaker, was presented by John Arnaud.

Mayor L. Nethery referred to the club as an asset to the town and district. It is used by many of the tourists visiting here.

Directors elected were: D. P. Pyke, E. L. Bronskill, Ernest Wright, William Brown, Dr. Gordon Caughey, H. B. Tully. Hon. James deC. Hepburn, M. P. P., was elected honorary president and John Arnaud, auditor.

Dates Awarded

At the meeting of the American Power Boat Association in Toronto last weekend, dates for regattas in Ontario were set. Picton was granted the Civic Holiday date of August 2nd. Recognizing the leadership established by Prince Edward Yacht Club, and the perfect naturally - protected course that exists here, members of the Association agreed that Picton should receive first choice of dates. Fred VanDusen of the Picton Club was re-elected a director of Zone 13 of the A. P. B. A. Dayton Wark also attended the meeting as a representative of the local club. The delegates report that there was a record attendance with a prospect of even larger regattas this year.

POLICE AND PICKETS BATTLE IN BLINDING SNOWSTORM

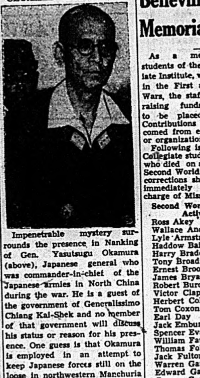
CLOAKED IN MYSTERY



Impenetrable mystery surrounds the presence in Nanking of Gen. Yasutsugu Okamura (above), Japanese general who was commander-in-chief of the Japanese armies in North China during the war. He is a guest of the government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and no member of that government will discuss his status or reason for his presence. One guess is that Okamura is employed in an attempt to keep Japanese forces still on the loose in northwestern Manchuria and in Kirin province from going over to the Communists. It is estimated that about 225,000 troops of the former Jap garrison in Manchuria remain unaccounted for. Chinese Communists say that Okamura is retained by the National government as a military adviser.

Movie is Put On Television

Philadelphia, Feb. 27 —(AP) Now the moon is on television.

Dr. Roy Marshall, director of the Franklin Institute, reports a television camera was wheeled up to the eye of a telescope focused on the moon last night and that the Lunar body was "on the air for nearly a minute."

"This is the first time that astronomy has been put on television," Dr. Marshall said.

"It opens up many possibilities. An astronomer may soon be able to sit in his office or home and see the sky and planets through television though the telescope may be several thousand miles away."

HEAVY DAMAGES AWARDED

Chicago, Feb. 27 —(AP)— A jury last night awarded damages of $1,236,000 to a former automobile dealer who had sued the General Motors Corporation under the anti-trust laws. The dealer, Fred Emich of Chicago, charged the corporation cancelled his dealership because he refused to use a General Motors automobile financing service. General Motors maintained Emich's dealership was revoked because of bad business practices, including "using his dealership as a front for his own finance company."

$5 Monthly Boost In Old Age Pensions For Saskatchewan

By The Canadian Press

A $5 boost in monthly old age pension cheques and wider benefits under the province's compulsory automobile insurance plan were announced last night in the budget speech in the Saskatchewan Legislature.

The new pension rate is $35 a month. The insurance change gives "standard public liability coverage of $5,000 for one person of $10,000 for any accident and property damage of $1,000" to all motorists with no change in the annual rates of $1 for operators and from $4.50 to $6 for owners.

No new taxes were announced and for the first time the budget included in its revenue estimate anticipated profits of $600,000 from the 15 government enterprises started since the C.C.F. came to power in 1944.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police raids in Edmonton yesterday to obtain documents of the Alberta Chapter of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire were the subject of a question by Harper Prowse, Liberal leader in the Alberta house. He said the R.C.M.P. seized documents in raids on the home of Mrs. Eleanor Griffith of Edmonton, secretary of the I.O.D.E. Alberta Chapter, and on the organizations' headquarters and added:

"I would like to know how long this government proposes to continue the present practice of abusing the ordinary processes of law for the purpose of intimidating and prosecuting those who criticize. . . ."

Speaker Peter Dawson intervened to say Mr. Prowse could put his question on the order paper. Three Ontario residents have been committed for trial in Alberta Supreme Court on charges of conspiracy to publish a defamatory libel, laid in connection with a magazine article, based on a report prepared for the I. O. D. E., on Alberta child welfare administration.

Denies Split in Coalition.

Errick F. Willis, Manitoba Public Works Minister and Progressive Conservative leader, denied that there was either sign or danger of a split in the government coalition group in the Manitoba Legislature. It was suggested earlier this week that a split might come on the issue of Provincial-municipal relations unless the government agreed to share certain revenues with the province.

Quebec's Legislative Assembly approved a government bill authorizing companies in the province to grant housing loans, with interest charges limited to four per cent, to their employees.

The legislative council, provincial upper house, earlier in the day debated a government bill for expenditure of $300,000 over a five-year period for conservation of fish and game, whose value to Quebec was estimated at $40,000,000 a year. Final action on the bill was postponed until next week.

During Prince Edward Island throne speech debate, Premier Walter Jones expressed confidence the province would receive federal aid similar to that now sought by Premiers of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The two other Maritime Premiers had conferred recently with federal cabinet members regarding reclamation of marshlands.

Finnish President Sounds Out House On Stalin's Note

Request for Defence Treaty Sent by Russia on Monday

Helsinki, Feb. 28 (AP)—Reliable sources said today President Juho K. Paasikivi has sounded out parliamentary groups on Prime Minister Stalin's proposal for a Soviet-Finnish treaty of mutual defence.

They said he has asked these groups to tell him their attitude toward the proposed agreement by Tuesday.

Political circles in Helsinki were reported already discussing the procedure of negotiations suggested by Stalin in his diplomatic note to the president.

Sources close to the government said yesterday Stalin sent his note Monday.

They said he asked that the Finnish government take immediate steps to open negotiations toward a treaty either in Moscow or Helsinki.

A defence treaty with Finland would give Russia a chain of such pacts with neighbors from the Black Sea on the south to far north of the Baltic.

The Soviet note to Finland is expected to be placed before parliament Monday or later as a question concerning a foreign power.

Under parliamentary procedure such a question must be dealt with in three hearings by parliament unless the Chamber, by a five-sixth majority, votes it to be urgent.

Even if the note reaches parliament Monday, any final decision could not be expected before Wednesday or Thursday.

No Party Has Majority

Parliament has 200 seats and no one party has a majority. The largest delegation 51 seats, is that of the Popular Democrats, a bloc made up of the Communist and Socialist Unity Parties.

The cabinet consists of three Communists, three Socialists Unity men, five Social Democrats, five Agrarians, one minister from the Swedish People's Party and one non-Party member. The Premier, Mauno Pekkala, belongs the the Socialist Unity Party.

The Communist Party claims some 45,000 members among Finland's more than 3,800,000 people.

The main concern expressed by political observers here today was:

Is Stalin's request directed exclusively by a wish to safeguard Soviet territory, especially Leningrad, or is there something more behind it.

Rev. A. McLauchlin Dies Suddenly After Long Illness

The Rev. Andrew McLauchlin, B.A., B.D., Statician for the United Church in Canada, and late residence, 161 George Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital Friday evening, Feb. 27. He was in failing health for the past eight years, but his death occurred suddenly.

Born in Liverpool, England, the late Mr. McLauchlin was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McLauchlin. For many years he resided in Canada and received his advanced education here. He attended Albert College and upon graduation he entered Victoria College from which he graduated in 1915, being the gold medalist in Oriental languages. Having completed his studies in theology he was ordained to the Methodist Church ministry the same year.

As a minister Andrew McLauchlin successfully served in charges at Bancroft, Pontypool, Keene, Grafton and Almonte.

Upon retirement he took up residence in Toronto. His days of service, however, were not to end and he was induced to accept the position of Statistician for the United Church of Canada and church correspondent to The Canadian Press. He was eminently qualified for these positions and discharged his duties in a highly efficient manner. For the past five years he made his home in this city.

The Rev. Andrew McLauchlin possessed many fine traits of character and by his genial disposition and pleasing manner he attracted and held many close friendships. He was highly esteemed by the leaders in the church and by his fellow ministers. His death has caused much regret and he will be much missed by all who were closely associated with him.

Andrew McLauchlin was a former member of the Masonic Order. His chief hobby was rare stamps and he was an active member of the Philatelic Society. He was the owner of an outstanding collection and specialized in Canadian stamps.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Laura May Down; two sons, Rev. Robert McLauchlin, B.A., Associate Minister of the First United Church, Hamilton, and William A. McLauchlin, now attending Victoria College, Toronto; one daughter, Mrs. Don V. Rose, Toronto; two brothers, Richard McLauchlin, Detroit, Mich., and John McLauchlin, Hamilton; two sister, Mrs. Jack Irish, Toronto, and Mrs. Samuel Graham, Toronto.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

Show Dog Again Rescuer, Saves Owners in Fire

Portland, Ore., Feb. 28 —(AP) —Thumper, small Chow dog which last November led mountain rescuers to his lost mistress, was credited with saving his owners from death by fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike La Tosh said they were awakened early yesterday by Thumper scratching on their bedroom door. They opened it and found flames spreading through their apartment.

They escaped unhurt.

La Tosh said that last November he and Mrs. La Tosh became separated on Mount Hood when a sudden snow storm came up. After hours of fruitless searching, he and others followed the dog to where Mrs. La Tosh had halted, exhausted.

Moslem Reported Thrown into Den Of Lions in Morocco Saved by Police

New York, Feb. 28 (CP)—The New York Times in a Paris dispatch today told of an incident which might have been drawn from the Arabian Nights involving a Moslem, a den of lions and Franco-Moroccan relations.

A Moslem employee of the French residency in Morocco who "had incurred the displeasure of the Sultan of Morocco" was thrown into the Sultan's lions' den, the report said, quoting "official sources" in Paris.

"This incident," the Times story added, "....has complicated the already strained relations between the Sultan and the resident general, Pierre-Alphonse Juin.

"The unfortunate employee was snatched, almost literally, from a lion's jaws by French police and will go on trial before a French court within the next few days on charges of having circulated a pamphlet containing scurrilous matter about the Sultan and members of his family."

The dispatch said that the pamphlets first appeared in December and members of the Sultan's household suspected they had originated in the offices of the French Resident General, and involved Si Nohammed Farfara, 47, a secretary-translator there.

"When Mr. Farfara left the residence one evening he was arrested by several members of the Sultan's bodyguard and was soon on his way to the lions' den near the Sultan's palace," the dispatch continued. "Word that an employee of the Resident General was about to undergo a form of summary punishment now rare reached the residency and police were dispatched to rescue the terrified translator, whose piercing yells were beginning to attract crowds."

Persons associated with the residency have branded as "ridiculous" the charges made by the Sultan's sympathizers who claimed that the residency had known about the pamphlet before it was circulated.

WHEAT POLICIES DRAW CRITICISM IN PARLIAMENT

Government Will Not Disclose Wheat Price

Ottawa, Feb. 28 — (CP)—The government's wheat policies drew sharp opposition criticism in the Commons yesterday after Trade Minister Howe announced that the proposed increase in the initial wheat payment will not be made known until legislation now on the order paper becomes law.

The opposition opened their attack by criticizing the government for refusing to disclose amount of the increase planned for western farmers. Terming this "political trickery," the members said the legislation was a typical "pre-election" measure. They went further and criticized some phases of the long-term wheat agreement with the United Kingdom and government plans for the future handling of grains.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, in reply, said the new bill would increase the initial wheat payment from $1.35 to at least $1.55 a bushel. He said the government planned to see that the Canadian farmer made as much under Canadian wheat policies as other farmers did under any other system.

Mr. Howe, moving a resolution to a bill amending the Canadian Wheat Board Act, made these main points.

1. The government is taking the power, now held by parliament, to make periodic increases in the initial wheat payment.

2. The government, while taking power to place the domestic marketing of barley and oats under the Wheat Board, will not use this authority — because of constitutional barriers — until the prairie provinces have passed complementary legislation.

3. The new legislation, in giving the Wheat Board control over wheat products as well as wheat, will strengthen control over the basic wheat situation. The board now has control over the movement of wheat products across provincial boundaries.

No Libel Verdict Returned by Jury

Cornwall, Feb. 28 (CP) — A verdict of no libel was returned yesterday by an Ontario Supreme Court jury in an action brought against Standard-Freeholder Limited by Mrs. Oswald Legault of Cornwall.

The case arose from a news story published by the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder in April 1946.

The story said Mrs. Legault spent a night in jail. Actually she was released shortly after she was locked up, on payment of court costs.

Costs of the action were assessed against the plaintiff.

In this charge to the jury, Mr. Justice J. Keiller Mackay said the article was a justifiable report of a judicial proceeding. He declared there was "not one iota of malice intended."

METERS COLECT $83,000

Hamilton, Feb. 28 — (CP) — Parking meters pay off here. Civic officials estimate that the meters will take in $83,000 this year and that in 1949, with additional devices installed, collections may reach $100,000.

Answer to Communism Economic and Social Security Says Martin

Quebec, Feb. 28 —(CP)— Canada's answer to Communism is economic and social security providing a level of life that Communism cannot match, Health Minister Martin said today.

He said in an address prepared for delivery in French at a meeting of the Quebec Reform Club that "these are decisive years for democracy."

"As world citizens, we cannot escape the fate of our generation. In the parliament of the world, the political leadership of mankind has long been debated and in many countries will soon be put to the vote . . . Soon we shall know either this century will be re-dedicated to democracy or whether, under Communism, the lights will go out all over the world."

Mr. Martin said the measure of Canadian Liberalism in economic and social security "is its record of achievement." The Dominion's "three outstanding federal measures" in this field were the old-age pension, unemployment insurance and family allowance, all put into operation by Liberal governments.

In family allowances and old-age pensions alone, total federal payments to Quebec province now exceeded $324,000,000.

Not all Canadians were convinced of the validity of government action for social security, however. Some still put forth "19th-century ideas in 20th-century language."

Mr. Martin emphasized that Canadians' needs can be met only by "concerted and co-operative action by all levels of government — local, provincial and federal — with the valuable aid of hundreds of voluntary agencies."

Coup in Czechoslovakia May be Act Which Will Prevent War Says Osusky

(Editor's Note: Dr. Stefan Osusky, who wrote the following comment on the Czechoslovakian crisis, was a close collaborator of Thomas Masaryk in establishing the Czechoslovak Republic in 1918. He says he is the only intimate colleague of the republic's first president "now outside the Iron Curtain". He represented his country in London in 1918 and later for 20 years, was minister to France. During the Second World War, Dr. Osusky was minister of State in the Czechoslovakian government-in-exile. He now teaches European history and culture at Colgate University, Hamilton, N.Y.)

(Written for The Associated Press by Dr. Stefan Osusky.)

Tragic though it is for the Czechoslovak people, the Communist coup climaxed by Dr. Eduard Benes' decision to sanction and collaborate with the newly-formed Communistic government of Klement Gottwald may well be the act which prevents a third World War.

The tragedy of Czechoslovakia today is the final proof that the Soviet Union is seeking something more than her own national security and friendly governments around her.

As a result, I believe this tragedy will bring the western European nations and the United States into closer co-operation and thus frustrate Soviet Russia and the Communist plans to dominate Europe.

Therein lies the only salvation for Czechoslovakia, Europe and the peace.

As far as the decision of Dr. Benes to take the oath of the Communist cabinet is concerned, I feel it was as much a disaster for the Czechoslovak people as the act of force accomplished by Klement Gottwald.

Dr. Benes, it must be remembered, was the symbol of liberty of which Czechoslovakia was born. His capitulation will tend to undermine all resistance of the Czechoslovak people to Communist dictatorship for the present.

Only the protests if the United States, Great Britain and France will convince them that they are not abandoned.

Although I decry Dr. Benes' decision to approve the new government and take its oath, I believe that Russia will be unable to maintain control over Czechoslovakia for more than a year or two.

Russia is weaker than the world knows.

Cost of Living Due for Boost Says Bureau

Ottawa, Feb. 28 (CP)—A new jump in the cost of living can be expected as a result of recent boost in the prices of meat, fuel oil and gasoline, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today.

In the January issue of its Canadian Statistical Review, D.B.S. reviews the general economic conditions of the month, featured by "a possible reversal of the upward trend in prices, a rise in interest rates, a forecast continuation of the boom in investment expenditures and a continued high level of activity though with some rise in unemployment."

"At the start of the year," the publication continues, "the announcement of higher prices on the British contracts for the purchase of bacon, beef, eggs and cheese was followed by sharp rises in meat prices to the Canadian consumers.

"At about the same time higher prices for fuel oil and gasoline were announced by a number of major oil companies.

"These recent advances can be expected to cause some further rise in the cost-of-living index which, by Jan. 1, 1948, had already reached 148.3, about 17 per cent higher than its level a year earlier.

"Rising prices were also evident at the wholesale level and the index of industrial materials advanced almost two per cent during January."

D.B.S. cited as another important January development the rise in the cost of long-term investment funds.

"This rise came after a year during which capital expenditures reached a record level with a further increase forecast for 1948 . . . taking into consideration the higher prices now prevailing, this would indicate that the real volume of investment expenditures will continue at about the same level."

Drew Outlines Growth Provincial Highway System

Toronto, Feb. 28 (CP) — Premier Drew last night outlined growth of the Provincial highway system in a recorded address prepared for delivery over Ontario radio stations and said the development began "when the Queen's Rangers drove Yonge Street through the bush from Muddy York to Lake Simcoe as a military road to provide an inland route to the fur country."

The Premier said the program reached a peak with the recent opening of the "spectacular new highway from Vermilion Lake to Red Lake, which pushed our northern highway frontier back more than 100 miles in less than a year."

The Premier continued: "In the years between those two events, this province spent almost $900,000,000 to build and maintain more than 70,000 mile of roads."

Premier Drew said the government recognized that the best way to expand the system was to allow local control of roads at the county and township level.

Construction was being pressed forward at a rate never attempted in the past.

"It is our policy to do this on a pay-as-you-go basis. In this as in many other features on road-building, we have learned many valuable lessons from experience. We are applying them, in the light of up-to-date scientific knowledge to the problems of the present and at the same time looking forward with ever-increasing confidence to the great developments of the future.

"Just as an example of the changes in the problems tackled by this department, we are at present studying the possibility of constructing flight strips at highway intersections on the outskirts of towns and cities which have no landing fields for aircraft.'

FORMER MINISTER CZECHOSLOVAKIA FOUND INJURED

Note Indicates Drtina Tried to Kill Self

Prague, Feb. 28. (AP)—A former Czech Minister of Justice, Dr. Prokop Drtina, was found severely injured in front of his Prague villa today, police announced.

They said a letter was found which indicated Dr. Drtina had tried to kill himself by jumping from a window. He is in a hospital with head injuries, but will live if further complications do not set in, the official announcement said.

Dr. Drtina was one of three Cabinet ministers who were intended victims of intercepted bombs last September. He is a close friend of President Eduard Benes.

Drtina blamed the Communists for the bomb plot against himself and his two colleagues and had several members of the party arrested in an investigation of the incident. He was one of the Cabinet members whose resignation preceded the Communist coup this week.

And while Communist Premier Klement Gottwald today promised "a complete change" for Czechoslovakia, V. A. Zorin, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister and former ambassador to Prague, left this morning for Moscow after a 10-day visit.

Members of the government, including Foreign Minister Masaryk, saw him off at the airport.

Gottwald made his statement at the opening of a farmers' and peasants' rally here.

"Merely changing a few people in the government is not enough," he declared. "New stage settings are not enough. We will become merciless in getting rid of agents of domestic and foreign reaction."

The farmers' rally was arranged as a companion piece to a Trades Union assembly last Sunday. Some observers believed that assembly gave the Premier the last push he needed toward getting his party into power.

The Labor group, headed by Antoin Zapotocky, stood behind Gottwald and backed him up with a token strike and the threat of a general strike.

Prague went all out for the visiting rural Czechs. For the first time in the city's history the film houses stayed open all-night.

FOUR ARE HELD

Toronto, Feb. 28—(CP)—Three men and a woman were arrested and charged with breaking into a doctor's house last night and stealing several thousand dollars worth of jewelry, clothing and household articles. The four gave their names as Angelo Salumei, 44; Violet Rispoli, 33; James and Sam Rispoli, brothers of the woman accused.

Unclaimed or Forgotten Balances, Dividends Reach Nearly $1,500,000

Ottawa, Feb. 28 (CP)—A cool $1,500,000—not in one big beautiful pile, mind you, but in the fact-packed ledgers of banks from coast-to-coast—is just sitting there waiting for people to come along and claim it.

Canada's banks told the same old wonderful-but-almost-unbelievable story of unclaimed balances, dividends, certified cheques drafts and bills of exchange.

Tabled in the Commons yesterday were the annual reports of 12 Canadian banks conforming routinely to the requirements of subsection 1-4 of section 117 of the Bank Act.

They told—on a day a lot of us got brave little income-tax return forms—that supposedly better-heeled persons have apparently forgotten the tidy sum of $1,431,477.25.

Here's a breakdown on that big heap of bucks you'd just love to let trickle through your fingers:

The unclaimed sums range from 17 cents to $24,623.12. The address of the woman in whose name that big amount is listed is "unknown." Many of the thousands of dormant amounts run into four figures but by far the great majority are the savings of little people—$10.27 and $39.03 and $21.94.

Lots of the blunt entries hint at lonely, frugal lives—the unclaimed bank balance of $83.47, for instance, in the name of a deceased woman whose last address was the House of Providence, Kingston.

There's a $14,025 balance on the books at Cobalt for Wasylina Hurka, whose address is "Russia" and who has not been heard of since 1939.

In Schumacher, Ont., they're waiting for one Mike Stanich to collect four $1,000 bank drafts he bought in 1940, making himself the payee. They're just four of 78 unpaid drafts and money orders in the Schumacher branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Names of almost every nationality and address in many countries appear in the long bank lists. Many seem to be tied closely to wartime service and 'quick drafts."

Brothers Stagger Ashore After Trek On Icy Wastes

Forced to Take to Ice After Motor Conks Out

Point Traverse (Special)—Staking their lives in a midnight gamble with death, Raymond and Melbourne MacIntosh, commercial fishermen brothers of this southern Prince Edward County fishing colony, won the "toss" and staggered ashore at seven o'clock this morning after an all-night ordeal on the icy wastes of Lake Ontario, five miles off shore.

The two fishermen were returning from their second net-setting trip of the day after blasting a passage through the ice-choked entrance to the harbor here, when the motor in their small fishing boat went dead and they were left at the mercy of storm and icy water.

The brothers, their eighteen-foot fishing boat, partially crushed by surrounding ice floes, stepped out of the power-less near-sinking vessel on solid ice in a blinding blizzard and the Stygian darkness of a Winter night, after being carried out to sea by moving ice shortly after seven o'clock last night.

They had no sense of direction. Snow, driven by a gale-like wind, whipped their faces and made visibility practically impossible. In one direction lay the shore and safety. In the other, the open water of Lake Ontario, and death.

Travelled Five Miles

They made up their minds. Turning in what they thought was the proper directions, they plowed through drifting snow, every step a hazard. They fought the storm expecting disaster every minute. Hours later as dawn lightened the eastern skies, they saw the lights of shore. They had travelled five miles in their nocturnal trek for life. A few minutes later they were safe in the home of Colin Hudgin, farmer, residing at the head of South Bay.

The brothers started out in the morning to set their nets in the open waters of the lake some three miles off shore here. Returning they decided to set more nets, and started out in the late afternoon for the fishing grounds. On the morning run, they had dynamited a passage through solid ice fields to open water.

At dusk, their job finished, they started for home when the engine conked out. The boat, a small eighteen-foot fishing skiff, drifted in the water as the men strove frantically to effect repairs. Dusk was falling, and home was three miles away.

Then disaster struck. The wind suddenly veered to an offshore direction. Snow began to fall and within a short time, driven by the wind reached blizzard proportions.

Atomic-Sola Suit For Twentieth Century

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP) — A department store let out its imagination today and came up with an "atomic-sola suit" for the 21st century male.

The suit does away with collars, neckties, buttons, shoelaces lapels and pockets. It is made of wrinkleproof, water - repellent plastic and can be cleaned with a damp cloth.

In lieu of pockets, the wearer sports a wrist band containing a watch cigaret lighter, and — the store predicts — an electronic communications set that can putthe owner in touch with any point in the world.

Member Claims Government Using Too Much Water

Winnipeg Feb. 28 (CP) — John McDowell (PC-Iberville) spoke his mind in the Manitoba legislature last night about the permit system for purchase of liquor.

"I don't think any government in a free country should have the right to sell any commodity, whiskey or anything else, under a permit system," argued Mr. McDowell. "I should have the right to go into a store like my forefathers did and buy whiskey when I want it. This business of permits is the beginnings of the police state."

Mr. McDowell also had another gripe.

"If I, as a farmer, put as much water in the milk I sell as the government does into its whiskey I would go to the jug for 90 days," he complained.

Tenants Honor Young Priest

Brookline, Mass., Feb. 28 (AP) —Everybody in the 40-family apartment house where Patrick J. Kelly lives — and is superintendent — is happy because Joseph Jr., will be ordained to the priesthood in May.

Invitations went to all other 39 families to the prospective priest's first mass and for the reception to follow. Somebody started a fund which grew to $300 as a gift to the young seminary student — to buy vestments and other religious articles which a young priest needs.

A reporter asked Kelly today if it was correct that all the other tenants were Jewish. Kelly stopped to think for a moment and replied.

"Golly, I guess they are."

MRS. A. C. COLE WINS $100 PRIZE

For the second time within recent months a Belleville party has been fortunate in winning an I.D.A. Midget Quiz contest prize.

Mrs. A. C. Cole, 208 George Street, was successful in winning the Quiz prize and because she had a coupon attached, the prize was a $100 cheque.

The I.D.A. purchase was made at Doyle's Drug Store and recently Mr. Doyle had the pleasure of presenting the cheque to Mrs. Cole and of congratulating her on her good luck.

BELLEVILLE BAND TO GIVE BROADCAST

Lovers of band music in the city and district on Monday evening will be privileged to sit in the comfort of their homes and hear a concert to be broadcast by the Belleville Municipal Band. The program will be broadcast by Station CJBQ Monday evening from 9:30 until 10:00 o'clock.

This is the second week which the local band will have been heard over the air. Last Monday evening the band played a concert which was broadcast. The broadcasts are made directly from the band rehearsal room on Front Street.

TRENT ROAD HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE

Damage amounting to approximately $200 resulted shortly after eight o'clock Saturday morning when overheated furnace pipes at the home of R. N. Gilbert, Trent Road, opposite the O.S.D. caused the partition to catch fire.

City firemen answered the alarm and were successful in checking the flames as they ate up through an outside partition in the living room. The overheated pipes had set fire to the joist beneath the floor with result that the fire ate its way up through the partition.

SMALL MARKET

Attendance was slim on the local produce market Saturday as district farmers in many instances apparently did not care to face the heavy snow storm which started during the night.

The fowl offering on the market was almost negligible with prices being quoted from 40 to 48 cents the pound. Eggs held at previous quotations of 45 cents for first and 43 cents for mediums.

On the outside market there were only a few vendors. Apple vendors quoted Spys at $2.50 the hamper, Starks at $1.75, Pewaukees at $1.50 and McIntosh at $2.75 or 75 cents the peck.

Very few vegetables were offered. Carrots sold at 50 cents the basket and potatoes at $2.75 per bag.

GROCER CHARGED WITH VIOLATING EARLY CLOSING BY-LAW

Charged with violation of the early closing by-law which calls for grocery stores to close at seven o'clock in the evening, Ed. Kellaway, Bridge Street grocer, will appear in court on March 12th. The case came up Friday before Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city police court and at the request of counsel for the accused the case was laid over for two weeks.

CITIZENS SURPRISED BY UNEXPECTED STORM

Following a change of heart that saw the city and district bask in mild weather, with high temperatures causing snow to disappear at a rapid rate, the weatherman returned to the winter wars with a vengeance today.

More or less surprised citizens awakened this morning to find approximately six inches of snow blanketing the city and countryside with sullen greyish skies carrying threats of more to come.

Snow was still falling at press time. Reports from outlying districts stated that some drifting was in evidence. Weather forecasts perdict colder weather for the weekend.

Following up their weekly program of skiing parties, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will hold a mortar demonstration along the bay shore Sunday in the vicinity of the new Bakelite plant.

Parade is scheduled for 1:30 Sunday afternoon. The men are to be shown a film "Smoke of Battle" which demonstrates the various methods of using smoke on the battlefield. After the film the men and cadets of the Belleville Collegiate who are interested in the demonstration, will proceed to the area designated to hold a practice with the two-inch mortars. Carriers and trucks will be used for transportation.

Major J. M. Porritt, M.C., will be the Company Commander in charge, and will be assisted by Sgt. Major Angus B. Duffy. This demonstration is one of the planned exercises which the regiment is holding. They hope to get enough youths of senior high school age interested in the regiment to form a battalion composed entirely of younger lads.

Stirling

Past Noble Grands Laurel Rebekahs 211 Elect New Officers

The Past Noble Grands Club of Laurel Rebekah Lodge 211, Stirling, held the last meeting of the fiscal year on Tuesday afternoon in the lodge room. During the meeting Sec.-treasurer, Mrs. Duffin, presented a very encouraging report of the past year's activities. An election of officers resulted as follows:

Pres., Sister Edith Utman; Vice-pres., Sister Gladys Elliott; Sec.-treas., Sister Mildred Morrow; Pianist, Sister Annie Warren.

The retiring president, Sister Evelyn Bailey, thanked everyone for help and co-operation during her term of office, and wished the new officers every happiness and success in the days ahead.

It was decided to send $5.00 to the fund for the aid of European children.

A short program of readings and contests was enoyed, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Later, several other lodge members joined the club members for a pot luck supper, when covers were laid for twenty-seven.

The Club will hold the next meeting in March at the home of Mrs. F. McKee.

Edward Hosking Sidney, Loses Home by Fire

Believed to have been caused from a defective oil burner in the living room, the home of Mr. Ed. Hosking, 2nd concession Sidney township, was completely destroyed by fire shortly before midnight Friday.

Nothing was saved from the flames, even wearing apparel of the family being lost in the fire. Included in the family are Mr. Hosking, who works nights at the American Optical plant at Belleville, and two children, Kenneth and Nancy, and the housekeeper, Nita Cranston.

Only the daughter Nancy and the housekeeper were at home when the fire started, the blaze being first noticed by the housekeeper who had not yet gone to bed. She rushed to wake Nancy and take her from the burning dwelling and then went to a neighbor's to phone for the Belleville Fire Department which answered the alarm.

However, by the time firemen arrived at the scene two miles from the city, the old rambling dwelling was already beyond saving and efforts were turned to saving outbuildings. Water for the city pumper had to be drawn from Jones' Creek as the well was too close to the burning house. Sparks from the burning dwelling blew directly toward the barn owned by Bruce Christie but volunteer firemen made up from neighboring farmers extinguished the blaze.

Hosking, a veteran of the last war, had bought the home two years ago. He was at his job in Belleville when the fire took place, while his son Kenneth was also out for the evening.

Enos David Heads Men's Association Bridge St. Church

The first 1948 meeting of the B.S.U.C. Men's Association was held Friday evening in the church Sunday School rooms with approximately 80 members and guests present.

The President, J. Roy Grant presided. Special guests of the association were about a dozen members of the Trail Ranger organization of the church who sold shares in the Ontario Boys' Work Board 1948 program during the course of the evening to the members.

Mr. Howard Clarke, chairman of the nominating committee, brought in the following slate of officers for 1948 which was adopted unanimously.

President, Enos David; 1st Vice President, K. L. Reid; 2nd. Vice President, Morley Linscott; Secretary, Gerald B. Hyde; Treasurer, J. Bryson Leslie.

The members heard a most inspiring address by Dr. Walter T Brown, president of Victoria University and chairman of the Board of Overseas Missions of the United Church of Canada. The speaker was introduced by W. J. Morrison and appreciation expressed by R. D. P. Davidson.

Tickets were distributed to the members to sell for the evening of March 16th when the association is sponsoring the appearance in Belleville of Rev. Dr. W. G. Martin of Winnipeg who will give an illustrated lecture on "Australia—The Island Continent."

With Leo B. Riggs at the piano a singsong was conducted under the leadership of Harold McNish.

Family Escapes Burning Home In Night Attire

Mr. Sid Pringle, 4th Concession of Ameliasburg, and his wife and eight children narrowly escaped from their burning home early last evening when an exploding gas lantern started a flash fire which razed the house.

Neighbors say that the family had just gotten out of the house before the flames destroyed the structure. The younger children were forced to flee with nothing but scanty night attire. Mr. Pringle is said to have received minor burns on his hands.

With housing materials in such short supply, the family are in bad straits. They are being given temporary shelter at the home of Mr. Ed. Cannon, a neighbor.

Power Interruptions Reduced to 1 Hr. And 15 Mins., Afternoon Period Later

Made possible by co-operation in power saving on the part of commercial users and by householders during the past weeks, power interruptions during the coming week will be reduced to one hour and fifteen minutes, it was announced today by O. H. Scott, local public utilities manager.

Starting Monday morning power will be shut off at 7:10 in the morning until 7:55 and in the afternoon from 5:30 until 6:00 o'clock.

Change in the hours for the power interruption came as result of a special meeting held Friday afternoon when it was considered that the above hours for the power shut-offs would cause the least, inconvenience to all concerned.

As a measure to continue to conserve power it is expected that merchants will co-operate by not opening stores until ten in the morning.

"The local public utilities commission is pleased by the co-operation shown in voluntarily saving power and if savings continue to be made it is possible that power interruptions can be further reduced," stated Mr. Scott.

Coal Reserves in U.S. Can Supply Gas Demand for 1,500 Years

New York, Feb. 28—Enough gasoline and oil to meet the nation's total demand for 1,500 years can be manufactured from only a quarter of known coal reserves Dr. Homer Z. Martin of the Standard Oil Development Company's laboratories recently told the New York section of the American Chemical Society. This premium synthetic gasoline can ultimately compete in price with its refinery equivalent. The estimated, reserves of coal are so much greater than those of natural gas that the long-term development must be with coal.

A quarter of the proved reserves of natural gas, if applied to the manufacture of liquid fuel, would be exhausted within two decades. During this time it would furnish only 400,000 barrels a day of gasoline about 15 per cent of the current demand, in addition to small amounts of other fuels. On the other hand, an equal fraction of the coal resources would supply the entire need for all types of liquid fuel —fuel oil and Deisel oil as well as gasoline—for 1,500 years, though the cost would probably at first be somewhat higher than that of motor fuels derived from petroleum.

Two plants, each equipped to make 7,000 barrels of synthetic gasoline a day from natural gas, are now being completed in Texas and Kansas. The output of these will be of such high quality that it can be used for aviation fuel.

Heavy Snowfall Covers Most Of Southern Ontario

Toronto, Feb. 28 (CP) — Highways in many parts of Ontario were transformed into slushy bogs early today and telegraph communications disrupted as light rain soaked Friday night's sudden heavy snowfall.

Efforts of highway department crews to sand slippery patches of road were hampered by high winds. Temperatures in Southern Ontario were rising and weathermen predicted 40-degree readings which offered little danger that roads would become ice covered. At Ottawa however, and in more northerly areas such as Bancroft Huntsville, North Bay, Sudbury and Blind River temperatures hovered between 25 and 36 degrees and a three to six-inch snowfall was forecast for today.

The snowfall which left an estimated two-inches over Toronto was fairly widespread, extending north to North Bay, east to Killaloe and Trenton and west almost to White River.

Heavy wind-driven snow which took many Ontario centres by surprise was caused by the clash between a cold air current moving south from Northern Ontario and a body of warm air over the central United States.

Ice-coated telegraph wires snapped breaking off telegraph comunication between Toronto, Chatam, Galt, Owen Sound and Stratford.

Heavy snow continued to fall this morning in the North Bay district where highways in some sections were under four inches of drifting snow. Visibility was reduced to a matter of yards by wet snow, driven by 30-mile-an-hour winds accompanied by 45-mile-an-hour gusts. Temperatures ranged between eight and 20 degrees above zero.

After the singing of 'O Canada", the Secretary, Mrs. Campion, gave a brief financial report and the monthly dues were collected. Other business matters were discussed. The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Connor with Mrs. Lowery and Miss Brown as the program committee.

Mrs. Potts contributed three short readings for the program of the day. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Huntingford and Mrs. F. R. Wells. The meeting closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne".

The monthly meeting of St. Paul's W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. H. R. Pearce on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance. Instead of a program a working party was held.

FORMER MINISTER

Police and factory militia were to march this afternoon in the new government's first martial spectacle in Prague.

Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk was "not in" to callers this morning. Masaryk is a holdover from the old cabinet, like Gottwald, and son of Czechoslovakia's first president, the late Thomas G. Masaryk.

The Communist newspaper Rude Pravo said, however, he had been visited by M. S. Bodrov, Soviet charge d'affaires. It said Bodrov conveyed to him the thanks of the Russian government for the stand taken by Polish, Yugoslav and Czechoslovak foreign ministers in a recent conference here on Germany.

(The foreign ministers said any merger of the western zones of Germany would carry a danger of war. Their declaration referred to a London conference on western Germany arranged by the United States, Great Britain and France. This conference started Monday.)

President Benes installed the Communist-packed cabinet yesterday at his residence.

Benes Leaves Prague

He was reported to have told Communist Premier Klement Gottwald and the other ministers: "The decision to accept you was difficult personally to me." A close friend had quoted him as saying earlier in the week the new cabinet "could have only evil results."

Later yesterday Benes and his wife left for their country home.

The Communist-controlled government radio blared out the only available report of the swearing-in ceremony. It said Benes expressed the wish to his cabinet that "your way will be successful and happy," and that Gottwald promised a "constitutional, democratic and parliamentary" government.

Photographs of the ceremony showed the president glumly shaking hands with Gottwald. The latter was half-smiling.

The government radio kept giving announcements indicating the pattern for the future.

Zdenek Nejedly, new education minister, said: "Schools must be political, just as the army must be political.' He said new textbooks would be prepared.

Must Display Stalin

Rude Pravo, Communist newspaper, said school officials in northern Bohemia had been ordered to display pictures of Soviet Prime Minister Stalin in all schoolrooms.

The Czech telegraph agency last night distributed a foreign ministry statement attacking the American - British - French declaration. The foreign ministry statement said the declaration was "an interference in our internal affairs.

(The tri-power declaration issued Thursday, said the new government is a "disguised dictatorship.")

Bidault Says Czech Events Menace Europe

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP)—Foreign Minister Georges Bidault said the Communist seizure of Czechoslovakia menaces the liberty of the rest of Europe.

He told the National Assembly the events in Prague pushed Europe back to where it was when Adolf Hitler was climbing to power.

"An event of incalculable consequence has now rendered futile all the efforts made to liquidate Europe from an intense tyranny."

Except for the Extreme Left, the House applauded.

He urged all the French to forget their differences in order to withstand the new threat. Communists and non-Communists shouted insults at each other across the floor while the foreign minister spoke.

How many of these dollars have you?

Today a dollar may be harmful or helpful.

If it is spent in competition with many other dollars to buy goods that are scarce, it tends to drive prices up. So, if spent needlessly, it is a harmful dollar.

But if it is placed in life insurance for future needs, it does not compete in this way with other dollars. In fact, part of it is reinvested in farms, industries and construction, thus helping produce more goods which, in turn, will tend to bring prices down. So it is a helpful dollar.

How fortunate that in Canada each year there are over two hundred and fifty million of these helpful life insurance dollars working against higher prices!

So when you buy life insurance to protect the future for yourself and your family, you are also helping to stabilize living costs.

Parisian Youth Too Poor To Go Night-Clubbing

By IAN FRASER

Paris, (Reuters) — Crippling taxation, huge overhead expenses and above all an impoverished younger generation is threatening to produce a serious slump among the "boites de nuit," the famous Paris night clubs, known to visitors from all parts of the world.

Already there is talk of closing down—although the manager of any individual club will deny it—at a number of the 170 registered night clubs which, much more than the night clubs of London and other European cities, are the traditional places of revelry of rich and poor alike, Frenchman and foreigner, policeman and "spiv."

Some of the well-known places in world-famous Montmartre and the less well-known districts of Montparnasse already look dilapidated.

A recent tour of a number of the better-known "boites" showed that 90 per cent of the male clients were middle-aged men and that the age of all was well over 30. The young men who brought the "boites" their gaiety in happier times today have no money to spare for pleasures such as this.

"Young people have been coming less in recent months," the waiter behind the bar of the "Florence" said. "Sometimes we have the son of a regular customer or a young man with money from America or Belgium. But more often it is the older folk."

Foreigners, especially in the money-no-object clubs of the smart Champs Elysees district, were much in evidence. Americans, Swdees, all the hard-currency-country tourists are the best customers of night-club proprietors today.

At some of the less chic and more demi-monda in haunts, a prominent feature was the man in the flashy clothes and brightly-polished American car, known in London as the "spiv."

Clubs Only Half Full

Some of the "boites" visited were only half full and even those which had large crowds—mainly those with floor shows and scantily-clad dancing girls—were not doing a great trade in the one article which brings the proprietor his revenuedrinks, fo the Paris "boite" does not usually charge an entrance fee.

"This is not just the after-Christmas depression," one proprietor said. "The slump began after the November and December strikes. People are economizing because they lost earnings and are afraid they may lose more." The Parisian, uncertain of the future, prefers to sip champagne by the glass at $3 a round at the bar to sitting down at the table—which entails the obligation to buy champagne at $18 a bottle.

Night-club proprietors have to worry not only about existing taxes amounting to one per cent of the rent, six per cent of all sales after 12:30 a.m., 25 per cent of cabaret takings and 12 per cent of gross takings, but also about a new headache which the government is preparing for them in the shape of a quarterly night-club tax of about $800 as part of its anti-inflation program.

One proprietor said: "It costs me about $1,600 to dress my chorus of 10 girls, and nobody could say that the dresses took much material.

Nevertheless, there is a general impression among night-club owners that if they can get through this year there will be more money about in the future and taxation—especially emergency taxation—will be less burdensome.

Ohio Scientists Probe Mysteries of Human Nature

By KEN DAVIS

Yellow Springs, Ohio, —(AP)—A jittery mother can make her unborn child a nervous wreck, scientists at Fels Institute believe after exhaustive studies of Ohio mothers and fathers.

Dr. John I. Lacey, head of the Institute's psychophysiology division, explained it this way:

"When a prospective mother becomes nervous or upset, there is a change in the function of her endocrine glands and in the composition of her blood.

"Such changes are passed on to the fatal bloodstream and act in a stimulating or irritating manner on the brain and nervous system of the baby."

Human developement probably is charted more closely and at greater length at this comparatively unknown institute for the study of human beings than at any other place on earth.

Fels researchers begin studytheir subjects when they are yet unborn, perhfaps six months before that event. By the time their subjects are born, they have exhaustive records of their heart actions and movements through delicate instruments which simultaneously record the heart and nervous action of the mother.

These records are continued in first 18 years of their lives and will be extended intermittently in the years beyond. Probably nowhere else are human records kept so diligently, so completely and on the same person over such a long period.

"Longitudinal Method"

Samuel S. Fels, a Philadelphia soap manufacturer who wondered what made his friends tick, founded the institute 18 years ago. Dr. Lester W. Sontag directs its work, following the "longitudinal method" of keeping records over long periods on the same subjects, the type of experimention stipulated for the institute by its founder.

Most Fels scientists do not anticipate appreciable progress for a couple of decades, but already, in 18 years of research, they believe they can distinguish a few of thee blaze marks along the right path. They believe, for instance, slowly but surely they are penetrrating the mystery surrounding the tie-up between mind and body.

Through the most extensive and complicated series of physical measurements and records over attempted, they feel they have added still one more refinement in the age-old attempt to assay the relationship of physical make-up—the distribution of such tissues as fat, muscle and bone—to behavior and personality.

People are not what they seem from the outside, says Dr. Earle L. Reynolds, who heads the Institute's physical groth division.

"For example," he explains, "two girls may have exactly the same outward measurements and weight. One is athletic, energetic, fast-moving, aggressive; the other slower moving, not particularly energetic, perhaps of a retiring nature.

"X—ray examination of those girls might reveal entirely different interior distribution of fat, muscle and bone. Possibly the aggressive girl would have a greater proportion of muscle and less fat than the more timid girl."

Sunday Marks Children's Day Will be Observed by 26 Nations

Ottawa, Feb. 28—Chains of brotherhood will link the people of 26 nations tomorrow when Children's Day is observed throughout the world. This observance will mark a high point in the Canadian Appeal for Children, an appeal which seeks to collect $10 million to assist 400 million boys and girls in Europe and Asia whose lives have been ravaged by war.

"This is an opportunity to put the Golden Rule to work," A. B. MacDonald, national secretary of the Canadian Co-operative Union and official of the Appeal, said today. "It was our intention to urge all Canadians to contribute to the Canadian Appeal for Children the earnings they receive on this extra day which comes every four years. However, Feb. 29 comes on Sunday, a day of rest. But perhaps this is just as well. It will give us a chance to meditate and realize how fortunate we are. If we contrast our way of life with the lives of these children in other parts of the world, we can come to no other conclusion but that we must help. A sure way is to contribute to the Canadian Appeal for Children through donations made at your local bank."

Spring Month Comes

Bright and mild days of the past two weeks have brought pleasant change from the frigid spell of weather which ruled for more than a month with a zero touch during the nights for weeks at time. Here as in other parts of the continent the mild spell has generally reigned. Since mid-February a large amount of snow has melted, clearing streets and so weakening the ice in the river that the flood possibilities are seen as eliminated.

February is at the end of its way on Sunday, the twenty-ninth, the day which comes once in four years and in centuries whose figures are divided by four. That leap year day has projected the arrival of spring into an earlier date than usual, as it officially begins on Saturday March 20th at three minutes before noon.

Possibilities for the entry of March, which has the ability to perform in two capacities either as lion or lamb, might indicate a lamblike entry. If it should so enter then according to the adage the end of the first spring month may possibly be boisterous and rough. Mention of rough weather in connection with March recalls violent entries and violent departures of the third month in some other years. Rough weather also suggests the gales during the spring equinox. The American poet Bryant often refers to the wild stormy month as "a welcome month to me:"

"For thou, to northern lands, again
The glad and glorious sun dost bring,
And thou hast joined the gentle train
And wear'st the gentle name of spring."

In another poem Bryant points to the storms which often mark its entry and passage:

"The stormy March is come at last,
With wind and cloud and changing skies;
I hear the rushing of the blast,
That through the snowy valley flies."

But even the winds of March appeal to many as they did to Whittier:

"Up from the sea, the wild north wind is blowing
Under the sky's gray arch;
Smiling I watch the shaken elm boughs, knowing
It is the wind of March."

Nature Reserve Forest

One of the famous wooded areas of Britain which existed long before the Normans came will be preserved as a nature reserve for the people. This area, the beautiful woodland known as the New Forest, will become a permanent forest and nature reserve. That is the present plan. There is also a proposal of a special camp for gypsies who for centuries have made their home in this forest.

New Forest is a miraculous survival of pre-Norman Britain and has a history which is unique in Western Europe. As early as 1016, half a century before the coming of William the Conqueror, it was being administered for King Canute under the forest laws of that age.

The district is triangular in shape and lies in southwest Hampshire, nine miles southwest of Southampton, and bounded by the Avon, Solent, English Channel and Southampton Water. It measures fourteen miles by sixteen miles and has an extreme area of 14 square miles or 92,365 acres, of which however only 64,232 belongs to the Crown. The area appears to have been deeply wooded since the earliest times. It owes its name to the action of William the Conqueror for in 1079 he here made a "mickle deer-frith" and cleared away several hamlets. This afforestation, enforced by the harsh forest laws of the time was regarded as an act of the greatest cruelty; and the violent deaths of the two of his sons, Richard and William Rufus, one of whom was killed by a stag in the forest and the other shot by an arrow, were looked upon as special judgments against the Norman.

Deer were removed from the park ninety-seven years ago by act of Parliament, and in 1877 by another act, New Forest was placed under the management of the court of Verderers as a public pleasure ground.

Shipbuilding

British shipbuilding is looking for a revival of the greatest importance. The industry is heavily booked with orders and the total tonnage being built is near the high figure of two million gross tons.

The broad objective over a period of years is to restore the United Kingdom merchant shipping fleet from the present level of fourteen and a half million gross tons. The proportion of ships for export is about 33 percent of the total and of this about 35 percent is for hard currency countries. The question of whether it is better to build ships for immediate sale abroad or to build them for trading under the United Kingdom flag has been carefully examined and the conclusion has been reached that it is at present quite as advantageous to build ships for United Kingdom owners as for export, even where exports are to hard currency countries.

Thieves of Grain

Three "thieves of grain," rats, insects and fungi accounted for the consumption or destruction of about 33 million tons of the world's supply of bread grains and rice in 1947, according to the facts collected by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

It was recently stated that rats in the United States consumed or destroyed 200 million bushels of grain. In one area it was estimated that rats cost four dollars a head in the loss they caused to agriculture and the nation.

The latest view, that of the Food and Agriculture Committee of the UN, calls the loss "as incalcuable" in a day of shortage of foods and problems of distribution.

Tale for Tears

Lying athwart a maze of frequented routes and forming a zone of contact between the Slavic and Germanic peoples, Czechoslovakia is of vital strategic and political importance in the heart of Europe. To tell ourselves that Russia's sway there is not of momentous meaning is to delude ourselves into dangerous folly.

"Good King" Wenceslaus' monument, standing in the heart of Prague, has looked down through 400 years on scenes heartening and sad. It has never looked down on a scene much sadder than the spectacle of the Czech people, who have sacrificed unstintedly for liberty throughout their history, again with the yoke of thraldom.

Here, truly, a tale for tears. — Ottawa Journal.

Tourists' Value

Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, estimates that tourists from overseas brought Britain $64 million in foreign currency in 1974 — nearer $100 million if sea and air passages are included, says U. K. Information Office. This was a good result from the first post-war season. The director general of the Travel Association, Mr. J. G. Bridges, following his recent visit to Canada and the United States, has declared that all sea passages were almost fully booked up for the height of the holiday season, and that he had assured people everywhere that visitors would not rob Britons of their rations.

Sunset on Old Bastiles

Leonid Andreyev once wrote a tale about an old offender who grew to love his Russian prison after spending many years within its walls, says New York Times. "Released by a kindly administrator, he was unable to cope with the problems of life in his changed community, and came back to his prison to spend his last days. "At sunset," he wrote in his diary, "our prison is extraordinarily beautiful." In his forbidding prison, Du Maurier's Peter Ibbetson withdrew from unbearable realities to the compensations of a vividly dramatic inner life.

"The modern prison sets up a compelling stage upon which the prisoner must learn adequately to face reality. He is classified by scientific methods. After his social history has been reviewed, he is given training to compensate for the deficiencies of his past. The ideal is to give him a skill, and work to do. If he is an average prisoner he will soon be back in society, for his offense is a relatively minor one against property, and his sentence is not more than five years."

AT THE WEDDING

"Now, as one," the parson said,
"You must brave the years.
Of the cares that lie ahead,
Not one sign appears.

"As your paths of life unite,
Only this is sure:
When the joys have taken flight,
Love will hurt endure.

"Fearless be of ache and smart
That may follow on.
Death alone has power to part
Two that live as one.

"Two that to each other cling,
One of heart and mind,
Whatsoever time may bring Strength to bear will find."

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

The Huguenots who settled in America probably produced more persons of distinction in proportion to their members than any other group of immigrants.

Huguenots had migrated to the English Colonies before the revocation of the Edict of Nantes and the great dispersion. Admiral Coligny dreamed of making Florida a French colony and in 1662 — 45 years before the English founded Jamestown — he sent a group of Huguenots to America under John Ribault. These colonists settled at Port Royal in what is now South Carolina and they built Charlesfort and Fort Caroline farther inland, but the entire colony was destroyed by the Spanish from St. Augustine.

In 1680 Charles II of England sent a group of Huguenots to Charleston, S.C., to foster silk, olive and wine culture. Soon after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes several thousand Huguenots migrated to America and many others went to the English Colonies during the century following.

Although Huguenot communities were established at New Rochelle, New York, at Manakin Town, on the south side of the James River about twenty miles above Richmond, Vt., on the Pamolion River in North Carolina, and elsewhere, as a general rule the Huguenots intermingled with the people wherever they settled and acted as a sort of racial yeast. They generally became members of other Protestant churches and gradually abandoned their own form of worship and church organization.

The result is that there are now only three Huguenot congregations and churches in the United States — the French Protestant Church at Charleston, S.C., the National Huguenot Park, Staten Island, and the French Church of the Holy Spirit in New York City.

There are Huguenot societies in New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan and other states, and the Federation of Huguenot Societies of America was formed in Washington in 1932. There is also a Huguenot Memorial Association.

The phrases "of Huguenot descent" and "of Huguenot stock" occur in the biographical sketches of a remarkably large number of American statesmen, soldiers, clergymen, writers, merchants, lawyers, doctors, philanthropists, etc. A few of the Huguenot names that have been borne by one or more men or women of distinction are:

Ballou, Bayard, Boudinot, Bowdoin, Corse, Crittenden, Delancey, Delano, DeForrest, Faneuil, Fremont, Freneau, Gaillard, Gouverneur, Huger, Jay, LaFollette, Laurens, Legare, Lorillard, Marion, Maury, Revere, Roberdeau, Robert, Sevier and Thoreau.

These names of Huguenot origin do not account for all the distinguished persons of Huguenot descent in the United States. Alexander Hamilton, Gouverneur Morris, William Rufus King, James A. Garfield, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Patrick Henry and many others were of Huguenot descent through their mothers.

ELEGANT THIEF

Windsor, Ont.—(CP)—A thief with an eye for sartorial elegance restricted his haul to theft of a part of a morning suit, several pairs of well-cut trousers, a gold stick-pin, a watch and a few other items when he burgled a home here recently.

FOR BETTER CROPS

Early in the 18th century British farmers began to improve their ground by adding lime and other fertilizers and by rotating their crops.

Hurries Blind Invalid Mother, Child to Safety

Callander, Feb. 28 (CP)—Mrs. G. Levesque of Callander hurried her blind, 70-year-old invalid mother and her four-year-old daughter from their smoke-filled home early Friday when flames threatened to destroy the entire building.

Members of the Township of North Himsworth volunteers fire brigade, assisted by other volunteers, battled the blaze for more than an hour before extinguishing it. About one-half of the 10-room bungalow owned by Mr. and Mrs. John Latour was badly damaged by fire, smoke and water, and sections of the roof were destroyed. One of the firefighters, Stan Guignard, required medical treatment for a wrist cut.

FINNISH PRESIDENT

Authoritative government sources stressed that so far Russia has requested negotiations with the intention of getting a defence pact. There has been no Russian demands of any kind.

Finland already has a trade treaty with Russia. She has lost two wars to the Soviet Union since 1939. She has surrendered to Russia by peace treaty the Karelia and Petsamo area, including mines and timber; given a 50-year lease on the Porkkala area near Helsinki for a Russian naval base; and under-taken to pay the Soviet Union $300,000,000 reparations in six years.

BROTHERS

Ice fields closed in, in sinister formation on the drifting boat. As a last resort, the brothers threw the heavy motor overboard in an effort to prevent the craft from being crushed. Water gushed through a hole in the bottom where jagged ice had punctured the hull.

By this time darkness had set in, and the brothers were faced with another hazard. Then the boat bumped against something solid. The small vessel, now entirely trapped within moving ice fields had been driven to the edge of the main ice body that shackles the shore.

The men stepped out of the boat, and pulled it up on the ice. Faced with a momentous decision they hesitated. Driving snow whipped their faces. They could scarcely see each other in the darkness. Then they made up their minds, and grasping hands started their walk for life, or possible death. They figured the wind was easterly, and that is what probably saved their lives. Had they taken the opposite direction, they probably would have walked the ice field into the icy water of Lake Ontario.

They battled their way through the storm all night, and finally staggered ashore to safety.

In the meantime, a worried mother had sent out an alarm, and commercial fishermen and other residents of the fishing colony, with farmers of the neighborhood, had organized a search party. The news came of the safe return of the brothers, however, before it got away. The McIntoshes were little the worse for their all-night experience.

WHEAT POLICIES

4. A pension plan which the board will be authorized to establish will be similar to the Civil Service pension system and will provide for equal contributions by employees and the board with the board's contribution being regarded as an expense item.

J. A. Ross (PC-Souris) moved an amendment that would provide for introduction of three bills on each for the initial payment, the marketing of oats and barley and the pension plan.

Mr. Gardiner expressed belief that the amendment, supported by C.C.F. and Social Credit Party spokesmen, was out of order. He said it was an unheard-of thing for a government to bring in three bills in one session to amend the same act. Such procedure would delay payment of the increased prices and possibly would mean untold hardship for some people.

Other speakers included T. J. Bentley (CCF-Swift Current); Douglas Harkess (PC-Calgary East); Jean Francois Pouliot (In-L-Temiscouata); and Cal Miller (PC-Portage La Prairie).

At the House opening, External Affairs Minister St. Laurent said that financial, diplomatic relations between Canada and Czechoslovakia are under consideration in view of the political upheaval there.

Justice Minister Ilsley said he expects to be able to announce later in the session the establishment of a commission to study revision of the criminal code.

At the night sitting, Mr. Howe said the Wheat Board, sole marketing agency for Canadian wheat, now holds a surplus of $154,000,000 as a profit on the export sale of 1945 and 1946 crops and said it was expected the surplus from the 1947 crop would total another $80,000,000.

He confirmed that the proposed increase will be made retroactive to the 1945 crop and said that any further increases also will be made retroactive to that year.

Explaining why the increase is being withheld from the legislation, he said that if the bill failed to obtain parliamentary approval, the government would not be able to make the boost. Also, there would be "less confusion" in debate if the legislation was considered without the price factor.

Mr. Gardiner said there was nothing to indicate that farmers had taken a loss through the government's marketing of their wheat, as had been suggested by the opposition. Actually, the facts indicated they were making more money than ever.

Touching on exports credits, he said wheat had been shipped overseas and bought with money loaned by the government of Canada. Everyone knew that a "substantial portion" of those credits never would be repaid by the countries which received them. This was not news since the credits had never been discussed on any other basis.

In moving his amendment, Mr. Ross said he could not see any reason why the proposed new initial price of wheat was not included in the bill. He charged that Canadian farmers were losing millions under the long-term contract with the U.K. because they were selling at below world price and the Canadian price should be made up out of the Canadian treasury.

Mr. Harness said he was not opposed to the wheat board handling oats and barley, providing it did not have the exclusive right to handle the grains.

Make More Money

Mr. Pouliot said the Board should not be given power to handle the grains, because such action would mean reimposition of controls. He said it was evident that farmers have been making more money since controls were lifted.

Mr. Bentley said that while the government was asking that the Wheat Board be given power to handle oats and barley, there was no certainty that the power would be used. He was confident the C.C.F., Saskatchewan government would pass whatever complementary legislation was necessary.

Mr. Miller said he would oppose any effort to have Canadian farmers pay for half of the cost of a pension fund for Wheat Board employees. He said the Wheat Board, instead of being the instrument to see that the farmers get the best price for their wheat, was being used to see that they got the lowest price.

SAFE HOME DELIVERY

Two years ago our baby was born at ——— Hospital. Just as you have described, my husband was pushed around from place to place and even sent home (forty miles away) when I wanted him with me. I was forced to spend twelve hours in the labor room and eighteen hours in the delivery room alone. During this time several strange nurses attended me, and when I was in labor a class of pupil nurses were brought in to study my case and each nurse was allowed to examine me . . . Now we are expecting our second baby.

(Mrs. H. A. S.)

There you have one reason why certain hospitals have such rigid "rules" and why certain sycophants in the medical profession even tell credulous customers that the health department or the law prohibits the expectant father from remaining with his wife during the birth of their baby.

As long as young expectant fathers meekly remain ignorant and too weak, delicate or ladylike to know the facts of life and too ratlike to share like a man not only in the prenatal education and preparation and in the study and care of the baby but in the greatest thrill a man can experience—the miracle of the birth of his child — as long as young men accept that contemptible role, the hospitals and their sycophantic doctors, nurses and other employees, beneficiaries or hangers-on will continue pushing the prospective father around.

Mrs. H. A. S. asks me what hospital will let the prospective father remain with his wife during the birth of the baby.

Any and every hospital will and must do so, if the patient is a private patient, paying her way.

The "hospital rules", the "health board regulations" and the phony laws" cited to silence the expectant father who evinces any manhood in the matter, are tricks of the trade expressly designed to keep the riff-raff regimented.

To get down to cases, I urge every expectant father to stipulate clearly when he engages the physician to attend his wife, that he shall remain with her (that is, if she wants him to be with her) throughout the delivery. If the physician attempts to raise any question or doubt as to the legality, propriety, safety or advisability of this, find anoher doctor.

But that isn't all. The expectant father who has any real manhood will naturally feel just as curious, anxious, interested or concerned as his wife does about every aspect of the prenatal growth, development, hygiene and well being of prospective mother and child, and so he will study along with his wife everything she studies in preparation for the coming of the baby. For a kind of primer I can recommend a booklet by an international quack whose name we need not mention here—send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope for the booklet "Preparing for Maternity". (D not use clipping — ask for it in writing and you'll get it more promptly).

(Mrs. T. E. A.)

Answer—650 calories in a quart of milk. Write to your congressman for Agriculture Department's Bulletin 28 "American Food Materials"—it gives caloris value of most foods. My advice, for the sake of your health, good look and happiness, is, don't monkey with your diet unless you have your physician's advice and regular supervision.

Hon. C.D. Howe Able to Hold His Own In Barbed Debate in Parliament

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 28—(CP)—These have been trying days for Clarence Decatur Howe. But they've been even tougher on a few members of His Majesty's loyal and harassed opposition.

Never one to revel in parliament's passion for long speeches the trade minister has finally explained and hammered and occasionally insulted his way through passage of the Exchange-Conservation Bill. That's one that gives him tremendous powers over imports to save United States dollars. It went through the Commons this week, after weeks of deliberation and questions and questions and questions.

Hunched in his seat, his shaggy brows throwing a close thick roof over his impatient eyes, Mr. Howe packed those weeks with many a jagged retort; got many in return.

Many Accusations Hurled

John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre), the lean windstorm off the Prairies, cried that the program would be run "by guess and by Howe." A. L. Smith (PC-Calgary West), puckish and droll, suggested that Mr. Howe rub baking powder where he chafed most. Voices arose to accuse him of assuming dictatorial powers.

Through it all, the man intimates call C. D. mirrored an abundant capacity for both reply and provocation.

At one point, Harry Jackman (PC-Toronto Rosedale) ribbed him about beating Premier Drew of Ontario to the punch in an announcement about housing. "My friend, the comedian," growled Mr. Howe. "Very funny." To which Mr. Jackman retorted: "Not nearly as funny as you."

Mr. Howe and J. M. Macdonnell (PC-Muskoka - Ontario) tangled about an estimated saving on automobile restrictions. It was climaxed with Mr. Howe uttering the cold sarcasm that, "I have told you four times already it was a preliminary estimate. I just wanted to be sure you understood."

Harold Timmins (PC-Toronto Parkdale) went to considerable lengths in querying about steel. Cracked C. D.: "That is a perfect example of a speech that could have been avoided if my honorable friend had allowed me to answer his first question."

Sharp Retort

Again, Mr. Timmins suggested that some lesser man might find himself Mr. Howe's successor and less able to handle "this inverted form of socialism."

Mostly unkindly, he was informed: "I thought probably you would succeed me."

Later, Mr. Timmins asked what figures he had in mind about a certain item. "Nothing in my mind at all," said Mr. Howe.

"Get that on Hansard," shouted E. D. Fulton (PC-L Kamloops).

It went on that way, until at last third reading was on the horizon. Mr. Macdonnell rose for one last word. He said he thought business men found the minister easier to deal with than the Commons.

The heavy brows wagged a bit and the growl came out again. "They are much more intelligent," said Mr. Howe.

Flyers Edge "Y" Seniors 49-48 In Thrilling Game

In two action packed basketball games played at the Y.M.C.A last night, the R.C.A.F. Flyers nosed out the "Y" Seniors 49-48 in a thrilling contest and the Belleville girls turned back the Towne Togs from Peterborough 35-28.

The first game was a rousing affair and Belleville had to overcome a sixteen point deficit to draw within reach of the Flyers, however, with only five seconds left to go they missed a wonderful chance to win the game. Faulkner of the "Y" broke through only to miss the basket just as the bell sounded. At the half way mark Trenton led 35-19 and it seemed the game was all theirs, but the "Y" boys suddenly came to life in the last quarter and gave them quite a run of it, although the margin was too great to overcome. For the winner Bremner led his team with 13 points while Hornsby was next with 9. Miller and Faulkner stood out for the "Y", each getting ten. Watkin also played an outstanding game and it was his three tallies in a row that started the rally in the dying minutes.

The smaller, faster quintet of the Y.M.C.A. girls proved to be too much on their own floor for the larger group from Peterborough in the second game of the evening, when they evened the count of last week by defeating them 35-28. It was a hard fought battle all the way with first the one team and then the other in the van. However, by playing very aggressively the whole game, the lassies of the "Y" came through in fine fashion to emerge on the long end of the score, which could have been anybody's game. The "Towne Togs" were leading at the half by one point, 13-12, but Belleville came back in the second half a determined team and out-scored their taller opponents by eight points. Peterborough played and checked close but their plays went astray on the smaller floor and they couldn't connect the same way they had done a week ago in the Lift-Lock city.

For the "Y" Shirley Marinoff had 14 points and Shirley Bunnett had ten to show the way to victory. Hewitt and Castle stood out for the Petes, each getting six.

In all it was excellent basketball and for those who saw the game, they were well rewarded for their patronage. It is hoped in the near future to have one of these double headers again. They make for a spine tingling evening of entertainment.

The Summary

First Game.

Trenton R.C.A.F. Flyers: Watson 6, Bremner 13, Hornsby 9, Chambers 5, Smith 2, MacKenzie 4, Smith 8, Irving, McGee 3. Total 49.

Tweed, Norwood Tie 9-9 in T.V.L. Semi-Final Game

Tweed, Special — Tweed and Norwood battled to a nine-all tie in the arena here last night in the first game of a two game goals-to-count semi-finals series of the Trent Valley Hockey League.

The game was fast and exciting throughout with the score see-sawing between the squads all through the pastime. The first period ended in a four-all tie as both teams played wide open hockey in an effort to get a lead. Scott, Norwood star, who accounted for five of his teams goals fired home three of them in the first period.

Norwood forger 2 goals ahead in the 2nd period but the Tweed crew tied it up and went into a one goal lead when when they scored three quick goals after the third period opened. The teams battled nip-and-tuck from here in. Norwood tied it up and took a one-goal margin but Tweed roared back to even the count in the last few minutes of play.

The teams play the second game of the series in Norwood on Monday night. Tweed earned the right to go in the semi-finals by defeating the Hastings team in their two-of-three game series.

The Teams

All Portal-to-Portal Cases Dismissed

Detroit, Feb. 28. (AP)—Five Michigan Federal judges yearteday threw out all portal-to-portal cases pending before them.

More than 160 cases involving millions of dollars are affected.

The jurists upheld the constitutionality of Section 2 (D) of the Portal-to-Portal Act passed in 1947 by Congress. Under that section, Congress withdrew jurisdiction on portal pay claims from federal courts.

Other judges in other sections of the United States have made somewhat similar decisions since Congress passed the Act.

The opinion was written by Judge Frank A. Picard who, a year ago, threw out the Mt. Clemens Pottery Company case, thereby stemming in part a flood of portal cases that totalled $5,000,000,000 in claims across the United States.

Celebrates 104th Birthday, Still Going Strong

Beebe, Que., Feb. 28. (CP)—Mrs. Emma Tryon Moir of Beebe, who, but for a quirk of destiny might be on the eve of her 26th birthday celebration, is 104 years old today.

This grand old lady of the Quebec-Vermont border community missed being a leap year "baby" by just one day. That's why she merits 104 candles on her birthday cake instead of 26.

Born in 1844 when Queen Victoria was still in the early years of her reign, Mrs. Moir has been a resident of the eastern townships all of her life.

Confederation was still 23 years away when Mrs. Moir was born at Clarenceville, Que. She moved with her family to Stanstead in 1859 and a few years later married John W. Moir of Graniteville who died in 1905.

She moved to Beebe Junction in 1918 and now resides here with her son-in-law and only daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Boulais.

Mrs. Moir enjoys good health, reads newspapers, writes a clear hand and enjoys listening to the radio. She knits steadily and last year sold more than 100 of her own knitted garments, proceeds of which she turned over to the United Church.

Of a cheerful optimistic disposition, Mrs. Moir attributes her longevity to the fact that she does not worry. Her mother lived to be 101.

No special celebration is planned to mark the birthday but Mrs. Moir will be "at home" to her relatives and intimate friends.

Two Girls Rescued Unhurt by Fire

Hamilton, Feb. 27 (CP)—Fire early today almost claimed the lives of two girls, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Davidson: Oswald Webster groped through heavy smoke to find them and passed them safely to Nick Stasuik after the men responded to Mrs. Davidson's frantic cries for help. The girls, aged nine and seven, were unhurt. Damage to the house and its contents was estimated at more than $2,000.

R.C.A.F. Officer Weds Popular Washington Girl

Washington, Feb. 28 (CP)—The wedding here today of Flying Officer C. George Mattusch of Ottawa and Elmira, Ont., to Anita Cajigas has drawn more public interest than any social event of recent years.

The bride, daughter of a Canadian-born mother and Puerto Rican born father, is one of the most beautiful and popular of Washington's younger society.

Her father, Dr. Tomas Cajigas, is a pathologist of international prominence who has practised here since his graduation from George Washington University in 1918.

Her mother, who was Annabella Paul, was born in the hamlet of Snow Road north of Ottawa but came to the United States to live when she was 12 years old.

President Truman's wife and their daughter, Margaret, a close friend of the bride, headed a guest list which included most of the most prominent people in Washington.

The Episcopal Church of the Epiphany was to be the scene of the quiet Lenten ceremony with Rev. Charles W. Shearin officiating. Lenten custom dictated only a minimum of church decoration.

More than 1,000 guests were invited to the reception in the Statler Hotel following the four o'clock ceremony. Two great ballrooms were lavishly decorated and provisioned for a reception of almost unprecedented brilliance.

Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice of the United States, headed a group of wives of cabinet ministers and diplomats assisting at the reception.

Bride and groom are both 26 years old. Tall and strikingly handsome, Mattusch is son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mattusch of Elmira, descendants of an Alsatian family.

In Permanent Force

He served in the United Kingdom, Gibraltar and Malta during the war and now is in the permanent R.C.A.F. with the headquarters intelligence branch in Ottawa where they will live.

The couple met here last October when Mattusch was on a tour of duty with the Canadian Joint Staff Mission, and their engagement was announced at Christmas. Since then Miss Cajigas has been recipient of almost daily entertainment and has been the most feted bride-to-be in the memory of local society writers.

The bride's dress is of white satin with train and seed pearl trimmings. Her wedding veil is topped with a lace tiara, loaned by a wedding guest, former Premier Camille Chautemps of France, who received it from the late Queen Elizabeth of the Belgians.

Dr. Cajigas was to give the bride away. His eldest son, Dr. Tomas Cajigas, was to be best man. The matron of honor, in a gown of American beauty tint, was to be Mrs. James MacPherson of Washington.

The eight bridesmaids were to be garbed in gowns of hyacinthe and ice blues. Ushers appointed include a group of Air Force officers of the Canadian Joint Mission.

The guest list include the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong.

The groom's parents, two sisters, and a large group of friends and relatives from Elmira and vicinity were in Washington for the wedding.

After a two-week southern tour in an automobile which was a gift of the bride's parents the couple will motor to Ottawa to live.

Can You Follow Your Nose?

The thing that makes a man a gourmet is not his palate but his hose and there's far more to that snubbed, retrousse, hooked or classic feature than meets the eye according to a survey of leading medical and scientific authorities released by the Woman's Home Companion.

Except for four primary tastes, sweet, sour, bitter and salt, affecting the taste 'buds" in the mouth, what we savor depends upon what we smell and this wonderful capacity is inherited as much as red hair or blue eyes. A woman has a keener sense of smell than a man but a dog, or any other animal can beat them both — by a nose, exceeded only by insects whose sense of smell beats all. Human's however, have more of a sweet tooth than bees and can taste a sugar solution one fifth as strong as the weakest solution a bee is able to detect.

Sense of Smell Subtle

It isn't true that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," for the sense of smell, a subtle thing, depends not on itself alone but also on its associations. Some people for instance, even like the smell of a skunk, and psychiatrists say that's because it is probably associated with pleasant childhood memories. Almost everyone can testify to the memory-provoking powers of a smell. And the scientific basis for this is that none of the senses is more extensively connected with the brain centres that control our other senses; thus no other sense is more thoroughly tied in with past events and feelings.

Heavy smokers will be glad to know that the report pooh-poohs the idea that smoking dulls the sense of smell. Medical experiments find no difference between smokers and non-smokers on this score. Nor are the most fastidious people most sensitive to odors in say — a stuffy, overcrowded place. On the contrary, "the individual's native capacity to detect odors determines how sensitive he is," says the report, "and not his personal habits." And everyone, well-scrubbed or unwashed, has a personal odor which is an important factor in repelling and attracting others.

Little Perfume Better

The report also states that a little perfume is better than a lot because too strong a smell dulls the other senses while a delicate stimulation of the sense of smell makes the other senses more keen; that perspiration itself is odorless and only after it comes into contact with other skin secretions does it have an odor; that a hungry man has a keener sense of smell than one who has just eaten and if you have to take a dose of bad medicine you should rub your tongue with ice because while warmth stimulates the sense of taste, cold deadens it.

Pine Grove W.I. Sponsors Successful Pancake Social

A delightful pancake social was recently held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell, Oak Hills, under the auspices of Pine Grove W. I. Following a hearty supper of pancakes with maple syrup, augmented by a bounteous supply of delicious sandwiches, cakes, tarts and pies for every taste, the evening was spent in games of euchre and in dancing to music furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Blake Johnson.

Mrs. H. Coulter, president of the Pine Grove Institute, expressed appreciation to the genial host and hostess, and thanked them for their generous gift of pancake ingredients, and the bountiful supply of syrup and apples.

Proceeds of the evening amounted to $24.50, which will be forwarded to the fund for needy children in Europe.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON

PHEASANT

Our Ring-necked Pheasant is no native Canadian, but a descendant of a large, Old World order. At intervals during the last 150 years a few pairs have been introduced from China and Mongolia into different sections of this continent for breeding purposes. The result is the beautiful, naturalized Canadian with a metallic sheen, white collar, and gracefully pointed, sweeping tail of 15 inches. Variegated in a complicated pattern of deep maroon, cream, ochre, black, emerald green, and burnt sienna with violet reflections, most of the face just bare, red skin, it is beyond description. This is the full-grown male, at least 34 inches long and weighing nearly three pounds. His wife wears a mixture of browns, and her tail is only half as long.

Short, rounded wings, suitable for darting through underbrush, have been developed. When flushed, the bird rises with a loud whirr of the stiff quills, floats slowly through the air in a perfectly straight line a few feet from the ground, and descends at an angle. Its voice resembles a motor horn.

Now at several points in Canada east of the Rockies the Ring-necked Pheasant has been established. In Southern Ontario, and parts of Quebec and the Maritimes, it is found all year round. Good country for it contains low bushes and high grass between trees, thorny hedges, berry-growing shrubs, and water overgrown with reeds. Pelee Island is ideal, because pastures and grain-fields are added. There the Pheasant population would become too great were it not kept down by an annual shoot inaugurated in the middle 1930's.

The number of Pheasants in Montreal proper runs into the hundreds: they wander all over Mount Royal. Besides this, they have spread not just into the suburbs, but even to certain localities on the south shore of the St. Lawrence. Hawks, Owls, Crows, foxes, dogs and cats are their natural enemies, and continuous wet weather plays havoc with them. Nevertheless, Mr. Zuercher, of Rawdon, in the Laurentians, where temperatures go to 40 degrees below zero, has had great success raising them. Once properly started, they can forage for themselves in the wilds.

Insects and weed-seeds form practically the whole diet of this game bird. Therefore, most farmers have discovered that Pheasants do more good than harm, even though a little grain may be stolen.

Mrs. L. Ballantyne Addresses W.A. On New Methods in Baking

"New Methods in Baking", was the subject of a very interesting address by Mrs. Lereine Ballantyne, director of Home Baking Service for the Robin Hood Flour Mills Ltd., when she spoke to a capacity audience in the ladies' parlor of Bridge Street United Church yesterday afternoon, at the February meeting of the Woman's Association of the church.

Mrs. Ballantyne said in part, "There is an interesting history back of baking, as we know it in Canada today. Greatness in a country introduces greatness in its cooking. In Caesar's time, when his Roman Legions returned from conquest, they brought home with them many spices and condiments from other lands; and from these the Romans developed new dishes. In Nero's time, a feast consisted of from fifteen to twenty courses, many of the dishes served with strongly spiced sauces. The Centurions and nobles were constantly vieing with each other in the serving of exotic foods.

"French chefs have been in the international limelight for hundreds of years, beginning with the time of Marie Antoinette; and English baking developed noticeably during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, (daughter of Henry VIII) with the inovation of 'boiled puddings', which were the forerunners of our English plum puddings and the more modern version of Christmas fruit cakes.

"Pioneer women brought their recipes to Canada from Great Britain, Ireland, France and Germany, and as neighbors they exchanged recipes, until one of their traditions became a table well filled with delicious well-cooked food; and open handed hospitality for everyone, with no doors ever locked against the traveller. This is still a standard in settlements on the outskirts of our Canadian civilization.

"Women in Canada", continued the speaker, "have developed this tradition in their homes, and it has not been confined there. for a liking for good food has spread to our church suppers, lodge and service club banquets, and to our large hotels, but, strange to say, not to all our restaurants and public eating places. Interest in good home cooking has been revived in these post-war years; cooking and baking having become an art in which perfection is reached only by practice. Good food, well cooked, is one of the sure foundations for happy home life. Our grandmothers believed in the old adage, 'the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world' but a more modern version of the same idea is 'the bride who builds a home, builds a nation', and Canadian men have the habit of liking good foods."

Mrs. Ballantyne suggested several good recipes, tried and tested, for different varieties of quick breads and cakes, with the methods of preparing them. She suggested that girls of eight and nine years may be taught to make cookies for their own small parties, and later be allowed to practice what they learn without interference or oversight "because that is how good cooks are made."

Mrs. H. McCabe introduced the speaker, and Mrs. H. Rollins voiced the grateful appreciation of the listening ladies, among whom were several from other church groups. Mrs. R. B. Morden, W.A. president, opened the meeting, welcomed the visitors and conducted the business of the month. Mrs. Guthridge was at the piano and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Whillans. Mrs. Adams read the Scripture and Mrs. A. Clare led in a meditation and prayer.

Better Plays, More Attention To Detail Urged

Kingston, Feb. 28 (CP)— More worthwhile plays and greater attention to details of production were urged upon high school drama groups here last night by Robertson Davies, adjudicator at the Queen's drama department's first annual secondary school drama festival.

The festival, first of its kind in Eastern Canada, opened in Convocation Hall with three one-act plays presented by Notre Dame players of Kingston, Kingston Collegiate Vocational Institute Drama Club, and Ottawa High School of Commerce.

Both plays given by Kingston groups last night were unworthy of the talent of the players, Mr. Davies said. "The Girl From Nowhere," presented by Notre Dame Players, was described as "commonplace." "High School Daze," the K.C.V.I. production, was "pure rubbish which couldn't have been made worthwhile by the Old Vic or even the Moscow Arts theatre."

Acting and production in each were good, but not enough attention was given to details, Mr. Davies said. Sheila Collins of the Notre Dame Players and Anne Cooke and William Earle of the K.C.V.I. players were especially commended.

"Orange Blossom" by the Ottawa High School of Commerce was described as "admirably produced with great attention to detail." Climaxes were well led up to and fully realized.

Shirley Nevin, Joyce King, Dalton Oarr and Shirley Rodger received special mention for their acting.

Open to all secondary schools in the region bounded by Ottawa, Peterborough, Cornwall and Belleville, the festival has been established at the instigation and under the general direction of Dr. William Angus, head of the Queen's University drama department.

Primary purpose, Dr. Angus said, is to encourage drama in secondary schools and to give actors and directors the opportunity of hearing expert adjudication and of comparing their own efforts with those of other school groups. The plays are presented on a non-competitive basis.

Mr. Davies, chosen to adjudicate at the first festival, is himself well known as an author and playwright as well as editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

He is the author of "Eros at Breakfast," one of the two prize winning plays at the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival held early this month.

Coward Sparkle Lacking

The current revival of Noel Coward's sequence of short plays, "Tonight at 8:30" shows that time has dimmed the sparkle of these witty dramas. Despite the superbly skilled acting of Gertrude Lawrence, the series hasn't quite the impact it had when first presented here in 1936.

father was pleased.

He was always a great one for saying be careful of this or don't break that. It was a caution how many breakages could be traced to father saying be careful.

"Be careful," he would shout when anybody ran the wagon out of the barn and down the dump. One day he ran it out himself, cramped the tongue sharply part way down, to steer it clear of the fence at the bottom, and let it go.

Luck was not with him. The tongue straightened suddenly and the wagon shot straight to one of father's five-barred specials.

He was able to splint the gate with more boards but it never swung so freely again. It hurt father's pride a little.

To Publicize Anglican Work

London (CP)—A new organization to make Anglican church work better known is to be discussed by Britain's Church Assembly at its spring session next month. A central information board of 20 members is recommended, which will make use of all generally-recognized means of publicity.

The cost of this new organization is estimated at £14,000 ($56,000) a year. It would include a central staff, comprising a chief information secretary with an assistant, a press officer with two assistants, publishing officer and visual aids officer. The board would advise the archbishop of Canterbury on public relations and stimulating press information and contacts in each diocese in Britain. It would also develop a liaison with publishing houses and organize the use of films and lantern slides, as well as modern exhibition techniques.

Lady Campbell Divorced By Speedboat Racer

London, Feb. 28 (AP)— Sir Malcolm Campbell won a divorce yesterday on grounds that his wife committed adultery with a French Count, Andre Louis De La Salle.

Lady Campbell, the former Mrs. Betty Nickory, married the speedboat and automobile racer in 1945: She and De La Salle denied there was anything improper in their association.

The Associated Press erroneously reported that the former Mrs. Nickory was Sir Malcolm's third wife. Sir Malcolm, twice married, was divorced from his first wife, Dorothy Whittall in 1940.

Your insurance premium is divided three ways. The largest part goes into your own savings fund.* A small part is used to pay its proportionate share of the Company's operating expenses. Another small part is used to help make up the balance for those who die before their savings funds have been built up to the full face value of their policies.

If you yourself die before your savings fund is sufficient to pay the full face value of your policy — then the other policy-holders will likewise contribute the balance needed. If the premium you pay is higher than is necessary, the excess is returned to you by way of dividends.

This is the basic policy of life insurance by which men co-operate mutually to protect their families against the hazards of life.

If you drop out of this co-operative venture then your savings fund is returned to you.

*The exception is "term" insurance where no savings fund is built up.

He Knew A Good Farmer By His Gates

By KENNETH C. CRAGG

Father always said he could tell he kind of farmer a man was by is gates.

"Show me a man with good ates and you have shown me a ood farmer," father would say.

Some thought this was a pretty sweeping statement, particularly since father had been known to spend a day making a gate when he should have been sowing his turnips. Father's turnips were seldom as good as they might have been because they were seldom sown in time.

But he did have some nice gates and there were no neater bars in the country. Until long past childhood the phrase "open the bars" had no reference to the drink problem, but applied strictly to the removal of a number of seasoned balsam poles from a fence gap, to let cattle from one field into the next.

Gates Showed Owner's Pride

Unquestionably father was on the right track except that good gates proved only that a farmer tended to be a tidy farmer, and father was a tidy farmer. There was a place for everything, and, although the place might have been ill-chosen and as awkward as all get out, everything was in its place.

It was a good thing in one sense because a person could come in after midnight any time, and without a light put away his horse and be safe from running a manure fork into his foot or falling over the wheelbarrow.

Walter, who sometimes worked for us, thought this was nonsense of the worst kind. Walter was probably the least inhibited of any man who hired out to father. He believed tools should be dropped wherever a man was working and the moment he was through with them. Put them away, said Walter, and nobody knew where they were. Drop them, he maintained, and sooner or later your foot would kick them in the long grass and there they'd be, just where you wanted them.

Both systems had their shortcomings and often father and Walter tried each other's patience And Walter's patience tried notoriously easily, all by itself, almost.

Father's favorite gate was a five-barred affair made from seasoned balsam and strengthened by two more boards running from the heel of the hinge and diagonally across the parallel boards to the top of the opposite or free-swinging end. As the short fibres of balsam wouldn't carry the weight of a wide gate, he reinforced the boards under the hinges, usually with a piece of elm.

At one time he used better lumber in gates, but good gates made from boughten white pine seemed to break about as easily as balsam and father had enough free balsam on his farm, needing to be cut before the ants got into them that he could afford to lose a lot of gates.

Elm Planks Were Reliable

He used to use tongued and grooved balsam to whip up a stable door, because if big Maude wanted to go through a stable door, balsam broke just as easily as a better door. Where strength really counted father drew on elm, of which he had plenty, in and out of fence corners. Both the horses and cattle were divided off by elm plank and the mangers were made from inch elm.

It was all put in place while the planks were still green because no one could drive a nail or spike into the elm when it was seasoned. Some of the stalls warped at bit, but on the whole the stable had a sort of rugged trimness about it of which a man could be proud.

The pig-pen was finished off early in June about the time the sow Beatrice was due to farrow and apparently she didn't like the new place because she lit out. The sow was like that—a law unto herself and neither fence nor gate nor poke bolted around her neck could hold her. During the winter she always got lousy and it was considered good sport to lean over her pen with an oil can and try to pink each big louse with a squirt of machine oil. The sow seemed to like it, too.

She came back the day after she disappeared and it didn't take a second look to know she had had her pigs. Father followed her, at a good distance, over into a swale, and suddenly he came to a cleared place where the swamp grass, a good four feet high, had been clipped as if by a scythe and carried to a pile in the centre. In the pile were the pigs and their mother. As soon as the sow saw father she charged him, roaring most horribly and slavering from her jaws and chased him up a big old stump.

She kept him up there for half an hour and, although father felt silly he was afraid to come down until she went away. Next day he went back with a box on the stoneboat and a boy to act as decoy. While the sow chased the boy, father sneaked up and got the little bigs and the sow followed to the barn, mean as ever, but afraid of father's club.

Mother Looked After House

Mother didn't object to neatness in the stable, but she sometimes thought father didn't pay enough attention to the surroudings at the house.

She brooded for several years about an old rusty woven wire fence at the side of the house. It was one of those fences that started and ended short of going somewhere. It couldn't keep anything out of the dooryard because where the gate used to be there was a gap and where the fence used to be the other side of the gap there was no wire.

None of the animals were let loose in that section anyway. Beatrice occasionally broke in but never stayed long because she was afraid of mother from having had hot potato water thrown on her.

The only other invader of the dooryard to amount to much was Old Archie the gander and his geese. Old Archie was the worst tempered creature on the farm. He would dodge sticks and stones hissing and swearing, and chase mother and once beat her legs with his wings until they were black and blue.

Old Archie and father, however, built up a beautiful friendship, which mother thought was beneath a man. Old Archie would make clucking noises to father and preen and bow his head like an old fool, said mother. When they were hauling out manure and father would be resting by the water trough until the spreader came back, Old Archie would sidle up, talking in weird goose language.

The geese were killed in the late fall, and mother cooked one for Thanksgiving dinner—and father couldn't get his fork into the bird, let alone carve it among the family.

It was, of course, Old Archie, and father was so mad about mother losing track of Archie when she was plucking the geese that he flew into a temper right then and there. He said it was done deliberately to belittle him and because Old Archie was his friend. There were some human beings he would rather carve, said father. In some ways it was the most exciting Thanksgiving we ever had.

Fence Might Be Useful

On the issue of the fence at the side of the house father always insisted it might come in handy some time. Some time he might want to put up a fence on the other side of where the gate used to be, and if he took away the fence there now, where would he be? It seemed that the fence controversy would never be settled and that it would always be a bone of contention between mother and father—like a line-fence row, only on a line fence the fence viewers could always be called in the arbitrate.

The spring after Old Archie died, when the asparagus shoots were coming up green in the bed beside the fence, father had to go to town one day. He wasn't out of the road gates before mother had a pair of wire cutters and was at the fence. She got help with a horse and chain to pull the posts, and there wasn't a trace of the fence when father got back.

When he came in to wash for supper he turned at the woodshed door, looked at where the fence used to be, and sniffed. He didn't say anything at supper and mother seemed a little subdued. By noon next day he was declaring how much better the view was with the fence down and wished he could have got at it sooner.

Father could be, and often was a little difficult when any new suggestion came from mother or the boys, particularly if it were of a labor-saving nature. Mother used to say it was the English in him, though goodness knows there were lots worse in that way than father.

The episode of the fence taught everybody that the thing to do was not to argue with father ou go ahead and do it, and if need be, argue afterward. It was really a marvellous formula and often there were no arguments after all.

He had to be Shown

When father huffed and scoffed at the suggestion of putting a four-horse hitch on the cultivator, and three sections of drag harrows after it no one was surprised. But when he came home one day and found it working, he didn't say anything. That was a sign father was pleased.

He was always a great one for saying be careful of this or don't break that. It was a caution how many breakages could be traced to father saying be careful.

"Be careful," he would shout when anybody ran the wagon out of the barn and down the dump. One day he ran it out himself, cramped the tongue sharply part way down, to steer it clear of the fence at the bottom, and let it go.

Luck was not with him. The tongue straightened suddenly and the wagon shot straight to one of father's five-barred specials.

He was able to splint the gate with more boards but it never swung so freely again. It hurt father's pride a little.

Castle Ghost Gives Ludlow the Jitters

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ludlow, England (CP)—Maybe it's a screech owl, or a whimpering breeze caught between the gaunt, grey stones of Ludlow Castle. Perhaps it is the rumbling of a train that sets those old walls shuddering in a ghostly wail....

Whatever it is, Ludlow people are convinced they hear mysterious gasping sounds coming from high up in one of the towers of the 11th century castle.

George Jeffs, a stolid timber sawyer, went home one night "quaking in every limb" from the pathway under the castle's "hanging tower."

Phlegmatic Joe May, truck driver, and his girl friend ran from under an old yew tree near the tower after hearing a "ghostly wheezing sound."

Most of the Ludlow townsfolk laughed when the story spread.

But up at the Cottage Hospital, Matron Miss N. A. Clifford said.

"Four weeks ago I was taking my Scottie, Bruce, for an evening walk around the castle. As we passed the old yew tree the dog came shivering and whimpering to my legs....

Tower "Breathing"

"Then suddenly I heard the sound of heavy anguished breathing. My first thought was that someone had fallen and been injured....I shone my torch around but couldn't see anything. Then I realized the breathing was coming from half-way up the tower wall."

Mrs. May Davis, evacuated to Ludlow from Liverpool during the war tells of living in the castle for four months and says:

"I wouldn't go near there again for all the tea in China — and heaven only knows, tea is short enough these days!"

"From the time we moved in, queer things happened every night. Doors opened and closed of their own accord....we were awakened by creaks and bumps and moans."

Even John Lloyd, the castle caretaker, takes these stories seriously.

"There's been strange goings on here ever since I can remember I'm always hearing noises I can't account for. In fact I've got so used to them I don't think I'll give up my job after all."

"Mister Roberts" May Prove Best Comedy Seen in Years Critic Predicts

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Feb. 28 (CP)—Hats off to "Mister Roberts," the stage adaptation of Thomas Haggen's book about the crew of a ship engaged in the dreary monotony of bringing up supplies in the back areas of the Pacific, hundreds of miles from the nearest fighting zones.

Here is a superb study of the effects of this tedious existence on a mettlesome crew of men. It is easily the leading candidate for the best play about the Second World War.

"Mister Roberts" is filled with gusty, rowdy humor. Its central characters are Lieut. Doug Roberts, a popular officer who is chafing to get into the shooting war; the ship's doctor, who maintains the morale of himself and his friends by giving them grain alcohol to drink; Ensign Pulver, who boasts of his feminine conquests, and the captain, who is cordially disliked by everybody.

Superb Teamwork

Technically speaking, Joshua Logan and Heggen, who wrote the script, may not have achieved a play. But they have written a salty, absorbing study of the lives of men compelled to carry out dull duties. Joe Meilziner has provided splendid settings for this newcomer at the Alvin Theatre.

The cast, headed by Henry Fonda, gives a superb exhibition of teamwork under Logan's sure-handed direction.

Fonda, back on Broadway after a long stay in Hollywood, is excellent in his role of the frustrated, unhappy Roberts. David Wayne, until recently the engaging Leprachaun in "Finian's Rainbow," is triumphant as Ensign Pulver and these performances are matched by those of Robert Keith as the doctor and William Harrigan as the unpopular captain.

Critics Enthusiastic

New York's drama critics unlimbered seldom-used superlatives in praise for "Mister Roberts." Louis Kronenberger of PM called it "a good show enhanced by a wonderful production" and predicted it would prove "the most popular comedy Broadway has seen in years."

Coward Sparkle Lacking

The current revival of Noel Coward's sequence of short plays, "Tonight at 8:30" shows that time has dimmed the sparkle of these witty dramas. Despite the superbly skilled acting of Gertrude Lawrence, the series hasn't quite the impact it had when first presented here in 1936.

To Publicize Anglican Work

London (CP)—A new organization to make Anglican church work better known is to be discussed by Britain's Church Assembly at its spring session next month. A central information board of 20 members is recommended, which will make use of all generally-recognized means of publicity.

The cost of this new organization is estimated at £14,000 ($56,000) a year. It would include a central staff, comprising a chief information secretary with an assistant, a press officer with two assistants, publishing officer and visual aids officer. The board would advise the archbishop of Canterbury on public relations and stimulating press information and contacts in each diocese in Britain. It would also develop a liaison with publishing houses and organize the use of films and lantern slides, as well as modern exhibition techniques.

Catching Pythons Is Spare-Time Job

Ladysmith, South Africa (CP)—S. W. Pienaer is Ladysmith's champion python-catcher. He is a farmer and catches pythons in his spare time. They all go in the Durban snake park. So far he has had a "bag" of 11. He had a stroke of luck recently and caught six in one day.

Later he caught a mere "baby" of 10 feet in length with one hand.

"CHINCHILLAS"

"A DOMINION CHINCHILLA"

A new fur industry in Canada is providing an opportunity for many persons to establish themselves in their own business.

This industry is now under the supervision of the Department of Agriculture.

"Chinchilla," the world's finest and most expensive fur is now being raised in captivity, thus re-opening the once tremendous market enjoyed before the Chinchilla became extinct in the Andes Mountains of South America.

Chinchillas are clean, odorless and easy to raise. They may be raised in your home as a profitable, enjoyable hobby that can eventually build into a full time business.

I want to know...

what is done with my insurance premium

Your insurance premium is divided three ways. The largest part goes into your own savings fund.* A small part is used to pay its proportionate share of the Company's operating expenses. Another small part is used to help make up the balance for those who die before their savings funds have been built up to the full face value of their policies.

If you yourself die before your savings fund is sufficient to pay the full face value of your policy—then the other policy-holders will likewise contribute the balance needed. If the premium you pay is higher than is necessary, the excess is returned to you by way of dividends.

This is the basic policy of life insurance by which men co-operate mutually to protect their families against the hazards of life.

If you drop out of this co-operative venture then your savings fund is returned to you.

*The exception is "term" insurance where no savings fund is built up.

Low cost life insurance since 1869

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

For each type of opening bid there is a corresponding bid in the defence department. In defence, however, you use a different word to announce it. Let me compare them briefly.

An opening of one in a suit shows five tricks, four high, two sure. If your opponent starts with an opening, how do you show such a hand in defence? By saying double.

An opening of two shows nine tricks. How show such a hand in defence when an opponent has opened? Bid the same suit as opponent has mentioned; overcall in opponent suit.

A three major opening shows an unusual suit with a sure trick outside in an eight trick hand. How to show it in defence when an opponent opened? One-jump to your (rebiddable) suit; jump overcall.

An opening of four in a major shows a long trump suit only and expects to be defeated. This is what you show in defence with a jump to four if an opponent has opened.

A defender has also available a bid not used by an opener. It is a non-jump bid in a new suit; simple overcall. Such a bid shows five or more tricks without enough high or sure for an opening.

South opened with one heart when west held this hand:

♠A K Q 9 8 6
♥4
♦7 6 2
♣A K 10

Squat yourself in the west seat and decide what to do there in such a spot. Remember you have a partner. He wants to know the type of hand you hold. Tell him. But tell him truly.

Your hand contains seven tricks; five high and two shorts. With less than nine it is not an overcall in opponent suit. With less than eight it is not a jump overcall.

However, this hand could have opened with a bid of one. Opponent beat you to it. He opened before you could. How can you show such a hand? By saying double. No, not seeing double.

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Feb. 28 (AP)—Next to baseball club managers, the world's greatest beefers are film actors.

This conclusion can be reached by any movie reporter who spends a few years on the studio beat. For instance, this week I listened to John Payne telling why he left his 20th-Fox contract, which owed him $130,000 for the remainder of a year's term:

"It was worth it. I can make more money free-lancing, and I'm much happier away from the complete disagreements that marred my stay at the studio.

"Despite the fact that over 60 per cent of producers and directors are former actors, they don't give an actor credit for knowing anything about scripts. More aggravating is the practice of letting an actor warm up for a part, and then telling him someone else will do it and he will start another role the next day.

Loyal and Obedient

"The studio bosses tell you they made you a star and you should be loyal and obedient. They say, 'you help us out and do this role and you can have your pick next time.' Next time never seems to come.

"I'm tired of studio reneging and broken promises."

Payne's plaint is typical. Briefly catalogued, here are the most common beefs from actors:

1. No choice of roles. (See above, or anybody at Warners.)
2. Roles not big enough. (Gene Tierney, who refused "Unfaithfully Yours" and was replaced by Linda Darnell.)
3. No loan-outs to other studios. (Van Johnson, others.)
4. Other stars getting favored roles. (Dana Andrews, who says he has long played second fiddle to Gregory Peck.)
5. No cut on loan-out fees. (Bill Holden, Red Skelton.)
6. Tight-laced, long-term contracts, (Larry Parks).
7. Being typed. (Maureen O'Hara, Jane Russell.)
8. Getting inferior billing. (Maria Kontez, who sued over her "The Exile" billing.)
9. Not enough money. (Name any actor).

Wolfit as Macbeth

Wolfit to Present Group of Three Shakespearean Plays at Kingston

Donald Wolfit, acclaimed "the greatest actor since Henry Irving", with Rosalind Iden and his London Company of 30 artists, will be the feature attraction at the Kingston Auditorium March 18, 19, and 20. The Shakespearean group will present three plays one each on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, evenings and one for a Saturday matinee.

"The Merchants of Venice" is to be presented Thursday night. "Twelfth Night" on Friday night and "Macbeth" will be the final presentation at the Saturday performances. Kingston is to be the final stop for this widely acclaimed group before leaving Canada from Halifax on the Aquitania.

Extensive Canadian Tour

The group has travelled extensively in Canada, performing in the major cities of the Dominion where they received the highest praise from the critics. "Mr. Wolfit extracts the utmost of the comedy value of his role; the production was throughout entertainment to move a granite statue to rollicking mirth," writes S. Morgan-Powell of Wolfit's performance of "Twelfth Night".

The company was established in 1937. Mr. Wolfit as manager, requires that the lowest part in Shakespeare be played by a carefully-chosen actor or actress. This practice has been largely responsible for the fine versatility of the company's 30 distinguished artists.

During the war yeafs, the company presented Shakespeare throughout the service camps of the United Kingdom and followed the North African invasion forces and the Normandy landings. Since the end of the war he has resumed his highly successful London engagements, completing his eleventh annual season prior to embarking on his North American tour. This record of achievement, plus his reputation as a brilliant actor, has assured him an enthusiastic welcome in all Canadian and American cities he has appeared in during his coast-to-coast tour, the first ever undertaken by a theatrical company since 1939.

Greatest Since Ellen Terry

Mr. Wolfit's leading lady, Miss Rosalind Iden, has been hailed by the London critics as the greatest Shakespearean actress since Ellen Terry. She will appear in the three presentations, co-starring with Mr. Wolfit.

The company has performed before capacity audiences in Halifax, Sherbrooke, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and many other large Canadian cities. Their three-day stop-over in Kingston will conclude the very successful tour for this company whose performances are met with world-wide high acclaim.

AT THE McCARTHY — Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., appears as the exiled King Charles II of England in Universal-International's zestful new release, "The Exile," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

VAGABOND AND ROGUE

Georgetown, British Guiana — (CP) — Siefried Batson, a painter, was termed "a vagabond and rogue" and sentenced to one month in jail after conviction of breaking and entering his father's home here. His father was chief prosecution witness.

LOWER HUNTING FEE?

Halifax — (CP) — A resolution to permit a lower licence fee for non-residents hunting deer with bow and arrows was passed at a recent annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Fish and Game Protective Association. Delegates said the number of tourist archers was increasing.

AT THE BELLE — Dorothy Lamour lends an ear to Bob Hope's sales talk in Paramount's new comedy "Road to Rio," now at the Belle Theatre. The film co-stars Dotty, Bob and Bing Crosby and features, among others, the Andrews Sisters and the Weire Brothers. There is also a surprise appearance by Jerry Colonna.

Plenty of Talent Exhibited When Teams Work Out

(By The Canadian Press)

It looked like old home week on the Maple Leaf Gardens' ice surface in Toronto yesterday as three National Hockey League clubs worked out, one after another. A demon statistician estimated that coaches and railbirds who stayed all through saw more than a quarter million dollars worth of hockey talent.

The players were from the league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs, the fourth-place Boston Bruins and the tail-end Chicago Black Hawks. Schedule arrangements resulted in all three clubs being at Toronto at the same time.

The Leafs and Hawks were working out for their game tonight on the same ice. The only other Saturday night fixture has the second-place Detroit Red Wings playing at Montreal Canadiens.

The Bruins were working out for their Sunday night game at Chicago, after losing to Leafs Wednesday. There's only two games Sunday night also, the other being Canadiens at New York Rangers.

The Montreal and Chicago clubs almost certain to be left out when the Stanley Cup play-offs start among the league's four top teams, each have a chance at glory this weekend as they tangle with the league leaders. For Dick Irvin of the Canadiens and Charlie Conacher of the Hawks, in fact, it's glory or curtains.

But the players were in a happy frame in the unusual series of workouts. Team captain Johnny Crawford directed the Bruins in absence of Dit Clapper, who seized the opportunity to visit his folks in Peterborough. Johnny took some good-natured ribbing from the railbirds while Charlie Conacher was later directing the Hawks workout.

One roar from Conacher prompted a bystander to tell Crawford: "Maybe you don't scream loud enough."

"I save my shouting for the forwards during the game," laughed Crawford.

Doug Bentley, star Hawk forward, looked good in the practice despite the fact his left thumb was in a cast. He fractured it in a Montreal game recently.

Hamilton Tigers Blank Marlboros In Fine Display

By The Canadian Press

The old smoothies—Hamilton Tigers—did it again last night and this time in no uncertain terms as they blanked the youthful Marlboros 4-0 to increase their lead to three games in their best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Senior A semi-final series. The Marlboros lone win came in their first meeting at Toronto. In the only other game last night, the second semi-final series, this time a best-of-five affair, got under way as Kitchener-Waterloo Flying Dutchmen handed Owen Sound Mercurys a 7-2 setback and took a one-game lead.

There wasn't any doubt in the minds of 13,416 fans which was the better team as the veteran Tigers baffled Marlboros with their smooth passing and solid defensive checking. And it wouldn't have been a scoreless first period if Howie Harvey in the Marlie nets had let down. The young goalie played brilliantly in that initial frame in clearing away Hamilton shots.

At that, he couldn't hold the Tigers in the middle session and in just over four minutes of play, Tom Smelle connected for the first Tiger marker. Art Mason added another just one minute later and Frankie Liscombe scored a third two minutes after that, to put Tigers into a 3-2 lead.

In the final frame Art Mason counted his second tally with a strong rush from the side. Ray Hannigan and Ike Hildebrand were the most effective on the attack for Marlies while Harvey played stellar hockey in the nets.

Ragged Attack

Art Childs in the Tigers net had little trouble racking up the shutout the Tiger's iron defence and smooth-passing plays made a sharp contrast to the ragged attack of Marlboros.

A five-goal scoring splurge gave Kitchener-Waterloo their 7-2 win over Owen Sound. The Dutchmen had previously jumped into a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period on goals by Doug Verity and Georgie Zuk, but Mercurys bounced back in the second to knot the count as Jack Ingoldsby and Jim Boddy connected.

Then in the final stanza Ted Grasser scored what proved to be the winning marker while Don Bauer and Wib Heller added two goals apiece for insurance.

The first and third periods were Kitchener controlled while the middle frame was more on even terms. Bobby Gilson was easily the best man for Mercurys as he turned away the Dutchmen time after time.

The junior loop again swings into action tonight when Windsor Spitfires move into Oshawa for the fourth game of their best-of-seven semi-finals, which Spitfires now lead 2-1. The Galt-Barrie tilt, previously scheduled for last night, was held over until tonight when the Flyers entertain the Rockets in the first tilt of their semi-finals.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

BY GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Hastings County, one of the Dominions leading producers of cheese, can now add another fine product to its imposing record. According to recent hockey results, Hastings perhaps has established something of a record in minor hockey circles. Three of its youngster squads have won Eastern Ontario championships with two of them well on the way to the provincial title. Belleville Merchants Midgets annexed the Midget 'B' eastern title here on Thursday night while the smart Stirling Midget "C" dusted off the Gananoque team to cop the eastern provincial honors. Trenton's juvenile "B" after winning the eastern crown dropped out of circulation when it met defeat at the hands of the Lindsay juves.

Stirling's starry group of midget puckchasers have the longer road to travel before they settle down for the title. They meet the Ajax squad in Ajax today with the second of the two-game series being played in Stirling on Monday night. The village kids have yet to meet defeat and they are regarded by many as strong championship timber. The best of luck to 'em.

• • •

Meanwhile the Belleville Merchants, fresh from their twin wins over the Peterborough Rotary midgets are awaiting playdown developments, which may materialize before this column goes to bed. The husky Waterloo team eliminated Sarnia by a one-sided margin, and it is now a question of which team, Merchants or Waterloo meet Collingwood in the semi-finals. If the OMHA powers-that-be rule that Waterloo and Collingwood tangle then the Merchants will step right into the Ontario finals against the winners of the series. And that in itself is something this city should be proud of.

The postponed meeting of the Belleville Softball Association has been set for Sunday afternoon in the offices of the Harry Smith Coal Company, Pinnacle Street. It is requested that all interested attend the conclave as much important business has to be done.

Representatives of nearly 80 local associations of the Ontario Federation of Anglers' and Hunters' are organizing groups of fishermen and hunters to attend the first Canadian National Sportsmen's Show, opening for a week's run at the Colliseum in Toronto's National Exhibition grounds on Saturday, March 13.

• • •

Sponsored by the Toronto Anglers' and Hunters' Association Inc., the Sportsmen's Show is a non-profit operation. All proceeds will be devoted to further the conservation of Canada's natural resources of field and steam. The show will present one of the biggest exhibits of motor boats, fishing tackle, camping equipment, sports clothing, trailers, radios, etc. ever gathered together at one time.

A two-hour entertainment program will be presented twice daily.

According to the demon statistician of the Trenton Hockey Club, Mac Watson, right-wing sharpshooter, led the lads in scoring points during the Intermediate "A" schedule recently ended. Watson, fired hime 29 goals and is credited with 11 assists for 40 points. He established something of a scoring record by recording seven consecutive hat tricks during the schedule. Bob Johnson and Jim Beale each notched a dozen markers with the assist column reading a like number for both players. The team as a whole scored 92 goals, with an "against" number of 74.

Paradoxically, the first two teams to be eliminated in the pre-season Belleville District Hockey League playoffs, will battle for the Intermediate "A" group title here. The squads are Trenton Flyers and the Trenton Hockey Club. Flyers defeated Cobourg 11-5 here last night, in an eye-pleasing hockey spectacle that saw both teams let their collective hair down and go after elusive victory.

And at that, it looked as though Flyers were destined for oblivion after the end of the first period. The Cobourgers, were hot and they set the lads in blue back on their rear turrets, firing home four goals to Flyers one. It looked like a Cobourg win. However, as subsequent events proved, the Cobourg squad shot its bolt in that speedy first heat. Flyers turned on the hockey juice in the second and third periods and were practically invincible as their speedy lines flashed to the attack, to score ten goals in the final heats.

And what should be an excellent series comes next week when Flyers and Trenton clash in the three-of-five final games. Both squads are fast, with plenty of punch and scoring power and competent defences. The Trenton squad has been idle for the past ten days but will put in some stiff practice before Tuesday night's opening game. Should be a series worth watching. Second game next Saturday evening starting at nine o'clock.

• • •

And there is more than a passing possibility that Belleville fans will get a taste of "B" playoff hockey in the near future. The Peterborough Hockey Club and the Petes Legion, will clash in a four-out-of-seven games final series, and if the weather man says mild weather, no ice, the games may be shifted to Belleville. In fact the Petes management have already contacted Manager Greow of the Arena with regard to dates, if the weather milds.

SATURDAY SIFTINGS

Angy Defelice, starry centre of the Belleville Rockets juniors will not go with the Montreal Canadiens....It is reliably reported that he will put his John Hancock on a Philadelphia Rockets contract some time today....That means, if he clicks, that he will be with brother George in the hockey future....Tim Daly, we are reliably informed will be in the city soon to address a Masonic Lodge....Tim, as you know is the colorful trainer of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League....Tis said that Bill Hurst, Rockets defenceman will make another bid for that hockey trip to Scotland come next summer....Trenton pal, whispers to us that the town to the west is seriously considering entering a baseball team in the Belleville Baseball Association, if and when....Don't forget that Belleville Softball Association meeting tomorrow afternoon in the Harry Smith office, Pinnacle Street, at 1.30.

Reason the Trenton Hockey Club is playing its final games here is lack of support in its home town....What do those guys up there want, the New York Rangers?....Movements are afoot to resurrect the old Central Ontario Baseball League with Peterborough, Belleville, Kingston and Oshawa, the same old quartet of bitter diamond enemies....Its still in the wishful thinking stage, but actually some ground work has been done....Waterloo swamped Sarnia 11-2 in their second Midget "B" game..That means so we are informed that the Waterloo squad meets Collingwood in the semi-finals..More later..Aside to KJC. We ran ads re the baseball book weeks ago, and several of the local lads got the booklet....Thanx just the same..Hows tricks? There's the whistle....

Boxer Collapses, Dies in Ring, Will be Autopsy

Hollywood, Feb. 28 (AP)—Ten seconds before the end of his first professional fight, Leroy De Catur 20-year-old Negro lightweight boxer, collapsed and died in the ring last night.

It was the last round of a four-round preliminary bout at Hollywood Legion stadium. De Catur, a Los Angeles fighter who had had some 40 amateur bouts, was ahead, on points, of his opponent, Fred Herrera, 20, Mexican battler from Jerome, Raiz, when the tragedy occurred. Herrera also was fighting for the first time professionally.

It was the second professional boxing fatality within a week. Sam Baroudi of New York died in Chicago a week ago today after he was knocked out the night before by Ezzard Charles of, Cincinnati.

Only once before in the 27-year history of the Legion Stadium here had there been a ring death. Benny Cleveland, Los Angeles bantamweight, died last July 11 after a preliminary fight with Robert Andrade.

When last night's fight was nearly over Herrera smacked a goodly punch to De Catur's midsection. He followed it with a right to De Catur's jaw. They clinched for a moment, then Herrera stepped back.

De Catur collapsed, his head thumping the floor in a neutral corner. Referee Tomy Hart of Bakersfield, Calif., started to count. Then he saw something was wrong, called off the fight, summoned the seconds into the ring and they gave De Catur first aid.

Without regaining consciousness, he was carried by stretcher to his dressing room. Dr. William F. Carver, stadium physician, administered artificial respiration for 20 minutes. He then pronounced De Catur dead and said it was his opinion the boxer died in the ring.

Dr. Carver declined to say what caused death.

The coroner's office tentatively scheduled an autopsy for today.

Ottawa, Feb. 28 (CP)—There's no particular reason why it should be, with winter's snows still deep, but the 1948 Eastern Canadian football picture is not only unclear—it's chaotic.

Certainly the makeup, and perhaps the actual entity, of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union and the Ontario Rugby Football Union, is at stake this weekend as the overriding body—The Canadian Rugby Union—goes into a scheduled meeting at Toronto.

Whether the meeting will solve anything is a good question, but certain it is that there are floods of rumors surrounding the meeting.

Here are a few circulating now: (mind you, they're strictly rumors)

Montreal: Alouettes would like more Americans in their quota. They're thinking of sponsoring a pro club, or of throwing over the I.R.F.U. entirely and joining the O.R.F.U. Theyy feel the Big Four executive is bullying them and are touchy about it.

Hamilton: Rumors that Frankie Filchock, the stormy petrel of the 1947 grid who finally wound up as coach of Tigers of the Big Four, will not come back; that Tigers may amalgamate with Wildcats of the O.R.F.U.; that in case of such amalgamation, the unit would go either Big Four or O.R.F.U.

Toronto: As Dominion champions, the Argonauts appear to be standing on firm ground as pro-I.R.F.U. platformers. But Balmy Beach is reported to be strongly pulling for a union with Toronto Indians in the Ontario Union, which may help to throw some uncertainty into the picture.

And here's the score on:

Ottawa: As many and as varied rumors as you like. There is a definite indication—freely admitted by both Rough Riders on the Big Four and Trojans of the Ontario Union—of intention. The clubs intend to try to amalgamate and produce one strong senior team, with an intermediate club to help bring along high school material. Possibly this second team would operate in the Quebec R. F. U.

Complicating any announcement is the q uestion of the franchise on the playing field at Lansdowne Park. Heretofore, the clubs have held a year-to-year franchise. Now they want a five-year assurance before they join forces.

You and the Solunar Tables

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted sportsman, author, and creator of Solunar Tables).

In our news story of last week, we were talking about the effects of the Solunar Periods on people. These effects show up quite plainly in groups or large gatherings of people, and it is interesting to watch a group come to life, so to speak, as the effects of a Solunar Period begin to assert themselves. For a number of years it was our lot in life to do a great deal of lecturing and after-dinner speaking at sportsmen's gatherings. In this work—and believe me, it is work—we had excellent opportunities to watch this phenomenon. Over a period of several years we learned that it is indeed a boon to a speaker if his talk happens to coincide with a major Solunar Period.

Effects of Solunar Periods are somewhat more obscure when considered in terms of individuals. However, there are ways to check individual reactions which often are quite satisfactory. We being thinking creatures, it is impractical to attempt any observation if the individual is aware either of the Solunar schedule or of the fact that his or her behavior is under scrutiny.

People, by and large, are more keen, wider awake, more active, and generally better-natured during Solunar Periods than they are at other times. Here and there about the country, certain few men have put this knowledge to good use.

In one of the large Eastern cities, there is a manufacturing concern whose sales manager, in his off time, is an ardent follower of the outdoor sports. In the natural course of events, he became acquainted with the Solunar Theory and found the Solunar Tables to be of distinct benefit in helping him to make the best of his days in the open. After reading up on the subject, he concluded that the Solunar Tables might also be helpful in his work at the office.

One of his accounts, when the buyer could be prevailed upon to place an order, bought supplies in impressively large quantities. However, this particular buyer was a holy terror who specialized in throwing salesmen out of his office. Our sales manager conceived the idea of having his account solicited only during the three or four days of the time of new moon, when Solunar influence is at its peak of intensity. Then he planned to have one of his salesmen call during the course of a major Solunar Period. Not only was the salesman invariably well received at those times—also, over the years the orders from that firm grew increasingly larger and more frequently this up. It actually happened. The sales manager is a friend of ours and we fish together now and then.

Not that this is an isolated instance—we know several high-speed life insurance salesmen in New York City who carry the Solunar Tables to work with them as items of standard equipment.

Did you ever consider your own behavior and general state of well-being in terms of the Solunar Tables? There are two excellent times to see how you react. Some evenings, when you come home from the office, you feel tired and are content to sit quietly at home, read a while, and retire early. Other evenings you find yourself active and restless, not tired at all, and ready to go places and do things. The next day after these things happen look at the Solunar Tables and see if there isn't a certain coincidence between the Solunar Periods and your behavior.

Another time is when you go to bed and again when you arise. Sleep is an involuntary thing over which most folks have little or no control. It comes or it doesn't come and there is little you can do about it unless you believe in inducing slumber by means of drugs. Briefly, if there is a Solunar Period in progress, you will have trouble going to sleep. Conversely, if you retire during one of the quiet, "in-between" periods, you will go to sleep quickly. Some mornings, you bounce out of bed, wide awake and feeling great. Other mornings, you can't seem to wake up and getting out of bed is a sore trial. Just for the fun of it, check upon yourself and see how you have reacted to the Solunar periods. Don't make the mistake of looking up the Solunar times before hand. Your behavior will be influenced in spite of your best efforts if you familiarize yourself with the Solunar schedule in advance.

And here's another thing to remember—Solunar Periods affect living creatures pretty much according to the order of development of the creature in question. Insects, fish, birds, etc., respond quickly to the promptings of a Solunar Period. With the larger animals, however, the response is slower, and with people, there is usually a "physical lag" of from an hour to two hours. Thus, you won't show any effect of a Solunar Period until an hour or so after the scheduled time. Keep that in mind and use the Solunar Tables as we have suggested. You may or may not get results, but more often than not an individual receives some interesting surprises.

Trenton Flyers Eliminate Cobourg 11-5 In Third Game Intermediate 'A' Semi-Finals

Trenton RCAF Flyers in a wide open rip-roaring hockey battle here last night sent the Cobourg Pavilions into the playoff discard, defeating them 11-5 in the third game of the best-of-three semi-final series in their Intermediate "A" group. Flyers, by their victory qualified to meet the Trenton Hockey Club in a three-of-five finals series for the right to enter the "A" playdowns.

The first game of the finals series will be played in Memorial Arena here next Tuesday night, with the second tilt scheduled for next Saturday night.

The game here last night was one of the best seen here in Intermediate circles with both squads going all out to score the coveted third game victory. Both Flyers and Cobourg uncorked all the speed they had and the result was a clean hard-fought contest, replete with good hockey and plenty of goals.

Cobourg threw a scare into the Flyer's supporters in the first period, flashing a sustained offensive that partly disorganized the boys in blue. The Pavs, roared to the attack from the opening whistle and had a clear margin of play in the initial period firing home four goals to the Flyers one.

Reversal of Form

The second period saw a startling reversal of form on the part of the airmen. They threw well-organized attacks at the Cobourg bluelines and after five minutes of play they started to click.

They drove in rush after rush up the ice and by the time the twelve minute mark was reached had slung home four goals with not a return from the Pavs, to take the long end of a 5-4 score.

In the third period, the airmen cut loose with all their heavy artillery. Led by Ault, who took over the scoring duties from Miller, who was the hero of the piece in the first two periods, the Flyers scored six goals to definitely decide the issue, three of them coming in 25 seconds of each other. Haynes got Cobourg's final goal at the two minute mark. The Cobourg team tried valiantly to cut down the Flyer's commanding lead, but the airmen were not to be denied, and with the opposing defence wavering raced close in to score.

Clean Contest

The game was one of the cleanest played here in some time. Referee Speedy St. Louis dishing out but two minor penalties. Both teams played the puck rather than the man and the result was a clean bitterly fought contest, with the losers giving all they had to stem the tide of defeat.

Miller and Ault paced the Flyers' attack. Miller scored five of the winner's eleven goals while Ault slung home three markers, and was given credit for four assists. Mid Middleton, on the Flyer defence played one of the best games of the season, and he rammed home one of the Flyers markers. Dennie, Cowick and Sargent also turned in stellar efforts.

Shoulder Dislocated

Bulger, Haynes, Edwardson and Baker looked the best for the Cobourg team with Fisher also turning in a good effort until the second period when he stopped a stiff but legal body check and suffered painful injuries to a shoulder. It was afterwards revealed that the shoulder was dislocated. The player was rushed to Belleville General Hospital after being given treatment in the dressing room.

The game was witnessed by a crowd estimated at 700.

The teams:

RCAF: Goal, Robertson; defence Middleton, Coweck; centre, Miller; wings, Ault, Dennie; subs, Brackenbury, Sargent, Edwards, Provost, O'Meara, Prot, Sherman.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Miami, Feb. 28 (AP) — The Chicago Bears' Joe Omanski dropped in at Hialeah the other day to visit his old schoolmate, jockey Rocco Sisto. First thing he began telling Cy Miller, who keeps the jockeys in condition, wsa how he had taken off 30 pounds by eating at the Bears' "Fat Men's Table." ... Warren Wright likely would like to have that diet to feed racing secretaries. He's been moaning that they can't get up a race in which his horses don't have to carry top weight ... Sisto, incidentally, seems to be the champ at the Jockey's favorite pool game, a tricky afair in which they set up the balls in certain positions and then try to clear the table with the fewest shots ... Larry MacPhail reports the arrival of the first colt born to one of the three brood mares he acquired last year ... that 63 that Ben Hogan shot in the St. Pete Open-golf tournament the other day was one stroke above the world record, which Ben has equalled twice.

Pacific Hockey League Skating On Thin Ice

By ERWIN FRICKE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, Feb. 28 —(CP)— The Pacific Coast Hockey League today is skating on probably the thinnest ice of its three-year history as a 10-team circuit.

Southern division members are skating on thin ice because northern California's drought-born power brownout has forced rink managers to reduce ice thickness.

For other teams the problem is different — and graver. Some clubs face an uncertain future as a result of a league directors' meeting earlier at which it was decided the P.C.H.L. would "go pro." this season. Since the meeting, however, various northern division club owners have expressed unwillingness to change.

Coley Hall, Vancouver Canucks owner, has planked the professional aspirations of the P.C.H.L. squarely in the lap of the National Hockey League.

""If we receive no definite answer from the N.H.L. concerning a working agreement . . . before the end of our playing season, we definitely will not turn professional."

Frank Dotten, manager of Seattle Ironmen, says the northern division at its annual directors' meeting May 1 will probably reverse its decision to turn professional.

He said that for at least two northern circuit members — New Westminster and Tacoma — the extra expense would likely force them to fold.

He believed, however, that the southern division will stick by the original decision — the added prestige of the "pro" label would mean something in California.

This would mean the end of the P.C.H.L. as a 10-team, biggest - amateur - circuit - in - North-America league.

Meanwhile with about two weeks league play left, Los Angeles has a four-game lead over San Francisco Monarchs for the $1,000 southern division top-spot award. In the northern division, Seattle Ironmen have a 13-point lead over runner-up Tacoma Rockets with Vancouver Canucks another four points behind. Portland Eagles, who recently became the first team to lose 100 games in the P.C.H.L., trail the fourth-place New Westminster Royals by 14 points.

In the four-team Western International League, the Kimberley Dynamiters, with Allan Cup aspirations, have sewn up the top slot with Trail Smoke Eaters a good second but Spokane Spartans and Nelson Maple Leafs are badly in the ruck.

Kid Gavilan Easily Defeated By Ike Williams

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—The first thing you know an Ike Williams-Ray Robinson bout will be a must. Every time he starts, lightweight king Ike clips another welter contender off Ray's trail.

Kid Gavilan, flashy bolo-puncher from Havana is the latest. Williams barely got past the Cuban in a close fight last night at Madison Square Garden, but both judges and referee Ruby Goldstein gave him the decision. The crowd of 14,907 paid $67,561.

Now a Robinson-Williams pairing is just about the best match that could be made among the lighter weight divisions.

Punching with the cool, efficiency of an automatic drill, Ike at 136½ pounds looked his best last night.

The kid from Cuba who had a five pound weight pull, likes to fight in flurries. But Williams didn't let him get away with it consistently. Ike would change direction, shift his feet and carry the attack to Gavilan before he could flurry.

Many thought Gavilan deserved a slim edge. The AP card showed it even in rounds with Williams out front on points. Goldstein and Judge Jim Hagen had it 5-4 for Williams with one even. Judge Jack O'Sullivan made it Williams 6-4.

SIR MALCOLM CAMPBELL WINS DIVORCE SUIT

London, Feb. 27 — (AP) — Sir Malcolm Campbell won a divorce today on grounds that his third wife committed adultery with a French count, Andre Louis De La Salle.

Lady Campbell, the former Mrs. Betty Nickory married the speedboat and automobile racer in 1945. She and De La Salle denied there was anything improper in their association.

Delegates Vote At Meeting ToLeaveO.R.F.U

(By The Canadian Press)

More than 15 Ontario Rugby Football Union junior club delegates at a meeting at London, Ont., yesterday voted unanimously to leave the parent body and while no definite action was taken, it appeared likely that the O. R. F. U. would be without their junior clubs next fall.

The meeting was an aftermath to a situation last year when the O.R.F.U. refused to uphold London junior's protest that five Hamilton Wildcat players were over age, and was held to draft plans to form an independent grouping.

The group drafted a resolution which will ask the Canadian Rugby Union with which the group wants affiliation, to accept the new grouping. They also will ask the C. R. U. to name a junior football governor for Canada and to hold an annual Canadian junior championship series.

Interprovincial Football Union delegates at the meeting expressed their desire to give Ontario's junior football a square deal and promised to support an affiliation application made to the C. R. U.

W. A. Irwin, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association announced at Montreal last night that senior playdowns for the Dominion title would start April 10 with the Ontario winner at Ottawa playing the first of a two-game total point series. The second game will be April 12.

The winner of the Ontario-Ottawa series plays a best-of-three games set with Montreal's representative April 14, 15 and 17 and the winner of this set plays the Maritimes champion at Saint John, N. B., in a three - game series April 19, 20 and 22.

The western finalist will play the east in a best-of-five games series May 1, 3, 5, 7 and 8.

The Port Arthur Legion Boxing Club went ahead with a scheduled fight card here last night amid indications of strained relations between the Thunder Bay branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and its boxing committee. Only two fighters failed to appear for the bouts after a warning by the boxing committee that the card had not been sanctioned and that all officials and fighters who participated face suspension. The Boxing Club had countered with a threat to sue for damages if the bouts had to be cancelled because of the committee action.

At Kingston last night McGill and Queen's University girls basketball teams earned the right to enter the final round of the senior intercollegiate basketball tournament today. McGill defeated Western 29-20, while Queen's eliminated University of Toronto 19-7 in semi-final games.

Mayor W. S. Beaton of Sudbury, yesterday announced the Canadian junior track and field championships will be held at Sudbury, Saturday, July 3. Entries are expected from all parts of the Dominion.

R.C.A.F. Flyers, Canadian Olympic hockey champions, and teams from other countries will compete in a hockey tournament starting tonight and ending Mar. 6. Teams from Scotland, Czechoslovakia and the Racing Club De Paris will play the Canadians in the round-robin tournament.

Two members of the Canadian skiing team at the recent Winter Olympics finished fifth and sixth yesterday in the slalom race at Auron, France, an Alpine resort, as the Grand Prix of Nice show tournament opened. Hec Sutherland, Canadian downhill champion from Montreal, took fifth place, ahead of Harvey Clifford of Ottawa. Desire La Croix of France won the event.

Pitcher Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers signed his 1948 contract yesterday for an estimated $50,000 salary. Newhouser was voted the American League's most valuable player in 1944 and 1945.

Mayor Bernard J. Dowd of Buffalo, N. Y., has ordered a police investigation of reports of open bookmaking at sports events in Memorial Stadium. The mayor said that police have promised cooperation with the Stadium management "in an effort to suppress gambling."

Illinois Boxing Commission officials yesterday declined to sign any perjury complaint against fight manager Mike Spinelli at an inquest into the ring death of Sam Baroudi. Assistant Attorney Daniel Ryan had requested the commission to sign perjury complaints because the age of the 20-year-old Baroudi was given incorrectly in a statement by Spinelli to the Commission prior to the fatal bout a week ago. Spinelli was held in custody by police for short time after the inquest.

Sports Shorts from Britain

By SHAUN McQUILLAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London — (CP) — Wallabies, Australia's touring rugby team which is scheduled to visit Canada shortly, ended its United Kingdom tour with one of the most impressive list of victories amassed by a touring side.

When they arrived in England last fall, Manager A. J. Tancred said: "We are not the mighty side you expect. We have come here to learn. If we teach you a thing or two, so much the better

They instructed British teams so well that not once was their line crossed during four "international" games.

England, Scotland and Ireland, whom they defeated, were thoroughly held in check and Wales' victory was achieved w[illegible] penalty goals. They left an impression of fitness and stamina, an almost impregnable defence, and bustling, hard, clean play.

Injuries just before Christmas weakened the team considerably. Charles (Chuck) Eastes, speedy three-quarter, broke an arm and captain Bill McLean, a leg.

Of 35 games played, Wallabies won 29 and lost six, Cardiff, Britain's best this season, scored 412 points against 85, compared with the Australians' 500 for 243 against. In 15 games the tourists' opponents never scored at all.

Stanley Cockayne has the doubtful privilege of being the first referee to have his whistle struck by lightning when he was about to blow it.

During a Wolverhampton football match he raised his whistle for a penalty kick, and the players stopped in anticipation. But there was no sound. A flash of light seemed to come from Cockayne's hand and he stood motionless, holding the whistle rigidly to his lips.

"All I remember," he said, "is a vivid impression of my fingers being on fire and electricity running down my body.

"I'm going to advise bakelite whistles now and I'd like an official ruling on: What should a referee do when struck by lightning? Football rules give no specific guidance."

R. J. (Bobby) Lee, 34, formerly of Quebec Aces and Montreal Canadiens, recently made his 108th consecutive appearance for Brighton Tigers since becoming their player-coach at the beginning of last season.

He is a member of the "100 Club" for players who have scored more than 100 goals in major English competition hockey.

What statisticians say is something new in sport is the record of Margaret Lucas, 22-year-old physiotherapist who broke the British women's discus-throwing record three times in 1947.

BOOST TAX RATE 8 MILLS

Smiths Falls, Feb. 27 —(CP)— Believed to be the highest in the history of this township, the tax rate for 1948 last night was set at 56 mills on the dollar. A special meeting of council announced the rate, a boost of eight mills over 1947.

Winnipeg Author Writes Stories That Are Different

Winnipeg (CP)—Parisian Armand Hoog, 35, recently in Winnipeg writes stories that are not "just stories" but expression of a philosophy of "personal responsibility."

The lecturer-author-critic said that in his plots he tries to get at something deeper than "just story alone."

Mr. Hoog lectures in modern French literature at the University of Strasbourg, is book critic on a Paris weekly paper and his latest novel "The Accident" won the Sainte-Beuve prize by French literary critics.

Captured at Dunkerque, Mr. Hoog was imprisoned in Silesia and released in 1944.

He has met Gabrielle Roy, author of the best-seling "Tin Flute," and is an admirer of her work. His favorite author is English mystery writer Grahame Green, whose work is similar to Hoog's own.

Adventure in Love

By Kathryn Bemis Wilson

CHAPTER 21.

After ten days of this hectic carrousel, she often caught herself thinking and feeling in terms of the old Velma. However, her thin roll of bills making it impossible for her to spend as her companion spent, reminded her of the present. Decidedly, she was now the new Velma.

She had been correct about its being less painful to be out of reach of the old crowd than to become an envious bystander, although now, she was not actually envying them or enjoying their society any too well. She had much rather try a business career than chase around with them. As she saw it now, they were accomplishing nothing; life had already become a complicated muddle to them.

The girls were struggling to make brilliant marriages with eligible men who could as easily tire of them after marriage as they did of their beautiful race horses. There were the other men, looking for heiresses who might cast them aside in favor of new husbands whenever they chose. There was a great deal of divorce, little love, but a preponderance of shallow sophistication. Now from the sidelines, seeing the crowd act, was illuminating. If they ever seriously considered love, she could not discover it among this jaded group, which had begun its dinner-dancing too early in its teens.

For a short while all this mad galloping about, the hankering for speed and yet more speed, had exactly suited Velma's purpose. It helped her to forget. Every move she made was a heroic effort to forget. If she, too, could bury love—bury it so deeply that Tom Orville never could uncover it, then her visit here would not have been in vain.

Tom, who only recently had expressed his undying devotion to her, coming swiftly to Chicago to be with that girl! Why, he could have been on the Carryville train with herself! She easily could have encountered him in the dinner. Had he avoided her? Was it merely by chance that they had not met on the train, or had he come by plane?

Had Mae Forland given away her secret? If she had told Tom about the Chicago visit, would he have followed her here and then gone about with that girl? Would he not have avoided such company in a place where he was apt to meet her?

She laughed in mirthless chagrin. How important she was in her own estimation! Of course, Tom hadn't followed a girl to Chicago—a girl who snubbed him in Carryville. He had come to have a wild time. Wasn't that what all criminals did with ill-gotten gains? They spent recklessly, lived a short while, then went out like a blown candle.

She shivered.

Could that happen to Tom? It didn't seem possible. Even now, she couldn't believe him guilty of crime. Even after all she knew about him, she couldn't believe it. But why—oh, why, couldn't she lose faith in him completely—why couldn't she forget him?

Millie and Velma were sipping tea in Madeline Brooks' gorgeous penthouse overlooking Lake Michigan, when she remembered something. She had promised herself to see Ruggles Capp. If she could leave this party early, she might be lucky enough to find him in his office. He was old-fashioned, and rarely ever stopped work in the afternoon to play golf like so many other successful men.

The sharp hum of the voices of a hundred or more people, mostly, women, filled the ornate, spacious rooms. A few immaculately groomed men hung around, flinging compliments to the women nearby at the moment. The waiters were serving more cocktails than tea with the delicious canapes featuring caviar, crabmeat, and chicken.

At one end of the massive dining room table, its real lace cloth nearly concealed by a resplendent array of heavily embossed silver and gleaming cut glass holding artfully concocted sandwiches, cakes and relishes, sat the dowager, Millicent Du Pays. She was pouring tea with the grace and charm of a bygone era. It was rumored that she drank from solid gold cups in her elegant city establishment. Anyway, here she was making tea the nectar of the gods.

As Velma came up, she turned off the spigot of the magnificent silver samovar.

"My dear child!" she exclaimed, clasping Velma's hands. "How perfectly fetching you're looking! How are you?"

"Quite well, thank you, Mrs. Du Pays. And you?"

The corsage of gardenias on the dewager's aquamarine satin gown shook violently as she laughed. She weighed at least two hundred and proved the tradition of good-humored fat folk. "You've only to look at me, my dear, to know I'm as good as ever. The Farrington strain on my mother's side, you know. Health—long life—Oh, certainly, Miss Goldier! Tea?"

Velma moved away quickly to find her hostess.

Madeline Brooks stood in the colonnaded foyer, a lighted cigarette in hand. She was surrounded by half a dozen men of various ages, all of whom she had repeatedly refused to let marry her for her money.

"Ah!" she exclaimed. "Here you are, Velma! It's like old times—seeing you around. Tell me about yourself."

The men curiously appraised this ex-heiress, more than one thinking of his lucky escape. Had he married her—when he'd been so eager to—he'd be uncomfortably in the nine —hole now. Velma was too pretty. He would have become fond of her and wanted to stick it out till the ragged end. This thing called love was a calmity sometimes.

"I'll see you again, darling," said Velma, her brown eyes searching for Millie among the crowd in the drawing-room she could glimpse from here. "Just now, I'm leaving your lovely party."

"Leaving?" boomed a gruff voice behind her.

In glad amazement, she whirled about. "What—you!" she cried.

Ruggles Capp, big and capable looking as ever, stood beaming down at her. Hanging on his arm, as though willing to have her name linked permentately with this substantial bachelor, was the efervescent Mrs. Du Pays, who had left the tea table upon spying him.

She chimed in, "Of course, she's not leaving."

To Velma, she said, "Come, child! We're going to the library. Ruggles wants to talk to you."

"Oh, this is wonderful—to see you again, Mr. Capp!" said Velma. "Rather uncanny, too. I was leaving here to go down to your office."

He affectionally pressed her hand lying in his. His keen gray eyes trinkled beneath his white-streaked hair.

"Didn't I always say you had intuition? I've been trying to locate you for days. I even took a trip to Carryville, trying to find you. But all I could get out of that Forland woman was that you were the best model she ever had and wished you'd come back. You disappeared into thin air. Come—its important what I have to say."

The group of nearby men suddenly came to attention. "Old Capp doesn't usually get so excited unless he's on the winning end of a lawsuit. Wonder what's up," said Godfrey Glomer, speculatively, as the trio moved away.

Madelines' hard little green eyes surveyed him cooly. She was beginning to like Godfrey rather seriously and she didn't fancy his apparent interest in another woman's affairs.

"Why worry?" she intoned seductively, blowing cigarette smoke in his face. "It must be awfully tough for a girl who's had everything to come down to modeling."

The library was a beautifully appointed room paneled in walnut to its embossed leather ceiling. Above the two massive walnut doors heavy walnut friezes lent an air of distinction to its walls. The tall windows were draped in maroon brocaded silk, blending perfectly with the richly colored Oriental rugs. With its high-backed chairs and massive table, all in walnut, it looked more like a bank directors' room than an informal nook in which to read a good book in happy abandon. But Madeline Brooks and her gadabout aunt, Lilly McCrune, who lived with her, never had time to read.

Windsor Judge Wants Location Of Wire Service

Windsor, Feb. 28 —(CP)— If Detroit's police commissioner, Harry Toy, will provide Windsor police with the location of what he claims is a "central wire service in Windsor servicing all bookie establishments in the Detroit area," it will be "dismantled within an hour," Judge A. J. Gordon, chairman of the Windsor police commission, said Friday.

In a formal statement replying to Toy's charges, Judge Gordon said "it is difficult to believe that a responsible public official of Detroit would make such scurrilous statements about a friendly neighbor, its police force and its citizens generally.

"If Mr. Toy is sincere and wants to be helpful and co-operative he will be given ample opportunity. If he can at any time give this commission useful information — information that will aid in detecting crime and arresting criminals — it will be always appreciated. But we want no more of his childish, ridiculous allegations."

The statement asks Toy to tell where the wire service centre is located in Windsor.

"If he will not take advantage of this offer, then one can only assume he is talking for effect, and concerning something about which he knows nothing.

"Mr. Toy also says he can furnish the names and addresses of many racketeers in Windsor. If that is true, why did he not do so long ago, if he wanted to be helpful? But I suppose doing it in that quiet way would not get him much publicity."

Judge Gordon issued an invitation to Toy to attend the next meeting of the Windsor police commission to be held March 4, "when matters he has mentioned can be discussed, privately and confidentially if he so wishes."

"It seems that whenever Detroit police are unable to control a situation, such as gambling, their customary and favorite alibi is to place the blame on Windsor. Just think, Windsor corrupting the morals of 2,000,000 Detroiters."

He asked for an apology if the charges cannot be substantiated.

Isolated Women In Australia Too Busy to be Lonely

Canberra (CP) — Australia's twelve most isolated women are too busy to be lonely. Two of them live inland and ten in lighthouses around the coast.

Small, grey-haired Mrs. A. Alston, who has turned 60, runs a tiny general store at Mulka on the 500 mile long Birdsville-Maree cattle trail more than 1,000 miles northeast of Adelaide, South Australian capital.

She lives alone, and the only people she ever sees, apart from aborigines, are passing drovers who sometimes call in to the store to replenish stocks, and the trail mailman.

Her only other contact with civilization is by pedal radio, which connects her with the flying doctor operator at Broken Hill, western New South Wales. All her supplies go 500 miles by rail from Adelaide to Maree, then several hundred miles over the cattle track by truck.

Mrs. L. Hese, postmistress and general storekeeper at Ti Tree Well, 120 miles from Alice Springs in the Northern Territory, has her husband to keep her company and she sees her neighbors once a week when they drive 50 to 100 miles for their stores and mail.

The most geographically-isolated woman in Australia is Mrs. Hayns, wife of the light-keeper on, Maatsuyker Island, off the south Tasmanian coast. Mr. and Mrs. Hayns get fresh supplies of food and mail only once a month —delivered by fishing smack from Hobart.

There are three light-house keepers' wives on Cape Don, 1,000 miles northeast of Darwin, capital of the Northern Territory. There are four children in the little colony. Three more light-keepers' wives live on Montague Island, three miles off the coast near Narooma, about 175 miles south of Sydney, N.S.W.

Mrs. Duncan, wife of the light-keeper on Solitary Island, seven miles off Coff's Harbor, N.S.W., "hates the mainland." She has three children, and two other families live on the island.

Bird Life May be Observed Even When Snow Lies Deep

Even when the snow lies deep, wood and field, stream and lake throb with life which the winter stroller may observe. As pointed out by Dr. R. M. Saunders, associate professor of history at the University of Toronto, and one of Canada's best-known bird-watchers, most of our warm-weather friends among the birds go south for the chilly months—but not all.

In his book "Flashing Wings, he tells of the thrill of seeing cardinals against the snow, of Kinglets among the cedars, and reminds us that for many far-northern birds, the southern areas of Canada are chosen for wintering.

Pine and evening grosbeaks, redpolls, pine siskins, tree sparrows, juncoes and magnificient snowy owls, are all winter visitors. And often enough, robins, towhees and redwing blackbirds elect to spend the winter in the north when berries are plentiful.

During the war, incidentally, Dr. Saunders was arrested on suspicion of being a spy. His binoculars were focussed only on birds —but Toronto policemen were sure he was acquiring military information for Germans or Japanese.

Few mountains of the Canadian Rockies leave so fixed and treasured a memory as Mount Eisenhower. Even if the visitor had never known its original name, Castle Mountain, it would have suggested itself to him immediately. Gazing upward at its sky-scraping heights from any point on its eight-mile base, the remembliance to a monster castle designed for giants who would make pygmies of the fairy-tale species, is as obvious as the vastness of the rocky pile is overpowering.

A constant challenge to alpinists, the loftiest of its several peaks has only been conquered three times. All the granite for all the war memorials on earth would make but a paltry hole in the side of that immensity so lately named for the American General.

In the region of Mount Eisenhower, many biologists believe, occurred the mighty convulsion of millions of years ago, that heaved the crust of the earth skyward and created the Rocky Mountains.

The recent widespread discussion of Canada's wedding gift to Princess Elizabeth recalls that when the King visited the Dominion in 1939, he neglected to carry home an unusual offering to which, presumably, he was entitled—two elks and two black beavers.

At all events when the first charter on record in British Canada was drawn up for the benefit of the Governor and Company of Gentleman Adventures trading in Hudson's Bay in 1670, it covered a large part of Canada as well as the chilly waters of the sub-Arctic bay.

What was the payment arranged for this vast concession? The original document reads:

"Two elks and two black beavers, whenever and as often as His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors shall enter the Company's territories. It was not until 1868 that the succeeding Hudson's Bay Company surrendered its immense power and far-reaching domain to the Canadian Government upon payment of £300,000.

SELF-SUFFICIENT TOWN

Letchworth, Hertfordshire, Eng. —(CP) — Exports of locks and hinges from a firm here were sufficient in 1947 to pay for all essential imports, including food, for every household in the town—population 20,000.

CHAIN LETTERS AGAIN

Owen Sound, Ont. —(CP)— "Good luck" chain letters are going the rounds in this Bruce Peninsula town. Authorities are afraid the post office may be swamped with the worthless missives, which call on the recipient to send out five copies or be plagued by bad luck.

Portugal Happy Land of Plenty In Needy Europe

By STUART UNDERHILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Lisbon, Feb. 28 (CP) — Portugal, one of the little European countries that came through the Second World War comparatively unbruised, lives in a state of plenty that is matched in few other parts of the weary continent.

Market stalls are stacked with food and store windows crowded with American luxury goods which, more than anything else, represent to Europeans today the luxuries of a far-off world.

Glistening American cars race through the sunlight streets, adding their strident horn blasts to the din that makes every day in Libson sound like New Year's Eve on Times Square.

Recently the government has tightened restrictions on American imports but as yet there is no visible sign of decrease in the supply of nylons, cosmetics and electrical goods that Portuguese read about and admire in American magazines and movies.

The American and British influence is probably stronger than in any other country in Europe. British commercial relations have existed for centuries, and now the big aircraft that make Lisbon's up-to-date airport a European landfall bring a steady flow of visitors from the United States.

In the big hotels English is heard more often than Portuguese and almost every downtown newstand has as many British and American publications as Portuguese.

The luxury goods so lavishly displayed remain out of reach of the great mass of 8,000,000 Portuguese, however. Living standards are still low compared with the western world, though they are higher than they have ever been in Portugal.

Improve Villages

Remote villages now can be reached in a few hours over good new roads. In the villages themselves, old cottages occupied for centuries are being replaced by modern houses.

The Salazar Government is making steady progress with a house and school building campaign. Workers can purchase the new houses on a long-term basis with payments amounting to about $8 a month. Much new dwelling construction is evident on the outskirts of Lisbon.

Thousands still live in comparatively primitive conditions in old dwellings hanging over narrow, cobbled streets that twist up the hills. Diets are frugal, more often than not consisting of bread, lentils and fish stew.

There is grumbling among the people about high prices — which have in fact been sharply lowered by controls — but on the whole more smiles are seen than scowls. Women and young girls with cheerful faces weave through the crowds, balancing huge bundles of laundry or baskets of fruit and vegetables on their heads.

Transportation officials complain their planning has provided enough street cars yearly to keep up with the population increase, but not enough to offset added numbers who now can afford to ride instead of walk.

COW GORED TO DEATH
